(Bureau File 65-59192)

DAVID GREENGLASS has advised that he furnished the name of Doctor HENRY LINSCHITZ to HARRY GOLD as a possible recruit at Los Alamos.

Mrs. MINNIE LINSCHITZ, 880 West 181st Street, New York City, mother of Doctor HENRY LINSCHITZ, has advised that he is presently employed on the faculty of Syracuse University at Syracuse, New York.

Albany should refer to their investigation of LINSCHITZ under an AEAA character for background.

The files of the New York Office reflect that one HENRY LINSCHITZ of 5711 South Kenwood, Chicago, was a member of the "FEDERATION OF AMERICAN SCIENTISTS" in 1947 or 1948. There is no derogatory information re LINSCHITZ on file in the New York Office.

Bureau authority is requested for Albany to interview Doctor HENRY LINSCHITZ to determine if an attempt was made to recruit him for Soviet espionage and to obtain information in his possession concerning GREENGLASS.

Enclosed herewith to El Paso is a letter addressed to Mrs. VICTOR ANDERSON, 4205 Pershing Drive, El Paso, Texas, which is postmarked Las Cruces, New Mexico, August 11, 1950, and bears no return address. This letter was received from the Albuquerque Office by letter, October 18, 1950, which states the letter was found by Mrs. JUNE FREIX, cashier at the Sky Chef Restaurant, Municipal Airport. Enclosed with the letter is a clipping from Time magazine dated July 31, 1950, which mentions the arrest of DAVID GREENGLASS. Around the margin, apparently in ETHEL's handwriting, is written the following:

"HENRY read this again. The man's name was GREENGLASS.
Evidently thats where you got this glass bottle".

El Paso is requested to interview HENRY for information he may have concerning GREENGLASS, if there is no derogatory information on him in possession of El Paso Office.

If this matter is found to be of no interest, the letter may be returned to Mrs. ANDERSON.

Reference is made to the memorandum of the New York Office dated October 12, 1950, in which authority was requested for the Albany Office to interview Dr. Henry Linschitz.

In view of the fact that the Atomic Energy Act Applicant investigation of Dr. Linschitz is being reopened for additional investigation in that case with a deadline of November 10, 1950, it is believed advisable to withhold conducting any interview with Dr. Linschitz until the completion of that investigation. The Albany Office should, upon the completion of the additional investigation, submit its recommendation relative to conducting an interview with Dr. Linschitz.

DATE: November 29, 1950

FROM : SAC, El Paso

SUBJECT: DAVID GREENGLASS, was
ESPIONAGE - R

Re New York letter to the Bureau dated October 27, 1950.

The El Paso indices are negative regarding Mrs. VICTOR ANDERSON, HENRY SUMMERFORD and Mrs. ETHEL LANE, aka Mrs. Uil Lane.

On November 18, 1950, Mrs. VICTOR B. ANDERSON, 4205 Pershing Drive, El Paso, Texas, advised that HENRY and ETHEL, described in the letter set forth in the referenced communication, were her son-in-law HENRY SUMMERFORD and his sister, Mrs. ETHEL LANE, aka Mrs. UIL LANE, who resides 626 North Alameda Street, Las Cruces, New Mexico. Mrs. ANDERSON stated that she did not know the subject of this case.

HENRY SUMMERFORD, Manager, Savage Oil Company, 720 South Florence, residing 4201 Pershing Drive, both El Paso, Texas, furnished the following information when interviewed on November 20, 1950:

One day last summer, he and his sister, Mrs. UIL LANE, residing 626 North Alameda Street, Las Cruces, New Mexico, were discussing various Russian spies concerning whom the papers and magazines at the time had lengthy articles. During the conversation there was some speculation as to how one spy would know another, and HENRY SUMMERFORD mentioned that he had read somewhere that sometimes spies broke a bottle. After the bottle was broken one person kept one part and another part was taken away. Subsequently, when two individuals met and were able to fit the broken parts of the bottle together they knew that they were the right people. ETHEL'S letter regarding "GREENGLASS" apparently referred to SUMMERFORD'S remarks as set forth above.

Mr. SUMMERFORD stated that he did not know GREENGLASS at all and that he does not recognize the photograph of GREENGLASS.

MEMO

RE: ARTHUR SPRIGMAN
INTERNAL SECURITY -R

On April 4th, 1951 a photograph of the captioned subject was exhibited to DAVID GREENGLASS and he recognized it as an individual named ARTHUR who had come to the apartment occupied by DAVID GREENGLASS and ETHEL GREENGLASS sometime during the 1930's on about four or five occasions. He recalled that he had played the piano and the violin and on one occasion had repaired a violin. He also recalled that ARTHUR was either an associate or a partner in the COMO AERONAUTICAL COMPANY on 17th Street, which was started by a Negro named WILLIAMS who was an aviator and that JULIUS ROSENBERG and MARK PAGE were also working in the COMO AERONAUTICAL COMPANY at that time.

DAVID recalled that JULIUS ROSENBERG became angry and had a fallen out with both WILLIAMS and ARTHUR concerning the business in which they were engaged. GREENGLASS statedthat he has not seen ARTHUR since JULIUS and ETHEL were married in 1939 and it may have been several years prior to that when he last saw ARTHUR. GREENGLASS was under the impression that ARTHUR is a Communist and thinks he heard some mention that ARTHUR was a Communist Party member.

GREENGLASS was also under the impression that all of the individuals connected with the COMO AERONAUTICAL COMPANY were Communists. GREENGLASS stated that he believed ARTHUR came from Canada and once [redacted] GREENGLASS also recalled that ARTHUR had been Bohemian in character and he had been married several times.

GREENGLASS was of the opinion that SAM FREUND might be able to furnish information concerning ARTHUR. According to GREENGLASS, SAM FREUND is a licensed electrician who did some electrical work for the COMO AERONAUTICAL COMPANY for which he was never paid and several of the members of the GREENGLASS family had felt that JULIUS ROSENBERG should have paid FREUND for this work.

GREENGLASS advised that SAM FREUND, about fourteen years ago, resided in the first housing project to be built on Avenue A, near 2nd or 3rd Street on the lower east side of Manhattan.

He also advised that FREUND's mother operates a fish market, which is located in the same block and on the same side of the street as 265 Rivington Streeet, a few doors west of GREENGLASS' apartment.

Re: WILLIAM PERL, was.
Espionage - R

Rebutel 4/14/51, 5:36 P.M.

On 4/16/51 DAVID GREENGLASS advised he recalls that while standing by the milling machine at Pitt Machine Products Inc., probably in September or October 1948, but possibly in the spring of 1948, he was having a conversation with JULIUS ROSENBERG and one or two others. The others were either BERNARD GREENGLASS or MORRIS ISRAEL or both. During this conversation JULIUS ROS[illegible] mentioned that the mathematics had been all worked out for construction of an atomic energy airplane motor. DAVID later asked JULIUS, in private, how JULIUS knew about this, and JULIU[illegible] told him he had learned about it from one of his boys. DAVID then asked JULIUS about the possibility of the pilot receiving radiation-burns. JULIUS said this problem had been solved by placing the pilot and passengers far away from the shielded pow[illegible] plant.

THE INTERNAL SECURITY ACT OF 1950

Reurlet 5/31/51 in which you advise that you believe that such individuals as Whittaker Chambers, Louis F. Budenz, Hede Massing, Elizabeth Bentley and other individuals who are publicly known as anti-Communists will agree to register. You feel, however, that your office should assist them in registering and request copies of the Attorney General's Questionnaire, Exhibit G, be sent to you for delivery to those informants.

The facts regarding the individuals, above-named, have been made available to the Attorney General. DESCRIPTION OF SUBJECT:

FACTS OF COMPLAINT: [redacted] Complainant related that there has been considerable ill feeling at the prison against the subject because he gave information against his sister (not for his treason). He pointed out that anything can be accomplished at the prison and cited the recent killing of one WOODARD, the escape of the HOLAN's as well as other incidents. [redacted] advised that since it was learned that the Supreme Court refused to grant a hearing to the ROSENBERGs there has been a sharp increase in ill feeling toward GREENGLASS which gives him a strong feeling that someone will "get" him. He stated that his reasons for giving the information was that prison officials never listen to an inmate but that he feels sure that he will soon read in the paper that someone has injured or killed the subject. He does not feel that GREENGLASS should be left at that institution as a temptation to some of the "regular guys" that are in for natural life and feel they have nothing to lose. He suggests that subject should be transferred to a lesser sentence institution such as Danbury. Complainant states he is only 29 but has spent about 12 years in various penal institutions and knows whereof he speaks. He insisted he had no specific inmates in mind.

ACTION RECOMMENDED BY AGENT: [redacted] was interviewed along ICI lines but indicated he would not cooperate.

Consider advising prison authorities and Bureau - file.

Mother-in-Law Begs A-Spy to Talk

By Murray Kempton

Mrs. Tessie Greenglass, mother of one confessed atom spy and another doomed and silent one, today placed whatever hopes she has for the life of her daughter, Ethel Rosenberg, on a last-minute appeal to her son-in-law, Julius Rosenberg, to tell the truth if the truth can save him.

Mrs. Greenglass will try to move through the courts to be allowed to talk to Julius Rosenberg in Sing Sing. She does not know with any assurance that he will see her. She only knows that there is no one else left—no judge and no President. She saw Ethel for an hour and a half some weeks ago; she does not talk about the interview, but plainly it left her no recourse but her stubborn, silent son-in-law.

Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Greenglass rode the bus down from her old house on Sheriff St. to ask O. John Rogge, her son David's counsel, how she might arrange that last desperate trip to Sing Sing, where the Rosenbergs may die any time after March 31.

Tessie Greenglass sat outside Rogge's office yesterday and talked about her long, slow, lonely fight to save the children she still loves without the need to understand them.

Rogge was the lawyer who convinced David Greenglass to tell the story of his career in atomic espionage to the Justice Dept.; he had gone with her to visit the White House and appeal for clemency; now she was asking him how she might try this one last shift. The case she did not want to talk about any more; its rights and its wrongs were beyond her; this was the world of lawyers and great decision, a world she had never made but a world on which she would not quit.

Her son had confessed having helped steal the Atom Bomb; her daughter had been convicted of the same treason without confessing it.

"It is a hard pill," she said. "Three children all in the same mess—a son, a son-in-law and a daughter." Someone said the other daughter-in-law, Ruth Greenglass, had seemed like a nice person and she said:

"They're all nice," she said. "Nice and intelligent. But maybe they've been fooling themselves."

"Is it so much? Say they give them 30 years. He'll be 62 when he gets out—or more. My son will be there 15 years; I suppose he did wrong and he will pay for it, but those others . . ."

She could not reach the President; now she had to try and reach Julius Rosenberg; who could tell her that there would be any softness there?

Tessie Greenglass stood up on the 23d floor of Rogge's Broadway office building and looked down on the lower Manhattan she does not often see from so far up.

She pointed to the Criminal Courts Building, and said that her son had spent a year there. She pointed to the Federal Court Building where David Greenglass and the Rosenbergs had been tried and said, "Such a lot of steps."

Such a lot of steps for Tessie Greenglass, all leading at the end to the son-in-law she cannot be sure will see her. Even if he will, it will take a court order to get her in: the state law is very clear in saying that only the most immediate family may see a prisoner in the death house.

For the last few months, she has left her Sheriff St. apartment for almost no other business but the case of her children. Most of the day she sits there in the house behind what was once her husband's store.

"It is the same house; I have been living here since 1914."

Ethel Rosenberg and David Greenglass were born there and grew up there; she is at home all day with nothing but the memory of them. For a little while after their arrest, she had Ethel and Julius' two sons to take care of; they have long since gone to a foster home.

"Such fine boys," she says. She will not judge her children or us who condemned them; she does not even now know for sure what they did.

"Who can take a man's life?" she says. "They say it's communism, communism . . . communism." What is all this—the crime and the twisted martyrdom—to old Tessie Greenglass, alone on Sheriff St.?

Her eyes with their heavy glasses looked out the window; after a while, she got up and said, "It's a quarter to four, already; I have to go home and cook supper." Someone suggested taking her home. Tessie Greenglass said she did not want to bother anybody; she could take the bus on the corner and be right there.

Tomorrow she would start the effort just to see Julius, whatever happened after that; for the rest of it, the Supreme Court appeal, for all the courts, "There is," she said, "nothing more to say." Nothing more meant no real hope but Julius.

She went downstairs in the elevator and walked in the cold toward the bus, a little red feather in her hat, her coat dark, her shoes old and black and carefully kept, her walk slow and tired and patient. She stopped at the corner and looked in her purse for the dime. She was on her way back to Sheriff St.

"I hope," she said at the end, "that I will see you in a happier time."

That happier time when somebody would have mercy. And, for Tessie Greenglass, there was nobody left to show any mercy except her son-in-law Julius—if he would see her.

[Philadelphia, Pa.
December 18, 1970] (C)

A chance meeting with acquaintances, then to an unscheduled visit to 20 South 12th Street.

Walking on Walnut Street at 19th, I met HENRIETTA OSTROY with JEAN FRANTGIS and a HELEN SOBEL. HENRIETTA introduced me to JEAN F. and I am sure she did not remember a previous meeting. We walked to Broad Street where HELEN SOBEL left, then walked to 13th and Chestnut where JEAN F. left, and since we were so near to 20 South 12th - went on there, which I had not planned on doing, but afraid I might miss something. (C)

HENRIETTA and I worked on mailing, when a surprised voice addressed me, I could not remember the name until HENRIETTA greeted her - PAULINE LEVIN, SWP - in the conversations between us, I learned they, PAULINE, HENRIETTA and JEAN are Marxists of many years, and have worked on the paper "Daily World" and promoted their ideas among workers and politicians for years.

PAULINE asked H. if she heard anything "more" about DAVID GREENGLASS, and H. said she saw him shortly after his release from prison, and expected to see him this coming week (Where? I don't know). D.G. is related to Mrs. ROSENBERG, deceased - and HELEN SOBEL is related to GREENGLASS - remember the traitors! I do. Small world - then PAULINE told me she and husband HERBERT have severed all connections with SWP - that SWP no longer have anything constructive to offer - they have out grown them.

PAULINE invited to dine and visit with him, I have better things to do - P. told me PEARL CHERTOV is working for SWP in Chicago with JOHN BENSON, but will return here in April - JUDY CHERTOV moved back home with her father - said ROBIN MAISEL married and is living in Southwest Phila. - near 50th and Baltimore Avenue. PAULINE was quite talkative and appeared glad to see me, and wants to keep in touch.

HELEN EVELEV came in and told me on 12/26, she and members of WILPF are going to a convention in India. Leave NYC via Air India evening of 12/28, then to London and India for three weeks, and did I know SANE is planning a pilgrimage to Russia in Spring, very reasonable rates, could I go along? The cost now to India by the group is only $780. - plus meals - and the trip to Russia equally reasonable, free breakfast - details later.

Also EVELYN ALLOY quite ill at Einstein Med., York and Tabor Roads, has been there a week and surgery for gall bladder planned as soon as her condition permits. Her room number 845.

LARRY SCOTT left AQUAC to direct some office in Washington, D.C. - STEWART MEACHAM going with protest to D.C. - 12/23 - My neighbors the ESTES are also driving a group in their car to D.C. - noon 12/23.

Please see my News Letter enclosed for January 20, 1971 event.

Glad I stopped by 20 South 12th!

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

In Lewisburg Penitentiary yesterday, David Greenglass met his lawyer, O. John Rogge, who flew there with members of Sen. McCarthy's staff. Arrangements now are being made to bring Greenglass to New York next week to testify at a televised hearing. He will be held in a place other than the Federal House of Detention, because of the recent assault on Communist leader Robert Thompson there . . . Greenglass showed the visitors his small cell, and said to his lawyer: "I've seen worse rooms than this in the Catskills."

Greenglass Won't Testify Here Life Threatened: M'Carthy

The life of David Greenglass, convicted A-bomb spy who is scheduled to "tie up the Rosenberg spy ring directly to the Army Signal Corps," has been threatened, it was revealed Tuesday by Sen. Joseph McCarthy, chairman of the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee.

McCarthy said he had learned from a "completely reliable source" that Greenglass' life might be in danger if he leaves the Federal penitentiary at Lewisburg to testify before the Senate group and that therefore the committee will go to the prison next week instead of summoning Greenglass here for a hearing as planned.

• "WE DON'T want anyone taking potshots at Greenglass," said McCarthy. He added that Greenglass told the committee's special counsel, Roy Cohn, that he could establish that extremely important material stolen from Fort Monmouth was put into the hands of Soviet espionage agents.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that a man believed to be Abraham Brothman, who has been linked to the Rosenberg spy ring by confessed atom spy Harry Gold, will appear before the committee Wednesday.

It was revealed that Brothman, who recently completed a two-year sentence for conspiring to obstruct justice in an espionage probe, has been working at the Techni-Flex Co. plant in Port Jervis, N. J.

A plant official, who asked to remain anonymous, said Brothman has the confidence of all who know him. Brothman is a chemical engineer. The spokesman said the plant does some work for Republic Aviation, but has no connection with radar production.

"We make some government material," he added, "but nothing of any importance."

"THE MOMENT we heard Brothman was free and working in a radar plant, we called the Techni-Flex Co. and one of his superiors said the Brothman employed in the plant was the same one who had served time on the conspiracy charge," said McCarthy.

McCarthy said about eight witnesses were called Tuesday. He declared he will go to Washington on Friday to quiz members of the Army's loyalty board, particularly a suspended civilian member, in connection with the Fort Monmouth investigation.

It was also learned that a key radar and guided-missile research scientist at Fort Monmouth allegedly has been identified as a Communist despite his denials and that he also will be summoned before the Senate probers. He was named by an ex-Red, now living in Miami, as a member of a secret Red cell with spies Julius Rosenberg and Morton Sobell.

ASAC I. D. MacLENNAN

SEMONTEL
ESP. R.

Assistant Director L. B. Nichols telephoned at 1:00 P.M., 11/4/53, and referred to a story written by EDWARD RANZAL, which appeared in the NY Times, 11/3/53. Mr. Nichols advised that the article was, in effect, deprecating the work of the Senate Investigating Committee. Mr. Nichols advised he had received a "rumble" that, although RANZAL's information was purportedly received from O. John Rogge, actually RANZAL had not obtained the information from Mr. Rogge, but had obtained it from some employee of the NYO of the FBI.

I advised Mr. Nichols that I had no information concerning any employee giving any information to RANZAL, but aht I would have a check made and let him know.

I requested SA Thomas J. McAndrews to make inquiry concerning the possibility of any Agent having furnished such information to RANZAL.

This same date, at approximately 3:30 P.M., I telephoned Mr. Nichols and advised him I had not been able to locate anybody in the NYO who had been in contact recently with RANZAL. I did advise him that supervisor Thomas J. McAndrews had run into RANZAL this noon while at lunch and, thereafter, Mr. McAndrews furnished the following information to Mr. Nichols:-

IDM:HMF

ADDENDUM BY SA THOMAS J. McANDREWS:

At approximately 3:30 P.M., ASAC Ian D. MacLennan referred a telephone call from Asst. Dir. L. B. Nichols, Bureau, to the writer. Mr. Nichols had inquired of Mr. MacLennan whether or not there could have been a leak of information from the NYO to Edward Ranzal, reporter of the NY Times, which resulted in the story in the New York Times Deprecating the activities of the McCarthy Committee in its recent inquiries in New York. Mr. Nichols also indicated that Ranzal might not have contacted O. John Rogge for his story as he reported in the article which appeared in the NY Times, 11/3/53.

I told Mr. Nichols that neither I nor any of the Supervisors had been in touch with RANZAL in the recent past. I pointed out to him that RANZAL had covered the U. S. Court House for many years for the NY Times, was known to many Agents of NYO. I also told him that RANZAL had covered the ROSENBERG trial and was entirely familiar with the personalities and the attorneys involved in this trial. I then advised him that on 11/4/53, I had met RANZAL and he had furnished me the following information voluntarily.

CC: NY File 65-15336 (DAVID GREENGLASS)

RANZAL learned from the press and from his contacts in the Court House that Roy Cohn, Chief Counsel, McCarthy Committee; O. John Rogge, Attorney for DAVID GREENGLASS; and others were going to Lewisburg Penitentiary on Thursday, 10/29/53 to interview DAVID GREENGLASS concerning his knowledge of Espionage at Fort Monmouth. RANZAL stated that when he heard this, he reviewed the testimony on DAVID GREENGLASS in the trial of the ROSENBERGS at the office of AUSA James B. Kilsheimer, III, in the Court House. On Friday, 10/30/53, in the evening, he telephonically contacted the office of O. John Rogge, Attorney for David Greenglass, and asked to be advised what information, if any, Mr. Rogge could provide him with concerning GREENGLASS' statements to representatives of the McCarthy Committee. Mr. Rogge was not present in the office, being in South Carolina. RANZAL talked to Mr. FABRICANT, a partner of O. John Rogge; and while they were talking, Rogge called his office long distance. RANZALL, through FABRICANT, interviewed ROGGE, and obtained information as to what material GREENGLASS had supplied the McCarthy Committee on 10/29/53. Mr. Rogge asked RANZAL to hold off printing the story until Rogge had a chance to discuss the matter with him. This, Ranzal agreed to do.

RANZAL pointed out that Rogge had a client who was due to appear before the McCarthy Committee and that he did not care to jeopardize this client's welfare by authorizing a story for RANZAL unless he had time to think it out carefully. I told Mr. Nichols this client was probably FRED JOSEPH KITTY, a figure in the ROSENBERG case. RANZAL then told me that on Monday, 11/2/53, he had contacted Rogge and Rogge had authorized his story which appeared in the NY Times of 11/3/53. This story indicated that the McCarthy Committee had not obtained new information from DAVID GREENGLASS and that at the time GREENGLASS had only furnished information to which he had testified in the ROSENBERG trial. RANZAL told me that on 11/3/53, he received a phone call from Mr. Roy Cohn in which Cohn stated Rogge had not approved the story and was angered with RANZAL for printing it. RANZAL told COHN this was not true and thathe had ROGGE's approval for the story. COHN had indicated to RANZAL that ROGGE had called COHN and protested the story. RANZAL, following his talk with COHN, called ROGGE and found that COHN had called ROGGE and protested the story, and not that Rogge had called Cohn.

I told Mr. Nichols that the above was volunteered by RANZAL; that no comments had been made by the Agent and, further, RANZAL had indicated that he had been requested to write an article for the Sunday Times, date unknown, indicating that the McCarthy Committee was not producing new information. This also was received without comment by the Agent. Mr. Nichols was asked whether or not he desired any further material on this and he said he did not. He instructed the writer to be certain that all Agents having business with the McCarthy Committee or the press be most careful not to indicate any attitude for or against the Committee. I told him NYO was aware of the desire of the Bureau for this procedure to be followed closely. He then said the Bureau had to walk down the middle of the road with reference to the McCarthy Committee. I told him NYO would follow the Bureau's instructions in this matter.

SAC, New York

11/5/53

SA THOMAS J. McANDREWS (

SEMONTEL
ESP. R.

At 1:40 P.M., 11/5/53, I telephonically furnished the following information to Assistant Director A. H. Belmont, Bureau.

I told Mr. Belmont that, unsolicited, O. John Rogge, Attorney for DAVID GREENGLASS, had telephonically contacted SA John A. Harrington on this date and had advised SA Harrington that he was calling to ask him whether or not he knew the McCarthy Committee was going to reinterview DAVID GREENGLASS at Lewisburg Penitentiary. SA Harrington explained to Mr. Roggee that we had no information available on the movements of the McCarthy Committee and could not be of assistance to him in this request. Mr. Rogge then stated he believed the McCarthy Committee was going to reinterview DAVID GREENGLASS at Lewisburg and that he had not bee invited to participate as yet in that interview. Mr. Rogge mentioned that he was thinking of calling or writing the authorities at Lewisburg Penitentiary and requesting them not to permit DAVID GREENGLASS to be interviewed by any member of the McCarthy Committee unless he, O. John Rogge, was present. To this, SA Harrington made no comment.

Mr. Rogge further stated he had been requested by the NY Times to prepare an article on the McCarthy Committee's interview of DAVID GREENGLASS, which occurred on 10/29/53, and Mr. Roggee intended, in this article, to indicate that DAVID GREENGLASS had told the McCarthy Committee only the information to which he had testified in the trial of the ROSENBERGS. Mr. Rogge further indicated that he was upset by the innuendos appearing in the public press that his client, DAVID GREENGLASS, had information other than that to which he had testified in the ROSENBERG trial. He, as attorney, for DAVID GREENGLASS, thought it was a matter of aoncern, in that he did not wish to have DAVID GREENGLASS represented in anything but an accurate light. (It is to be noted that as attorney, he is concerned about DAVID GREENGLASS' parole and release from the penitentiary.) To this, No comment was made by SA Harrington.

Mr. Rogge offered a copy of the article he was preparing for the NY Times to SA Harrington. No committment was made to accept this article, nor will the article be accepted. Mr. Rogge further added that his article will also deal with the role of the Senate Committee in such matters and will express the opinion that matters of espionage are beyond the scope of the Committee and within the investigative jurisdiction of the FBI.

Mr. Belmont said it would not be necessary to furnish the above information to the Bureau in teletype form.

A Yes, they did.

Q And to where did they remove their offices?

Greenglass testify? A I did.

Q Now I want to direct the following questions and try to have you focus your attention upon your recollection of their testimony.

Mrs. Ruth Greenglass testified here in substance, that in the middle of November 1944 you came over to her house or you invited her to your house and you asked her to enlist her husband, Dave Greenglass, in getting information out of where he was working and deliver or convey that information to you.

Did you ever have any conversation with Mrs. Ruth Greenglass at or about that time with respect to getting information from Dave Greenglass out of the place that he was working?

A I did not.

Q Did you know in the middle of November 1944 where Dave Greenglass was stationed? A I did not.

BY THE COURT:

Q Well, did you know that she had been out to see David? A In November 1944?

Q Yes, when she came back, did you know that she had been out there? A When she came back, we knew that she had visited him at his camp.

Q To come to the middle of November 1944, with respect to the alleged talk that you had with Ruth Greenglass, your sister-in-law, before she went out to visit her husband at Los Alamos I would like to focus your attention to that particular incident that has been testified here. Did you ever tell Ruth that you were now doing the work that you always wanted to do, to assist in getting information to the Soviet Union or to the Russians or words to that effect? A I did not.

Q Now, did you ever tell her at that time that you had learned about the atomic bomb from friends?

Q How long would you estimate the Sidoroviches have lived in Cleveland? A I can't tell exactly.

Q Is it four years or five years or six years? Would that help you in any way? A I would venture a guess for about five years.

Q Now let us come to this night when the Greenglasses were in your house. Did you ever have any transaction with the Greenglasses in which a Jello box was involved? A No, I did not.

MR. L.H. BLOCH: May I have the Jello box.

(Handed.)

Q Now I show you Government's Exhibit 4 and I show your Government's Exhibit 4-A and Government's Exhibit 4 being an ordinary Jello box that is in use and 4-A and 4-B being one of the sides of a Jello box which has been cut out for certain purposes of this trial and ask you whether or not you ever, or whether your wife ever cut the side of a Jello box in the manner in which 4-A and 4-B are cut, or whether you cut any side of any Jello box at any time? GREENGLASS also advised that while ROSENBERG stated that GLASSER had received some correspondence from BARR while BARR was in Sweden, but did not elaborate. He also gave the additional information concerning BARR that in the fall of 1947 BARR brought to the Pitt Machine Products Company a metal tool box containing some tools and oscilloscope, a wave meter, a photographic contact printer, some developing pans, some clamp on flood-lights and a considerable amount of literature on photography. GREENGLASS stated that this material was stored in the basement of the Pitt Machine Products Company located at 320 East Houston Street, New York City. He stated that BARR told him he had an enlarger but GREENGLASS never saw this enlarger. He further stated that after BARR left the United States, Julius ROSENBERG told him that he could take the material that BARR had left at the Pitt Machine Products Company. GREENGLASS said that he gave the above-mentioned items to his brother-in-law, Louis ABEL, who resides at 87 Columbia Street, New York City.

David GREENGLASS, convicted Soviet espionage agent, advised in several interviews conducted by agents of the New York Office as to the following facts concerning Joel BARR.

GREENGLASS stated that Julius ROSENBERG came to him and told him to leave the country. GREENGLASS refused to leave the United States and when he said so ROSENBERG told him he would have to leave the country and that more important people than GREENGLASS had left the country already, such as Joel BARR, who is now doing work for the Russians overseas.

In another interview GREENGLASS advised that Julius ROSENBERG told him that he had given money to Joel BARR to assist BARR in his trip to Europe in 1946. However, GREENGLASS had no knowledge as to the amount of money or exactly when this money was given.

In another interview GREENGLASS stated that he had asked Julius ROSENBERG sometime in 1947 and just prior to BARR's trip to Europe, whether Joel BARR and Vivian GLASSMAN, who was the girl friend of Joel BARR, were in the espionage setup. ROSENBERG answered sharply "No". However, a short time later ROSENBERG told David GREENGLASS that Joel BARR was active in the espionage network. GREENGLASS said that when ROSENBERG answered "No" to his question concerning Joel BARR and Vivian GLASSMAN and the manner in which he did, he must have meant that BARR and GLASSMAN were involved, but he did not want to talk about it. A short time afterward ROSENBERG admitted to GREENGLASS that BARR was a Soviet agent, but he never mentioned Vivian GLASSMAN again in connection with his espionage work.

SA THOMAS J. McANDREWS

At 9:15 A.M. this date, [redacted], now with the McCarthy Committee, telephonically contacted the writer and advised that he had a copy of an affidavit prepared by DAVID GREENGLASS for the McCarthy Committee which affidavit [redacted] desired to furnish this office so that it could be brought to the attention of Mr. Nichols.

I arranged for SA Minihan to go over to Room 1402 to pick up this affidavit. I will contact Mr. Nichols telephonically upon receipt of this. [redacted] then advised that the McCarthy Committee will call a Colonel from the Signal Corps as the first witness today to testify on the nature of the radar experiments at Fort Monmouth and their security classification. They will then read into the record the GREENGLASS affidavit. The third witness will be JOSEPH LEVITSKY who will probably claim the Fifth Amendment on all pertinent questions.

I advised Bill Cleveland of the Bureau of the above in the absence of Mr. Hennrich who was otherwise occupied at the time of my call. I told the Bureau that I would telephonically contact the Bureau upon the receipt of the GREENGLASS affidavit and any other additional information which might be forthcoming on the hearings of the McCarthy Committee in New York today.

SA Spencer is aware of the above.

Mr. Hennrich & Mr. McGuire telephonically contacted at 9:45 A.M. 11/24/53 & pertinent portions of affidavit read to both. At McGuire's instructions affidavit sent to Bu & Phil immediately by Teletype. Copy sent by mail to Bu. 11/24/53

Rebulet to Philadelphia dated 2/23/54 in instant case, and Buairtel to New York, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh dated 2/25/54 entitled, "WILLIAM ALGER REMINGTON, PERJURY."

Mr. [illegible] HUMPHREY, Warden, United States Penitentiary, Lewisburg, Pa., stated he has received no information that ALGER HISS, WILLIAM REMINGTON, HARRY GOLD, and DAVID GREENGLASS are associating with each other. He advised that all are quartered and employed separately, and further stated that GOLD and GREENGLASS are quartered in a cell block which is located on the opposite end of the institution from where HISS and REMINGTON are quartered. He said GOLD and GREENGLASS attend Inside Recreation in different locations than HISS and REMINGTON. He said, in his opinion, the only time they would see each other would be in the Dining Room, Library, or at the Current Events Forum, or at Music Appreciation, which are held once a week under supervision, and this would be only for a short period of time.

Mr. HARRY GOLD, Inmate, United States Penitentiary, advised that the name of ROBERT ALTER MAY is not familiar to him and stated, after viewing his photograph, that he cannot recall seeing him and is positive that he has never talked to him. In regard to HISS, GOLD stated that he has never

He recalled that he has had only one short discussion with REMINGTON, which was several months ago, at which time REMINGTON advised him that sometime he would like to have him (GOLD) explain some parts of the Einstein Theory. GOLD advised that he has never noticed any association between GREENGLASS and REMINGTON.

GOLD advised that neither he nor GREENGLASS attends Inside Recreation or the Current Events Forum, but both do attend Music Appreciation, along with REMINGTON and HISS. He stated there is no discussion at Music Appreciation, which is under supervision.

GOLD stated that neither he nor DAVID GREENGLASS has ever associated with either JOHN WILLIAMSON or MAURICE BRAVERMAN, Smith Act subjects, but both do periodically attend Music Appreciation. He stated BRAVERMAN is opposed to GREENGLASS and to anyone who speaks to him. He stated BRAVERMAN and WILLIAMSON are together at every opportunity, but he has never noticed any association between these two and HISS and REMINGTON.

Bureau's attention is called to Bureau's File Number 47-3483 entitled, "ROBERT W. ELWAY, IMPERSONATION," in which Philadelphia has no pertinent information.

"I arrived at Lewisburg Penitentiary Aug. 15-56. Was treated about the same way as if you had joined the Army. Was assigned to (A 0) quarantine where after receiving medical shots, instructions on regulations gone through a regular routine, I finished my 30 days, and knowing the barber trade I was assigned to the barber shop detail. It is just like any other barber shop, all the scandal that happens into a town we know, the barber knows how it happened! Well, at Lewisburg it is like a little town of 1200 people, all the happenings discussed in the (town) barber shop.

"At Lewisburg, it is equipped with 18 chairs, four chairs are used for the colored trade, they have three colored barbers, (of course you never have to worry about customers) after a few days and considering I am a fair barber, I met the crop of the prison. In a few weeks I actually had steady customers, like ALMER HISS, JAMESON HARRY GOLD and a special customer, the famous GREENGLASS, if you remember the name, he was Rosenberger's brother in law and partner to Ethel where she received the chair for espionage against the U.S. I was assigned to cut his hair, may because I was an older person or because I treated everyone equal in the prison and did not believe in favoritism.

"Every place GREENGLASS has to go in the prison he must have a special guard with him, he is not allowed to run loose by himself. He is really hated by the majority of the guards and also the inmates, where a few times I seen certain inmates actually spit on him. He lives in D cell block where most of the prison stoolies live, believe me, he is doing some tuff time cause everyone gives him the (silent treatment) in otherwords considering the crime he was involved and there stooled on his own sister where she got burned with her husband to save his own skin, no one ever talks to him.

"I will never forget one certain incident in the barber shop. Has I said above I was assigned from the front office to cut his hair. He comes down on his regular hair cut day but happens to be at sick live to see the dentist, well the guard in charge of the barber shop told him to sit in Morris's chair and get his hair cut. He did. Morris got rid of him in a minute or

At 8:30 P.M., 12/2/55, Mr. Larry Martin, Bureau, telephonically contacted the writer and made reference to the writer's telephone call to the Bureau, 12/2/55. In this conversation, the writer advised Inspector Hennrich that former SA John A. Harrington had been approached by RUTH GREENGLASS to act as a civilian parole advisor to DAVID GREENGLASS when and if DAVID GREENGLASS is paroled in January, 1956. In that conversation, the writer pointed out to Mr. Hennrich that it was highly desirable to have someone act as an advisor to DAVID GREENGLASS inasmuch as this position would keep the Bureau current with GREENGLASS' activities and contacts. On the other hand, it was pointed out to Inspector Hennrich that, should a former Special Agent such as Harrington hold this position and that fact become public knowledge, it would unquestionably be utilized by the ROSENBERG COMMITTEE as propaganda against the Bureau.

The writer informed Inspector Hennrich that Mr. Harrington was willing to do anything which the Bureau desired in this matter although he had no particular preference for holding this position. The writer suggested that, as a possible alternative to Mr. Harrington, JAMES B. KILSHEIMER, III, a former AUSA SDNY, completely conversant with the ROSENBERG case and now in the private practice of law, might be willing to serve in the capacity of civilian advisor to GREENGLASS.

In the telephone call of 12/2/55, at 8:30 P.M., Mr. Martin advised the Director had approved NYO making a discreet approach to Mr. Kilsheimer to ascertain his feelings on this topic. The Bureau does not desire at this time that Mr. Harrington serve in this capacity for the reasons mentioned above.

SA Richard Minihan advised and will handle.

Greenglass, Spy Con, Asks Parole

Washington, April 2 (AP).—David Greenglass, 34, key figure in the Rosenberg espionage trial, has applied for parole from the Lewisburg (Pa.) Federal Penitentiary, where he is serving 15 years as an admitted spy. He was sentenced in 1951. Greenglass was the government's star witness in the New York trial which resulted in the conviction of his sister Ethel Rosenberg, and her husband, Julius Rosenberg, on charges of passing U. S. atomic secrets to Russia. The Rosenbergs were executed in June, 1953.

Greenglass, in Prison 5 Yrs., Loses Parole Plea

WASHINGTON, Apr. 3 (AP).—The Federal Parole Board today denied a parole to David Greenglass, who slipped atomic secrets to the Soviet spy ring headed by Julius and Ethel Rosenberg. The eight-member board gave no reason for its denial of Greenglass' parole petition.

Greenglass has served five years of his fifteen-year prison sentence for his part in the Rosenberg spy ring. He freely admitted his espionage activities. The Rosenbergs were executed in Sing Sing in June, 1953, partly on the basis of his testimony.

Greenglass, a brother of Ethel Rosenberg, testified at their 1951 trial that he was recruited into the ring by his brother-in-law, Julius.

He testified that while serving as an Army sergeant at the Los Alamos, N. M., atomic bomb base, he slipped vital secrets to the Rosenbergs and to Harry Gold, Philadelphia biochemist now serving a twenty-five-year term.

Under the law, Greenglass automatically became eligible for parole this month, when he finished one-third of his term. His parole petition will not be reviewed by the parole board for at least one year, unless new evidence is presented that warrants it.

2 Atomic Spies Questioned By Senate Group

By WILLIAM KERWIN

WASHINGTON, April 25 (INS). --Convicted atom spies Harry Gold and David Greenglass were brought from their penitentiary cells and questioned behind closed doors Wednesday by Senate investigators.

The Senate Internal Security subcommittee said that Gold will testify in public on Thursday and Greenglass on Friday in its investigation of the use which Soviet intelligence has made of American citizens.

SUBCOMMITTEE COUNSEL Robert Morris said both men were "very responsive witnesses" when he questioned them following their arrival from the Federal Penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa.

Gold, who was arrested by the FBI in May, 1950, is serving a 30-year term. He was convicted of relaying atom-bomb secrets from Greenglass and British spy Klaus Fuchs to Russian intelligence.

Greenglass, a former Army corporal who was a government witness against Gold and Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, was sentenced to 15 years.

Mrs. Rosenberg, who was electrocuted with her husband in 1953, was Greenglass's sister.

GOLD, NOW 45, pleaded guilty to charges that he was a spy courier, but the Swiss-born chemist said he felt he was "only helping" Russia "obtain certain information that I thought it was entitled to" as a wartime ally of the U. S.

KELLY.

THESE DAYS:

David Greenglass Forsaken by U. S.

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

APPARENTLY one must be an unrelented Communist to enjoy the benefit of a favorable decision. Those who served this party or the government it represents and broke with it, for one reason or another, and aided the FBI or the Department of Justice or a Congressional committee are not even to be given a parole, despite the general tendency of parole boards to be easy on the wicked and to return them to society to do what comes naturally to them.

David Greenglass was the brother of Mrs. Julius Rosenberg who, with her husband, organized the theft of the atom bomb for Soviet Russia. Greenglass and Harry Gold aided the government in getting a conviction of the Rosenbergs who were no doubt important spies. Each was sentenced to fairly long terms. I have been informed that Greenglass was promised that if he testified truthfully he would get only five years. He got 15. I do not know who made the promise.

Parole Bid Rejected

He has recently applied for a parole and was turned down. No reason has been given publicly as to why he was turned down. Were Greenglass a Communist, there would be a Committee to Free Greenglass which would collect funds and hire expensive lawyers and make a great noise, but as he was a government witness he gets no such benefits and no such pressure is exerted in his favor.

Also, the way he is being treated must be a discouragement to others who may want to be government witnesses, as it is obvious that the government does not stand behind those who help it win cases against Communists or spies.

Judge Robert Morris, chief counsel of the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, who fights Communists and spies professionally, spoke up to the U. S. Board of Parole in favor of David Greenglass. He said that the sentence of 15 years was unjust; that Greenglass cooperated with the FBI from the moment they first approached him.

The question then arises whether these various decisions are related to justice or to policy. I am now engaged in reading all the decisions handed down by the courts in cases involving Communists and find a curious phenomenon, namely, that a sharp change took place in 1953 which was like a sharp knife cutting through a cheese. Apparently, prior to 1953 courts followed one pattern; subsequent to 1953, courts followed another pattern. The line of demarcation is too noticeable to be meaningless and I am now trying to discover whether there was a reason for the shift of attitude. Also, after the 1956 election, no Congressional committee has been effective in any anti-Communist activity, not even the experienced House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Sen. McCarthy a Victim

I am not discussing the rightness or wrongness of the changed attitude but am reporting a state of mind, an attitude, a characteristic of an era. Senator Joe McCarthy was killed off by the Army-McCarthy hearings and eventually by the act of condemnation, which ultimately destroyed him as a person. Joe would be the last man in the world to want to be regarded as a martyr. As only his most intimate friends and perhaps objective psychologists can know, Joe was a modest man, perhaps not a little frightened by his success, notoriety or acclaim, as one wishes to state it. At his height, he was as important as the President of the United States; at his lowest, he was not even invited to a general and really insignificant White House affair.

The exaggeration of McCarthy's achievements and the vindictiveness after his defeat have had the effect of literally scaring many public figures, particularly Senators, into adopting an apathetic attitude not only to McCarthy's favorite subjects but to anything that may evoke White House displeasure. Thus, a Senator speaking privately against a measure which he sincerely opposed but which he publicly favored, made the point that opposition to the President offends and embarrasses the President very much, and that once the President has proclaimed his position in a speech or a press conference, a wide difference of opinion, however justified, becomes a personal matter with him and his staff. When asked, what about the separation of powers as stipulated in the Constitution, the Senator replied: "Someday someone will have the courage to break through. I am not that man."

Communists and Justice

To the N. Y. Herald Tribune:

I write to call attention to an unfortunate situation that, I believe, is working to our disadvantage in the free-world struggle to resist the Soviet conquest of the world.

The recent Supreme Court decisions are bringing about the liberation of virtually all the unregenerate Communist leaders whom our Department of Justice has caused to be convicted under the Smith Act.

This fact alone is puzzling, in view of the open boast by the leader of these American Communists, Nikita Khrushchev, that before the twentieth century runs its course there will be a Soviet America.

But even more distressing is the fact that at the same time we are keeping lodged in jail those former Communist collaborators who have been, in sharp contrast to the unrepentant ones who are being set free, helping the F. B. I., the Department of Justice and the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee. Two cases to which I call attention involve David Greenglass and Harry Gold, both of whom are now in Lewisburg Prison. David Greenglass was helpful to his sister, Ethel Rosenberg, in procuring classified information for her Soviet project, and in that he did wrong and has publicly said so. But as soon as the F. B. I. moved in on the case, he cooperated completely, even to the extent of being the government's chief witness against his own sister, who was subsequently executed.

At the time of his testimony he was assured that he would be given only a light sentence for his own involvement. Despite his co-operation, he was sentenced to fifteen years in jail and has now served more than seven years, and has been twice turned down by the United States Board of Parole before whom I appeared twice as a witness in his behalf. David Greenglass has a wife and two children and an aged mother who are pining for his return. He has paid his debt to society and his continued incarceration is working an injustice.

Here we have the spectacle of unregenerate Communists being liberated by the scores to carry on their conquest of the United States, while we are containing the co-operative former Communist collaborators in jail. What a travesty of justice. What kind of inducement is this for others who carry the secrets of Soviet espionage in the United States, to come forward to tell us on Congressional committees and in the F. B. I. what these secrets are? This seems to me to be the worst kind of psychological warfare.

Morris Wants Drive to Free Helpful Spies

Point Pleasant, N. J., Nov. 23 (U.P.) — Robert Morris, Senate Internal Security subcommittee counsel, today called for the creation of a committee to seek the release of convicted atom spies David Greenglass and Harry Gold from prison.

Robert Morris

Both have been cooperating with intelligence agencies for eight years, he said, and their release should prompt others to step foward and help the government.

Cites Today's "Peril"

"If even one important Communist had defected from Moscow in the last three years and authoritatively informed us of the tremendous Soviet scientific gains, we would not today be in such dire peril," Morris said.

The former New York jurist said he was worried because "we are not getting any ex-Communists to come forward" and tell the authorities what they know.

Many Communists convicted under the Smith Act have been freed by recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions, he said, adding: "The cooperative ones are in jail, the unregenerate go free."

Both Greenglass and Gold are at the Lewisburg, Pa., federal prison where Morris interviewed them Thursday. Greenglass is the brother-in-law of Julius Rosenberg, executed with his wife Ethel in 1953 for giving U.S. atom secrets to Russia.

Senators Ask Laws to Lure Reds to West

Washington, May 20 (UP).—The Senate Internal Security subcommittee called today for new laws to make desertion to the West more appealing to the citizens of Communist countries.

"The American government has been remiss in its policy of encouraging individuals to come forward and reveal the inner workings of the Communist conspiracy," the subcommittee said in Section 10 of its 1957 report.

"Continued failure of our government to have a clear-cut offer to would-be defectors from the Soviets and their satellites militates against our obtaining on our side these valuable and knowledgeable people," it said.

Urge Sanctuary Guarantee

The subcommittee recommended that Congress enact laws "to assure sanctuary in the United States and a decent standard of living to Communist defectors who bring us valuable information."

It also called for a law permitting Congressional investigating committees "after consultation with the Attorney General, to bring into the United States aliens whose testimony is desired and whose admission will not endanger the national security."

The subcommittee said the "predicament" of convicted atom spies Harry Gold and David Greenglass "represents a case in point" of Communist defectors who are treated worse than Communists who chose not to cooperate with U.S. officials.

It said several convicted spies already had been released from prison, under U.S. Supreme Court decisions, while Gold and Greenglass who "have cooperated in every way with all federal agencies" still are in prison.

A Spy in 7th Bid for Parole

Washington, July 23 (News Bureau).—Convicted atomic spy David Greenglass, who repented and has been cooperating with the government for nine years, today applied for the seventh time for a parole from his 15-year prison sentence. The Federal Board of Parole here took the appeal under advisement.

Greenglass, now in the Lewisburg, Pa., Reformatory, was a brother of Ethel Rosenberg, who with her husband, Julius, was executed for slipping atomic secrets to the Russians. Members of the espionage ring were convicted in early 1951.

Greenglass has served 9 years and has 18 more months to go. An ironic note is in the fact that Dr. Klaus Fuchs, who was trapped in the same spy ring, now is free and working on nuclear physics projects in East Germany.

Greenglass To Leave U. S. Prison Nov. 16

Kin of Rosenbergs In Jail Since 1951

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (UPI). — David Greenglass, brother of executed atom-spy Ethel Rosenberg, will be released from prison Nov. 16, a Justice Department official said today.

Greenglass, thirty-eight, was sentenced to fifteen years in prison for conspiring with the Rosenbergs to steal atomic secrets for Russia. He is serving his sentence at the Lewisburg, Pa., Federal Penitentiary.

As star witness in the spy case, Greenglass helped convict his sister and brother-in-law, Julius Rosenberg. The couple were electrocuted in 1953 for giving atomic secrets to the Soviet Union.

David Greenglass

Admitted Lesser Charge

Greenglass was permitted to plead guilty to the lesser charge of conspiracy. He testified he gave a description of the atomic bomb to Julius Rosenberg while working as a technical sergeant at the Atomic Research Center in Los Alamos, N. M., in 1945.

He started his prison sentence on July 6, 1951. Under the law, the mandatory date for his release is May 1, 1961. But a Justice Department official said he will be released Nov. 16 "because of credits for good behavior."

Although he is not being released by action of the Federal Parole Board, Greenglass will remain under Federal supervision until Nov. 5, 1965, and will have to report periodically to a parole officer.

The Parole Board turned down two Greenglass requests for parole earlier in his prison term.

Two co-conspirators in the Rosenberg case, Morton Sobell and Harry Gold, are serving thirty-year sentences.

The Rosenbergs were the first Americans ever put to death for espionage by an American court in peace time. They were sentenced to death in 1951, but the case continued before the courts until almost the very moment of their execution.

Rosenbergs Tripped by Long Skein

By SYLVAN FOX,
World-Telegram Staff Writer

Another chapter in a long-secret tale of espionage and betrayal comes to an end today as confessed atomic spy David Greenglass steps through the gates of the Federal House of Detention here to freedom.

The tale stretches back to World War II, spanning oceans and cutting across national boundaries.

And at its center stand Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, obscure, almost faceless, yet the masterminds behind the most ambitious spy net in history—he their secrets of nuclear weapons.

The end that led to the Rosenbergs began tenuously in September 1945, when Igor Gouzenko, a code clerk in the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa, defected to the West. Files he turned over to security agents provided the first clue to the huge Soviet plan to grab America's atomic secrets.

Fuchs Named in Note.

The Gouzenko papers led to Dr. Allen Nunn May, a British atomic scientist who was arrested and sent to prison for 10 years for spying. Among May's papers was a scribbled note, with the name "Fuchs."

Four years later, in 1950, Dr. Klaus Fuchs was arrested in London. A German refugee physicist who had done atomic research in the United States, he confessed to spying for Rus-nia and turned the spotlight on America's atomic bastion at Los Angeles, N. Mex.

From 1200 pictures of employees at Los Alamos, Fuchs picked out a photograph of Harry Gold and identified the Philadelphia chemist as the courier who had carried atomic data to Anatoli Yakoslev, Soviet vice consul in New York from 1944 to 1946.

Gold Admitted Guilt.

Gold, later sentenced to 30 years, admitted his role in the espionage plot and pointed the finger at Greenglass as a fellow member of the ring. Greenglass confessed and implicated his sister, Ethel Rosenberg, his brother-in-law, Julius Rosenberg, and Rosenberg's City College classmate, Morton Sobell.

At the trial of the Rosenbergs and Sobell, 20 prosecution witnesses including Greenglass and his wife, Ruth, drew a shocking portrait of the Rosenbergs as the brains behind the ambitious and successful theft of their country's atomic secrets.

On March 29, 1951, 23 days after the trial had begun, a jury of 11 men and a woman returned a verdict of guilty against the Rosenbergs and Sobell.

And a week later, while church bell somberly tolled the noon hour across Foley Square, the Rosenbergs heard Federal Judge Irving Kaufman sentence them to death for conspiring to commit espionage for a foreign power during wartime. Sobell was sentenced to 30 years and Greenglass, as a reward for his cooperation, got only 15 years.

Case Went to President.

Lawyers for the Rosenbergs exhausted every legal avenue in an attempt to save them from the electric chair, finally taking the case to the Supreme Court and directly to President Eisenhower.

But on June 19, 1953, the Supreme Court set aside a stay granted by Associate Justice William O. Douglas, and President Eisenhower denied a second appeal for executive clemency.

That evening, the 35-year-old Rosenberg and his 37-year-old wife died minutes apart in Sing Sing's electric chair. Imbued with a fanatical devotion to communism, they went to their deaths tight-lipped and unflinching.

Rosenberg Spy Figure to End 9½ Years in Jail Tomorrow

David Greenglass, a key figure in the Rosenberg atom spy ring, will be released from prison here tomorrow after nine and a half years behind bars.

Over the week-end, he was transferred to the Federal House of Detention here from the Federal Penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa.

Greenglass, 38 years old, was sentenced to fifteen years in prison in 1951 for his part in the theft of atomic secrets by a ring headed by his brother-in-law, Julius Rosenberg, and his sister, Ethel Rosenberg. He received time off for good behavior.

It was the courtroom testimony of Greenglass that played a major part in the conviction of the Rosenbergs.

Rosenberg Accomplice Out of Jail

One of the three all-but-forgotten accomplices in the celebrated Rosenberg spy case will be freed today after nearly a decade in prison.

David Greenglass, now 38, was a brilliant technician and an Army sergeant, when during wartime he picked up data on the A-bomb and slipped it to the Rosenbergs.

HE WAS SENTENCED to 15 years in jail, and has served nine years and four months. Today, he is being freed from the Federal House of Dentention on parole, his sentence cut down for good behavior.

The defection of Igor Gouzenko, a Russian code clerk in Ottawa, Ont., gave authorities in this country the tip on the syp ring involving Greenglass, his sister Ethel Rosenberg, her husband Julius, and two others, Morton Sobell and Harry Gold.

Greenglass admitted he picked up information about the A-bomb in Los Alamo , N. M., and passed it to the Rosenbergs. He said Julius had given him money and an escape route to a Communist country when authorities began to close in on them, but he decided not to run. Instead, he testified against the Rosenbergs. They were both executed at Sing Sing in 1953. Sobell and Gold each drew 30 years.

Another member of the ring, physicist Klaus Fuchs, was seized in England in 1950 and imprisoned there. Since his term ended, he has gone to East Germany.

Greenglass Set Free, Recalling Great Spy Trial

The gates of a federal prison opened here today to disgorge a pudgy, former Army sergeant, thus closing a chapter in the world's greatest spy story.

He is David Greenglass—the spy-turned-"patriot" whose testimony helped send his sister and brother-in-law, Ethel and Julius Rosenberg, to the electric chair.

Greenglass, now 38, a brilliant physicist and father of two, took his first free steps in nearly 10 years as he walked out of the Federal House of Detention, 427 West st., at 8 a. m.

TRIAL RECALLED

A convicted Soviet spy, Greenglass served nine years and four months of a 15-year term at Lewisberg, Pa., federal prison for wartime espionage.

His freedom revived memories of an arrest, trial and conviction as bizarre as any in the murky annals of military intelligence.

Greenglass was a central figure in the sweeping 1950 crackdown on Soviet espionage in this country — a crackdown that came too late to prevent Russia from pulling off the greatest coup in the history of spying: the theft of secrets of the atom bomb.

But his most electrifying moment came when he suddenly turned on his sister and brother-in-law and identified them as key members of a Soviet spy ring.

A-BOMB SECRETS

By harrowing chance, Greenglass was assigned by the Army to work at the very shop in Los Alamos that produced the complex "lens" or trigger of the atomic bomb.

Greenglass admitted that he passed A-bomb secrets to Soviet couriers. He said that when federal agents began to close in, Rosenberg gave him money and directed him to an escape route to an Iron Curtain country.

But perhaps driven by some latent patriotism, Greenglass chose, instead, to make a full confession and to aid the federal prosecution.

Greenglass Asks Only to Be Forgotten

By OLIVER PILAT

David Greenglass, 38, perhaps the most ordinary and understandable of the odd and ill-assorted Americans who turned over atomic secrets to the Russians, returns to private life today.

Even before his scheduled release this morning from the Federal House of Detention, 427 West St., after serving 9½ years of a 15-year term, he issued an appeal for no publicity. Through his lawyer, O. John Rogge, he said:

"All I want is to be forgotten."

Warden Alex Krimsky indicated he could neither help nor hinder Greenglass. His prisoner had been transferred to his care from the Lewisburg, Pa., Penitentiary for release at a specified time, Krimsky said, and it would be up to Greenglass to elude the waiting press, radio, TV and movie people.

May Move to Southwest

Though the lives of Greenglass and his wife, Ruth, are rooted in the Lower East Side of Manhattan, it was reported that they hope to take their two children, now 14 and 10, to some new community, possibly in the Southeast, if they can find employment there.

A good-natured, stocky mechanic, conscientious but not particularly gifted, Greenglass was persuaded in 1944 by his sister, Ethel Rosenberg, and her brilliant but unstable husband, Julius, to turn over details of the actual firing mechanism of the Nagasaki bomb to a patchwork Soviet spy ring.

Greenglass was then a technical sergeant in charge of one of the three super-secret machine shops at Los Alamos, N. M., where all of the wartime atom bombs were manufactured. All he received for his betrayal were small sums sufficient to permit his wife to live nearby in Albuquerque, N. M.

Would Not Flee

By the time the FBI questioned him in 1950, Greenglass was ready to admit to himself that had done wrong. He had already been persuaded by his wife not to flee to Russia via Mexico with his family with the $4,000 given him by the spy ring for that purpose. They were Americans, she said, and they should stay here.

Greenglass eventually turned over his escape money intact to a lawyer, with instructions that he be allowed to tell the truth "in the interests of my children and my country."

Greenglass stuck to this resolve even though his testimony meant the conviction and electrocution of the Rosenbergs. In the subsequent Soviet propaganda campaign over the Rosenberg case, Greenglass was frequently referred to as their "murderer."

In 1956, on a leave from prison to testify before the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee in Washington, Greenglass tried tardily to cope with this charge.

'I Felt Affection for Them'

"These people were my flesh and blood," he said. "I felt affection for them, and I still do. Yet if they had not wanted to be martyrs, they could have just put up their hands and said, 'Stop,' and told the truth."

Greenglass was converted to communism in his teens by his sister and his brother-in-law but he never was much of a success as a party activist. After flunking an engineering course, he held various jobs as a mechanic and a union organizer until he was drafted at the outbreak of World War II.

One face was missing when Greenglass was released today, that of his mother, Mrs. Tessie Greenglass.

David was always his mother's favorite. She boasted that she would be waiting when he was released from prison, but on four occasions his requests for paroles were denied. She died in 1958 at the age of 75.

Rosenberg Spy Figure Heckled By Crowd After Release Here

By DAVE KNICKERBOCKER,
World-Telegram Staff Writer.

David Greenglass, 38, the Army machinist who gave atom bomb secrets to Russian agents and then helped send his sister and brother-in-law Ethel and Julius Rosenberg to the electric chair, was freed from federal prison today after almost 10 years.

His coat collar pulled up high to shield his face, Greenglass emerged from the Federal House of Detention at West and Bank Sts. to find himself confronted by some 50 reporters and photographers, plus a score of longshoremen and truck drivers.

"David Greenglass is out on mandatory release; he does not now have a statement nor will he later," said his attorney, O. John Rogge, leading his client through the crowd to a waiting taxicab.

Pale and nervous, some 40 pounds lighter than when he was sentenced in 1951, Greenglass clutched a blue canvas flight bag, posed briefly and shook his bowed head when asked if he had anything to say.

A dozen longshoremen and truckers started an uproar, crowding around the cab to heckle the released convict.

"You rat!" they shouted. "You Communist! Throw him into the river!" Greenglass sank low in the taxi seat as if trying to hide behind his lawyer.

Reporters attempting to pursue the cab reached Mr. Rogge's office at 401 Broadway before he did, but Greenglass had left the cab en route.

"I lost him," Mr. Rogge explained. "I hope he stays that way. I hope he is back in the current of American life by now."

Mr. Rogge said Greenglass' 15-year term in Lewisburg Penitentiary was reduced for good behavior. How often he will have to report under parole, and where, will be determined by federal probation authorities.

Whether Greenglass can slip back into the pattern of American life, possibly under a new name, remains to be seen. A product of New York's lower East Side, he became a member of the Young Communist League before entering the Army, which sent him to Los Alamos, N. Mex., where he had access to atomic secrets.

He has a wife somewhere, two children and two brothers. In civilian life he was a machinist.

Defector Gave Clue.

The sordid story of espionage began to unfold back in 1945 when Igor Gouzenko, a code clerk in the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa, defected to the West. His information led to Dr. Allen Nunn May, a British atomic scientist, whose papers produced a scribbled note with the Fuchs.

This led to Dr. Klaus Fuchs, a German refugee physicist, who confessed spying and identified Harry Gold, Philadelphia chemist, as the courier who carried atomic data to Anatoli Yakoslev, Sovie vice consul in New York.

Gold, later sentenced to prison, fingered Greenglass, who in turn involved the Rosenbergs and Morton Sobell, a City College classmate of Rosenberg.

At the trial of the Rosenbergs and Sobell, 20 prosecution witnesses, including Greenglass and his wife, drew a shocking portrait of the Rosenbergs as the brains behind the ambitious and successful theft of their country's atomic secrets.

Sketch of Atomb Bomb.

Greenglass, it was brought out, drew a sketch of an atomic bomb of the type dropped on Nagasaki and passed it along with other sketches and pertinent information. He told examiners he felt Russia, then a wartime ally, was entitled to the information.

The Rosenbergs were electrocuted in June, 1953. Sobell and Gold are still in prison, serving 30-year terms.

Red Spy Greenglass Freed Amid Curses from Crowd

Refuses to Tell Of Future Plans

David Greenglass, atom bomb spy whose testimony helped send his sister and brother-in-law, Ethel and Julius Rosenberg, to the electric chair, was released today after having served nine years and four months in Federal prison.

His hat pulled down over his eyes and his coat collar turned up, the 38-year-old former Brooklyn machinist left the Federal House of Detention at 8:30 a.m. in the company of his lawyer, O. John Rogge.

He did nothing but shake his head in response to the questions fired at him about his future plans, shifting from one foot to the other and looking extremely uneasy.

WON'T TELL PLANS

His lawyer made the only statement. Said Mr. Rogge:

"David Greenglass has been given a mandatory release. He does not now have and he will not have any statement concerning his plans."

Greenglass lost 30 pounds during the years he spent in Federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., for wartime espionage. He had been sentenced to 15 years.

After his arrest he became a prosecution witness and gave evidence that sent his sister and brother-in-law, Ethel and Julius Rosenberg, to the electric chair.

The Federal House of Dentention, on the North River waterfront at 11th st., drew a congregation of stevedores as Greenglass stepped through the electrically-operated green metal door.

"Drop dead, you lousy Communist," "Drive him off the pier, right into the river," and "We have no place for dirty Communists," were among the epithets of the longshoremen who surrounded the Greenglass taxi and for a time prevented its driving off.

His freedom revived memories of an arrest, trial and conviction as bizarre as any in the murky annals of military intelligence.

Greenglass was a central figure in the sweeping 1950 crackdown on Soviet espionage in this country — a crackdown that came too late to prevent Russia from pulling off the greatest coup in the history of spying: the theft of secrets of the atom bomb.

But his most electrifying moment came when he suddenly turned on his sister and brother-in-law and identified them as key members of a Soviet spy ring.

A-BOMB SECRETS

By harrowing chance, Greenglass was assigned by the Army to work at the very shop in Los Alamos that produced the complex "lens" or trigger of the atomic bomb.

Greenglass admitted that he passed A-bomb secrets to Soviet couriers. He said that when federal agents began to close in, Rosenberg gave him money and directed him to an escape route to an Iron Curtain country.

But perhaps driven by some latent patriotism, Greenglass chose, instead, to make a full confession and to aid the federal prosecution.

Atomic-Spy Greenglass Out of Prison

By John Molleson

David Greenglass, thirty-eight, convicted atom spy, yesterday was released from Federal custody after serving nine years and four months of a fifteen-year prison sentence. His term was shortened because of good behavior.

During World War II, Greenglass gave atom-bomb secrets to a Russian-recruited spy ring that included his sister and brother-in-law, Ethel and Julius Rosenberg. His testimony in 1951 helped send the Rosenbergs to the electric chair in Sing Sing Prison, in June, 1953.

The short and freshly shaved former Army machinist was set free at 8:35 a. m., in the company of his attorney, O. John Rogge. A steel door slid open and the two men faced a crowd of about seventy newsmen, photographers, longshoremen and truckers who had gathered before the Federal House of Detention, 427 West St., at W. 11th St.

"Drop dead, you lousy Communist," shouted a truckman. These probably were the first words Greenglass heard as a free man.

From jowls to shins, the former prisoner was enveloped in a powder blue overcoat, the collar pulled up around his ears. A gray fedora was worn low on his head, its brim tilted over his eyes. He appeared to cringe as he listened to the taunts of the dockside workers.

Greenglass peered intently at the swirling photographers. He turned once or twice at his brim, and stood tight-lipped at the right side of his lawyer. Facing a clump of microphones, Mr. Rogge said:

"Mr. Greenglass is out on conditional—mandatory release. He does not have, and will not have, any comment or statement."

Last-Minute Abuse

Mr. Rogge had stationed a cab at the curb and the two men made for it. The flow of trailer trucks on West St. halted briefly at the commotion, hemming in the cab and giving the swarming hecklers a chance to hurl some last-minute abuse:

"Drive him off the pier, right into the river, the Red rat." "You oughta kiss the ground you're walking on." "This is a free country and we want to keep it that way." "You sent your sister to the chair, you ---- -- - -----."

Later in the day, at an undisclosed place, Greenglass was united with his wife, Ruth, and their two children, aged ten and fourteen. "We would like the Greenglasses to live like a normal American family now," Mr. Rogge told a reporter. "It's been very carefully worked out so they will have a maximum of privacy."

Greenglass as a technical sergeant at Los Alamos, N. M., memorized atomic bomb data and passed it to the Rosenbergs. From then it went to the Russians and it helped close the atomic gap that then existed between the United States and the Soviet Union.

When the F. B. I. smashed the Rosenberg spy ring in 1950, Greenglass turned state's evidence. He testified against his sister and her husband, who were the first American spies to be executed in time of peace. Greenglass' sentence was the lightest of any of the major members of the ring. His wife went free, though she was indicted as a co-conspirator. Martin Sobell and Harry Gold, two other defendants, were sentenced to thirty years in jail.

Greenglass was brought here from the Lewisburg, Pa., Federal Penitentiary last week end. He must report regularly to a parole officer in New York until Nov. 5, 1964.

Greenglass Freed From Prison; Served 9½ Years as Atom Spy

Key Witness in Rosenberg Case Is Mute and Bewildered on Leaving Jail Here —Dock Workers Taunt Him

By PHILIP BENJAMIN

David Greenglass, the atom spy whose testimony helped to send his sister Ethel and her husband Julius Rosenberg to the electric chair, was released from Federal prison yesterday.

Greenglass was set free after having served nine and a half years of a fifteen-year term for conspiracy at the Federal Penitentiary in Lewisburg, Pa.

The first few minutes of his reintroduction to the outside world, which took place at Federal Detention Headquarters at Eleventh and West Streets, near the Hudson River, were not pleasant for Greenglass.

At about 8:35 A. M. he and his lawyer, O. John Rogge, came through the electrically operated sliding green door of the Detention Headquarters and met a barrage of photographers and reporters. A group of longshoremen and truckers shouted taunts and curses at the released convict.

Greenglass stood mute. At 38 years old he looked 48. He wore a long, light-blue overcoat with its collar turned up and a blue-gray fedora set squarely on his head and pulled down nearly to his eyes. His face, once full, was thinner and sallow. His blue eyes looked at nothing as Mr. Rogge announced that there would be no statement.

Only once did Greenglass seem to hear any of the questions shouted at him. "Do you want to say anything?" he was asked. He shook his head. His small, tight mouth became smaller and tighter. His heavy beard stood out against his pale skin.

"Mr. Greenglass is out on a mandatory release," Mr. Rogge announced. "He does not now nor will he have any statement to make."

After a few minutes of photography and futile questions, Mr. Rogge took Greenglass to a waiting taxi. Some longshoremen and truckers shouted at Greenglass as he entered the cab.

"You lousy Communist, you ought to kiss the ground."

"You lousy bum, you ought to commit suicide."

"Drive him off the pier into the river, the dirty rat."

Greenglass and Mr. Rogge were driven off to an undisclosed destination. The ex-convict has a wife and two children. His wife was named a co-conspirator in his trial in 1951, but she was not prosecuted.

To Be Under Supervision

The "mandatory release" referred to by Mr. Rogge meant that Greenglass had received the customary time off for good behavior and good work in prison. He must remain "under supervision" for the rest of his sentence, less about six months.

The conditions imposed on him are similar to those of parole. Instead of having to report to a parole officer, Greenglass will have an "adviser." The convicted spy can move to another part of the country if he notifies his adviser. He is then transferred to another adviser in the part of the country to which he moves. He can also legally change his name.

Mr. Rogge refused later to say whether Greenglass would in fact move and change his name. The lawyer appeared determined that Greenglass and his family have as much privacy as possible.

Greenglass was born on the Lower East Side of New York. In World War II he was an Army sergeant engaged in technical work at Los Alamos, N. M. He made lenses—curve explosive charges—that we part of the atomic bomb. However, he testified at the Rosenberg trial that he did not know their significance until his brother-in-law and sister told him about it.

They recruited him into the Soviet espionage service, he said, and by keeping his eyes and ears open he was able to pick up and memorize important atomic data, which were later transmitted to Soviet Russia.

The Rosenbergs were executed on June 19, 1953, the first Americans ever convicted of espionage to be put to death in peacetime by their own country. Harry Gold, a courier for the spy ring, and Morton Sobell, a minor member of it, are serving thirty years each in prison

ATOMIC SPY IS FREED. David Greenglass leaves Federal detention quarters.

A-Spy Freed; Crowd Is Hostile

By FRANCIS STEPHENSON

Silent and meek-looking, David Greenglass, convicted atom spy, was freed yesterday at 8:35 A.M. from the Federal House of Dentention at 427 West St. after 9½ years in prison.

Attorney O. John Rogge hustled the short, 38-year-old Greenglass to a waiting taxicab. Faced by about 60 reporters and photographers, they stopped just long enough for Rogge to declare that there would be no statement "now or later."

Greenglass cringed in the cab as hostile shouts came from a crowd of longshoremen and truckers. He pulled the collar of his blue topcoat up nearly to his eyes and peered out from under the brim of his pulled-down fedora.

Helped Send 2 to Chair

"Drop dead, you lousy Communist," shouted one of the group.

"Drive him off the pier, right into the river, the dirty Red rat," another yelled at the taxi driver.

The taxi drove off after some difficulty caused by vehicles which had stopped while their drivers watched.

Greenglass, former Brooklyn machinist and Army technician, helped send his sister, Ethel, and her husband, Julius Rosenberg, to the electric chair as atom spies. He pleaded guilty to complicity in the theft of U.S. atomic secrets and was the government's key witness at the Rosenberg trial. The Rosenbergs were electrocuted at Sing Sing in June, 1953.

Served at Federal Pen

Greenglass was sentenced to 15 years, but got out earlier on good behavior. He served his time at the Lewisburg, Pa., Federal Penitentiary, from which he was transferred last weekend.

Convicted with the Rosenbergs and sentenced to 30 years was Morton Sobell, a radar expert. Harry Gold, a Philadelphia biochemist, received an 8-to-30-year sentence for his role in the conspiracy. Sobell and Gold are still in prison.

Greenglass was late in leaving because Rogge was a half hour late in arriving at the House of Detention. The freed man wore a worn blue suit and carried a small blue zipper bag.

He didn't speak on emerging, but just shrugged.

Greenglass' plans are unknown.

The Curious Case Of David Greenglass

Should Atom Bomb Spy Be Free After Only Nine Years?

By RUTH REYNOLDS

THERE is disagreement concerning justice in the recent release of David Greenglass from a federal penitentiary after serving approximately nine years of his sentence.

Some hold that by giving top secret information on atom bomb lenses to Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, who forwarded the facts to Russia, Greenglass was just as guilty as they of espionage in wartime and, therefore, deserved to die with his sister and brother-in-law in the electric chair. As minimum punishment, in their opinion, the 15-year sentence he received should have been doubled.

Long Overdue

There are others who say the release of Greenglass was long overdue, that he was only a dupe of his relatives and he was badly used by the government. Without his testimony as a prosecution witness, the Rosenbergs might not have been convicted. In exchange for his evidence Greenglass was promised a sentence of no more than five years. But his judge thought he deserved more. Apparently members of the federal parole board thought so too, for they turned down his applications six times without stating a reason.

His story properly begins in 1939, when his sister, Ethel, 23, and his adored brother-in-law, Julius, 21, joined the Communist Party. David, then a 17-year-old learning to be a mechanic, became a member of the Young Communists' League. He listened eagerly. Julius and Ethel talked of the superiority of Russian socialism over U. S. capitalism.

The nation heard shocking news by radio on the Sunday afternoon of Dec. 7, 1941—the Japanese had bombed Pearl Harbor. Among the millions who listened were three later to become known to David—30-year-old Dr. Klaus Fuchs of London, 28-year-old Harry Gold of Cincinnati, and 23-year-old Morton Sobell of Washington.

Fuchs, a physicist who had fled Hitler's Germany, was heart and soul for the Soviet, although he was planning to take out British citizenship. Gold, a junior in biochemistry at Cincinnati's Xavier University, had worked for 10 years as a Soviet spy in the United States. And Sobell had become a Communist Party member in 1939, along with Rosenberg, his classmate in electrical engineering at City College in New York.

In the 21 months which followed Pearl Harbor, Fuchs, Gold, Sobell and the Rosenbergs continued their work for Russia. Sobell, already employed in the Navy Ordnance Bureau, became a radar expert. Julius worked as a civilian engineering inspector in the Army Signal Corps. Ethel attended party meetings.

David, who had become a good mechanic in the family-owned machine shop, married the former Ruth Printz. He had not joined the Communist Party, chiefly, as he was to say later, because he was too lazy to accept party discipline. He'd "rather lie in bed on Sunday morning than deliver the Daily Worker from door to door." But his brother-in-law was still his hero.

Then David was drafted into the Army, with the prospect of battle service ahead. However, by July, 1944, he was able to tell Ruth that he was being kept in the U. S. on an assignment so top secret he didn't know what the undertaking was.

First, he went as a machinist and technical sergeant to the Manhattan District Project at Oak Ridge, Tenn. Then, he was transferred to Los Alamos, N. M., where he was made assistant foreman in a machine shop casting molds for lenses. He was told as much as necessary about his job, but nothing more—for, with the cooperation of Britain and Canada, the United States had started production of the atom bomb. Russia, the other major ally in World War II, was excluded from the secret.

On Nov. 29, 1944—three months after Tech. Sgt. Greenglass' transfer to the Los Alamos project—Ruth arrived in Albuquerque for their second wedding anniversary—and something else.

She told David, "Julius says he's doing what he always wanted to do—he's giving information to the Soviet Union." Julius knew David was working on the atomic bomb, and he wanted all the information David could give, so it could be sent on to Russia. Julius' argument was that if all nations had atomic information, no one power could threaten others with the bomb.

He Was Scared

"I can't do it, Ruth," David said at first, because he was scared. But later, his admiration for Julius overcame his fear. He didn't want his hero to fail at anything he tried.

So, David gave Ruth a description of the Los Alamos plant, the approximate number of workers and the heretofore secret names of scientists connected with the project. Ruth memorized this information and repeated it to Julius.

Two months later David returned to New York on leave. He gave Julius a number of sketches of a flat-type lens mold being used in the atomic experiments. He also gave his brother-in-law a list of 20 to 25 possible spy recruits at Los Alamos. "I recognized them by their Communist Party catch phrases," he was to say much later.

At the end of his leave, David returned to Los Alamos. He didn't know that Dr. Fuchs was there, and Harry Gold, too. In February, 1945, Ruth got a government job in Albuquerque with the Office of Price Administration and found an apartment there. David commuted the 100 miles from the bomb proving ground each weekend to see her.

Gold came to see Greenglass in Albuquerque. "I have come from Julius. Have you any information for me?"

David again drew sketches—this time of an improved lens mold on which he was working. He described in writing how this lens was used to trigger the bomb. Also, he added to his list of promising spy recruits. Gold included this information in a thick packet of atomic bomb secrets he had just received from Dr. Fuchs and took the whole to Julius.

Atomic bombs were dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Now the war was done—but espionage was not. In New York, on furlough, in September, 1945, David gave Julius a sketch of a cross-section of the Nagasaki bomb.

"Very good!" his hero complimented him.

FEBRUARY, 1946, found Greenglass honorably discharged and back in New York with his wife and baby, Steven. He had thought the family machine shop would provide him with a comfortable living, but somehow, by legal but sharp practice, Julius had become sole owner. There was quite a lot of resentment over that.

Although there has been no mention here of security work done by representatives of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Scotland Yard, they were exceedingly busy. The fruits of their activity first showed in 1947, when 11 Communist Party leaders were indicted by a federal grand jury in New York. But the Rosenbergs felt they had nothing to worry about—until they heard that Dr. Fuchs, arrested in London on Feb. 3, 1950, had given the FBI names of 124 Americans with whom he worked, 12 of them spies.

Rosenberg hurried to David's apartment in Rivington St., pressed $1,000 on him, urged him to go to Mexico, and provided him with cloak-and-dagger instructions.

"When you reach Mexico City," Julius directed, "write a letter to the Soviet ambassador. Say something favorable about the Soviet role in the United Nations and sign your letter 'I. Jackson.' Three days later, stand beside the statue of Columbus, with a travel guide in your hand.

"You will be approached by a stranger," Julius continued. "Say the statue is magnificent and that you are from Oklahoma. He will say 'There are more beautiful statues in Paris.' Then he will give you money and a passport. Go to Vera Cruz and take a ship for Sweden. When you get to Stockholm, follow the same routine at the statue of Linnaeus. You will be taken to Czechoslovakia."

Ruth in Hospital

Greenglass told his brother-in-law that he couldn't possibly leave New York then. Ruth, expecting her second child, had been badly burned when she upset a gasoline stove and was in a hospital.

David used the $1,000 to pay bills. He felt he was justified in keeping the money. He had, thus far, received only $500 (from Gold) for helping Julius.

In April, when Ruth was a little better, Rosenberg again urged David to flee. Julius figured (correctly) that Fuchs would identify Gold as a courier, and that, sooner or later, Gold would identify Greenglass as an informer, and David might mention Rosenberg.

Gold was arrested on May 23, 1950. The next day Julius hurried to the hospital to see Ruth. Her baby had been born, but she was still hospitalized because of her burns.

"David will be next if you don't get to Mexico," he warned.

"I can't travel with a 10-day-old child," she objected.

"My doctor says you will be all right if you take canned milk and boil the water," Julius assured his sister-in-law. "Get a statement from him saying you've all been inoculated."

"I would not ask a doctor to falsify," said the young woman, who had a curious code of ethics.

Now Rosenberg handed David $4,000, wrapped in brown paper. David gave this to another relative, with instructions what to do with it "if anything happens."

On June 15, two FBI agents knocked at the Greenglass door. It took David some time to answer, because he was in the kitchen preparing the baby's formula. One of the agents said, "We are trying to locate materials, lost, misplaced or stolen at the Los Alamos project. You worked there, didn't you?"

"Yes," answered David. "But I can't help you . . . I know nothing about it."

After more questioning, the agents asked if they might look around the apartment.

"I have nothing to hide," said David, "go ahead."

The agents departed, carrying 2[illegible] snapshots of Greenglass and his wife.

"This is the man I contacted in Albuquerque," charged Harry Gold after studying the pictures.

Greenglass was arrested July 16.

"I'd have run away, or committed suicide, if it were not for my wife," he said. That day, the relative turned the $4,000 over to O. John Rogge, retained as a lawyer for Greenglass. That day, Greenglass talked, and the next evening FBI agents called on the Rosenbergs just as they were putting their young children to bed in their Knickerbocker Village apartment. Thus was the first U. S. married couple arrested on spy charges.

On Aug. 18, Julius, David and Ethel were indicted on counts of conspiracy to commit espionage in wartime. Also indicted were two fugitives, Sobell, the radar expert, and Anatolia H. Yakovlev, Russian vice consul in New York during 1944-46. Under the Espionage Act of 1917, the penalty, if the defendants were found guilty, could be anything from 30 years to death. Late that month Sobell was picked up in Mexico. Yakovlev had long since returned to Russia.

Harry Gold pleaded guilty and, in October, David Greenglass took the same step.

Why?

The obvious answer was that he wanted to save his own skin, but Greenglass denied that his motive was selfish. He said, much later, that his belief in Communism began to crumble in 1945 when he realized he was stealing for "devastation on a tremendous scale. I'm not a violent man and when I think of the things I did by non-violence, I wonder at myself."

At any rate, Greenglass agreed to be a government witness.

THE TRIAL of the Rosenbergs and Sobell began on March 6, 1951, in Manhattan before Federal Judge Irving R. Kaufman. The government called 2[illegible] witnesses, including Ruth and David Greenglass.

In cross-examination, Rosenberg's lawyer, Emanuel H. Bloch, sought to show that Greenglass, who had flunked eight out of eight subjects at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, was not sufficiently equipped scholastically to steal and relay complex atomic data.

Judge Kaufman cut short this line of questioning, reminding the jurors that David confessed stealing, and passing on, top secret material. The indictment didn't specify that the material, once stolen, had to be accurately delivered, said the judge.

Bloch then attempted to show that Greenglass had lied to get revenge on his brother-in-law because of the family machine shop deal, and because Rosenberg, on one occasion, refused to lend him $2,000.

When Rosenberg took the stand he made a blanket denial of everything—every single little thing. He never dreamed of asking anyone to furnish him secrets of national defense. He didn't even know his brother-in-law was at Los Alamos! He knew nothing about Russia except what he read in the New York papers.

Both Wary

But he and Ethel were extremely wary when cross-examined by the prosecutor, U. S. Attorney Irving H. Saypol.

Mrs. Rosenberg accused her brother of lying when he said she typed up the material he gave Julius about atomic bombs and national defense. "I once loved my brother," she said, "but I'd be pretty unnatural if I hadn't changed."

In summation, Bloch said the wrong couple were on trial and he castigated Greenglass in a curious way. "He loved his wife more than he loved himself," Bloch shouted. "He was willing to sacrifice his sister and her husband to save his wife. Look at that terrible spy," Bloch waved toward Ethel, "and then compare her with Mrs. Greenglass, who came here all dolled up, arrogant, an eager beaver.

"Not only are the Greenglasses self-confessed spies, they are mercenary spies! They'd do anything for money. They'd murder people for money and they are trying to murder people for money!" Hoch charged.

Of Rosenberg, his lawyer spoke tenderly, saying he was "like a schnook [dupe]" obligingly doing things for Greenglass.

Saypol took quite the opposite view. He said the Rosenbergs, so long admired and adored by David, "dragged a young soldier into the sordid business of betraying his own country."

Counsel for Sobell did not deny that the radar expert was a low order spy, but he did stress that not one witness linked Sobell with the atom spying.

Out Overnight

In conclusion, Judge Kaufman reminded the jurors that the fact that Russia was an ally was immaterial; that the defendants handed top secret information over to anybody was material.

The jury was out overnight. Then they pronounced the defendants guilty. Judge Kaufman retired to pray for guidance.

In the end, he sentenced Greenglass to 15 years; Sobell and Gold to 30 . . . and the Rosenbergs to death.

For two years and three months, the Rosenbergs fought for their lives. Their case was reviewed 16 times, on various points, by the U.S. District Court and seven times by the U.S. Court of Appeals. Seven times the U.S. Supreme Court turned down petitions for review and twice the President of the United States turned down appeals for clemency.

Ethel's mother fought, too. At Sing Sing she begged her daughter to "talk like David did."

"You're not my mother!" Ethel raged. "I don't want anything more to do with you. You're as bad as Dave!"

The Rosenbergs were electrocuted on June 19, 1953.

"She's no daughter of mine," sobbed the mother, and she refused to sit Shiva (to observe the traditional Jewish mourning) for Ethel.

As the years passed, Greenglass and Gold, both in the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., talked with many federal investigators, and several times appeared at Senate subcommittee hearings.

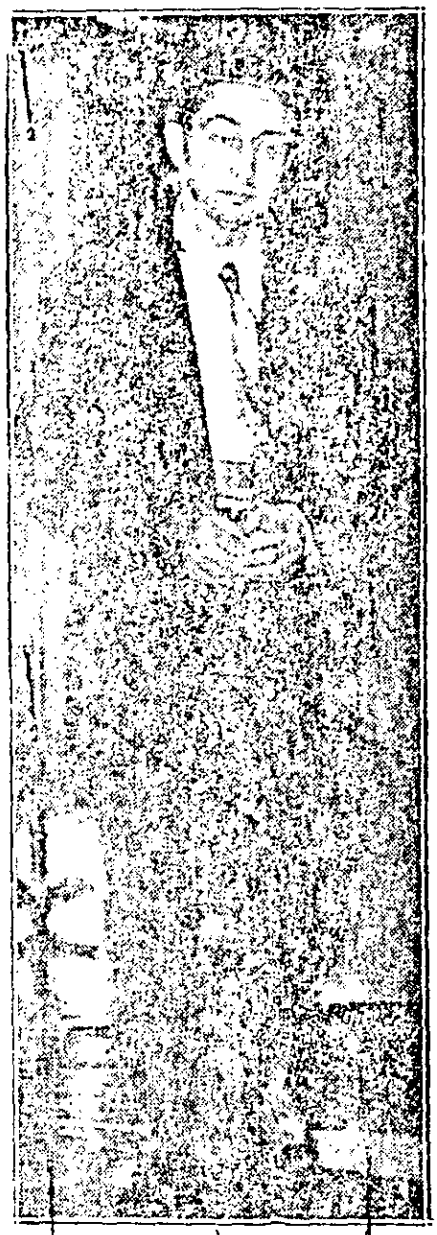
"Before bringing myself to testify," David once said, "I thought quite a while. And, at times, after testifying, I was sorry I testified—because these people were my flesh and blood. I felt affection for them, and I still do."

Then, turning on his dead kinfolk, he said, "But if these people had not wanted to be martyrs they could have just put up their hands and said 'Stop!' and told the truth. It's hard to be called a murderer by people," said Greenglass, referring to himself, "but to deliberately martyr yourself for an erroneous cause is the most hypocritical thing a person can do."

Well, David Greenglass is free now. Some people say he paid too much for his crime; some say he paid too little. But such is the attitude of Americans toward traitors, even toward those who regret their deeds, Greenglass probably will keep on paying and paying. At least, he has a long way to go to get into the good graces of his countrymen under his own identity.

Morton Sobell was a radar expert and a Red spy.

The Rosenbergs paid with their lives.



Harry Gold was courier for ring of Soviet spies.

Ruth Greenglass was go-between for her husband.

David Greenglass passed on sketches of secret lens mold.

ReBulet to Albuquerque dated 8/7/62; Albuquerque airtel to the Bureau dated 10/8/62, and the report of SA [redacted] dated 10/25/62, at Albuquerque, all captioned as above. (b)(7)(c)

On 11/20/62, photographs of HAROLD H. AGNEW, DONALD H. SCHELL, JAMES G. STEARNS, JR., and JACOB J. WECHSLER, were exhibited to DAVID GREENGLASS by SA [redacted]. GREENGLASS stated that he did not recognize the names of SCHELL, however, STEARNS and WECHSLER looked familiar to him but he could not furnish any information concerning them. (b)(7)(c)

GREENGLASS stated that while at Los Alamos during World War II, he became acquainted with the following individuals:

THOMAS JEFFERSON FREEDMAN

FREEDMAN was a mathematician, approximately 19 years of age, who had graduated from the University of Chicago and who was also stationed at the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory (LASL). GREENGLASS advised that he knew FRIEDMAN to be a Communist, not in the sense that he was card-carrying member of the Party or that he knew him, FRIEDMAN, to have had attended CP Cell Meetings, but based his opinion, rather, on the fact that FRIEDMAN believed in the same Communist ideology that GREENGLASS himself was imbued with at the time. GREENGLASS furnished no information concerning the current whereabouts of FRIEDMAN.

The files of the New York Office contain no information pertaining to THOMAS JEFFERSON FRIEDMAN.

BENJAMIN BEDERSON

GREENGLASS stated that BEDERSON was a scientist, approximately 20 years of age, who was also stationed at the LASL. For the same reasons mentioned above, as in the case of FRIEDMAN, GREENGLASS stated that he knew BEDERSON to have been a Communist who had visited the USSR and who had attended school in that country. GREENGLASS stated that although he was well acquainted with this individual, BEDERSON denied knowing GREENGLASS when questioned by authorities about the GREENGLASS investigation.

The files of the New York Office reflect that BENJAMIN BEDERSON is the subject of New York file 100-90439 (BU file 100-420820) entitled, "BENJAMIN BEDERSON, SM-C" which is currently in a closed status. This file reflects that BEDERSON was stationed at Los Alamos from March 1944 to approximately February 1946 while in the United States Army Special Engineering Detachment. He has been interviewed by Bureau Agents on several occasions in the past at which time he admitted his acquaintanceship with GREENGLASS and expressed a desire to cooperate with the Bureau. This file further reflects that he has not been employed at the LASL since 1946 and therefore he is not being considered as a suspect in the [redacted] case [redacted] (b)(1)

NY G[illegible]2039

WILLIAM SPINDEL

GREENGLASS stated that SPINDEL was a young physicist and chemist, who was also stationed at the LASL during World War II and who is now teaching somewhere in New York City. GREENGLASS advised that for the same reasons mentioned above, as in the case of WILLIAMS and DEMENCOM, he knew SPINDEL to have been a Communist. GREENGLASS could furnish no additional pertinent information concerning this individual.

The files of the New York Office reflect that WILLIAM SPINDEL is the subject of New York file 115-31312 entitled, "WILLIAM SPINDEL - SO - 3107, AEAA" which is currently in a closed status. This file reflects that SPINDEL, while in the United States Army, was stationed at the LASL from April 1944 to October 1945 where he was reported to have associated with a group described as having Russian and Communist leanings. This file further reflects that SPINDEL has not been employed at Los Alamos or in that vicinity since 1945 and therefore is not being considered as a suspect in the [redacted] case [redacted] (b)(1)

The photographs of IRED L. RIBE, RICHARD J. KANDEL, and GEORGE A. COWAN, were not exhibited to GREENGLASS inasmuch as there is no indication that anyone of these individuals was in military service at the LASL during World War II.

While it is noted that the name THOMAS JEFFERSON FREEMAN, who was stationed with GREENGLASS at the LASL during World War II, does not appear on the List of Staff Members at Los Alamos as of 7/1/59, (as set forth in referenced report, page 7), the Albuquerque Office is requested to determine, if possible, whether FREEMAN continued employment at the LASL after World War II and, if so, his date of termination.

New York Office will continue its investigation to determine the identity of captioned unsub.

On 10/12/73, RUTH GREENGLASS contacted SA [redacted] and asked whether it was advisable to contact Judge IRVING KAUFMANN. She was advised that it was not considered proper for her to do so in view of the fact that he was the trial judge in the ROSENBERG case. However, the decision would be her's. She then asked should she contact Judge IRVING SAYPOL and indicated that she was very reluctant to do so. Again she was advised that the decision was her's, however, Judge SAYPOL could not recommend that she contact counsel. She then said that she would contact O. J. ROGGE telephonically and advised the results of the contact. Mrs. GREENGLASS contacted the office again and advised that she had been in touch with attorney O. J. ROGGE and advised him that she would not cooperate by participating in the TV broadcast of Channel 13 in any way. She also told him that at the present time she was a private citizen and if Channel 13 went ahead with their broadcast and exposed her identity and residence that she would take whatever action was appropriate against them for violating her right of privacy. (b)(7)(c)

She then stated that she would discuss the matter with her relative who is an attorney.

SUBJECT: DAVID GREENGLASS
ESP - R

On 12/13 and 14/73, Supervisor R. DENNIS of the Bureau telephonically contacted the NYO and inquired whether the Bureau (NYO) had been instrumental in aiding GREENGLASS to change his name and secondly had we promised to protect his new identity. He indicated he was under pressure from the Department to make available to ALVIN GOLDSTEIN, TV producer for Channel 13, copies of the interviews of GREENGLASS by Bureau Agents. The Department was taking the position that these should be made available to GOLDSTEIN unless the Bureau could present reasons why not. Further, they alleged that it was not the Department who would be giving these interviews publicity, but Channel 13.

Mr. DENNIS was advised that on the first point the GREENGLASS family were being harassed by threatening and abusive phone calls. In collaboration with their attorney, O. JOHN ROGGE, it was decided they should change their name and address. This was done also to protect the children. It was also understood since we were in at the inception of this plan that the Bureau would not divulge the new identity. This was reaffirmed on numerous occasions throughout the years.

It was also pointed out that several members of the ROSENBERG apparatus had never been prosecuted because of a lack of corroborating witnesses. Should one or two be found, GREENGLASS might again be a witness, but he is still in the status of a confidential informant. The violations being wartime espionage, the Statute of Limitations does not apply.

Mr. DENNIS expressed his gratitude and stated he will do all in his power to protect the GREENGLASS family.

(OO:NY)

On 1/31/74, Supervisor RICHARD DENNIS of the Bureau advised the writer he had contacted JOHN A. MINTS, Inspector in Charge, Office of Legal Counsel and received the following opinions regarding action the Bureau might take in the forthcoming Impact TV special:

1) The Bureau would have no legal status for bringing an injunction against Impact to prohibit their disclosing subject's current identity. Such injunction would have to be brought by DAVID GREENGLASS.

2) The Bureau would be ill-advised to contact Impact with a request that GREENGLASS's identity not be disclosed since this could result in Impact making the Bureau's request known either in the documentary itself or otherwise and a relationship between GREENGLASS and the Bureau might be misinterpreted as other than the actual one that exist.

Supervisor DENNIS advised that ALVIN GOLDSTEIN, the Impact director, had indicated he did not intend to make GREENGLASS's current identity and address known but this has not been confirmed in writing.

TV's Newest Folk Heroes—the Rosenbergs

By Benjamin Stein

The most unlikely set of heroes in the whole bizarre history of television "journalism" is emerging. They are Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, the couple who were found guilty of conspiracy to pass atomic secrets to the Soviets during a trial in 1951 and were executed in 1953.

On Jan. 28, the ABC-TV network showed a two-hour-long dramatization of the trial of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg which made the two atom spies seem to be Heidi and Tom Sawyer with a generous mixture of Romeo and Juliet thrown in. The point of the creators of the show, apparently, was that Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were two harmless, intensely lovable people caught in a web of jealousy and perjury and national hysteria through which their innocence shone forth like a beacon light.

The most penetrating tool of the television propagandist's art—showing only one side of an issue, set the mood throughout. The Rosenbergs were shown modestly denying any involvement in the atomic theft conspiracy. Whenever they took the stand, they answered in a steady and clear tone, making just the right amount of eye contact to show their sincerity.

Their accusers and the prosecutors were cast perfectly as television heavies—either swarthy and bloated or thin and bloodless, never normal.

The TV script skimmed lightly over the unanimous finding of guilty by a jury of the Rosenbergs' peers and its consistent affirmance by higher courts including the Supreme Court, which refused to order a stay of execution. Every time the Rosenbergs took the Fifth Amendment as to their possible Communist affiliations, the commentator-narrator reminded the audience that the pair were exercising a constitutional right.

No mention was made of the world consequences of the Soviets' early possession of the atom bomb. Moreover, the program made a selective cut of the letters the Rosenbergs exchanged while they were awaiting execution in prison: "I love you and the children" was the gist of the touching exchanges we heard on the air. Missing were the sections of the letters to each other that were loaded with Communist jargon. Yet surely if we are invited to look beyond the factual evidence produced at the trial, these things are relevant.

The result was that a person unfamiliar with the case would surely have concluded that the Rosenbergs were innocent victims of a legally sanctioned lynching.

A far [illegible] fully done piece of work by the National Public Affairs Center for Television has been produced by Alvin Goldstein, a former CPS newsman and his colleagues. It is "The Unquiet Death of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg" and will be aired on Feb. 25. This show is a chronology of the events leading up to the conspiracy, the trial and the execution. It features interviews with the participants in the case, the lawyers for both sides and the jurors.

A narration written by the producer links the parts. But even in this program, the commentary is a veritable parody of impartiality. The Communist affiliations of the Rosenbergs were formed as a result of their witnessing the "complete failure of unbridled capitalism" or words to that effect, says the narrator. To prove the point that the capitalist system "lays waste to peoples' lives," the producers call upon a man who was a Communist during the 1930s to say how poor his family had been.

The producers clearly intend to show the Rosenbergs not only innocent, but heroic. They are, however, undone by their own thoroughness. One particularly eloquent juror recalls that he had a hard time finding a woman guilty of a capital crime. Then he says, "But I thought of how what she had done might lead to the death of my children, and millions of children all over the world, and maybe even her children."

It is puzzling indeed to speculate where all the interest in the Rosenbergs comes from after 20 years. Two books, one pro and one anti-Rosenberg recently have been published. But the incentive for the television shows may be a bit different.

Alvin Goldstein said he was inspired to do "The Unquiet Death" by his work in rebroadcasting the Watergate hearings for educational TV. He reasoned that if people within the government had done illegal things to their political opponents in 1972, perhaps they had also done them in 1951. Perhaps, he thought, the government [illegible] the trial of the Rosenbergs because of their political views.

Mr. Goldstein realizes that there was a great deal of factual evidence to convict the Rosenbergs, but he says that is essentially irrelevant. Guilt or innocence of the charge is not the real issue, he says. The real guts of the matter is that the Rosenbergs were being tried for their political views ". . . and that is what is happening today," he says.

It may be that people are being pilloried for their political views today, but it's altogether likely that the victims may not be the ones Mr. Goldstein thinks they are. Could there be an analog to the tormenting of people without regard to their guilt or innocence, but solely on the basis of a superheated political climate of retribution in what we've seen on the TV news in the last 12 months? Who else could play the role today of all those witnesses before congressional committees in the 1950s who were trotted out to generate publicity [illegible] but some of the defenders of the President in the Watergate hearings?

But television has not yet made that seemingly obvious connection. With shows like the ones about the Rosenbergs, television exonerates those found guilty by a jury of their peers with due process of law. With its "news" shows, television can mete out the punishment of embarrassment, humiliation, loss of friends and status, in a word, all the things the now-despised congressional committees of the '50s once dispensed. Or, as in the case of the Rosenbergs, television can give a whole generation, unfamiliar with the facts of the era or their trial, the impression that the U.S. government murdered two innocent people.

This leads to a further point about the Rosenbergs' TV renaissance. The producers of "The Unquiet Death" think that it is important to see shows about the late '40s and early '50s because ". . . that was when our current leaders were formed and they are still running things."

Richard Nixon is shown as a young Senator, talking about Communists at the State Department. The point of that snippet, one is told, is that the same repressive forces were at work then and now. That viewpoint is undoubtedly sincere and widely held, especially in the circles that might watch "The Unquiet Death."

"Repression" is an odd point for the producers of "The Unquiet Death" to be making, though. This show which is bitterly critical of the American system of economics, justice and government was funded 100% by federal government money through the Corporation for Public Broadcasting. Some repression!
