THE CRIME FORSE THAN MURDER

PART I

INTRODUCTION:

Sometime ago the Soviet Government publicly announced the detonation of an atomic bomb. Past experience had taught us to treat lightly Moscow pronouncements. However, the White House, in a solemn statement in September, 1949, related the disheartening news that startled and then shocked the Nation.

"Newsweek" magazine, October 15, 1951.

The Kremlin had finally fathomed the secrets of the stom. Was this an inevitable accomplishment? To whom could the Russian Government pay tribute for this fateful discovery? Was it due to Russian scientific ingenuity or to incrican traiters?

To meither could be escribed sole credit. Russian ingenuity in the scientific field had probably contributed immensely to this discovery. But what of the part played by American traitors? What of the part played by the executed atom spies, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg? This them is the story of their deed of infamy - a crime worse than murder.

ORIGIN OF THE CASE

Investigation in the Summer of 1949 that the secret of the construction of the atom bomb had been stolen and turned over to a foreign power. Immediate investigation was undertaken. The investigation resulted in the identification of Emil Julius Flaus Fuchs, German-born British atomic scientist. British intelligence authorities were advised. Puchs was arrested by the British on February 2, 1950, and admitted his involvement in Seviet atomic espionage. He did not know the identity of his American contact. The latter was subsequently identified through extensive Bureau investigation as Harry Gold, a Philadelphia chemist. On May 22, 1950, Gold confessed his espionage activity to the FBI.

Investigation of Earry Gold's admissions led to the identification of David Greenglass, a United States Army enlisted man who had been assigned at Los Alamos, New Mexico, in 1944 and 1945, as a Soviet agent. Gold related he had picked up espionage material from Greenglass during June, 1945, on instructions of "John," his Soviet principal. "John" was subsequently identified as Anatoli Takevlev, former Soviet vice-consul in New York City, who left the U.S. in December, 1946. Interrogation of Greenglass and his wife, Ruth, resulted in admissions of espionage activity under the instructions of Julius and Ethel Bosenberg, brother-in-law and sister respec-engineer, and an admitted Communist, was interviewed. He disclosed that Morton Sobell, radar engineer and former classmate of Elitcher and Rosenberg at the College of the City of New York, was also involved in the Rosenberg espionage network.

BACKGROUND OF PRINCIPAL SUBJECTS

Julius and Ethel Rosenberg

Julius Rosenberg was born May 12, 1918, at New York City. He was the son of Harry and Sophie Rosenberg, Jewish immigrants, both of whom were born in Russia. He had one brother and three sisters.

Ethel Rosenberg, nee Greenglass, was born September 28, 1915, in New York City, the daughter of Barnett and Tessie Greenglass, also Jewish immigrants. Her father was born in Austria and her mother was born in Austria. Other members of her family included David and Bernard Greenglass, her brothers, and Samuel Greenglass, a half brother.

Ethel and Julius Rosenberg were married June 18, 1939, in New York City. They are survived by two sons, Michael Allen, born March 10, 1943, and Robert Harry, born May 14, 1947.

Julius and Ethel Rosenberg lived in the lower east side of Manhattan most of their lives. They attended Seward Park High School, Ethel graduating in 1931 and Julius graduating in 1934. Julius Rosenberg attended the School of Engineering of the College of the City of New York from September, 1934, until February, 1939, when he graduated with a bachelor's degree in Electrical Engineering. He also took various courses at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute and New York University School of Engineering during 1941. In September, 1940, Julius Rosenberg escured employment as a funior engineer (radio) with the War Department Signal Supply Office, New York General Depot, Brooklyn, New York. He was transferred in October, 1941, to the Signal Corps, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. In October, 1942, he was transferred to the Newark Signal Corps, Inspection Zone, Newark, New Jersey. In February, 1943, he was promoted to the position of Associate Engineer, Inspection. He was suspended from his position on February 10, 1945, pending decision by the Secretary of War on recommendations made by his commanding officer for removal on the basis of information indicating his Communist Party membership. Resemberg's employment with the Government was terminated March 26, 1945. On February 26, 1945, he had obtained employment as an Assistant Engineer with the Emerson Badio and Phonograph Corporation, Ill Eighth Avenue, New York City. This employment was terminated on December 7, 1945. From that date until his apprehension Rosenberg was in various businesses. At the time of his apprehension he was eperating the Pitt Machine Products Corporation, 870 East Houston St., New York City, a general machine shop manufacturing all types of parts for various manufacturing concerns.

Ethel Rosenberg was employed by the National New York Packing and Shipping Company, 327 West S6th Street, New York City, from February, 1932, to October, 1935. She was also employed at the Bell Textile Company, 353 Broadway, New York City, from August, 1938, to June, 1940. In June, 1940, she was appointed as a temporary elerk with the Census Bureau, Department of Commerce, Tashington, D. C. On October 1, 1940, this employment was terminated.

SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES AND ASSOCIATIONS

Julius Rosenberg started associating with Ethel Greenglass.

Julius was disliked by Ethel's parents and was not allowed to visit the parents' home at 64 Sheriff Street, New Tork City, from about 1932 until 1935. During that period Ethel and her two younger brothers, Bernard and David, occupied an apartment on a floor above the home of their parents because the parents did not have adequate room. Julius Rosenberg would visit Ethel frequently at this upstairs apartment without the parents' knowledge. This apartment was littered with copies of the "Daily Worker" and Communist Party literature. Julius and Ethel became violent Communists between 1932 and 1935 and after that maintained that nothing was more important than the Communist cause. They were very insulting toward anyone who disagreed with their piews.

Information obtained in March, 1944, reflected that Julius Rosenberg was a member of the Communist Party and transferred from branch 168 of the Industrial Division of the Communist Party to the East Side group of the First Assembly District under Transfer No. 12179. This information was furnished to the Security and Intelligence Division, Second Service Command, Governors Island, New York, in view of Rosenberg's employment by the War Department at that time.
Further investigation reflected that Rosenberg, while a student at the College of the City of New York, signed a petition urging the granting of a charter to a chapter of the American Students Union to be established at that college.
This investigation also established that his wife, Ethel, had signed a Communist Party petition.

Resemberg's position with the Government was terminated in Becember, 1945, as set forth kereinbefore.

A search of the Rosenberg apartment at the time of the errest of Julius Rosenberg disclosed that Ethel and Julius Rosenberg were members of the International Vorkers concerning Ethel Rosenberg, information was reestived by the New York Office of the FBI in May, 1940, to the effect that Ethel Rosenberg was extremely Communistic and had received an appointment to go to Mashington, D. C., as an employee of the Census Bureau. It was further learned that Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg and another woman were alleged to have been Communist sympathizers and that Mrs. Rosenberg and this woman had distributed Communist literature and signed nominating petitions of the Communist Party. Ethel Rosenberg had also signed a Communist Party nominating petition dated August 13, 1939, in New York City.

Order.

Investigation reflected that Julius Rosenberg claimed to have joined the Young Communist League when he was fourteen years of age and that while at the College of the City of New York he was secretary of the Young Communist League. Rosenberg met his wife Ethel at a rally of the National Maritime Union in 1936. Ethel was an entertainer at the rally. While Ethel was employed by the New York Mational Shipping and Packing Company, she became involved in a strike at the company and supposedly shained herself to a radiator in the building during the strike. Rosenberg allegedly had been arrested during a demonstration concerning the German ship, S.S. Brenen, in New York City in the Summer of 1933 or 1936, and had spent a few days in the Old Tombs Prison.

It was also reported that Rosenberg had plenty of money but that only he or his wife, Ethel, had access to it and that the only reason he did not flee before his arrest was to "take care of some friends." Rosenberg was aware that he was Itable to the death sentence and allegedly made the etatement that as far as he was concerned, he played the game and lost, and would have to take the results.

Ruth Greenglass has advised that it was an accepted fact by all members of the Rosenberg and Greenglass families that Ethel and Julius Rosenberg were Communist Party members.

David Greenglass

David Greenglass, younger brother of Ethel Rosenberg, was born March 3, 1922, in New York. He attended Public School #4 and Haaron High School in New York, graduating from the latter in 1940. He also attended Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute for a short period in 1940, studying mechanical engineering. He attended the Pratt Institute of Science for a short period in 1948, studying mechanical designing. During his early life, he worked in his father's shop. He was employed by Freeman Brothers, Hem Tork City, from June, 1940, to October, 1941. He was also employed by Peerless Laboratories in New York City from October. 1941, to March, 1943. He was inducted into the United States Army on April 5, 1943, and entered active duty at Fort Dix, New Jersey, on April 12, 1949. He was thereafter transferred to Army Service Forces Training Command, Mississippi Ordnance Plant, Flore Mississippi. During July, 1944, he was transferred to the First Provisional Special Engineer Detachment Unit, Manhattan Engineer District, Oak Ridge, Tennessee, arriving there July 27, 1944. He departed from Oak Ridge on August 2, 1944, and joined the Second Provisional Engineer Detachment Unit at Santa Fe, New Mexico, on August 5, 1944. On February 28, 1946, he was transferred to Fort Bliss, Texas, and discharged from the Army on February 29, 1946. In 1947, Greenglass went into business with Julius Rosenberg and others. They formed a company known as the Pitt Machine Products Company, Incorporated. In August, 1949, Greenglass left the company because of poor financial conditions there. He thereaft became employed as a machinist by the Arma Corporation, Brooklyn Hew York, which employment was ceased when he was arrested by the IBI in June, 1950.

David Greenglass married Ruth Prints on November 29, 1942. His wife was born April 30, 1924, at New York City, and lived all her life in the same neighborhood in which Greenglass was raised. They have two phildren, Stephen, born August 8, 1946, and Barbara, born May 16, 1950.

SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES AND AFFILIATIONS

David Greenglass reportedly had some under the influence of his elster, Ethel, when he was about 13 years of age. At the time, Ethel was 19 years old and was being courted by Julius Rosenberg. At first David opposed the efforts of Ethel and Julius to convert him to Communism and disliked Julius, but after Julius bought David a chemistry set, the two became very friendly and Julius was able to influence David considerably. It was further learned that Julius Rosenberg continued to be a frequent visitor at the apartment occupied by David and Ethel until Julius married Ethel in 1939. During that time, David became extremely fond of Julius and was fully converted to Communist ideals expounded by Ethel and Julius. As a result, David joined the Young Communist League at the age of 14.

Ruth Greenglass, wife of David Greenglass, advised that her husband looked up to Julius with a certain degree of hero worship and that Julius influenced David to think along Communist lines by bringing Communist Party literature to David when the latter was 13 or 14 years old.

David Greenglass has stated that he was indoctrinated with Communist principles in his youth by Julius and Ethel Rosenberg and was a member of the Young Communist League in New York from 1936 to 1938. He continued his belief in Communism, but never joined the Communist Party. He claims to have become distillusioned with Communism when Tito of Tugoslavia was expelled from the Cominform. This incident, he claims, brought home to hi that Communism was being used as a tool by the USSR for the purpose of world conquest instead of working toward a panacea.

Soon after her marriage to David Greenglass, Ruth Greenglass claims to have been converted to the principles of. Communism by her husband. She was a member of a branch of the Young Communist League for about a year in 1943 and was presiden of the branch for about three weeks. She states she became distillusioned with Communism following World War II when it became apparent that the USSR had embarked on a program of world conque (65-58236-646 pages 27 and 42 and serial 837)

It is interesting to note that in checking the Army service record of David Greenglass, it was determined that the assignment of Greenglass to atomic energy work occurred under the following circumstances: On July 6, 1944, orders were sent to the Mississippi Ordnance Plant, where Greenglass was assigned to transfer six soldiers, all named, to Oak Ridge, Tennessee, fo assignment to the Manhattan Engineer District. Greenglass was not one of the soldiers named. By letter dated July 14, 1944, t Mississippi Ordnance Plant reported that one of the six men so named was ANOL and asked permission to substitute Greenglass for the ANOL soldier. Permission was granted and by special order dated July 24, 1944, Greenglass was transferred to Dak Ridge.

(65-59028-serial 304)
But for the above incident, it is possible that Greenglass would not have been essigned to work involving research to produce an atomic bomb and would not have been a subject for espionage recruitment by Julius Rosenberg. It is further possibl that the involvement of Julius Rosenberg in espionage might not have been detected.

Vorton Sobell

Morton Sobell was born April 11, 1917, in New York 'City, the son of Russian-born immigrants. He married Helen Levitov Gurewitz at Arlington, Virginia, on March 10, 1945. His wife was previously married to Clarence Darrow Gurewitz. At the time of her divorce from Gurewitz on March 5, 1945, she was awarded custody of their daughter, Sydney Gurewitz, then eix years of age. The Sobells have a second child, Mark Sobell, age 3.

Sobell attended Stuyuesant High School from February, 1931, to January, 1934. He thereafter entered the College of the City of New York where he was a classmate of Julius Rosenberg and Max Blitcher who will be mentioned hereinafter. Sobell graduated from the College of the City of New York in June, 1938, with a backelor's degree in electrical engineering. Subsequently he attended the University of Michigan Graduate School in 1941 and 1942, from which institution he received a master's degree in electrical engineering.

Sobell was employed during the Summers of 1934 through 1938 as a maintenance man at Camp Unity, Vingdale, New York, reportedly a Communist-controlled camp. On January 27, 1939, he secured the position of junior electrical engineer with the Bureau of Maval Ordnance, Washington, D. C. He was promoted to the position of assistant electrical engineer. He resigned from this position in October, 1940, to further his studies at the University of Michigan. After obtaining his master's degree, he secured employment on June 15, 1942, as a test engineer with the General Electric Company, Schenectady, New Yor In the early stages of his employment with this company, he work as an engineer in the Marine and Aeronautics Division. At the time of his resignation from this position on June 13, 1947, he was assigned to meteorological radar work in the Electrical Control Section. He had access to classified material, includi: that on fire control radar. After resigning from this company, he secured employment as an electrical engineer with the Resues Instrument Company, New York City, where he had access to secre: He remained in this position until June 16, 1950, when he failed to appear for work. It is noted that this was the date

David Greenglass was arrested by the FBI. On June 22, 1950, Sobell and his family fled to Mexico. He was thereafter located in Mexico City and on August 18, 1950, was taken into custody by Bureau agents at Laredo, Texas, after his deportation from Mexico by the Mexican authorities.

SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES AND AFFILIATIONS

Max Elitcher, an admitted Communist, advised that during the period he roomed with Norton Sobell in Vashington, p. C., he was induced by Sobell to join the Communist Party. He stated that this occurred in 1939 and that Sobell had informed him that he, himself, was a member of the Communist Party.

During this same period Sobell was reported to have been active in the American Peace Mobilization and the America Youth Congress, both of which organizations have been cited by the Attorney General as coming within the purview of Executive Order 10450. It was learned that Sobell eigned a Communist Party petition for Isidore Begun, Communist Party candidate, August 8, 1939.

It was ascertained that Sobell appeared on the acti indices of the American Peace Mobilization and was listed on the indices of the American Touth Congress as a delegate to that body from the Washington Committee for Democratic Action

A resident at an apartment building located at 225 % Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., reported that Sobell and Max Elitaher were among the tenants of the building who attended meetings in the apartment of one of the tenants during 1940 and 1941. She was of the opinion that these were Communist meetings.

The New York Office located a Communist Party nominating petition which was filed in the name of one Morton Sobell, 646 St. Ann's Avenue, Bronx, New York. The signature of this petition was identified by the FBI Laboratory as being in the handwriting of Morton Sobell.

FLIGHT OF MORTON SOBELL TO WEXICO

A check at the Reeves Instrument Company reflected that Sobell failed to report for work after June 18, 1950. The company received a letter from Sobell on or about July 3, 1950, wherein Sobell advised that he needed a rest and was going to take a few weeks off to recuperate.

A meighborhood investigation by the FBI developed that Sobell, his wife and their two children were last seen at their home on June 22, 1950, and that they had left hurriedly without advising anyone of their intended departure.

Through American Airlines, La Guardia Field, it was determined that Sobell, his wife, Helen, his stepdaughter, Sydney, and his sen, Mark, had departed for Mexico City on flight No. 157, leaving La Guardia Field at 9:45 p.m., Eastern Standard Time on June 28, 1950. It was further determined that round-trip excursion tickets for transportation from New York City to Mexico and return were purchased on June 21, 1950, in the name of Morton Sobell.

reflected that Sobell had communicated through the mails with relatives through the utilization of one William Danziger of New York City as a mail drop. Danziger was interviewed and reluctantly admitted receiving letters from Sobell with instructions to forward these letters to Sobell's relatives. This admission was made by Danziger after he was advised that the FBI Laboratory identified handwriting on the envelopes of these letters which were used in forwarding them to Sobell's relatives as being in Danziger's handwriting.

In August, 1950, the Mexican authorities took Sobell into oustody and deported him as an undesirable alien. On the early morning of August 18, 1950, FBI Agents apprehended Sobell at the International Bridge, Laredo, Texas.

Armed with the information supplied by Harry Gold the FBI moved swiftly to bring before the bar of justice those responsible for stealing secrets of the United States Government.

On June 16, 1950, the Criminal Division of the Department was advised of the admissions of David Greenglass and authorized the filing of a complaint in Albuquerque, New Mexico, charging Greenglass with espionage conspiracy to violate Section 84, Title 50, United States Code. On the same date, Greenglass was arraigned before a United States Commissioner, Edward V. McDonald, of the Southern District of New York and was remanded to the custody of the United States Marshal in default of $100,000 bail.

On July 6, 1950, Greenglass was indicted by a Federal Grand Jury at Santa Fe, New Mexico. He was charged with espionage conspiracy.

On July 17, 1950, the Criminal Division of the Department authorized the filing of a complaint charging Julius Rosenberg with espionage conspiracy. Rosenberg was arrested at his home, 10 Monroe Street, Knickerbocker Fillage, New York City, on the same date and arraigned that evening before United States District Judge John Mogohey of the Southern District of New York. Rosenberg was represented by his attorney, Emanuel H. Bloch. Rosenberg was remanded to the custody of the United States Marshal in default of $100,000 bail for further hearing.

On August 3, 1950, Irving Saypol, United States Attorney, Southern District of New York, authorized the filing of a scaled complaint against Morton Sobell, charging Sobell with espionage conspiracy.

On August 7, 1950, Ethel Rosenberg appeared before a Federal Grand Jury in the Southern District of New York pursuant to a subpoena.

On August 11, 1950, Mr. Saypol authorized the filing of a complaint against Ethel Rosenberg, charging her with espionage conspiracy. Ethel Rosenberg was taken into custody on the same date by Bureau Agents. Later, on the afternoon of August 11, 1950 she was arraigned before United States Commissioner McDonald of the Southern District of New York and remanded to the custody of the United States Narshal in default of $100,000 bail for Surther hearing.

On August 17, 1950, a Federal Grand Jury in the Southern District of New York returned an indictment charging Julius Rosenberg, Ethel Rosenberg and Anatoli Yakovlev with violation of Section 34, Title 50, United States Code. This indictment alleged eleven overt acts.

On August 18, 1950, Morton Sobell was taken into custody by Bureau agents in Lareds, Texas, after his deportation by Mexican authorities. He was arraigned on the same date before United States Commissioner Frank T. Hill of the Southern District of Texas. He waived removal to New York and was remanded to the custody of the United States Marshal in default of $100,000 bail. He was thereafter returned to New York by the United States Marshal on August 29, 1950.

On August 23, 1950, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were arraigned before United States District Judge T. Hoyt Davis of the Southern District of New York. They were represented by their sounsel, Emanuel E. Bloch, and a plea of not guilty was entered by both. Bail in the amount of $100,000 was continued for each of the Rosenbergs.

On August 24, 1950, Morton Sobell was arraigned before United States Commissioner McDonald in the Southern District of New York and his hearing was adjourned. Bail of $100,000 was continued.

On September 18, 1950, Sebell again appeared before the United States Commissioner for a hearing which was adjourned in order that the Government could complete presenting its case to a Federal Grand Jury.

on October 10, 1950, a superseding indictment was returned by a Federal Grand Jury in the Southern District of New York charging Morton Sobell, Ethel Rosenberg, Julius Rosenberg, David Greenglass and Anatoli Takovlev with conspiracy to violate the Espionage Statutes.

On October 17, 1950, Julius and Ethel Resemberg pled not guilty to the indictment of October 10, 1950, before United States District Judge William Bondy of the Southern District of New York. Bail of $100,000 was continued for Julius Resemberg and bail of Ethel Resemberg was reduced to $50,000 by Judge Bondy. The Besembergs were remanded to the custody of the United States Marshal in default of bail.

On October 18, 1950, David Greenglass pled guilty to the superseding indictment of October 10, 1950. The plea of Greenglass was accepted by Judge Bondy and bail of $100,000 was continued pending his sentencing.

On December 5, 1950, Morton Sobell pled not guilty to the superseding indictment of October 10, 1950. His plea was accepted by United States District Judge Sylvester Ryan of the Southern District of New York and Sobell's bail was continued in the sum of $100,000.

On January 31, 1951, a Federal Grand Jury in the Southern District of New York handed down a second superseding indictment charging Julius Rosenberg, Ethel Rosenberg, Anatoli Yakovelev, Morten Sobell, and David Greenglass with conspiracy to commit espionage between June 6, 1944, and June 16, 1950. This indictment was similar in all respects to the previous superseding indictment with the exception that it changed the beginning of the conspiracy from November, 1944, to June, 1944.

This indictment was returned under Section 34, Title 50, of the United States Code. The Grand Jury charged as follows:

June 16, 1950, at the Southern District of New York, and elsewhere, Julius Rosenberg, Ethel Rosenberg, Anatoli A. Yakovlev, also known as "John," David Greenglass and Norton Sobell, the defendants herein, did, the United States of America then and there being at war, conspire, combine, confederate and agree with each

Section 32, Title 50, United States Code, in that they did conspire,

On February 2, 1951, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg and Morton Sobell entered pleas of not guilty before United States District Judge Henry W. Goddard of the Southern District of New York. David Greenglass entered a plea of guilty to the above indictment and withdrew his plea of guilty to the previous superseding indictment. Judge Goddard directed that the sentencing of Greenglass be postponed until the termination of the trial.

On February 5, 1951, Morton Sobell made an application to United States District Judge Vincent Leibell of the Southern District of New York, for a Writ of Nabeas Corpus based on the allegation that the indictment of January 31, 1951, was vague and that the incrimination of Sobell was a violation of his constitutional rights. Judge Leibell denied the application on the grounds that it was improper.

THE ROSENBIRG-SOBELL ESPIONAGE CONSPIRACY TRIAL

on March 6, 1951, the trial of this case on the superseding indictment of January 31, 1951, commenced before U. S. District Judge Irving R. Kaufman in the Southern District of New York. At the outset of the case United States Attorney Irving H. Saypol moved to sever Anatoli A. Yakovlev from the trial, which motion was granted. The selection of a jury of twelve with two alternates was completed on March 7, 1951.

Counsel for the defendants made motions to dismiss the indictment on various grounds which were denied by the Court. Mr. Saypol then made a motion to sever David Greenglass from the indictment because Greenglass had already pleaded guilty. This motion was granted by the Court.

Mr. Saypol opened the Government's case and addressed the jury. He informed the jury that it was their duty to protect the rights of each individual and of all people by proceeding diligently against those who operated against the Government. He pointed out that the Grand Jury had charged the defendants with conspiracy to commit espionage on behalf of a foreign power, and that this charge was one of unusual significance. He defined "conspiracy" and stated it required proof of only one overt act of any one of the conspirators. He stated that the evidence in this case would come from some witnesses who participated with the defendants and from some who were picked by the defendants to be their associates and partners in orine. He stated he intended to prove that the loyalty of the defendants was not to the United States but to Communism in this country and throughout the world. At this point Block objected to the mention of Communism, stating that Communism was not the offense charged in the indictment. Judge Kaufman ruled that he would consider the introduction of matters relating to Communism during the trial as a motive for the unlawful acts charged at such times as it became necessary for him to do so in the trial. Saypol thereafter continued and stated that loyalty to Communism arose from the defendants' devotion to Russia. He stated that they delivered to Russia information and weapons which Russia could use to destroy us. He stated that Julius Rosenberg and Morton Sobell were classmates at college where both had a love of Communism and Russia which led them into a Soviet espionage ring. He related that Rosenberg sought out this ring and then devoted himself to the service of Russia at the expense of disloyalty to the United States. He revealed that Rosenberg reached into the U. S. Army and Mavy and Mational Defense plants to get information for Russia, and that all of the defendants were ever on the lookout to recruit others for Soviet Russia. He stated that they persuaded David Greenglass to reveal secrete while in the Army at Los Alamos, and that at the request of the Rosenbergs, Greenglass stole and turned over to Harry Gold sketches and information concerning the atom bomb.

FBI'S VIGILANCE BREAKS THROUGH THE SHROUD OF DARKNESS

Continuing his address to the jury, Mr. Saypol pointed out that the vigilant TBI broke through the shroud of darkness and collected the evidence to bring the defendants to the bar of justice. He went on to relate that after the arrests of Klaus Fuchs, Harry Gold, and David Greenglass, the Soviet agents put into effect a plan for others to flee the United States. He stated that Sobell actually succeeded in leaving the United States.

The defense attorneys made a motion for a mistrial, claiming that the statements of Saypol were inflammatory and introduced Communism which was not relevant to this case. The Court denied this motion.

Emanuel Block in his statement to the jury pointed out that Julius Rosenberg had asserted his innocence. He requested the jury to render a true verdict and not to be influenced by hysteria or violence. He elained that the trial arcse in a rather tense, international atmosphere and requested the jurors to keep their minds open. He suggested that the jury examine the truthfulness of the witnesses, in particular the testimony of the Greenglasses and Harry Gold. He pointed out that the Greenglasses were related to the Rosenbergs and asked the jury not to be swayed by emotion, sympathy, or passion. Alexander Bloch, attorney for Ethel Rosenberg, in his opening statement, requested the jurors not to condemn her merely because David Greenglass was a confessed conspirator. He stated she had protested her innocence from the beginning and that she was dragged into the base by the machinations of the Greenglasses, who wished to lighten their burdens.

Harold Phillips, attorney for Sobell, in his address to the jury, stated that Saypol had made "the thing look blacker than it is." Phillips stated he was not trying to minimize the offense but just did not want to "maximize it." He stated that the talk of Communism as a motive in this case was absurd because Harry Gold, a main Government witness, never was a Communist. He asked the jury not to let religious beliefs or other beliefs sway them. (65-58236-826)

A total of twenty-two witnesses were presented by the Government. The testimony of some of the main witnesses is being summarized hereinafter.

ESPIONAGE ACTIVITIES OF THE ROSENBERGS

Besenbergs with their ramifications were brought out at the trial of the atom spies. The testimony of Greenglass revealed the following information: Greenglass entered the United States Army in April, 1943, and was assigned to the Ordnance School, Aberdeen, Maryland, in July, 1943. In July, 1944, he was assigned to the Manhattan Project, Oak Ridge, Tennessee. He did not know at that time what the project was. He received security lectures about his duties and was told it was a secret project. Two weeks later he was assigned to Los Alamos, New Mexico, and reported there in August, 1944. He was again told that his work was secret.

In November, 1944, his wife, Ruth Greenglass, came to Albuquerque to visit him. Ruth Greenglass told him that Julius Bosenberg advised her that her husband was working on the atom bomb. Greenglass stated he did not know that he was working on such a project. He stated that he worked in a group at Los Alamos under Dr. Kistiakowsky of Harvard University. He described to the Court the duties of his shop at Los Alamos. He received security instructions again, as well as a security regulation pamphlet marked "Restricted." This pamphlet was introduced into evidence. He stated that while at Los Alamos, he learned the identity of Dr. Oppenheimer, Neils Bohr, whose cover name was Baker, Dr. Urey and Dr. Koski. Creenglass stated he performed work as an apprentice preparing lens molds which were intended for Dr. Koski's experiments, and that he usually worked from sketches supplied by scientists.

Greenglass testified that his sister, Ethel, was married in 1939, and that he knew Julius Rosenberg before the marriage. He stated that Ethel and Julius used to speak to him about the merits of the Russian Government.

Greenglass stated that his wife, Ruth, came to visit him at Los Alamos on November 29, 1944. Ruth told David that Julius Rosenberg had invited her to dinner at the Rosenberg home, 10 Monroe Street, New York City. At this dinner Etnel told Ruth that she must have noticed that Ethel had not been engaging in Communist activities. Ethel also told Ruth that they were not buying the "Daily Torker" any more or attending club meetings because Julius finally was doing what he always wanted to do, namely giving information to the Soviet Union. Ethel told Ruth that David was working on the atom bond project at Los Alamos, and they wanted him to give information concerni; the bomb. Buth told the Rosenbergs that she didn't think it was a good idea and declined to convey their requests to David. Ethel and Julius then told Ruth that she should at least tell David about it and see if he would help. In this conversation Julius pointed out to Ruth that Russia was an ally and deserved the information, and that Russia was not getting all the information that was due her. David at first refused to have anything to do with the request of the Rosenbergs but on the next day he agreed to furnish any available data. Ruth then asked David specific questions about the Manhattan Project, such as the general layout of it and the identity of the scientists working there. David supplied her that information. He identified Dr. Oppenheimer, Dr. Kistiakowsky, and Dr. Bohr to Ruth. He also gave her an estimate of the number of people in the technical area at Los Alamos.

In January, 1945, David arrived in New York City on furlough. About two days later Julius Rosenberg came to David's apartment and asked David for information, "Anything of value on the A-Bomb." He requested David to write up the information and stated he would pick it up the following morning. He asked David what he was doing at Los Alamos, and David stated he was working on lens molds. At the time Rosenberg described to David what an atom bomb looked like. That evening Greenglass wrote up the infermation he had and prepared sketches of the lens mold with a description of how The next morning he gave this it was used in skperiment (65-58236-Serial 837) material to Rosenberg. He also gave to Rosenberg a list of the actentiata ut Los Alamos and the names of possible recruits working there who might be sympathetic to Communism and possibl furnish information to Russia. Rosenberg specifically requested a list of possible recruits. Greenglass had prepared copies of these sketches at the trial which were introduced into evidence over the objection of the defense. Greenglass further stated that at the time he turned this material over to Resemberg, Ruth Greenglass remarked that David's handwriting was bad and would need interpretation. Rosenberg answered that it was nothin: to worry about because Ethel, his wife, would retype the information. A day or two later David and his wife went to the Rosenberg apartment for dinner. When they arrived there, they were introduced to a friend of the Rosenbergs who was already there. David had never met this friend before but had known her husband for some years, In the early part of the evening all of them engaged in social conversation. This friend then left. After she left, Julius told the Greenglasses that this person was a woman who he thought would come to see David to receive information on the atom bomb. They discussed a tentative plan to the effect that Ruth Greenglass would move to Albuquerque, and this woman would come to see her. They also discussed a plan about Ruth and this person meeting in a movie house in Denver, Colorado, where they would exchange purses. Ruth's purse would have in it the information from David concerning Los Alamos. Rosenberg told David that he had this friend come to his home that evening to meet the Greenglasses in order that they would know one another. During this discussion the point was raised that some one else might come for the material, and there was a discussion as to how an identification might be effected. Julius, Buth, and Ethel then went into the kitchen. David stayed in the living room. In about five minutes they came out of the kitchen. Ruth held in her hand a piece of the side of a jello box which was cut in a particular way. Julius held the other piece in his hand. It was agreed that Ruth would use the jello box side to identify the person who would come to see her. They then discarded the idea of having any meeting! with a contact in Denver. David made the suggestion that the meeting be held in front of a Safeway Store in Albuquerque. The date of the meeting was left in abeyance depending upon the time that Ruth would depart for Albuquerque. Julius Rosenberg said that this was a good idea. David further testified that both Julius and Ethel Rosenberg told Ruth not to worry about money. During this visit Ruth mentioned to Ethel that Ethel looked tired. Ethel said she was tired, "between the child" and "typing up her notes" Julius had brought her "in this work. Ethel further stated she did not mind it so long as Julius was doing what he liked to do. Also, during this visit Julius said he would like to have David meet a Russian with whom he could discuss the lens David was working on. A few nights later an appointment was made by Julius for David to meet a Bussian en First Avenue between 42nd and 59th Streets, New York City. David drove up to the appointed meeting place and parked the oar mear a saloon in a dark Street. Julius came up to the car, looked in, and then went away. He came back with a man who got into David's car. Julius stayed on the street.

David then drove away with the unknown man. The man asked David about high explosive lenses, a formula for the curve of the lens, the high explosives used, and the means of detonation.
After driving around for a while, David returned to the briginal place of meeting and let the man out. This man was then joined by Rosenberg who was standing on the street, and David observed them leaving together.

In the Spring of 1945, Ruth Greenglass came to Albuquerque to live. She finally rented an apartment at 209 North Eigh Street, Albuquerque. David would visit this apartment on weekends. On the first Sunday of June, 1945, a man subsequently identified by David as Harry Gold came to visit him. Gold asked if David's name was Greenglass, and David said "Yes." Gold then said "Julius sent me." David went to his wife's wallet and took out the piece of the fello box and compared it with the piece offered by Gold. They matched. Gold asked David if he had any information. David said he did but would have to write it up.

gold then left, stating he would be back. David immediately started to work on a report and made sketches of the lens mold experiments, wrote up descriptive material regarding them, and prepared a list of possible recruits for espionage. Later that day Gold returned and David gave him the reports. Gold then gave David an envelope and left. David and Ruth opened the envelope which contained $500. David turned the money over to Ruth. The Court accepted copies of the sketches prepared by Greenglass at the time of the trial to describe the information Greenglass had turned over to Gold. These exetches were admitted into evidence. (65-58236-Serial 822)

In September, 1945, David Creenglass returned to New York City with his wife, Ruth, on furlough. The next morning Julius Rosenberg came to the Greenglass apartment and wanted to know what David had for him. David informed Julius that he had obtained a pretty good description of the atom bomb. At this point in his testimony the Government prosecutor reverted to Rosenberg's contact with David in January, 1945. David reiterated that in January, 1945, Rosenberg gave him a descriptio of an atom bomb which David later learned had been subsequently dropped on Hiroshima. David stated that Julius gave him this information in order that David would know what information to look for. At that time Rosenberg told David that the atom bomb consisted of fissionable material at each end of a tube, and that this material was brought together under great pressure to cause a "nuclear explosion."

Greenglass continued to relate what transpired in September, 1945. At Julius' request, he drew up a sketch of the atom bomb, prepared descriptive material on it, and drew up a list of scientists and possible recruits for Soviet espionage. He thereafter delivered this material to the Rosenberg apartment. He stated that at the time he turned this material over to Rosenberg, Ethel and Ruth were present.

section of an atom bomb to indicate what he gave to Rosenberg, and this was made Government exhibit #8. At this point Emanuel Bloch asked the Court to impound the sketch of the bomb so that no one but the Court, jury, defendants, and attorneys would be able to see it. Bloch stated that he was making this request in the interest of national security. The Government prosecutor remarked to the Court that this was an unusual request to come from these defendants. Judge Kaufman ordered the sketch impounde pointing out that inasmuch as the defense requested it, the defense would have me grounds for objection to the impounding in case of an appeal.

Greenglass then continued his testimony and testified as to the make-up of the atom bomb, using the sketch referred to above. He further stated that he told Rosenberg how the bomb was set off by a barometric pressure device. Rosenberg told him the information was very good and it should be typed-up immediately. The information was then prepared on a portable typewriter in the Rosenberg apartment by Ethel. While Ethel was typing the report, Julius mentioned to David that he (Julius) had stolen a proximity fuse while working at the Emerson Radio Corporation and turned it over to the Russians. After the report was typed, the handwritten notes were burned in a frying pan by Julius and flushed down a drain. Julius gave David $200. Julius discussed with David the idea of David's staying at Les Alamos after he was discharged from the army so that he could continue to get information. David declined. Julius also attempted to persuade David to go to college partly under the C.I. Bill of Rights and partly on Russian funds. He urged David to become a student in nuclear physics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology or the University of Chicago in order to make contacts in this achool and obtain information for the Russians.

Rosenberg. During this period Julius told David that he had people going to school; that he had people in up-State New York and in Ohio giving him information for the Russians.

Julius also mentioned one such place was the General Electric Company in Schenectady, New York. Rosenberg mentioned to Greenglass on one occasion that he had seen one of his contacts at Cleveland, Ohio.

Late in 1947, Julius teld David about a sky platform project and mentioned he had received this information from Mone of the boys. M. Rosenberg described the sky platform as a large vessel which could be suspended at a point in space where the gravity was low, and that the vessel would travel around the earth like a satellite. Rosenberg also advised David that he had a way of communicating with the Russians by putting material or messages in the alcove of a theater. Julius also mentioned he had received from one of his contacts the mathematics relating to atomic energy for airplanes.

Greenglass testified that Rosenberg claimed to have received a citation, together with a watch, from the Russian Greenglass also testified that Rosenberg claimed to have received a console table from the Russians which he used for photography purposes.

In February, 1950, a few days after the news of the arrest of Dr. Fuchs in England was published, Julius came to David's home and asked David to go for a walk. During this walk Rosenberg spoke of Fuchs and then mentioned that the man who had come to see David in Albuquerque was also a contact of Fuchs.

Julius stated that David would have to leave the country. David answered that he needed money, and Rosenberg said he would get the money from the Russians. Rosenberg then mentioned that

Joel Barr, who was a member of the espionage ring, had left the country. In April, 1950, Rosenberg again: told David he would have to leave the country. About May 23, 1950, Rosenberg came to the Greenglass apartment with the "New York Herald Tribune" which had a picture of Harry Gold and the story of Gold's arrest. Rosenberg said, "This is the man who saw you in Albuquerque." Julius gave David $1,000 and stated he would come back later with $6,000 more for David to use in leaving the country. Julius stated that David would have to get a Mexican tourist card. Julius also mentioned that he went to see a doctor who told him that a doctor's letter stating David was inoculated for small pox; would also be needed, as well as passport photos. Rosenberg then gave David a form letter and instructions to memoriae for use in Mexico City. Upon David's arrival in Mexico City, he was to send this letter to the Soviet Embassy in Nexico City and sign it "I. Jackson." Three days after he sent this letter, David was to go to the Plaz De La Colon at 5 P.W. and look at the Statue of Columbus there. David was to carry in his hand a guide to the city with his middle finger between the page of the guide. He was to wait until some man came up to him. David would then state, "That is a magnificent statue" and advise the man that he (David) was from Oklahoma. The man would then answer, "Oh, there are much more beautiful statues in Paris." The man would give David a passport and additional money. David was to go to Yera Cruz and then go to Sweden or Switzerland. If he went to Sweden, David was to send the same type of letter to the Soviet Ambassador or his secretary and sign the letter "I. Jackson." Three days later, David was to go to the Statue of Linnaeus in Stockholm at 5 P.M. A man would approach David and David would mention that the status was beautiful. The man would answer, "There are much more beautiful ones in faris." The man would then give David the means of transportation to Czechoslovak Upon arrival in Czechoslovakia, David was to write to the Soviet Ambassador advising him of his presence there.

Julius further advised David that he himself would have to leave the country because he had known Jacob Golos, and that Elizabeth Bentley probably knew him also. Sometime later David and his family went to a photography shop and had six sets of passport photos taken. On Memorial Day Rosenberg visited the Greenglass apartment and David gave his five sets of these photos. Sometime later Rosenberg again visited David and gave David $4,000 in $10 and $20 bills wrapped in brown paper We requested David to go for a walk with him and repeat the memorized instructions. David gave the $4,000 to his brother-in-law, Louis Abel, for safekseping.

In another conversation with Rosenberg shortly prior to David's arrest, Rosenberg asked David if he was being followed and David said he believed he was. (65-58236-836)

On cross-examination, David testified he used the $1,000 he received from Julius to pay household debts and the $4,000 to pay his lawyer, O. John Rogge, for representing him:

#ITNESSES CORROBORATING GREENGLASS STORT

Ruth Greenglass

Ruth Greenglass, wife of David Greenglass, also testified at the trial and in addition to corroborating her husband's testimony, she gave the following information:

She stated that prior to her departure for New Nexico in November, 1944, she had a conversation with Julius and Ethel Rosenberg at the Rosenberg apartment in New York City.

Julius told her that he and Ethel had discontinued their open affiliation with the Communist Party because he had always wanted to do more than just be a Communist Party Member. Julius informed her that after two years he had succeeded in reaching the Russians and was now doing the work he wanted to do. He requested her to enlist David's help in furnishing information to him for the Russians about Los Alamos. Ruth declined at first but was urged by Ethel to approach David. Julius then gave her instructions for David as to the particular type of information he wanted. A few days later Julius gave Ruth $150 to defray the expenses of her trip to New Nexico.

on her return to New York in December, 1944, after visiting David, she was visited at her apartment by Julius, at which time she informed him of David's decision to cooperate.

She furnished to Julius orally the information given to her by David and also wrote it down for Julius. She informed him of David's impending furlough. Prior to her departure for Albuquerque in February of 1945, Julius visited her at her apartment where she was living with her sister, Dorothy Prints. Julius requested Dorothy Prints to leave the room and after she did so he furnished Ruth instructions concerning a meeting with an espionage contact in Albuquerque. (65-58236-850, 851, 853)

Harry Gold

Harry Gold testified in summary as follows: Gold was engaged in Soviet espionage from 1935 up to the time of his arres in May, 1950. From 1944 to 1946 his espionage superior was a Russian known to him as "John." He identified a picture of Anatoli A. Yakovlev, former Soviet Vice-Consul in New York City as "John." Yakovlev's picture was admitted into evidence.

In the middle of June, 1944, Gold had an espionage meeting with Dr. Klaus Fuchs in Woodside, Queens. As a result of this meeting, Gold wrote a report and turned it over to Takovlev about a week or so later. Gold told Takovlev at this meeting that at Gold's next meeting with Fuchs, the latter would give Gold information relating to the application of muclear fission to the production of military weapons.

In the latter part of 1944, Gold met Fuchs in the vicinity of Borough Hall, Brooklyn and received a package from Fuchs which Gold later turned over to Yakovlev.

Gold's next meeting with Fuchs was in the middle of July, 1944, in the vicinity of 96th Street and Central Park West, Hew York City. He conversed with Fuchs for about an hour and a half. About a week or two later, Gold turned over to Yakauleu a report he had written concerning this conversation. Gold told Takovlev that Fuchs had given further information concerning the work of a joint American and British project to produce an atom bomb. Subsequently, Gold had a regularly scheduled series of meetings with Takovlev, who instructed Gold how to continue his contacts with Fuchs. In this connection, Gold stated that it was his duty to obtain information from a number of American espionage sources and give it to Yakovlev. He pointed out he effected his meetings with these sources by using recognition signals such as an object or a piece of paper and a code phrase in the form of a greeting. Gold related that he always used a false name. He also stated that his sources lived in cities other than Philadelphia (Gold's home city). fold also advised that he paid money to these sources which he had in turn received from Yakovlev. (65-58236-853)

Early in January, 1945, Gold met Fuchs in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and received a package of papers which he later turned over to Takovlev in New York City. He told Yakovlev that Fuchs had mentioned that a lens was being worked on in connection with the atom bomb. His next meeting with Fuchs was to be in Santa Fe on the first Esturday of June, 1945.

Barly in February, 1945, Gold met Takovlev en Twenty-third Street between Winth and Tenth Avenue in New Tork City. At this meeting, Takovlev indicated the interest of the Russians in the plans mentioned by Fuchs.

On the last Saturday in May of 1945, Gold met Takevlev inside Folk's Bestaurant on Third Avenue, New York City, to discuss Gold's next meeting with Fuchs in Santa Fe. Yakovlev instructed Gold to take on an additional mission in Albuquerque, New Merico. Gold protested, but Yakevlev said it was vital, pointing out that a woman was supposed to go but was unable to make the trip. Takoviev gave Gold on onionskin paper on which was typed the name Greenglass, on address on High Street, Albuquerque, and the recognition signal, "I am from Julius." Takoviev also gave Gold a piece of cardboard cut from a food package. Yakevlev stated that Greenglass in Albuquerque would have the matching piece. Takevlev also stated that if Greenglass was not in, Greenglass' wife would give Gold the information. Takovlev then gave Gold $500 in an envelope to turn over to Greenglass. Takeviev instructed Gold to follow a devious route to Santa Fe and Albuquerque in order to minimize the danger of a surveillance.

in Banta Fe on Baturday, June 2. 1945. and met Fucks, who gave Gold a package of papers. Gold left Santa Fe on the afternoon of June 2nd by bue and arrived in Albuquerque that evening. He went to the High Street address and found out that Greenglass and his wife were not in. Gold stayed at a rooming house overnight. The next day, a Sunday, he went to the High Street address and knocked on the door. David Greenglass opened the door. Gold said, "Mr. Greenglass." David answered, "Iss." Sold then said, "I come from Julius" and showed Greenglass the piece of cardboard which Yakauleu had given him. Greenglass requested Gold to come into his spartment. Greenglass then took a piece of cardboard from a woman's handbag and compared it with the piece Gold had given him. The pieces matched. Gold introduced himself to Mr. and Mrs. Greenglass as "Dave from Pittsburgh." Greenglass told Gold that the visit was a surprise and that it would take several hours to prepare the A-bomb material for Gold. David then started to tell Gold about possible recruits at Los Alamos but Gold out him short and pointed out to David that it was very hazardous and that David should be circumspect in his behavior. Buth Greenglass mentioned to Gold that she had spoken to Julius just before leaving New Tork to come to Albuquerque. Gold left and then returned later that afternoon. David gave Gold an envelope which he said contained information on the atom bomb. Gold turned over to David the envelope containing the $500. David mentioned to Gold that he expected to get a furlough sometime around Christmas. He gave Gold the phone number of Julius in New York City in the event Gold manted to reach Rosenberg. Gold told David that very likely he might return to Albuquerque in the early Fall of 1945 and might see David at that time. Gold left the apartment accompanied by David and Ruth, who walked with Gold to a point in front of a small building where he left them. Gold returned to New York City by train on June 5, 1945. While on route to New York City by train, he examined the material David had given him. He put David's material into a manila envelope and put the material he had received from Fuchs into another manila envelope. On the envelope containing Fuchs! material, Gold wrote "Doctor." On the envelope containing Greenglass! material Gold wrote "other." Gold observed that David's material consisted of three or four hand-written pages plus a couple of aketohes with letters referred to in the text of the hand-written pages. The sketch appeared to be of some device. On the evening of June 5, 1945, Gold met Takovlev glong Netropolitan Avenue in Brooklyn and turned over to Takevlev both envelopes.

About two weeks later Gold met Takeviev en Main Street, Flushing, New York. Takeviev told Gold that the information he had received from Gold en June 5 had been sent immediately to the Soviet Union and that the information he had received from Greenglass was "extremely excellent and valuable." At this meeting, fold related the details of his conversation with Fuchs and Greenglass. Fuchs had stated that tremendous progress had been made on the atom bomb and that the first explosion had been set for July, 1945.

In early July, 1945, Gold met Takovlev in a sea food restaurant at the Broadway Station of the Astoria Rievated Line. Yakeviev said it was necessary to make arrangements for another Soviet agent to get in touch with Gold. At Takovlev's instructions, Gold took a sheet of paper from his pocket which had the heading, "Arthur H. Thomas Company of Philadelphia." Gold tore off the top portion containing the name. On the reverse side of the sheet Gold wrote in diagonal fashion, "Directions to Paul Street." Yakovlew then tore the paper in an irregular fashien between the letters "P" and "a" of the word Paul. Yakovlev kept one portion and Gold kept the other. Yakovlev said that if Gold received two tickets in the mail without a letter, it would near that on a definite number of days after the date on the ticket Gold was to go to the Broadway stop of the Astoria Line for a neeting which would take place in a restaurant-dar. Sold's Soviet contact would be standing at the bur and approach fold and ask to be directed to Paul Street. They would then match the torn pieces of paper.

In August, 1945, Gold again net Takevlev someplace in Brooklyn and was told by Takevlev that he (Gold) was to take a trip in September, 1945, to see Fucks. Gold suggested to Takovlev that since he was going to see Fuchs, he might as well go to Albuquerque to see David Greenglass also. Takevlev enswered that it was inadvisable because it might endanger Gold to have further contact with Greenglass. In September, 1945, Gold met Fucks in Santa Fe, New Nexico. On his return to New York City on September 22, 1945, Gold went to a prearranged meeting place to see Yakevlev, who failed to appear. About ten days later, Gold met Yakevlev at Wain Street, Flushing, and turned ever to him a package he had received from Fuche. He told Yakovlev that Fuchs had said there was no longer the open and free cooperation between the Americans and the British and that many departments were closed to Fucks. Fucks also stated he would have to return to England. Fuchs related to Gold that he was worried because the British had gotten to Kiel, Germany, ahead of the Russians and might discover a Gestape dessier there en Fuchs which would reveal Fuchs' strong Communist ties and background. Fuchs and Gold also discussed the details of a plan whereby Fuchs could be centacted in England.

In Hovember, 1945, Gold had another meeting with Takovlev at which Gold mentioned that Greenglass would probably be coming home around Christmas for a furlough. Gold suggested that plans should be made to get in touch with Julius in an effort to obtain more information from Greenglass. Takovlev told Gold to mind his own business.

In January, 1946, Gold again met with Yakovlev who told Gold about a man Yakovlev had tried to contact and found ent the man was under continuous surveillance. Takevlev used this story to point out to Gold that it was better to give up the contact than endanger their work.

In February, 1946, Gold went to the Earl Theater in the Bronz, New York, for a neeting with Inkovieu, but Takovlev did not appear. Early in December, 1946, Gold received two tickets to a boxing match in New York City through the mails. The tickets were addressed to Gold's Philadelphia home incorrectly and too late for Gold to keep the appointment. At 5 p.m. on December 26, 1946, a telephone call was received at Abe Brothman Associates, Gold's place of employment. A voice asked for Harry Gold. Then Gold identified himself, the voice asked if he had been all right. Gold answered that he had been fine. The voice then said, "This is John." Gold explained in his testimony that the question as to whether Gold had been all right was a code expression to give Gold a chance to indicate whether or not he had been under surveillance Sold then arranged with John to meet an unidentified man in the Barl Theater that night. The man identified himself by handing Gold the torn piece of the sheet of paper containing the heading. "Arthur N. Thomas Company," which Gold and Yakovlev had previously prepared. Gold was requested by this man to proceed to 42nd Street and Third Avenue, New York City, to meet Takovlev. He met Takovlev, who asked if Gold had had anything further from Tucks. Takovlev apologized for his ten months' absence and explained that he had to lie low. He stated he was glad Gold was working in New York and told Gold he should begin to plan for a mission to Paris, France, in March, 1947, where Gold would meet a physicist. He gave Gold an enionatin paper setting forth information for his proposed meeting in Paris. During the conversation with Takovlev, Gold mentioned that he was working for Abe Brothman. Upon hearing this, Takovlev became very excited and told Gold that Gold had almost ruined eleven years of work by working for Brothman because Brothman had been investigated in 1945. Takovlev dashed out of the place of meeting stating that Gold would not see him in the United States again. (65-58236-892)

It is interesting to note that the Soviet intelligence services, in utilizing Gold to contact Greenglass, made a mistake in security which ultimately led to the uncovering of the Rosenberg spy ring, a network independent of the one Gold was involved in. From FBI knowledge of Soviet intelligence activities, it is known that the Soviets with their stress on security will not usually allow a member of one network to know of the existence of another network so that in the event one network is detected, the other will not be compromised. It will be recalled that Gold's protestation to Takovlev about contacting Greenglass in Albuquerque went unkeeded. The Soviets have undoubtedly found good reason to regret this error in judgment.

Gold was not cross-examined by dej

OTHER TESTIMONY PRESENTED AT THE TRIAL

Dr. George Bernhardt

As noted hereinbefore, David Greenglass testified as to the intention of Julius Resemberg to flee from the United States in the Spring of 1950. He also testified concerning the instructions from Rosenberg for the flight of himself and his family.

pr. Bernhardt testified that he was the Rosenberg's family physician. He stated that in May, 1950, he had a telephone conversation with Julius Rosenberg at which time Julius asked what injections were needed to go to Verico. Dr. Bernhardt told him that he would need injections for typhoid and smallper. Rosenberg advised the Doctor he was making this inquiry for a friend. The Doctor asked Rosenberg for sufficient notice so that he could get the serum and Julius answered he would notify the Doctor if the shots were necessary. (65-58236-Serial 864)

Schneider, a photographer located at 89 Park Row,

New York City, testified that on a Saturday in May or June, 1950, he was visited by the Rosenbergs and their two children. He took photographs of the entire family which Julius said he manted of passport size. Julius told the photographer that he and his family intended to go to France. (65-58236-Serial 931)

Evelun Cox

David and Ruth Greenglass testified that Julius Rosenberg had a console table which had been given to him by the Russians and which was used by him for photography work.

Rosenbergs, testified to seeing a new table in the living room of the Rosenberg apartment sometime in 1945. She described this table as a solid mahogany console table and as the most beautiful piece of furniture in the Rosenberg apartment. She asked Ethel Rosenberg where she had secured this table and Ethel replied that it had been given to her husband by a friend as a gift. A short time after first seeing this table, Mrs. Cox recalled she next observed it in a closet in the Rosenberg apartment. She asked Ethel why the table was in the closet and if she should place it back in the living room. Ethel told her to leave the table in the closet since it was too large for the living room. (65-58236-Serial 931)

Dorothy Prints

As reflected hereinbefore, Ruth Greenglass testified that prior to going to Albuquerque in February of 1945, she was contacted by Julius Rosenberg at her apartment. Dorothy Printz, her sister who was living with her, was requested by Julius to leave the room.

Dorothy Prints (Abel) testified that early in 1945

the resided with Ruth Greenglass in her apartment at 266

Stanton Street, New York City. She stated that she recalled in January er February of 1945, Julius Resemberg came to the apartment and asked her to take a book and leave the room.

Rosenberg stated he wished to speak to Ruth Greenglass privately.

(65-58236-853

Dr. Valter S. Kooki (65-58236

Dr. Koski, a nuclear chemist, testified that from 1944 to 1947, he was associated with the atom bomb project at Los, Algnos. He stated that his own work was related to implosion research. He stated it was his custom to make a design of a high explosive lens and then take it to the machine shop to have a mold of it made-up. His work was classified secret. manufactured mold was later removed to a remote place at Los Alamos to shape explosives. This was done for safety reasons due to the heavy shocks of the high explosive. Tooki stated that he worked on a flat type lens which was involved in the development of the atom bomb. He further stated that he would po to the machine shop and furnish sketches to the supervisor of the shop and determine what was needed. Loski recalled seeing David Greenglass in the machine shop. Keeki identified the sketches prepared by David Greenglass at the trial and entered as exhibits reasonably socurate replicas of the type of sketches he, Roski, submitted to the machine shop. Roski stated that these specimens could have been of value to a foreign power and would reveal to any expert what was going on at Los Alamos and indicate to the expert its relation to the atom bomb.

John A. Derty

(65-58236-Serial 822)

Derry testified he was a U. S. Army officer from 1948 He was assigned to the Manhattan Engineer District at Oak Ridge, Tennessee, in the capacity of a liaison officer. In that capacity he visited Los Alamos from time to time. He had occasion to see the atom bomb which was being constructed at Los Alamos. He was shown a cross section sketch of the atom bomb which was drawn by David Greenglass and introduced as an exhibit at the trial. Also, the court reporter read to Derry, David Greenglass' description of the atom bomb as given in the testimony of Greenglass. Derry testified that from the sketch and description he could perceive what the actual construction of the atom bomb was and that it was the type of atom bomb which was dropped on Nagazaki, Japan, in 1945. He also testified that to his knowledge no nation except Great Britain and Canada had this information about the atom bomb. (65-58236-Serial 874)

Louis Abel

Louis Abel, brother-in-law of David Greenglass, testified that about a week before Greenglass was arrested, he received from Greenglass a package wrapped in brown manila paper. A day or two later he looked into the package and observed it contained money. He hid the package in a hassock in his home for eafekeeping. At about 2:00 A.V. on June 16, 1950,

Abel received a telephone call from Greenglass who requested Abel to go and see C. John Rogge and ask Rogge if he would represent Greenglass in this trouble. Later that morning Abel went to see Rogge concerning this. Rogge told Abel that he had received a call from Greenglass and that Greenglass wanted Abel to turn over the money to Rogge. Later that day Abel took the package from his home and returned to Rogge's office and turned the package over to Herbert J. Fabricant, Rogge's associate. (65-58236-853)

Mrs. Helen Pagano

Mrs. Pagano, secretary employed by 0. John Rogge, testified that on June 16, 1950, Louis Abel brought to Rogge's office a package of money wrapped in brown paper. She stated the package contained $3,900. (65-58236-Serial 931)

Max Elitcher

Elitcher testified that he first met Sobell while both were attending Stuyvesant High School in New York City. He further stated that he and Sobell also attended the College of the City of New York together from 1934 to 1938. Elitcher graduated from the College of the City of New York with a backelor's degree in electrical engineering. Elitcher pointed out that Julius Rosenberg also studied engineering at Sity College during this same period. Elitcher saw Sobell daily at school and saw Bosenberg less frequently. After graduating, Elitcher obtained employment with the Bureau of Ordnance, Navy Department, Washington, D. C., in November, 1938. He continued this employment until October, 1948.

In December, 1938, Elitcher resided at 1316 Delafield Place, Washington, D. C. During December of that year Sobell came to Washington and stayed at a house next to Elitcher's place of residence. In April or May, 1939, Elitcher and Sobell moved in together and took up residence in a private home, 4925 Seventh Street, Worthwest. In May of 1940, they moved into an apartment at 2225 M Street, Worthwest. During the period they lived together Sobell was also employed at the Bureau of Ordnance. In September, 1941, Sobell left his employment to go to the University of Michigan in order to continue his studies.

It it cher further advised that during the period he lived with Sebell they had conversations concerning the Communist Party. At Sobell's request, Elitcher joined the Young Communist League. About three or four months after May of 1939, Elitcher attended a meeting with Sobell at which there was a discussion about forming a branch of the Communist Party. This branch was formed and Elitcher joined the Communist Party at the end of 1939. Neetings of this group were held at the homes of various members and dues were paid to the chairman of the group. Elitcher stated that Sobell was the first chairman of the group. At meetings discussions were conducted of news events based on the "Daily Worker" and literature like "The Communist." The group also discussed Marxist and Leninist theory. Suggestions were made to the members to join the American Peace Mobilization and to assist the American Youth Congress convention. Discussions were also held concerning the Hitler-Stalin Pact, and members were instructed to strive to get support of other people for the Russian position.

Elitcher continued to go to these meeting until September, 1941. In 1942, Communist Party branches were formed which contained groups of employees from particular Government agencies.

Elitcher joined the Navy branch of the Communist Party.

Elitcher testified that around June, 1944, he received a telephone call from Julius Rosenberg, who identified himself as a former classmate of Elitcher's at the College of the City of New York. Elitcher invited Rosenberg to visit him, and Rosenberg came to the Elitcher home the same evening. During the evening Rosenberg asked Mrs. Elitcher, who was present, to leave the room so that he could talk with her husband alone. After Mrs. Elitcher left the room, Rosenberg told Elitcher what the Soviet Union was doing in the war effort and stated that some war information was being denied the Soviet Union. Rosenberg pointed out, however, that some people were providing military information to assist the Soviet Union, and that Sobell was helping in this way. Rosenberg asked Elitcher if he would turn over information of that type to him in order to aid the Soviet Union. Rosenberg asked Elitcher the type of work Elitcher was doing. Elitcher answered that he was working en computers and fire-control systems concerned with equipment to control the firing of missiles from guns. Rosenberg asked Elitcher to supply him with plans, reports, or books regarding new military equipment, and anything Elitcher might think would be of value to the Soviet Union. Rosenberg pointed out that the final choice of the value of the information would not be up to Elitcher but that the information would be turned over to someone, for evaluation. Rosenberg stated that this information would be taken to New York in containers that would protect it and would be processed and returned before it was missed. Rosenberg gave Elitcher his address and also told Elitcher his mane could be found in the Manhattan directory.

Elitcher further testified that later that summer he and Mrs. Elitcher went to New York City. Elitcher phoned Bosenberg and Rosenberg arranged a meeting and dinner with other former classmates. At this dinner there was no discussion regarding matters Rosenberg had previously discussed with Elitcher in Washington.

In September, 1944, Mr. and Mrs. Elitcher went on a one-week vacation in a State park in West Virginia with Morton Sobell and his future wife. During this vacation Elitcher told Sobell about Rosenberg's visit and request for information to be given to the Soviet Union. Elitcher also told Sobell that Rosenberg had said Sobell was helping in this. Sobell became angry and said that Rosenberg should not have mentioned his name.

In the Summer of 1945, Elitcher and his wife were in New York on vacation and stayed at the apartment of Julius Rosenberg. Rosenberg's wife was away at the time. During their stay there Rosenberg mentioned to Elitcher that he, Rosenberg, had been dismissed from his employment for security reasons, and that Rosenberg's membership in the Communist Party seemed to be the basis of the case against him. Rosenberg told Elitcher that he had been worried about this matter because he thought his dismissal might have had some connection with his espionage activity but that he was relieved when he found out it concerned only his Communist activity.

Elitcher also testified that in September, 1945, Rosenberg telephoned him from Union Station, Eashington, D. C., and said he wanted to talk to Elitcher. He came to Elitcher's home and told Elitcher that even though the war was ever, the need to obtain military information for Russia continued.
Rosenberg asked Elitcher as to the type of work he was doing.
Elitcher told Rosenberg he was working on sonar and anti-submarine fire-control devices.

In the early part of 1948, Elitcher visited the General Electric Company in Schenectady, New York, in connection with official business and stayed at the home of Sobell in Schenectady. At the time Sobell was working at General Electric. On this eccasion Sobell and Elitcher discussed their work. Elitcher told Sobell that he was a project engineer on a fire-control system and Sobell inquired as to whether there were any reports written about this system. Elitcher told Sobell that there were some pamphlets written on various phases of this system. Sobell also asked if there was an ordnance pamphlet written on this system. Elitcher advised Sobell that one was being written by General Electric which would be ready about the first of the year. Elitoher stated he gould probably get these reports but' that they were unimportant. At this point in his testimony Elitcher pointed out that these reports were actually classified reports. Elitcher continued his testimony, stating that Sobell advised that he was working on Servo mechanisms relating to military work. Later that year Elitcher again saw Sobell, and Sobell asked about the ordnance pamphlet. Elitcher advised Bobell that it was not ready yet. Bobell suggested that Elitcher see Rosenberg again. At the end of 1946 or in 1947, Elitcher telephoned Rosenberg and said he would like to see him. Elitcher told Rosenberg that Sobell had suggested that he see Rosenberg. At this time Rosenberg advised Ilitaher that there had been some changes in the expienage work; that he felt there was a leak, and that Elitcher should not come to see him until further notice.

Rosenberg mentioned to Elitcher that he believed Elitcher should discontinue his Communist activities.

Elitcher testified that in 1947, Sobell had secured employment at the Reeves Instrument Company, New York City, doing classified work for the armed forces. Elitcher saw Sobell several times at Reeves and on one occasion had lunch with him at the Sugar Bowl, 89th Street and Third Avenue, New York City, in 1947. Sobell stated he was working on a plotting board.

Elitcher told Sobell he was still a project engineer at the Bureau of Ordnance. Sobell asked Elitcher en this occasion if Elitcher knew of any progressive students or graduates and if so, would he put Sobell in touch with them. Elitcher told Sobell he did not know of any. Elitcher then mentioned to Sobell asked if Mrs. Elitcher were having personal difficulties Sobell asked if Mrs. Elitcher knew about the espionage business and when Elitcher said that she might know, Sobell answered that it was not good.

In October, 1948, Elitcher left the Bureau of Ordnance and went to work for Reeves Instrument Company in New York City. Elitcher lived in a house in Flushing, New York, and Sobell lived en a street behind him. They went to work together in a ear pool. During a trip home from work one evening Sobell again made the same request of Elitcher about people Elitcher might know who would be progressive. Sobell pointed out to Elitcher that because of security measures being taken by the Government, it was necessary to find students to provide information whom no one would suspect.

Elitcher further testified that prior to leaving the Bureau of Ordnance, he had discussed with Sobell his desire to secure new employment. This discussion occurred during a visit Elitcher made to New York City in the Summer of 1948. Sobell told Elitcher not to leave the Bureau of Ordnance until Elitcher had talked to Rosenberg. Thereafter, Sobell made an appointment for Elitcher to meet with Rosenberg. They met on the street in New York, and Rosenberg told Elitcher that it was too bad Elitcher had decided to leave because he, Rosenberg, needed some one to work at the Bureau of Ordnance for espionage purposes. Sobell was present at this meeting and also urged Elitcher to stay at the Bureau of Ordnance. Sobell then left the meeting. Rosenber and Elitcher had dinner together at Manny Wolf's Restaurant in New York City where they continued to talk about Elitcher's desire to leave his job. Rosenberg wanted to know where important defense work was being done, and Elitcher mentioned the Bell Laboratories at Whippany, New Jersey. Rosenberg suggested that possibly Elitcher could take courses at college to improve his status. (65-58236-Serial 815)

Elitcher also testified that in July, 1948, he took a trip to New York City by car, and that during this trip he believed he was being followed. He proceeded to Sobell's home and told Sobell of his suspicion. Sobell became angry and told Elitcher he should not have some to his home if he felt he was being followed. Sobell told Elitcher to leave the house and stay somewhere else and then later agreed to allow Elitcher to stay with him. A little later that evening Sobell mentioned to Elitaber that he had some information for Rosenberg which was too valuable to destroy, and he wanted to get it to Rosenberg that night. He requested Elitcher to accompany him. Elitcher observed Sobell take a 35 mm film can with him and place it in the glove compartment of Sobell's car. Sobell and Elitcher then left and drove to the vicinity of the Journal American Building in New York City and parked on Catherine Street. Sobell then took the ean out of the glove compartment and left. When Sobell returned, Elitcher asked him what Rosenberg thought of Elitcher's suspicions that he was being followed. Sobell answered that Rosenberg thought it was nothing to worry about. Sobell also advised Elitcher that Rosenberg said he, Rosenberg, had once phoned Elizabeth Bentley but that she did not know him. (Rosemberg).

Elitcher testified that Sobell possessed a Leica camera, some 35 mm. film, and an enlarger, and that all of the material Sobell worked on in his various places of employment was classified. He stated he last saw Sobell in June, 1950.

On pross-examination Elitcher recalled that during Rosenberg's visit to his house in June, 1944, which was after D-Day, Rosenberg mentioned that he had had a drink with a Russian in celebration of this event. Elitcher testified that Rosenberg contacted him at least nine times from 1944 to 1948 in an attempt to persuade Elitcher to obtain information for him, and that Elitcher always put him off. However, in 1948, Elitcher told Rosenberg that he definitely would not cooperate with him. (65-58236-816, 837, 838)

Elizabeth Terrill Bentley

the Harlen section of the Communist Party in 1935 and remained with that section until 1938. In July, 1938, she secured a job in the Italian Library of Information. During that year she was instructed to go underground and was told to pretend not to know other Communists. While employed at the Italian Library of Information, she came to know Feruccio Marini, a Communist Party official who handled Italian Communist activity in the United States. She knew Marini under the name of F. Brown. In October, 1938, she met Jacob Golos through Marini. Golos was in the Communist underground and operated World Tourist, Inc., a travel agency set up in 1927 by the Communist Party. Golos had been, until the time of his death in Movember, 1943, a member of the three-man control commission of the Communist Party in the United States. According to Bentley, the Communist Party of the United States was part of the Communist International. After Golos died, Bentley had other contacts, the last one being Anatole Gronov, First Secretary of the Soviet Embassy in the United States. The last contact with Gromov was in December, 1945. She stated that the information which Golos had obtained was passed on to the Soviet Embassy. After Golos died, Bentley's duties consisted of callecting information from Communists employed in the U. B. Government and passing it on through Communist superiors to Moscow. She stated that Earl Browder, as well as her own observations, gave her the knowledge that the Communist Party in the United States served the interests of Moscow. She revealed that she transmitted orders to Earl Browder from Moscow, which he had to accept. She pointed out the close relationship between the Communist Party in this country and the Communist International and stated that at Communist Party meetings this close relationship was preached, and any member who did not adhere to the Party line as dictated by the Communist International in Moscow was expelled. She revealed that all of her contacts in her work were sbtained from the Communist Party.

In the Summer of 1945, Bentley reported to the FBI all her activities. She was asked if she would continue her activities under FBI guidance which she did until the Spring of 1947.

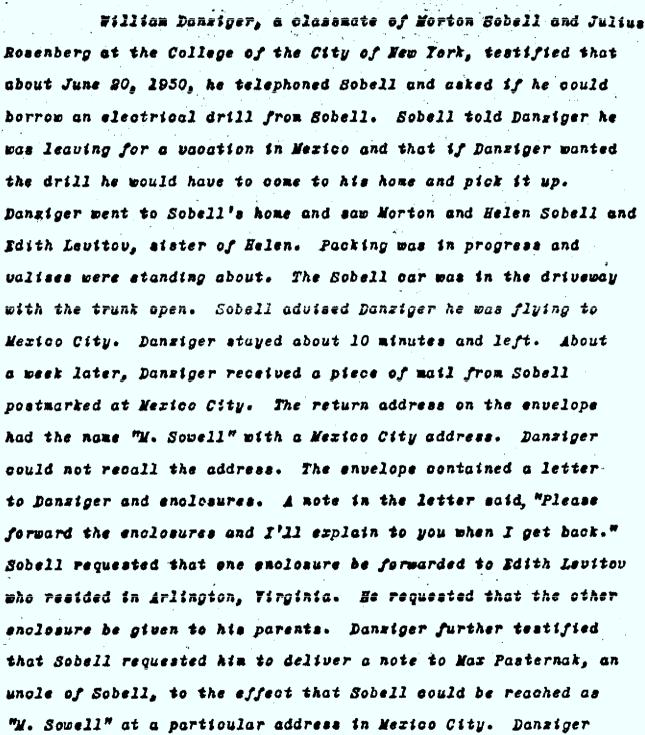

Bentley stated that during her association with Golos, she became aware of the fact that Golos knew an engineer named "Julius." In the Fall of 1942, she accompanied Golos to Enicker-booker Village but remained in his automobile. She saw Golos conferring with "Julius" on the street but at some distance. From conversations with Golos, she learned that Julius lived in Enickerbooker Village. She also stated that she had phone conversations with "Julius" from the Fall of 1942 to November, 1945 On the objection of defense counsel she was not allowed to describe "Julius" or testify that Golos had obtained information from "Julius." (65-58236-882)

Bentley, in interviews with FBI Agents, had described Julius as being 5' 10" or 11" tall, slin, and wearing glasses. She had also advised that Julius was the leader of a Communist cell of engineers which was turned over to Golos for Soviet espionage purposes. Julius was to be the contact between Golos and the group. Golos believed this cell of engineers was capable of development.

Investigation by the FBI disclosed that from 1948 on Julius Rosenberg resided at 10 Monroe Street in a development known as Inickerbooker Fillage. Julius Rosenberg was 5' 10" tall, slim, and were glasses. Bentley was unable to make a positive identification of Julius.

William Danziger

etated he delivered the note containing Sobell's pseudonym and address to Pasternak. Danziger answered Sobell's letter by writing to "M. Sowell" at the Mexico City address. He also testified that he placed the letter addressed to Edith Levitov in an envelope and mailed it to her. Two weeks later Danziger received another piece of mail from Sobell postmarked in Mexico City. The return address on the envelope had the name of "M. or Morty Levitov" with a Mexico City address which Danziger believed to be Cordova or Cordoba. The envelope contained a letter for Danziger, an enclosure for Edith Levitov and a note requesting Danziger to forward the enclosure to Edith Levitov. Danziger mailed the enclosure to Edith Levitov. He stated that he did not hear from Sobell thereafter. (65-58236-Serial 864)

Manuel de los Rios

Rios, residing at 159 Cordova, Apartment 5, Mexico City, testified that in July, 1950, he met Sobell and his family who had moved into the adjoining apartment. Sobell asked Rios for advice as to how he could leave Mexico. He told Rios he was dodging military service in the United States Army. On one occasion Sobell asked Rios for directions to go to the Port of Vera Cruz. Sobell thereafter left Mexico City around July 20 or July 22, 1950, and was gone for 15 days. Rios received a letter about 8 days after Sobell's departure postmarked Vera Cruz. Re opened the envelope and observed that the letter was for Mrs. Sobell. He delivered the letter to Mrs. Sobell. About 6 or 7 days later, Rios received a second letter from Sobell postmarked Tampico, Mexico, which Rios also delivered to Mrs. Sobel Rios did not see Sobell after his return to Mexico City.

Minerva Bravo Espinosa

This witness, an employee of Optica Palacios, an optical concern in Vera Cruz, identified Sobell as an individual who used the name M. Sand in purchasing eye glasses from her.

Jose Brocado Yendrell

This witness, an employee at Gran Hotel Diligencias, 'Vera Cruz, identified a registration card of the hotel dated July 30, 1950, containing the name Morris Sand. Sobell's attorney conceded that the signature on this card was in the handwriting of Sobell. (65-58236-Serial 873)

Dora Bautista

This witness, an employee of the Hotel Tampico in Tampico, Mexico, identified Sobell as an individual who registered at the hotel on July 30, 1950, under the name of Marvin Salt.

Glenn Dennie

Mr. Dennie, travel superintendent of the CMA Mexican Airlines, produced a passenger manifest reflecting the name N. Sand on a plane flight from Vera Cruz to Tampico on July 30, 1950, and another passenger manifest reflecting the name Morton Solt on another plane flight from Tampico to Mexico City on August 2, 1950. Sobell's attorney conceded that N. Sand, Marvin Salt and Morton Solt were in fact Morton Sobell. (65-58236-Serial 87 CASE PRESENTED BY DEFENDANTS

Julius and Ethel Rosenberg testified and denied all espionage allegations against them. They admitted having a console table, but denied it was a gift from the Russians as claimed by David Greenglass and his wife. They stated that they bought this table at Macy's Department Store in New York City in 1944 or 1945. On cross-examination, they were asked questions as to their Communist affiliations. They refused to answer on the grounds of self-incrimination.

Thomas V. Kelly of Macy's Department Store was called as a defense witness and testified that Macy's sales records for the year 1944 and 1945 had been destroyed and that there was no record succlable of transactions for those years, 929,930,931)

Morton Sobell did not take the stand.

CONCLUSION OF TRIAL

On March 28, 1951, counsel for both sides summed up their case to the jury. On this date Judge Kaufman charged the jury

On March 29, 1951, the jury rendered a verdict of guilty against the three defendants, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg and Morton Sobell.

After the rendition of the verdict, Judge Kaufman and Mr. Saypel thanked the Jury for their patience and ears in sitting in this case.

Ar. Bloch also addressed the Court and Jury. He stated in part as follows: "I want to extend my appreciation to the Court for its courtesies, and again I repeat I want to extend my appreciation for the courtesies extended to me by Mr. Saypol and the members of his staff, as well as the members of the FBI, and I would like to say to the jury that a lawyer does not always win a case; all that a lawyer expects is a jury to decide a case on the evidence with mature deliberation.

"I feel eatisfied by reason of the length of time that you took for your deliberations, as well as the questions asked during the course of your deliberations that you examined very carefully the swidence and came to a certain conclusion."

(65-58236-955-Enc.)

On April 5, 1951, Judge Kaufman impeased the following sentences:

Julius Rosenberg - death, such sentence to be carried out during the week of May 21, 1951.

Ethel Rosenberg - death, such sentence to be carried out during the week of May 2, 1951.

Morton Sobell - imprisonment for a term of 30 years.

In imposing the death sentence on the Rosenbergs,

Judge Kaufman made the following comments: "Your crime is worse than murder. Plain deliberate, contemplated murder is dwarfed in magnitude by comparison with the crime you have committed - - - - but in your case, I believe your conduct in putting in the hands of the Russians the A-bomb years before our best scientists predicted Russia would perfect the bomb has already caused the Communist aggression in Korea with the resultant casualties exceeding 50,000 - and who knows but that millions more of innocent people may pay the price of your treason."

On April 6, 1951, Judge Kaufman imposed a sentence of 15 years on David Greenglass. In sentencing Greenglass, Judge Kaufman stated that he did not condone or minimize the acts of 'Greenglass. He stated he must recognize the help given by Greenglass in bringing to justice, "the arch criminals in this nefarious scheme." He pointed out that it took "courage" for Greenglass to testify as he did and that Greenglass had helped to "strike a death blow to the trafficking of our military secrets by foreign agents." He also stated to Greenglass, "You, at least, have not added to your sins by committing the additional crime of perjury."

OTHER INVESTIGATIONS CONNECTING VARIOUS PERSONS WITH JULIUS ROSENBERG AND HIS ESPIONAGE ACTIVITIES

William Perl

David Greenglass advised that in September er October of 1948, Rosenberg told him that he (Rosenberg) had received from "one of the boys" the mathematics involved in the construction of an atomic energy airplane motor.

Bavid Greenglass also advised he learned from Rosenberg that Rosenberg had two apartments which were used for photographing material which was turned over to the Soviets.
Greenglass also learned from Rosenberg that Joel Barr worked with Rosenberg in Soviet espionage activities. An apartment at 65 Morton Street, New York City, was located which had been rented by Alfred Sarant and in which Sarant, Joel Barr and William Perl all lived at various times. The superintendent of this apartment, observed photographic-type equipment in this apartment.

Perl was born October 1, 1918, in New York City, under the name of William Mutterperl. He changed his name to Perl by court order in 1945. His father was a native of Russia and his mother, a native of Poland.

Perl was a classmate at the College of the City of New York of Rosenberg and Morton Sobell. Perl began employment with the National Advisory Committee for Aerenautics (NACA) in 1939 and was assigned to Langley Field, Virginia, from 1939 to 1944, at which time he was transferred to Cleveland. He remained employed by NACA at Cleveland until September, 1950, with the exception of a period between 1946 and 1948, when he studied at the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, California, and at Columbia University, New York City. During his employment with NACA, he had access to highly classified information.

During the Bosenberg investigation, Perl was interviewed by Bureau Agents on July 27, 1950, ten days after Rosenberg was arrested. Perl admitted that on July 23, 1950, he had been contacted at his apartment in Cleveland by a woman, whom he had previously known as a girl friend of Joel Barr. She wrote him a note in which she stated that she had been instructed by a stranger to speak to an aeronautics engineer in Cleveland and give him money and instructions on how to leave the country for Mexico. She wrote that she had money for him. Perl claims, following her departure, he flushed the note down the lavatory box

It is of interest to note that prior to the arrest on June 16, 1950, of David Greenglass, Greenglass had been given instructions by Rosenberg to leave the country via Mexico; Morton Sobell actually ment to Mexico in June, 1950; Alfred Sarant disappeared from the U.S. on August 4, 1950, and is known to have crossed the border into Mexico en August 9, 1950.

Perl was called before a Federal Grand Jury on September 11, 1950, and questioned concerning his association with Rosenberg, Sobell and others. As a result he was indicted on March 13, 1951, in the Southern District of New York on four counts of perjury arising out of certain denials he made concerniation of acquaintance with these individuals. On May 19, 1953, the perjury trial of Perl commenced before United States District Judge Sylvester Ryan in the Southern District of New York and a jury. On May 22, 1953, the jury returned a verdict of guilty on two counts and not guilty on two counts. On June 5, 1953, Perl was sentenced to five years on each count, to run concurrently.

[65-59312]

As noted hereinbefore, David Greenglass advised that after the arrest of Harry Gold on May 23, 1950, Rosenberg attempted to persuade Greenglass and his wife to flee from the U.S. via Mexico. According to Greenglass, Rosenberg told him that more important persons than Greenglass had left the country and mentioned that Joel Barr left the U.S. before Fuchs was arrested and was working for the Russians in Europe. Greenglass also advised that Rosenberg told him that Barr had gons to Europe to study music and was using his music studies as a cover for his espionage activities.

Joel Barr was born January 1, 1916, in Brooklyn,

Hew Tork, and was a classmate of Rosenberg and Sobell at the College of the City of New Tork. He graduated from the College of the City of New Tork in 1938, with a backely's degree in electrical engineering. He was employed from July 1, 1940, to February 23, 1942, as a junior electrical engineer, Fort Monmouth,

Hew Jersey, in the Signal Corps Laboratories and was dismissed after investigation disclosed that he had signed a Communist petition in 1939. He applied for a U.S. passport on December 1, 1947, giving as a reason for travelling abroad his desire to

on January 21, 1948, for Paris, France. He is known to have studied for short periods of time at technical schools in Sweden and Holland and estensibly supported himself by playing the piano. He disappeared from his residence in Paris on June 16, 1950, the date Greenglass was arrested, and his present location is not known.

Max Elitcher advised that Barr was an acquaintance.
Elitcher stated that he was present at social gatherings at i 65 Norten Street, New York City, attended by Rosenberg, Barr, Alfred Sarant, William Perl and Norton Sobell.

Alfred Sarant advised in an interview with Bureau Agents in July, 1950, that he associated closely with Joel Barr beginning in 1941. Sarant stated that Barr frequently visited him at his apartment at 65 Morton Street; that Barr had a key to the apartment and that in 1946 when Sarant moved to Ithaca, New York, he let Barr take over this apartment. Sarant stated Barr subsequently turned the apartment over to William Perl. Sarant also stated that he believed Barr was a member of the Communist Party.

Alfred Sarant

David Greenglass advised that Julius Rosenberg told him that he had two apartments in New York City, which were used for photographic activities of the Rosenberg espionage network, one of which was located in Greenwick Village. Investigation has reflected that a Greenwich Village apartment at 65 Horton Street, New York City, was frequented by Rosenberg, Barr and Perl. This apartment was leased by Alfred Sarant from October, 1943, to January 31, 1950.

Sarant vacated this apartment in the Fall of 1946, when he moved to Ithaca, New York, but he thereafter allowed various of his frien to use the apartment including Joel Barr and William Perl.

The superintendent of the premises at 65 Morton Street advised that in 1944, when he had occasion to enter this apartment in connection with his custodial duties, he observed that the apartment contained very little furniture. He said that there were three iron single cots in the apartment, work benches in the living room, a considerable quantity of electrical tools and several black tool baxes in the closet. The sen of the super-intendent advised that in the Vinter of 1949-50, when he entered the spartment he observed a reflector-type flood bulb suspended from a wall bracket over the kitchen table which was in the living room and that there was very little furniture in the apartment.

It should be noted that Sarant left New York City on August 4, 1950, with a woman. It is known that Sarant and this woman entered Mexico shortly thereafter. The last definite information concerning his whereabouts was on August 13, 1950, when he and this woman were known to have left Guadalajara, Mexico, for Mexico City. The present whereabouts of these individuals is unknown.

During the Resemberg investigation, Sarant was interviewed on several eccasions. In July, 1950, he admitted acquaintanceship with both Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, stating he first net then senetime between 1942 and 1945. Sarant also admitted membership in the Communist Party in 1943-1944, admitted being an acquaintance of William Perl and admitted close association with Joel Barr since 1941. He stated he probably met Rosenberg through Barr.

Barant stated he had a considerable interest and garant stated he had a considerable interest and proficiency in photography and admitted having film development equipment and flood lamps in his spartment at 65 Norton Street. He also stated that Joel Barr had a Leica camera when Barr was residing with him in this apartment.

Sarant further admitted that en one occasion Julius Resenberg "propositioned him" to sound him out politically, but Sarant claimed, "I didn"t bite." He refused to furnish any details concerning this "proposition."

Sarant was born September 26, 1918, in New York City, and was graduated in electrical engineering from Cooper Union in June, 1941. He was discharged from the position of junior radio engineer with the Signal Corps Laboratories, Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, on September 3, 1942, and was characterized by his superiors as a labor agitator. He was thereafter employed as an engineer of the Western Electric Company and Bell Telephone Laboratories in New York City, resigning from the latter concern of September 11, 1946. From October, 1946, to the date of his disappearance, he resided in Ithaca, New York, where he was self-employed as a building and painting contractor.

COMPUNIST PARTY FRONT ACTIVITIES AND PROPAGANDA ON BEHALF OF THE ROSLNBERGS

y PART II

*3 Convicted in 'Espionage' Frial

"Two men and a woman were convicted here yesterday by a Federal Court jury on a charge of espionage for the Soviet Union during the war.

*Those convicted were Julius Rosenberg, electrical engineer; his wife, Ethel, mother of 2 children, and Morton Sobell, electronics expert.

"The main Government witness was David Greenglass, brother of Mrs. Rosenberg."

Fo further notice appeared in the "Daily Forker" concerning the Rosenberg case until April 6, 1951, when it was ennounced under a feature headline as follows: "Rosenbergs Sentenced to Death, Made Scapegoats for Iorean Var." The article, noting that the Rosenbergs were parents of 2 small children, appeared to be aimed chiefly at condemning the severity of sentence rather than the werdict itself. The word "frame-up," later to become virtually synonymous with the Rosenberg trial in Communist prepaganda, was not used once. In the same issue of the "Daily Forker," a front-page editorial charging that American "panic mongers" were deliberately trying to create an atmosphere of war, made several oblique references to the Rosenberg case without, however, directly questioning the verdict.

HOW A COMMUNIST FRONT IS BORE

The "Mational Guardian" Series:

ganda campaign on behalf of the Rosenbergs began in earnest.

Even at this late date, the Communist Party did not immediately commit itself to the task of vindicating the Rosenbergs and exposing the "hideous plot" against them. Instead, the campaign was initiated in the form of a series of articles in the "Bational Guardian." This publication was described in 1949 by the California Committee on Un-American Activities as notoriously Stalinist in its staff writers, management and content.

This series, written by William A. Reuben, "National Quardian" reporter, began on August 15, 1951, with an article entitled, "Is This the Dreyfus Case of Cold War America?" The opening article set the keynote for the entire series of articles as well as for the intensive Communist propaganda campaign which was soon to follow - a campaign based mainly upon insinuation, artificially created doubts, confusion and sheer deception.

tions attempting to link the Resemberg case with such previous cases as the Dreyfus Case, the Sacce-Vanzetti Case, and with ether irrelevant issues. The article neatly illustrated a key technique to be employed by the Communists in their future agitation dealing with the Rosenberg Case, i.e., to create doubt by any means possible and then to effer such synthetic doubts as proof of the Resembergs' "complete innocence." This was done by suggesting that there were strong grounds indicating that the Rosenbergs were vietims of a "political frame-up."

Underlying this emokescreen of nameless "suspicions" and "doubts," the "National Guardian" article unwittingly rewealed a major purpose of the forthcoming propaganda barrage; namely, a strenuous effort to deflect attention from the Communist Party's own indirect but deep involvement in espionage.

Following this opening announcement the "Bational Guardian" ran a series of Tarticles by Reuben in successive weekly installments from August 22 to October 3, 1951. In summary, Reuben's "expose" condemned the Rosenberg trial and conviction as one gigantic frame-up based upon FBI collusion with a "self-confessed spy" and "stool pigeon" (David Greenglass, in which the Rosenbergs were "innocent victims" of war-time hysteria which was being consciously cultivated by the U.S. Government.

In order to justify this fantastic thesis, Reuben resord to a variety of distortions, emotional appeals and half-truth which were later taken over and improved upon by the Communist press.

CLAIN OF ANTI-SENITISM

In view of the importance which the Communist Party later tried to attach to the anti-Semitic aspects of the case, it is worth noting that the "National Guardian's" initial series of articles made only one single suggestion that anti-Semitism was involved in the trial. Even this lone reference was more of an innuendo than a concrete charge. Midway through Reuben's "expose" he remarked in passing that it was "singular" that in a city of more than 30 per cent Jewish in population (New York Citi not a single Jewish furor had been chosen.

Formation of National Committee to Secure Justice in the Rosenberg Case (NCSJRC)

In its issue of October 10, 1951, one week after the completion of the Reuben series, the "National Guardian" announce that a "National Committee to Secure Justice for the Rosenbergs" was being formed with William Reuben as its provisional chairman. The aims of this group were said to be nation-wide publicity of the facts of the case as well as the raising of funds for legal appeals on behalf of the Rosenbergs.

On January 8, 1952, a press release was issued announci the formation of a "National Committee to Secure Justice in the Rosenberg Case" with offices at 246 Fifth Avenue, New York City, and with Joseph Brainin as chairman. According to this announcement, a group of "125 American men and women from all over the United States, who represent many occupations and professions.* had joined with Brainin in organizing this Committee: however, only 18 persons were actually identified in the press release. This release called attention to the "many unexplained contradictions" in the Covernment's pase and for the first time serious injected the irrelevant issue of anti-Semitism into the discussion The statement declared, "It is significant that none of the juro: was Jewish, although one-third of New York's population, where the trial took place, is of Jewish background. " Continuing, the press release alleged that the severe sentence against the Rosenbergs had "raised fears in the leading Jewish press...that the Rosenbergs were 'victims of religious bigotry.'"

Shortly thereafter, an article appeared in the January, 1952, issue of "Jewish Life," (which has been cited as a part of the Communist press by the California Committee on Un-American Activities) giving the full treatment to the alleged anti-Semitic

The absence of any Jewish jurors was described as "no accident" and a "highly suspicious aspect of the Government's approach" to the case. The fact that both the trial judge (Judge Kaufman) and the United States Attorney who tried the case (Irving Saypol) were Jewish, for from discouraging Harap, was offered as further evidence of anti-Semitiem. With incredible logic, Harap argued that the selection of a Jewish judge was comparable to the Wazi's use of the natorious Judenrat (Jewish committees appointed for the purpose of punishing other Jews). Harap said the Government chose a Jewish judge and prosecutor expressly "to preclude any charge of anti-Semitism in meting out the unprecedented death sentence."

It is noteworthy that in playing up the charge of anti-Semitism because of the absence of Jewish jurors, no mention was made of the fact that a Negro, Emanuel Clarence Dean, was a member of this jury. It is probable that if this jury did not have a member of the Negro race on it, a similar charge of discrimination against the Negro would have also been made in the case.

THE COMMIST PARTY JOINS THE CAMPAIGN

On February 28, 1952, the Communist Party, which had remained largely in the background during all of this preliminary propaganda activity, finally joined in the chorus through its of icial organ, the "Daily Worker." The Communist Party mouthpiece declared, "The Rosenberg case is a ghastly political frame-u It was arranged to provide blood victims to the witch-hunters, to open the door to new violence, anti-Semitism, and court lynchings of peace advocates and Marxiets as 'spies."

Two weeks later the Communist-front Civil Rights

Congress issued a press release valling for nation-wide support a the Rosenbergs. The anti-Semitic aspects of this case were now ready for full-scale exploitation as evidenced in a statement issued by Villiam L. Patterson, Executive Secretary of the Civil Rights Congress. Patterson said "...the Rosenberg frame-up is a new high in the growing anti-Semitism. The lynching of these two innocent American Jews, unless stopped by the American people, will serve as a signal for a wave of Eitler-like genocidal attacks against the Jewish people throughout the United States... The murder of the Rosenbergs will inevitably lead to new and fiercer attacks on Jewish synagogues such as we have seen in Florida, to more Hitler youth movements as have grown in Philadelphia."

When the campaign to "Save the Rosenbergs" went into high gear in approximately January, 1952, Communist activity in the case became nothing short of feverish. He trick of demagogy was overlooked. No possible promotion angle was neglected. Mass rallies, parades, picketing of public offices, prayer meetings, vigils and delegations to Congressmen and other public officials were supplemented by an intensive campaign to send thousands of letters and telegrams to the President urging elemency, the dissemination of hundreds of thousands of pamphlets, circular letters, financial appeals as well as the collection of thousands of signatures on elemency petitions. The campaign extended into some 40 foreign countries. Supporters of the Rosenbergs in France went so far as to declare a "National Rosenberg Day" and on June 16, 1953, it was reported that the Government of Poland had offered "political asylum" to the Rosenbergs in the event they were freed.

CLEMENCY PETITIONS AND APPEALS

In addition to such dramatic promotions, the NCSJRC had solicited thousands of signatures for clemency petitions and appeals of one kind or another. The total number of persons signing such petitions is not known; however, it has reportedly been as high as 48,000 per week at the height of the campaign.

Hany of these appeals have undoubtedly been made in good faith; however, the NCSJRC and the Communist press have reported them with little regard for honesty.

It is quite evident that the clemency drive was from the beginning a highly artificial affair which was carefully prometed rather than a spontaneous public reaction as the Communist press sought to show. This was indicated from the mere fact that the "Daily Worker" was able to print the names and addresses of hundreds of clergymen and intellectuals who had written to the President asking for clemency. Unless the MCSJRC or the Communist Party had solicited such letters themselves, the Party press would have no way of knowing who had written to the White House except in a few isolated instances. At a number of rallies sponsored by the MCSJRC, individuals in attendance were handed telegrams, post cards or letters which were already completely filled out and addressed to the President and which lacked only a signature, In addition it has also been reported that representatives of the MCSJRC conducted intensive house-to-house canvasses, particularly in the Jewish and Megro neighborhoods, in an effort to obtain signatures for clemency petitions.

Apart from such synthetic methods of recruiting elemency advocated, the NCSJRC was not above resorting to plain misrepresentation. According to an article appearing in the Seattle "Post Intelligencer" on January 7, 1953, a number of Seattle elergyman had been "recruited" in the following manner. The ministers were asked over the telephone whether or not they favored capital punishment. If they replied in the negative, as many of them did, they were then asked if they were not therefore opposed to the electrocution of the Rosenbergs. Irrespective of their answers, their names were entered on the list of those opposing the Rosenbergs' death sentence. Another instance of deceptive reporting took place in connection with a statement made by Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland, Ohio. During the latter part of 1952, the Communist press headlined the fact that Rabbi Silver had joined the clemency drive. An advertisement placed in the "Fashington Evening Star" on January 5, 1953, by the "Emergency Committee of the Arts and Professions to Secure Clemency for the Rosenbergs," one of many satellities of the MCSJRC, quoted Rabbi Silver as follows: "...I believe that the death sentence which has been imposed is unprecedented in the legal annals of our country...I believe that our country is strong and great-hearted enough to be merciful..."

The full text of Rabbi Silver's solicited statement, which incidentally was in the form of a reply to a letter from Emanuel H. Bloch, the Rosenbergs' defense attorney, received no publicity. It included such additional remarks as the followings. "I have accepted the verdict of the courts in their conviction of the Rosenbergs... The crime of which they have been found guilty is a heinous one and I found no sympathy in my heart for men and women who betray their country. I was especially resentful of the effort that was made to drag in the issue of antiSemitism in this most unfortunate affair..."

Probably the most flagrant instance of distortion, however, occurred in connection with a statement issued by Pope Pius XII in December, 1952. The Communist press made it appear that the Pope had directly and personally interceded and asked for clemency on behalf of the Rosenbergs. Moreover, when it developed that the Pope's statement had not been immediately made public, the Rosenberg supporters hurled heated charges of "suppression," "gagging," etc., by the Department of Justice, which had received the Pope's communication.

The actual facts were far different. Pope Pius III made no personal appeal for elemency whatsoever, but merely notified the Department of Justice in routine fashion through Catholic efficials in Washington, D. C., of the fact that he had received a number of appeals asking him to request elemency for the Rosenbergs. According to a statement later issued by the Apostolic Delegation in Washington, the Pope had made no attempt "to judge the merits of the case" but had merely informed the Department of Justice of the fact that the Vatican had received appeals on behalf of the Rosenbergs. This information was confirmed by former Attorney General McGranery in an interview reported by the "New York Times" on February 15, 1953.

Despite these statements, the Communists and NCSJRC propaganda continued to use the Pope's name and to suggest that the Tatican had intervened in support of the clemency drive.

Pro-Rosenberg propagandists, fully awars of the natural aversion which many people feel toward capital punishment, were not above playing upon this sentiment with morbid references to the Rosenbergs' "charred bodies," "seared flesh," etc., in the event the death sentence should be carried out. The "Daily Work characterized the sentence as "savage," "vindictive," "sadistic, etc. It spoke of the "brutal accents" of President Eisenhower's denial of clemency and described Department of Justice briefs in support of the sentence as "cold-blooded" documents. Altogether the impression was conveyed that the Government had been motivate.
