On June 13, 1962, Cell 152 in B Block, Alcatraz Prison, was entered for the purpose of searching the cell. This cell was formerly occupied by Subject CLARENCE ANGLIN. Upon entering the cell, immediately to the right is the cot or bed assigned the prisoner. The cell was noted to be 5 feet wide and 9 feet long. Lying on the bed with a head just inside the bars was the dummy head left in such a manner to represent a prisoner asleep. An examination of this head disclosed that it had been primarily made of material resembling sheeting and taped together forming a pad approximately 3 inches to 4 inches thick and about 8 inches in diameter.

One side of this dummy head was covered with a heavy soap material which enabled the facial features of a human to be molded and this, in turn, was painted in general flesh color tones. This head was complete even to the detail of an ear, which had a hole where it should be. This ear, however, had either been jarred loose and laid there by the prisoner or some other individual.

The hair on this head appeared to be human hair and was dark in color. A small section of sheeting was draped over the top part of the head as though to protect it from draft through the cell bars. The head was faced toward the cell opening.

The "body" was covered by a white navy blanket and sheet which had been drawn up to the chin. Six blankets had been rolled or wadded in a manner to make up a "body" and the lower left leg was made up of the lower portion of a man's long underwear. The head was resting on two pillows.

At the foot of the bed lying on the floor between the bed and the toilet was a section of simulated wall containing the simulated grill. The simulated grill and wall section measured 15 inches in length by 10 inches in height, and had been painted green to match the paint on the lower portion of the cell wall. The simulated wall section had been constructed from artist type hard board, one side of which is faced with a linen type material. The interior or prison cell wall of this section had been covered by a thick coating of soap, which was mottled to resemble the general texture of the concrete wall surfaces in the cell.

The place where this simulated wall section would have been is a large opening 15 inches by 10 inches at the rear of the cell, slightly to the left of the washbasin and led into the utility service area between A and B Cell Block.

Underneath the bed was found a small bundle of blue cloth which was subsequently identified by Guard [REDACTED] as prison issue handkerchiefs. In this bundle was a quantity of human hair and two small white U.S. Penitentiary envelopes, one of which contained several groups of human hair tied with fine thread to effect a "ponytail". Also in this packet was a small metal object approximately 1/16 inch thick and 6 inches by 1/2 inch. b7C

Also under the bed was a six to eight ounce square bottle containing green paint of the type used on the lower portion of the cell walls.

With reference to the artists hard board mentioned above, this was determined to have been a section of a product known as "Blue Boy Brand", which is issued in sheets 18 inches by 24 inches and is basically used in art work.

A long length of brown twine was observed under the cot. This twine led into the adjoining cell by being passed outside the bars and into the adjoining cell, where it had been secured to the foot of the bed of the prisoner (JOHN ANGLIN) in the next cell, and was apparently used as a signaling device between the two prisoners.

[redacted] U. S. Penitentiary Alcatraz Island, California, advised that on June 19, 1962, he and [redacted] in that institution, checked the cells on the third tier east of B cell block. They particularly checked the back part of the cell probing along the wall in an effort to ascertain if holes had been dug in the wall.

Upon checking the cell B-346, which is assigned to inmate [redacted] they uncovered a few holes dug in the vicinity of the ventilator grill. [redacted] immediately had [redacted] Correctional Officer in that institution, proceed to that cell and take a polaroid camera photo of the holes located. [redacted] and [redacted] continued digging around the ventilator grill of [redacted] cell and located several additional holes which had been dug. [redacted] states there were 36 holes in all dug in the vicinity of the ventilator grill. After uncovering all of the holes, [redacted] had [redacted] take a polaroid photo of that area of the cell.

[redacted] and [redacted] then proceeded to the adjacent cell, B-348, which is assigned to [redacted]. After probing around in the back part of that cell they were able to uncover eight holes dug in the wall in the vicinity of the ventilator grill. [redacted] had [redacted] take a polaroid photo of that portion of [redacted] cell.

[redacted] stated that the holes dug in the vicinity of the ventilator grills in these two cells had been carefully concealed by stuffing paper, soap in the hole and then covering that material with cement paint and paint. It was painted similar to that covering that portion of the cell and the holes were not visible upon first checking the cells. The originals of each of the three photos taken by [redacted] were made available and have been placed in the San Francisco file.

[REDACTED] U. S. Penitentiary, Alcatraz, California, advised that his records reflect that the first time white cement paint was purchased for use in the cell block was on October 10, 1961. On that date, under order number 18-340-2, request for purchase, number 187,196,199-204, from the GSA Federal Supply Service, 49-4th Street, San Francisco, they ordered an article having GSA book number 8010-286-7721. This was white cement paint, water mix, and was for ten 50 pound bags of such cement paint. It was received by the penitentiary on October 27, 1961. [REDACTED] advised that if you mix a slight amount of water with this cement paint it would quickly solidify and it was a quick way to patch holes. If it was desired to have the same color as the cell walls then it was necessary to paint over it with the turquoise appearing paint utilized throughout the cell block. [REDACTED] stated that the above is the only type of cement paint which has been purchased by that institution for use inside the cell block. [REDACTED] made available a sample of the above white cement paint as well as a sample of the oil base turquoise paint.

One side is approximately 30 inches long. The opposite side is approximately 34 inches long. The two ends measure approximately 17 inches and 18 inches. These were measured and the white portion of the strings was determined to be 22 inches and 21 inches, respectively. [REDACTED] U. S. Penitentiary, Alcatraz, advised that on June 22, 1962, he was assigned to the Alcatraz boat which operates between Alcatraz Island and Fort Mason. He said that at approximately 12:10 p.m. on June 22, 1962, he retrieved a life jacket from the San Francisco Bay located about fifty yards east of Alcatraz Island. [REDACTED] advised that he initialed and dated the life jacket. He further advised that [REDACTED] was the Alcatraz boat operator at the time the life jacket was retrieved and [REDACTED] also initialed and dated the life jacket. [REDACTED] said the life jacket appears to be handmade of a green or olive drab rubberized material similar to the material in raincoats issued to the inmates at the U. S. Penitentiary, Alcatraz.

Warden OLIN G. BLACKWELL, United States Penitentiary, Alcatraz, California, advised that the life preserver which was retrieved by his officers just east of Alcatraz Island in San Francisco Bay was practically identical in make-up and appearance to the other life preservers located in this matter. He believed that this life preserver had been used by one of the Escapees.

INTERVIEWS OF SUBJECTS

Date 6/14/62

b7D

[REDACTED] an inmate of the United States Penitentiary, Alcatraz Island, California, was interviewed at that institution in the presence of [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] both officials of the United States Penitentiary.

[REDACTED] was initially advised that he need not furnish any information, and if he did, same could be used against him in a court of law. He was told of his right to counsel. No threats or promises were made to him.

[REDACTED] said that he had planned the escape from Alcatraz which took place on June 11, 1962, and that FRANK MORRIS, JOHN and CLARENCE ANGLIN had gone without him. He volunteered that when he had gotten out of the Treatment Unit about May 5, 1961, he had started thinking of ways to break out of Alcatraz. While painting the cellhouse, he noticed the ventilator pipe to the roof from on top of the cell block and thought of it as a possible escape route. He talked over escaping with the two ANGLIN brothers who were also inmates. He read Civil Engineering books in the prison hospital as to how one could break down cement, etc. He said they made small holes in the cement next to the ventilator grille at the back part of their cells by using sharpened spoon handles and soap. He had practically finished his hole on April 25, 1962. They made cardboard frames and painted them to match the walls in their cells and inserted them after they had removed part of the wall. They hid their working tools behind these false frames. JOHN ANGLIN got through his hole first and got into the utility corridor containing the plumbing fixtures which is located behind the cells. JOHN then helped CLARENCE complete his hole.

FRANK MORRIS, Reg. No. 1441-AZ, had joined them in this venture in December of 1961, and was more or less [REDACTED] partner in it. They built a raft out of olive rubberized rain-coats, taping and gluing the pieces together, as well as hand sewing them. [REDACTED] did part of the work in his cell, however, one of the ANGLIN brothers did the rest of it on top of the cellblock. MORRIS and the ANGLIN brothers indicated the night of June 11, 1962, at about 8:30 p.m. that they were about through the hole in the ceiling and ready to go. A couple of weeks prior to this [REDACTED] had made for each one of them a yoke life preserver out of pieces of rain coats. JOHN ANGLIN had obtained most of the raincoats and over a period of time they had picked one up around the institution when the chance presented itself.

Most of the material was hidden over night in the ventilator pipe on top of the cell block, near the roof. On the night of the escape, MORRIS and one of the ANGLIN brothers went up to the roof at about 7:00 p.m. At about 9:30 p.m. MORRIS was trying to assist [REDACTED] in knocking out the little remaining cement at the back of his cell. They could not accomplish it without making some noise and MORRIS left to get help from one of the ANGLIN brothers. They never returned. [REDACTED] said that they probably had some maps of the surrounding area with them.

They had planned to go through the ventilator hole, on to the roof and then down a large black pipe by the bakery. They would go over by the water tank and then down by the machine shop next to the water. They would pump up their fourteen foot by six feet raft, made of raincoats and which had fifteen inch pontoons, with a Concertina. MORRIS had purchased the Concertina a month or so previously. The keys had been taken out of it and a valve inserted so it would operate as a bellows. They planned to go to Angel Island and stick a knife in the raft so it would sink. They would then go to the mainland. They had located about 125 feet of electrical cord about one-half inch thick in the utility corridor and that was to be taken with them to assist in getting down from the roof and to lower their material.

They planned to commit a burglary to obtain guns and clothes, and then steal a car. After they got away from the Island and this area, [REDACTED] and MORRIS had planned to go one way and let the ANGLIN brothers go another, however, no destinations were mentioned. The only weapons they could possibly have had with them would have been a sharpened kitchen knife or a screw driver.

[REDACTED] declined to furnish a signed statement.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Date June 15, 1962

[REDACTED] an inmate of the U.S. Penitentiary, Alcatraz Island, California, was interviewed in the presence of ARTHUR M. DOLLISON, Associate Warden, United States Penitentiary, Alcatraz Island, at that institution. He was initially advised that he need not furnish any information, and if he did, same could be used against him in a court of law. He was advised as to his rights to consult an attorney. No threats or promises were made to him.

[REDACTED] advised that on May 5, 1961, he was released from the Treatment Unit at Alcatraz and returned to the main cell area. At that time he began to think about and look for ways to break out of Alcatraz. It was general knowledge among the inmates that above the cell blocks there were some eight ventilator holes to the roof which had not been used in several years. These holes had been covered up; however, it appeared that the one above cellblock "C" had been cemented up, according to information among the inmates. When painting in that area about 9 to 10 months ago, he noticed that the lid covering this ventilator hole to the roof was not cemented up as he originally had heard. He believed then that it was possible to break out that way. Around this time plumbers were working in the utility corridor which separates the cells in "B" cell block. This corridor contains all of the plumbing facilities which lead into the back of all of the cells in that block.

After the plumbers had finished working [REDACTED] was instructed to clean the refuse from the utilities corridor. This utilities corridor is approximately 3 feet wide and extends to the roof of the building. While cleaning the floor of the utilities corridor, [REDACTED] was scraping up some material while on his hands and knees. Underneath a cement support, he noticed something wrapped in an oil paper. When he opened it he found that it contained some rusty saw blades and little pieces of files, all makeshift and which had evidently, from their condition, been secreted there for some 10 to 20 years. He left this material where he had located it. He mentioned it to JOHN ANGLIN, an inmate having cell #152 in Block "B." He had become acquainted with JOHN ANGLIN previously when they were both in the Florida Penitentiary in Raiford, Florida, about 1952. When discussing this with JOHN ANGLIN, it was apparent that he was already aware of the possibility of escaping through the ventilation area in the roof. They discussed the possibility of breaking out of Alcatraz and swimming to the mainland. They considered cutting a couple of the front cell bars and possibly going up the left front part of the cell area to behind a steel cage door and working on this as a means of exit, then decided that this could not be accomplished. [REDACTED] said that he had told them that he had cut out of cement before at other institutions and it could be done so long as they had plenty of time. [REDACTED] said that they could go out through the roof through the ventilator hole as he felt that he could get the lid off. It was then apparent that they had to get out of the back part of their cell into the utility corridor to get to the roof. The only possible escape area at the back of the cell was through a 6 inch by 9 inch iron ventilator. It was decided that this hole could be enlarged by taking out the cement to approximately a 10 inch by 13 inch hole. [REDACTED] volunteered that he had previously checked through library books while at various institutions and had ascertained that cement would start disintegrating at from 500° to 600°. [REDACTED] obtained some element wires similar to those in a toaster. He does not recall the source of these wires, however, he recalls that this occurred in October of 1961 [REDACTED] plugged this wire into the electric outlet in his cell, but he could not get enough heat through it to deteriorate the cement. He had discussed this, as well as the escape with JOHN ANGLIN and CLARENCE ANGLIN, brother of JOHN, and who resided in cell #152 in "B" Block. b7C b7D

JOHN ANGLIN said that he had a spoon which he had sharpened and which somewhat resembled a screw driver. JOHN ANGLIN started poking around the side of the ventilator in his cell and he made a little bit of headway into the cement. This was about December of 1961, and by this time [REDACTED] had discussed the plan with FRANK MORRIS, #1441-AZ, who was in cell #133 in "B" Block and who was to work with them. CLARENCE ANGLIN obtained a spoon and made a few dents in the cement next to his ventilator. The four of them got several spoons, the source of these spoons being not recalled, and by beveling them similar to a screw driver, started to make holes in the cement. It was decided to start the first hole a short distance from the top left-hand corner of the ventilator grille. They started to work shortly after the 5:15 or 5:30 PM count in the evening and would work until 9:30 PM.

The cells of the two ANGLIN brothers were adjacent to each other. The cells of [redacted] and MORRIS were adjacent to each other. One evening one of the ANGLIN brothers would watch while the other worked, and the next evening they would change positions. [redacted] and MORRIS used the same method. Finally, after about three days work, [redacted] dug a hole about 3 inches deep, then for a period of about 30 days [redacted] was able to dig 2 such holes every other night. During this period of time the other 3 inmates were making headway in their respective cells. [redacted] made approximately 50 such holes around and to the left of this ventilator grille. He made holes directly to the left from the top left-hand corner of the ventilator grille of a distance of approximately 4 inches. He then dug the holes directly towards the floor for a distance of approximately 10 inches. After this, he drilled small holes to the right and under the grilled ventilator for approximately 13 inches. He completed his hole by then taking the lower right-hand corner and drilling small holes up the wall until it hit the lower right-hand corner of the metal grille. As [redacted] completed each small hole, he plugged it with toilet paper and soap and then touched the outside of it up with paint so no one would notice it. The other 3 inmates were doing the same thing.

They found a couple of pieces of metal and stuck them in the holes they had bored, and through this method they were able to make the holes larger and break one hole into another. Finally the 3 inch deep slab of cement adjacent to the screen came out. Just prior to taking the slab of cement out, they made false cardboard fronts which would fit in the area to be removed. They put paint and shellac on the cardboard so it would appear the same as the rest of the wall and they used a small amount of cement to put the cardboard in while they were not working. They then hid their few drilling tools behind this false front. They then made a false ventilator grille front of cardboard and painted and varnished it so it would appear to be identical with the grille work of the ventilator plate presently there. They loosened the frame and the reinforcement rod of the ventilator grille and broke out the criss-cross pieces of metal in the ventilator grille. This took several weeks to accomplish. The little bits of residue metal were either flushed down the toilet in their respective cells or hidden behind the false cardboard area which they had inserted in the wall.

After taking out the ventilator grille, [REDACTED] then had an area to the left and below the ventilator grille to knock out. This was also approximately three inches in depth, however, with the ventilator grille out, [REDACTED] could place his arm through the six inch by nine inch opening and get better leverage. [REDACTED] as of April 25, 1962, had practically completed knocking out the small remaining portion of cement. He decided not to disturb the side of the cement adjacent to the utility corridor any further since, if any one checked the plumbing, they might notice same.

JOHN ANGLIN had knocked his completely out by this time and one evening had crawled into the utility corridor. ANGLIN made a false cement back to cover the area he had knocked out of the wall leading into the utility corridor so it would not be noticed. JOHN then did work from the utility corridor side and assisted CLARENCE ANGLIN in completing his hole.

JOHN and CLARENCE ANGLIN then made a small dummy face out of cement and gave it a flesh color. They put hair and eyebrows on it with glue and they named it "Oink."

After CLARENCE broke through his hole in the wall, they made a dummy back for the hole which could be removed. This was made out of cardboard and painted. One evening CLARENCE ANGLIN went up the utility corridor to near the roof, using the network of plumbing in the corridor as a ladder. He crawled on top of the cell blocks. He used a screw driver and tried to take the screws out of the eighteen and one-half inch diameter metal coupling which was between the roof ventilator and the roof. He could not accomplish this by himself and needed help. About this time [REDACTED] in connection with his work detail, had to paint one day in the utility corridor and above the cell block area in the vicinity of this roof ventilator. While painting in that area that day, [REDACTED] took the screws out of the ventilator coupling. He had taken clamp from his bed and bolted them together and used them as a clasp, thus succeeding in loosening the screws of the coupling. The coupling, although unscrewed, was still in place so no one would notice anything amiss.

About this time, CLARENCE ANGLIN made a second dummy head of cement which was stored on top of the cell block next to the roof. This one was called "OSCAR" and was to be given to FRANK MORRIS. Then CLARENCE ANGLIN and FRANK MORRIS went up the utility corridor next to the roof on about three evenings and they took the coupling out of the roof hole and from the ventilator. They put grease around it so it would slide out easily and replaced it so that no one would notice anything amiss.

While working around the cell block area painting, [redacted] noticed that bolts in certain instances were screwed in a tapin and were not bradded. He thus believed that this type of bolt could be loosened and, therefore, since this was a type on a lid covering the ventilator hole to the roof, they would be able to remove that lid. When [redacted] was painting near the Barber Shop he grabbed some electric barber clippers, placed them in a plastic bag and dropped them into his paint bucket. He removed them later the same day and secreted them in his cell. About that time, one of them was able to obtain about a dozen drill bits, the source of which was unknown to [redacted] then set up the motor of the barber clippers so that it could be used with the aid of the drill bits as a drill. MORRIS and one of the ANGLIN brothers tried to use this as a drill in removing the bolts of the lid covering the ventilator to the roof. They said the motor was too small and would not do the job. About that time the vacuum cleaner in the cell area broke down and [redacted] had a chance to examine it to see if it could be repaired. [redacted] noted that it had two motors in it. He took one of the motors out and then he wired the other motor up so that it would run the vacuum cleaner. b7c b7d

On the day he obtained the motor from the vacuum cleaner, one of the inmates was hit over the head by another inmate in the kitchen area and during the confusion he was able to smuggle the motor to his cell without anyone noticing him. This motor was given to MORRIS and the ANGLINS, and they took it to the roof to use as a drill. They said that it made too much noise and they could not use it much. They were finally able to loosen the tapins in the lid covering the ventilator to the roofing. After getting them out, they replaced them so they could be easily removed. Some time before this, CLARENCE ANGLIN made a dummy head out of cement which was to be used by [redacted] when, and if, he left his cell and which was to be stored on top of the cell block near the roof.

About the first part of May, 1962, [redacted] obtained an olive colored rubberized raincoat from one of the inmates who was transferred from this institution and, over the next few day obtained a couple more of such raincoats. In addition, over the next few days he would pick up a raincoat when it was placed down by another inmate and when this individual was not looking. In the evening he would take these raincoats and cut them up and paste them together with some glue which had possibly been obtained from the glove factory at the institution. He would also sew some of the material together. He made a yoke life preserver out of this. He made valves out of pieces of tubing which he could pick up at various times. At night the raincoats and the residue were hidden on top of the cell block near the roof in the ventilator pipe. [REDACTED] made all four yoke life preservers. JOHN ANGLIN was using the same type raincoat in making the raft they proposed to use. Upon occasions, bits of this material were handed into the back of [REDACTED] cell so he could splice and glue the pieces together.

b7D

A raft was made which was approximately six (6) feet by fourteen (14) feet and which had fifteen (15) inch pontoons around the edge and to the underneath section of the raft. Originally, JOHN ANGLIN had said that he had made a wooden type valve arrangement for one of the sections of the pontoon but had discarded it in the ventilator pipe near the roof in favor of making the pontoon with a rubberized type valve.

About a month and a half ago, FRANK MORRIS bought a Concertina, which type instrument is allowed inmates at Alcatraz. The keys to the Concertina were taken out and a valve type arrangement was made with it so that you could put your foot in one of the straps of the Concertina and with your hand push the other portion of the strap down so that the Concertina would act as a bellows.

Monday night, June 11, 1962, MORRIS had told [REDACTED] that they still had to complete taking the top off of the ventilator leading to the roof and to separate the bars on the roof. In addition, he indicated there was a little work left to complete the raft. FRANK MORRIS said that the ANGLINs were talking about completing the work and breaking out that night. CLARENCE ANGLIN and FRANK MORRIS left their cells and went up the utility corridor to the roof about 7:00 p.m. on June 11, 1962. MORRIS came down at about 8:45 p.m. that evening and said the bars were out of the hole on the roof and [REDACTED] gave him some water as he was thirsty. [REDACTED] went to the utility corridor was still not quite completed, since his job as to making the life preservers and assisting with the raft did not call for him to leave his cell. Also, if he had completed his, it would have been necessary to make the false rear to it to possibly prevent detection. JOHN ANGLIN had cemented up a portion of [REDACTED] vent to the rear where he had cracked the side of the cement to the utility corridor so no one would notice it. In addition, while working in his cell, [REDACTED] had helped make the paddles they intended to use. He made four paddles, they were of plywood, twelve (12) inches by eight (8) inches and with a wooden handle. He put about two or three bolts through the paddle and handle to hold them together. These paddles were stored up on top of the cell block and inside the ventilator pipe.

MORRIS indicated that they could go that evening if they got the lid off of the top of the ventilator. He said that the bars below it were out of the way and he felt that they would get that off by 9:30 p.m. He left and went up to the roof. Shortly thereafter, [REDACTED] heard some noises and started making noise to cover it up so no one would notice it. At 9:22 p.m., that date, CLARENCE ANGLIN tapped on [REDACTED] ventilator and said that they could see the moon. [REDACTED] tried to kick the rest of the cement out of the hole at the back of his cell. He could not do it. ANGLIN tried to help for a minute or so, but could not do anything. He then went up and got MORRIS. MORRIS came down and put the dummy in his bed. The lights were out at 9:30 p.m. and MORRIS went up to the roof and got a two inch piece of pipe and handed it to [REDACTED] tried to push it out but could not do it without making too much noise. MORRIS left to go get CLARENCE ANGLIN to help clear out [REDACTED] hole. This happened at 9:37 p.m. that evening. This is the last [REDACTED] heard or saw of them. As there was no dummy head for his bed, [REDACTED] was afraid at that time to break through his cell until after the 3:00 a.m. count.

At about 1:45 a.m. on June 12, 1962, after waiting some-time for them to come back, [REDACTED] became anxious and broke through his hole and went to the roof, by way of the utility corridor. There was no dummy for his bed. When [REDACTED] got into the utility corridor he noticed that they had left "OINK" laying there and he used this dummy head in his bed. [REDACTED] took his blue dungarees, undershirt, and blue serge pea jacket to the roof with him. He could see that they had gone as the material, etc. which [REDACTED] had worked on, and which they had described to him, was gone. In addition, there had been some one hundred (100) feet of a heavy electrical cording which had been laying on the floor of the utility corridor and [REDACTED] had noticed, upon leaving his cell, that it had disappeared. This cording was to be used in lowering their material down from the roof of the cell house and possibly in assisting in lowering one of them down.

[REDACTED] put on his life preserver and pea jacket and pants and started to go through the hole in the roof. He had to remove his clothing before he could get through the hole in the roof. When he got on the roof he put his clothing on again and went to the edge of the roof near the cage where the large black pipe leads to the ground. They had contemplated going down this pipe to the ground. [REDACTED] looked around and could not see MORRIS or the ANGLINS and figured it was too late for him to go. Also, they had taken the raft which was to be their means of escape. The last [REDACTED] saw MORRIS was at 9:37 p.m. on June 11th, 1962, and it is [REDACTED] belief that they would have been able to leave the Island by 10:30 p.m. that night or possibly no later than 11:00 p.m. that evening.

They had talked about going to Angel Island. It was believed that there would be less chance of detection if they proceeded in that direction. Upon getting to the mainland, they had decided that they would commit a burglary so they could obtain guns and clothes, and then steal a car. It was their desire to go as far from this area as they could, although they had no plan as to where they would go. [REDACTED] stated just MORRIS and the two ANGLINS, along with himself, were involved in this escape. To assist in this effort, [REDACTED] had made a periscope out of paper and mirrors which they could stick out of the hole on the roof to see if there were any guards in that area prior to leaving the hole. [REDACTED] had given this periscope to MORRIS for one of the ANGLINS and it was stored next to the roof. The only weapons which they would have possibly be a kitchen knife or some similar type objects which they might have sharpened.

When they were working, attempting to get out of their cells, they would work from between 5:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. in the evening. When MORRIS or the ANGLINS were working up near the roof, they would generally do such work between 6:45 p.m. and 9:00 p.m. at night. Generally, MORRIS was with one of the two ANGLINS when they went to the roof as [REDACTED] did not desire that the two ANGLINS go there together as he did not trust them. If they were successful in escaping, MORRIS and [REDACTED] had planned that sooner or later they would go in one direction and let the

ANGLIN brothers go in another.

[redacted] stated that this is all of the information he had to furnish concerning this matter. He said that he did not believe in signed statements and would not furnish one. [redacted] advised that the other three individuals, as far as he knew, had the same type of clothing to take, namely, their regular denim garb and a pea jacket. He said he knew of no other clothing which would protect them from the cold water and he had none.

After going to the roof of the cell house on the early morning of June 12, 1962, and seeing that MORRIS and the ANGLINS had escaped, [redacted] returned to his cell and went to bed.

Warden OLIN G. BLACKWELL, United States Penitentiary, Alcatraz, California, advised that inmate [REDACTED] assigned to Cell [REDACTED] in B Cell Block, had requested a private interview with him on June 18, 1962, and had been afforded same. b7c

BLACKWELL interviewed [REDACTED] without anyone present and without taking notes, both at [REDACTED] insistence.

[REDACTED] advised him that he had originally been in on the escape with FRANK MORRIS, JOHN ANGLIN, CLARENCE ANGLIN, and [REDACTED] as had inmate [REDACTED], who was in the adjoining cell to [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] said that he had dug a few holes in his cell near the ventilator grill and then quit the group after camouflaging the holes in his cell. [REDACTED] had continued digging but later on had camouflaged the holes in his cell because of work on the plumbing in the utility corridor behind the cells. [REDACTED] said [REDACTED] had been told to stop digging by the other members of the group for fear of detection when the plumbing was being repaired and they had not told [REDACTED] to start digging again as had been planned. [REDACTED] had not heard them mention any specific place they planned to go if they were successful in escaping from Alcatraz.

[redacted] an inmate of the U. S. Penitentiary, Alcatraz, California having Alcatraz number [redacted] and who resides in cell [redacted] at that institution was interviewed at Alcatraz.

At the inception of the interview, [redacted] was advised that he need not furnish any information, and if he did same could be used against him in a court of law. He was told of his rights to consult an attorney. He voluntarily furnished the following information.

About the first part of February 1962, [redacted] an inmate of Alcatraz having cell [redacted] adjacent to [redacted] asked [redacted] if he was interested in trying to escape. [redacted] told [redacted] that he was. [redacted] advised him that the ANGLIN brothers, FRANK MORRIS and [redacted] all inmates residing in the first tier of B cell block, were obtaining spoons and digging at the back of their cell under the sink around the ventilator. They were taking the cupped portion of the spoon off and sharpening that end of the spoon in the fashion of a screw driver which was utilized then in the digging.

[redacted] and [redacted] started to dig holes in their cells. One would watch during the evening while the other one dug in his cell and the next night the procedure would be reversed. [redacted] had talked over the attempted break with the ANGLIN brothers and [redacted] while at recreation periods in the prison recreation yard. They would start digging at about 6:15 p.m. and would work until 9:30 p.m. when the lights were turned off. [redacted] told [redacted] that [redacted] worked around the cell block doing painting and [redacted] was of the opinion that once they got through the cell walls and into the utility corridor immediately behind it they could proceed to the top of the cell block and break out through the ventilator area on to the roof.

About the first of April, 1962, the ANGLIN brothers indicated that they had completed making the holes in their cells near the ventilator area. They indicated that they had proceeded to the roof and checked the ventilator area and they believed they could break through the lid and on to the roof. [redacted] stated that he dug approximately six holes in his cell in the vicinity of the ventilator. This was accomplished in about seven days of digging over a two week period. He decided against trying to break out and told the others of his decision. As he dug out each hole he would fill it with soap and then paint over it with cement paint so that they would be well camouflaged.

When [redacted] decided to quit, [redacted] continued digging for about three or four weeks and [redacted] watched for him. [redacted] then told [redacted] that he wanted nothing more to do with it. [redacted] then got [redacted] an inmate in cell [redacted] to watch for him. [redacted] watched for [redacted] for about one week and then [redacted] quit. [redacted] did not try to dig in his cell to get out. [redacted] then got [redacted] an inmate in cell [redacted] to watch for him. [redacted] watched for [redacted] for about one week and then [redacted] quit. [redacted] did not try to dig any holes in his cell.

After breaking through the cell walls they had planned to put a fake cell wall and ventilator in the area which they had broken out of. About March 1962, the ANGLIN brothers and [redacted] said that they were going to build two rafts out of olive green rubberized rain coats issued to prisoners. From their conversation [redacted] believed that they were obtaining tape and paste from the tailor shop to assist in making the rafts. After the rafts were completed it was planned to place them in the ventilator pipe on top of B cell block and just under the roof. The ANGLIN brothers told him that MORRIS had made a hand pump out of steel pipe, a leather type plunger and wood which would be used to inflate the rafts. They talked of wearing long underwear which they might dye or paint black and sweatshirts similarly dyed or painted. This would be under their regular prison clothing and they would discard their prison clothing on the beach when they were ready to leave the island. They had talked about making paddles out of some wood, 1 x 8 inch board and each was to make his own.

After [redacted] had dug for a few weeks the ANGLIN brothers, MORRIS and [redacted] told [redacted] that all of them had to stop digging since there was to be some new plumbing installed in the utility corridor of B cell block. [redacted] told this to [redacted] and [redacted] said that they were to camouflage their holes so that no

[REDACTED] one could see them. [REDACTED] was told later by [REDACTED] that he had never been told by the ANGLIN brothers, MORRIS or [REDACTED] to start digging again, and therefore, he had not done so. [REDACTED] believed that [REDACTED] had originally thought of breaking out of the back part of the cell, then MORRIS suggested that the best place would be in the vicinity of the ventilator grill.

[REDACTED] who worked in the utility corridor upon various occasions since he was an inmate plumber and [REDACTED] who painted around the cell block area were the ones who did the main scheming and working on breaking through the ventilator lid to the roof. During their conversations JOHN ANGLIN had indicated that it was a shorter route to go from the island to the mainland of San Francisco rather than toward Angel Island. At that time they were considering building the rafts and going with them to the docks near where the Alcatraz prison boat docked. They would then hide the raft, try to locate an armory where they might steal firearms.

Later the ANGLINS mentioned that they might try to steal a helicopter as MORRIS had read considerably in the prison library about flying and MORRIS thought he would be able to pilot same. They would also steal food and clothing. If they obtained a helicopter they would fly a considerable distance from here and thought somewhere in the California desert, where they would stay for a number of months until the "heat" was off. If they arrived in the desert they had discussed stealing a big trailer truck body, digging a hole in the ground in the desert and putting the trailer truck body down in the hole and camouflage it so that no one could see it. They would then leave it and sneak out when no one was in the vicinity.

They talked about later on getting together and robbing banks. The ANGLINS mentioned that they would like to get their brother [REDACTED] out of the Atlanta Penitentiary. None of the individuals mentioned anyone that they would contact on the outside nor did they ever ask [REDACTED] for any of his acquaintances or friends, nor did he volunteer same.

[REDACTED] indicated that since he "backed out" of trying to escape with them, after initially being in on the plan he was not in on their recent escape plans and probably [REDACTED] was not since they had not told him to start digging at his cell hole again. [REDACTED] advised that about February, 1962, JOHN ANGLIN showed [REDACTED] two files. ANGLIN told [REDACTED] that one of the inmates called [REDACTED] who [REDACTED] identified as [REDACTED] stole these files from the tailoring shop and gave them to JOHN ANGLIN. [REDACTED] said [REDACTED] resided on the first floor of C cell block and that he still works in the tailoring shop at Alcatraz. [REDACTED] advised that [REDACTED] was not in on the plans to escape from the cells as far as he knew.

[REDACTED] became acquainted with JOHN ANGLIN in 1958 when both of them were in the U. S. Penitentiary, Lewisburg, Pennsylvania. After arriving at Alcatraz in September 1961 [REDACTED] became acquainted with CLARENCE ANGLIN, MORRIS, [REDACTED] and [REDACTED].

[REDACTED] stated that he did not desire to testify in court against anyone of the above individuals so long as he was at Alcatraz since to do so would mean his life since the inmates would take care of that. He did not desire to furnish a signed statement.

[redacted] Inmate, U. S. Penitentiary, Alcatraz, [redacted] advised that he knows Inmate CLARENCE ANGLIN by sight but does not know Inmates JOHN ANGLIN or FRANK MORRIS. [redacted] said he has heard no talk among inmates about an attempted break. He said he first heard of the escape Tuesday morning June 12, 1962, when it was discovered by the prison authorities.

[redacted] advised that he is assigned to the plumbing detail at Alcatraz. He said he frequently makes repairs in the utility corridor in B Cell Block, but has noticed nothing unusual in the utility corridor. [redacted] advised that he has been on vacation since Sunday, June 10, 1962, and has spent his days in the recreation yard since that time.

[REDACTED] and the ANGLIN brothers had previously been transferred to Alcatraz. Since being at Alcatraz [REDACTED] has been working as inmate clerk keeping track of the inmate clothing records. JOHN ANGLIN had been working with him in clothing issue for the past year.

He first saw inmates [REDACTED] and FRANK MORRIS at Alcatraz and is only casually acquainted with them. He had never heard the ANGLIN brothers [REDACTED] or MORRIS discuss attempting to escape and they had never asked him for any assistance. In fact he knew of no one who was attempting to escape from the institution.

On May 31, 1962, upon checking the inmate clothing he noticed that they were short of olive rubberized raincoats for inmates and he had made out a requisition for three dozen of these to be obtained from the prison warehouse. He said that each of the inmates is issued a raincoat when he arrives. If an inmate turns in one which is old or torn this inmate is issued a new one. He said that he had not ordered raincoats for inmates for about a year and at that time he had ordered three dozen.

He volunteered that he had talked on many occasions about sports with JOHN ANGLIN as well as CLARENCE ANGLIN. He was surprised that the ANGLIN brothers would even consider trying to swim across the bay since even before arriving at Alcatraz JOHN ANGLIN had told him that he, JOHN, was a poor swimmer. He does not recall CLARENCE ANGLIN discussing with him his ability as a swimmer. b7c b7d

[redacted] advised that he had resided in the San Francisco Bay Area from about 1952 until 1957 and that he had done some swimming around the beaches. He advised that he had never done any swimming in the bay because to do so was too dangerous since the water was too cold, rough and there was a very rough undercurrent. He volunteered that he did not believe any of the inmates could swim across the bay without special training and gear.

Upon many occasions he had had discussions with JOHN ANGLIN while in the clothing issue room relative to the tides and heavy currents surrounding the island. Upon occasion JOHN ANGLIN had asked him if he [redacted] had any friends around San Francisco. [redacted] stated that he had some acquaintances but that he had not furnished this information to anybody at Alcatraz. He advised that the only friends he had in the San Francisco area were endeavoring to have his sentence shortened and obtain a parole for him, therefore, he would not involve any of them with any convict at Alcatraz.

On June 12, 1962, United States Attorney CECIL F. POOLE advised SA [REDACTED] he would withhold prosecution at this time as to [REDACTED] pending location of the three Escapees. b7C

On June 20, 1962, the facts as developed concerning [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] were discussed with United States Attorney CECIL F. POOLE and Assistant United States Attorney FREDERICK J. WOELFLEN, both San Francisco, by SA [REDACTED]. Mr. POOLE advised that [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] would be considered for prosecutive action for the crime of attempt to escape. He did not feel that there was adequate evidence to support any type of prosecution at this time as to [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]. b7C

Mr. POOLE indicated that the initiation of prosecution as to those inmates who were in on the attempted escape but who did not leave with the Escapees would be premature at this time. He will make a final decision concerning prosecution as to all Subjects after all pertinent facts have been developed.
