Investigation revealed that the only individual by the name of Lynd residing in the Brooklin area was Prof. Robert S. Lynd, who was renting a cottage from a [redacted] at Maskeag Point. It was determined that this was Prof. Lynd's first summer in Brooklin, Maine and his wife and children were believed to be with him. It was believed that this individual was identical with the individual referred to in the Albany Letter. Boston files reflected that on February 20, 1948, the New York Office had set forth information by letter in the case entitled "John Reed Society of Harvard University, Internal Security-C," to the effect that Prof. Robert S. Lynd had addressed a group known as "The Marxist Study Group," which group was formed at Columbia and was similar to the John Reed Society at Harvard University. The letter further stated that since 1931 Lynd had been a member of the faculty of Columbia University attached to the Department of Sociology and at that time (February, 1948) he was a member of the Board of Directors of the American-Russian Institute for Cultural Relations with the Soviet Union, Incorporated, and in the past had been a member of the American Friends of Aid to Spanish Democracy and the National Emergency Conference, which, in 1939, opposed the Allen Bill as "constituting a threat to the civil rights of native Americans as well as foreigners".

There was an additional reference to Prof. Lynd in the files of the Boston Office pertaining to an interview conducted with him, which interview was in connection with an individual by the name of [redacted] Special Inquiry, State Department, Bureau file 123-3397. When interviewed in the fall of 1949, Professor [redacted] Teachers College, Columbia University, 120th Street and Broadway, New York City, advised that he was only casually acquainted with Helen Lynd's husband, Dr. Robert Lynd. Professor [redacted] stated that he had always deemed Robert Lynd as a liberal, both in the fields of politics and education. However, he stated that he had no information concerning any Communistic activity or interest on the part of Helen Lynd or her husband, Dr. Robert Lynd.

Professor [redacted] further advised that [redacted] who was also on the staff of Columbia Teachers College and who he believed to be more closely associated with Professor Robert Lynd, might also be acquainted with Helen Lynd; but he added that he had no definite knowledge of this relationship.

On pages fifteen through twenty five of the May 10, 1937 issue of "Life" magazine there was an editorial article entitled "Muncie, Indiana-is the Great U.S. Middletown." The following excerpts, which were quoted from the "Life" article, reflected statements which the editors of that magazine quoted from the book "Middletown in Transition" by Dr. Robert S. Lynd:

"Muncie, Indiana is the most interesting small town in the United States. It owes its distinction to Robert and Helen Lynd, two New York sociologists, who in 1924 and 1925 lived there eighteen months and wrote a book called "Middletown"- in reality, Muncie, Indiana.

"Ten Years later Dr. Lynd returned to see what changes boom and depression had made in this typical United States town."

"The new book, 'Middletown in Transition' is even more revealing, more dramatic than the final of all United States literature."

Occasionally, statements of the Lynd book - "Middletown in Transition" - were quoted beneath the pictures in the above article and used to emphasize the points described.

Beneath a photograph of the leading industrial family of the city were the following quotations from the Lynd book:

"They are keen, rich, healthy, clean, Christian people. They may pay too little to their employees, they may control banking but they contribute generally and do a lot for the town."

"The emergence of an upper class to whom certain leisure activities have value, not in relation to work, but quite independently as a symbol of status...."

"Depression years have made them (the homes) shabbier, but the people in them, like all Middletown, have resisted fundamental change. New streets may strike out through the green fields, new houses arise, new faces emerge, but, year in and year out, these earnest midland folk still steer customary middle courses, still clinging to the old American dream. Middletown may re-elect this course slightly to the left, but the new path will become the American Way."

Professor Robert Lynd was one of the sixteen distinguished Americans who denounced the trend toward disciplinary action against lawyers who defend "political minorities, racial minorities, and labor organizations". Such actions, they declared, "may destroy the right to a fair trial and adequate legal counsel as guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment to the American Constitution."

"Einstein and other leaders support another Communist cause. The Communist Party is conducting a lying campaign to halt contempt imprisonment of its lawyers, Harry Sacher, Richard Gladstein, ... All were sentenced by Federal Judge Medina for contempt of court in recent conspiracy trial of eleven Communist Party leaders."

"And this week the Communists released a statement by sixteen prominent people to persuade the public that the sentenced lawyers really got a dirty deal. The sixteen signers denounced the disciplining of lawyers who defend 'political minorities, racial minorities and labor organizations.'

"Their statement was a summary of most of the falsehoods in the Communist Party's campaign to smear Judge Medina and any other judge who acts similarly.

"The sixteen who signed this document included Albert Einstein; Thomas Mann, famous German novelist now a United States citizen; Professor Thomas I. Emerson of Yale Law School ...., Professor Robert S. Lynd, Columbia University."

A marginal notation indicates that a memorandum was dictated to IDA on February 24, 1950. (6)

This advertisement purported to be a statement by Professor Robert Lynd, Professor Albert Einstein, Professor Thomas Emerson, Professor Linus Pauling and others. The statement expresses alarm at "acts of judicial censure, imposition of prison sentences and threats of disbarment against lawyers who defend members of political minorities, racial minorities, and labor organizations. The advertisement criticizes the action of various courts against defense attorneys in the trial of the eleven Communist leaders, the trial of Harry Bridges, of six Trenton negro youths charged with murder who were represented by O. John Rogge, former Assistant U. S. Attorney General, and in other cases.

The advertisement contains a printed coupon to be used by the reader in requesting information or enclosing a contribution to the Lawyers Defense Committee, 23 West 26th Street, New York City.

The administrative page of the report designated below states that Alfred Kohlberg was interviewed at the New York Office on April 7, 1950. He made available a carbon copy of a letter sent by him to Senator Joseph McCarthy concerning Philip Jessup. When interviewed earlier concerning Owen Lattimore he made available to the interviewing agents copies of various correspondence and literature which he had concerning the IPR. Of this material only 5 documents were found to mention or directly concern Dr. Jessup. Although all of this material was previously forwarded to the Bureau in connection with the investigation entitled "Owen Lattimore, Espionage - R," one photostatic copy of the Kohlberg letter to Senator McCarthy and each of the 5 documents mentioning Dr. Jessup were forwarded with this report to the Bureau.

Among these documents is a letterhead of the Institute of Social Research, 429 West 117 Street, New York, New York, which indicates that the Advisory Committee included Philip C. Jessup and Robert S. Lynd.

During the conference a letter was released to the press addressed to President Truman and signed by "one hundred twenty distinguished Americans" which urged the President to issue directives banning all economic aid to fascist Spain and instructing the State Department to support the continuation of sanctions imposed by the United Nations on Franco in December, 1946.

Among the signers of this letter was Professor Robert S. Lynd, New York, New York.

A Press Release of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, 801 Madison Avenue, New York, New York, dated June 7, 1950, was also obtained by the Agent who attended this conference. The addressee is urged to act at once against those who seek to interfere with the rights of those who petition, speak or act for peace.
