This institute, the successor to the ~~Linsey Research~~ Institute, operates from the campus of the Indiana University at Bloomington, Indiana, although it is not financed by the university. Prof. PAUL GEBHARD of Indiana University is director of this institute, and WARDELL B. POTERY of Indiana University is director of field service for the institute. 100

On 3/23/57, SA Anderson, Indiana PD that they were holding twenty-five reels of 8mm and fifteen reels of 16mm obscene films; playing cards, books and pamphlets, all also of obscene nature. The Anderson PD had taken the above material from two tool boxes which a cab driver had been given $10 to obtain from Pennsylvania Railroad Station lockers, that city, after which he was to express them as designated to the Research Institute at Indiana University. Because of the unusual circumstances, the cab driver reported this incident to the Anderson PD, which department in turn, with the assistance of the Special Agent of the Railway Express Company, confiscated the film, after which they sent the empty boxes on to Bloomington, Indiana.

SA [redacted] at Bloomington, Indiana, was advised by PAUL GEBHARD, the director of the institute, that shipment was not expected by him, nor had arrangements been made by the institute for the shipment of the material to them. He stated that all shipments of obscene material to the institute were arranged by him "in agreement with State and Federal laws," and further that on occasions when obscene matter was purchased from individuals, that latter would deliver the matter personally to the institute at Bloomington.

SA was advised by WARDELL B. POMEROY disclaimed any knowledge of the identity of the sender of these boxes and claimed that the institute had made no arrangement for the receipt of the obscene matter prior to its being seized by the Anderson PD.

SA determined at Anderson, that POMEROY had obtained an order from the Madison County Circuit Court directing the PD to release the obscene matter to the institute upon the completion of the matter by the local PD. It was indicated that this order would be complied with and material released to the institute.

Referred to Customs

In view of the information furnished by Mr. GEBHARD and Mr. POMEROY, indicating that they have received obscene material in the past; the fact that the Anderson PD is going to release obscene material to the institute plus the fact that obscene material addressed to the institute received from foreign countries is being held by Customs in New York, it is obvious that the institution is receiving obscene material.

The Bureau is requested to authorize interview with the officials of the institute at Indiana University. It is the intention of the IP Office if such an interview is authorized, to attempt to secure the cooperation of these officials in furnishing information concerning sources of obscene material. It is also planned that they will be questioned concerning their knowledge of the source and suppliers of obscene material in the United States and to determine if violations of the ITOM statutes are occurring.

4—THE WASHINGTON DAILY NEWS, WEDNESDAY, JULY 17, 1957
 Kinsey Group Struggles to Save Photos and Books

'Dirty Picture' Fight Brews

NEW YORK, July 17 (UP)—The Federal Government sought permission last night to destroy a collection of "obscene and immoral" photographs, books and statuettes consigned to the Sex Research Institute once headed by the late Dr. Alfred Kinsey.

The move was opposed in Federal Court by Mrs. Harriett F. Pilpel, attorney for the Institute of Sex Research, Inc., at Indiana University.

Mrs. Pilpel said the 31 photographs, an album of Chinese paintings and a number of statuettes and books were "essential to the job the institute is doing."

She explained the collection had been ordered from Europe and the orient by Dr. Kinsey, author of the highly publicized studies on sexual behavior in the human male and female. Dr. Kinsey, former president of the institute, died last August.

The Government seized the collection in 1951 and 1952. The pending case was brought up in an unusual night session before Federal Judge Edmund L. Palmieri.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Benjamin T. Richards Jr. argued:

"Your honor, by even a casual inspection (you) would find the items involved here obscene."

Judge Palmieri reserved decision.

An item appeared in the "Washington Star" on 1/3/58, indicating that a decision by Federal Judge Edmund Palmieri of New York altered the obscenity rule.

The news item relates that the Government has broadened its legal standard for judging obscenity of imported books, photos, and other materials. The ruling laid down by the Judge is the rule that an object is not legally obscene if the person importing it had a genuine scientific purpose. The article also indicated that the Solicitor General said the Government would not appeal from this ruling and, in effect, is tantamount to broadening of the Government's original conception of obscenity which had not considered the status and purposes of recipients of pornography.

The case before Judge Palmieri involved admittedly pornographic books, pictures, and other objects imported from China by the above institute and held in New York by the U. S. Customs.

The New York Office is requested to obtain, if possible, a copy of the opinion rendered by Judge Palmieri, Southern District of New York, and furnish a copy to the Bureau and Indianapolis for information purposes. If no copy is readily available, New York should so advise.

Decision Alters Obscenity Rule

The Government has broadened its legal standard for judging obscenity of imported books, photos and other materials.

This action followed a recent opinion by Federal Judge Edmund Palmieri in New York. The judge held that whether material is likely to arouse "prurient interest" depends on who is examining it.

The case before him involved admittedly pornographic books, pictures and other objects imported from China by the Indiana University Institute for Sex Research, Inc., founded by the late Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey.

The Government had instituted suit to have the material destroyed on the grounds that it was obscene.

In ruling against the Government, Judge Palmieri laid down the rule that an object is not legally obscene if the person importing it had a genuine scientific purpose.

Yesterday, Solicitor General J. Lee Rankin said the Government would not appeal from this ruling. This, in effect, is tantamount to broadening of the Government's original conception of obscenity which had not considered the status and purposes of recipients of

Re Indianapolis letter to Bureau dated 6/11/57 and Bureau letter to Indianapolis dated 6/21/57.

On 7/11/57 SA interviewed Dr. PAUL GEBHARD, Director of the Institute, and Professor WARDELL B. POMROY, Field Director for this Institute at Indiana University. At that time these men advised that they have a very limited supply of obscene material and indicated they are interested in obtaining only samples of such material and that it is used in current research matters concerning sexual study. They estimated that they had approximately 180 obscene films, mostly of the 16 m.m. size; approximately eight decks of cards containing obscene photographs; several books of an obscene nature; various latex goods; and miscellaneous devices similar to the "man in the barrel" which they classified as humorous devices.

They estimated that the main source of their material is book dealers who have purchased obscene material from private individuals; from private individuals themselves; from widows of men who have had private obscene material collections; and other similar sources. They stated that to their knowledge they had been contacted by only two dealers in fourteen years and believed that the last these dealers contacted them was over five years ago.

Dr. GEBHARD stated that he made it a practice not to obtain names of individuals furnishing them material since he usually assured these persons that their names would not be revealed as a source furnishing obscene material to the institute.

It appeared obvious talking to these men that they have a very limited knowledge in the field of obscene matter and it likewise appears that the alleged material which they have in their possession has been greatly exaggerated.

Dr. GEBHARD displayed the eight decks of cards in their possession which are very similar to the decks of cards previously submitted by the Indianapolis Office although they were apparently not identical.

Dr. GEBHARD stated that he wished to cooperate with the Bureau; however, he pointed out that their receipt of any such material is dependent upon their not revealing the sources of this material, and for this latter reason he did not desire to disclose the source of their material.

These men were requested to furnish the title of the film in their possession and Dr. GEBHARD stated that he would discuss this matter with the directors of this institute. He stated he personally saw no reason why this could not be furnished to the Indianapolis Office.

Recontacts will be made with the institute in an attempt to obtain this list of film titles and if it is obtained, this list will be furnished to the Bureau.

In view of the information obtained in the interviews with GEBHARD and POMROY, no further investigation is being conducted concerning this institute. This case is being closed in the Indianapolis Office.

According to [redacted] the Public Health Service has made a grant of $152,000 toward this research project. She felt that this grant, along with the probable approval of a prospectus of this project by the Public Health Service, created a situation wherein the "sex offenders" project was similar to any project directed by a Federal agency. In addition, [redacted] claims that the captioned Institute was an agency of the State of Indiana and a part of an educational institution, Indiana University, were used by her as further bases for requesting "erotica" from the confidential files of this Bureau for this research project. advised that her law firm was representing the captioned Institute and attempting to assist them in resolving some of their research problems. According to the captioned Institute is now interested in conducting research in pornographic material developed by the police in New York City. Allegedly, this research product would be used for study to combat this evil. indicated that the U. S. The crux of the matter as presented by was (1) there is a New York State statute which prohibits New York City Police from divulging pornographic material to anyone other than the New York State Police, New York or Federal legislative arms or the FBI; and (2) the captioned Institute might conceivably obtain this information from the FBI after the FBI had obtained it by request from New York City Police.

Further, she stated that she wished this contact to remain in confidence. was informed that, of course, no advice could be given in this matter. However, she undoubtedly knew that the divulging* from FBI files was under Department of Justice regulations. Because of the obviously devious nature of the whole idea in circumventing a New York State statute through the medium of the FBI, it was pointed out that many problems might have to be resolved in any undertaking involving this prohibition in a New York State statute as well as Federal law b7c cally contacted Supervisor of Central Research Section regarding the status of her request for "erotic" material from Bureau files for research use of captioned Institute. This request was made the subject of a memorandum from W. C. Sullivan to A. H. Belmont and a letter to Assistant Attorney General Malcom R. Wilkey, both on November 13, 1959. In the letter to the Department it was stated that [redacted] asked that she be given a decision as soon as possible on her request that Dr. Wardell B. Pomeroy be granted the right to examine "erotica" in the possession of this Bureau, as Dr. Pomeroy would be in Washington, D. C., in the next few days.

was advised that this matter had been referred to the Department of Justice for a decision as I had told her would be done at the time of the interview on the afternoon of November 12, 1959. [redacted] stated that she wanted to advise the appropriate party of Dr. Wardell B. Pomeroy's intended visit to Washington, D. C., starting November 13 and wanted to send a wire to the Bureau for referral to the Department as there were so many attorneys in the Department she would know where to send it there. [redacted] was advised that if she chose to send further information or inquiry regarding this matter, it would be passed on to the Department for their information and to be considered in conjunction with that already submitted. This was agreeable to [redacted] who advised that she would send the attached wire. The wire is quoted:

"FURTHER REGARDING OUR CONFERENCE (,) DR. WARDELL POMEROY WILL BE IN WASHINGTON FOR SEVERAL DAYS STARTING TOMORROW NOV. 18TH AND WE WOULD BE MOST GRATEFUL IF THERE WERE SOME ONE WITH WHOM HE COULD MEET TO DISCUSS THE REQUESTS MADE ON HIS BEHALF BY ME LAST WEEK. Reference is made to Bureau communications of November 13 and 17, 1959, in the captioned matter, relative to a request for "erotica" from the confidential files of this Bureau for use of the Institute for Sex Research, Inc. Bureau communication of November 17, 1959, noted that Dr. Wardell Pomeroy of the captioned Institute would be in Washington, D. C., for several days starting November 18, 1959, and he wished to further discuss with someone the request for "erotica."

On November 20, 1959, Dr. Pomeroy came to this Bureau and indicated that persons considering this matter may be interested in knowing that he had contacted the Post Office Department for "erotica." According to Dr. Pomeroy, an adviser to Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield had stated that he would recommend that confiscated "erotica" be made available to the captioned Institute by the Post Office Department. Dr. Pomeroy advised that there had been no final decision relative to this matter.

Dr. Pomeroy also stated that the Institute had been successful in obtaining "erotica" from several courts of local jurisdiction. He commented that no information was being obtained from Federal courts.

In connection with the final form of this research project, Dr. Pomeroy was of the opinion that there would be sufficient material for a book or a part of a book. This was not definite as the final product was "several years away."

It may be of collateral interest to note that during the course of the conversation, Dr. Pomeroy volunteered that the position of the Institute had not changed. The Institute could not divulge to this Bureau for investigative purposes the sources of its "erotica" as it would cut

The Director noted the following: "In so far as any material which FBI has it is not going to be made available to this outfit. H," on the memorandum of November 13, 1959. Memorandum of November 17, 1959, included information that Dr. Wardell Pomeroy of the captioned Institute would be in Washington, D. You may recall that b7c has been aggressively following a request for "erotica" (literary or artistic items relating to sex) from the files of this Bureau to be utilized by the captioned Institute. On memorandum of November 13, 1959, in this matter, the Director noted: "In so far as any material which FBI has it is not going to be made available to this outfit. H."

As the legal representative of the captioned Institute, on November 12, 1959, came to the Bureau and asked that (1) Dr. Pomeroy of the Institute be granted the right to examine "erotica" in the possession of this Bureau; (2) Dr. Pomeroy be given or loaned "erotica" under restrictions to be specified; and (3) if the "erotica" cannot be given or loaned that Dr. Pomeroy be given copies of the "erotica." It was pointed out to by the interviewing supervisor that the official files, documents, and records of this Bureau are under the regulation of the Attorney General, and that her request would be passed along to the Department of Justice. This information, along with her inquiry by telephone and wire of November 17, 1959, and the interview of Dr. Wardell Pomeroy of the captioned Institute have been transmitted to the Department with the statement "No further action is contemplated by this Bureau."

By letter of December 9, 1959, the attached letter was directed to the interviewing supervisor. Inquired whether the addressee had received any response to "the request for an opinion" addressed to the Attorney General.

further indicated in this letter that she wished to expedite the matter, hoping that "something could be arranged" for one of the next visits of two officials of the captioned Institute, Dr. Pomeroy and Dr. Gebhard. A copy of her letter was indicated for her client, Dr. Gebhard of the Institute.

Memorandum to Mr. Belmont
Re: INSTITUTE FOR SEX RESEARCH, INC.

It is noted that this letter of December 9, 1959, refers for the first time to the Institute for Science Research, Inc., whereas all previous references have been to the Institute for Sex Research. A check of Bureau files and available public source material fails to indicate any reference to an Institute for Science Research, Inc. This could easily be a mistake in transcription of her dictated letter. As recently as 20 days ago Dr. Pomeroy referred to the name, Institute for Sex Research.

RECOMMENDATION:

That the enclosed letter be sent to _____ merely acknowledging her inquiry and reiterating previous statements that the matter has been referred to the Department and the fact that no further action is contemplated. It does not appear desirable to pass this follow-up on to Department as it may exaggerate the Bureau's interest in this matter (1) in view of a communication to the Department following this matter within the past 20 days, (2) in view of the statement to the Department that the Bureau contemplates no further action, and (3) there is no further information to pass on to the Department.

2,800 Sex Offenders Give Figures for Kinsey Report

HOLLYWOOD, May 2 (AP).—The Kinsey Reports—first penetrating look at U. S. sex habits—are continuing studies of modern sexual problems.

The newest project: How and where human sex activity runs afoul of society and the law.

More than a decade has passed since the first Kinsey report shocked the nation with its findings:

One of two American husbands has sex relations outside of his marriage.

One of four American wives commits adultery.

One of ten American women is pregnant before she marries.

Eighty-five per cent of the women and 95 per cent of the men could be jailed one time or another for some element of their sexual behavior.

When Dr. Alfred Kinsey died in 1956 as a result of a heart attack, he left the Institute for Sex Research to carry on his work. One of its purposes:

To provide an accurate picture of how people behave sexually to aid in the realistic formulation of sexual values and restraints, and in general to aid law-making bodies, psychiatrists, sociologists, clergymen and other scholars of human behavior.

The institute's small staff is now at work on the Indiana University campus, sifting through 2,800 prisoner interviews for the fourth report: Sex offenders.

"One of the problems is that the law is so constituted that a great deal of human sexual activity is illegal," explains Dr. Paul H. Gebhard, institute director.

"In consequence, many of the people who have been fined or incarcerated on sex charges will probably prove to be very much like the average individual."

Statutory Rape

For instance, most states have laws forbidding intercourse with under-age females, whether they consent or not. This is statutory rape, and every prison holds persons convicted on this charge.

However, Dr. Gebhard believes it is pointless to study deeply the background of a man whose offense was intercourse with his under-age fiancée.

The new report, due sometime next year, covers minor and serious offenses—ranging from rape and offenses against children to peeping.

Women have been eliminated from the new report, largely because most female offenses have a commercial nature, such as prostitution, and the rest are relatively rare.

"As a result there are whole classes of sexual offense that are male monopolies," Dr. Gebhard notes. "Take peeping, for instance."

"If you went to the police of any large city and asked them how many female peepers they had caught, they'd laugh in your face. They probably never heard of such a thing."

In the same respect, you seldom hear of a female dressing in male clothes, or of a female who wants to change her sex to male.

One reason is that the average woman hasn't as strong a sex drive as the average man, Dr. Gebhard says, and, although there are exceptions, the average woman never reaches the peak of sex interest attained by the average male.

Dr. Gebhard notes that physically and emotionally, humans are not given to taking only one mate. He explains it this way:

Monogamy is a cultural condition we've chosen to impose on ourselves, and in consequence there is a considerable amount of extramarital activity.

Monogamy is generally easier for women than for men. But even women have polygamous tendencies, cropping up in dreams or fantasies.

Different Controls

Societies have taken different roads to control the problems of sex among their members. Thus few prohibitions apply to all mankind.

Premarital intercourse, taboo in the United States, is socially acceptable in many European countries and elsewhere.

And sometimes societies make trouble for themselves in the already difficult area of human drives and emotions.

"Take our own society, for example," Dr. Gebhard says.

"There's this great stress on physical beauty. Look at the inescapable advertising that's being pounded in on our female population day in and day out."

"Be beautiful. Dress stylishly. Wear this perfume. Use this soap. And the whole emphasis is to be beautiful—that is, be sexually attractive. Adopt the mannerisms of the latest Hollywood stars."

"So on the one hand, society is strongly encouraging sexual attractiveness. But when it comes to the logical conclusion of sexual attractiveness—sexual behavior—then society suddenly reverses itself and says: No, no."

"So we have this peculiar situation of encouragement on one hand and repression on the other. It's almost schizophrenic."

The sex offender study already indicates such things as:

A positive correlation between alcohol and sex offense.

Little connection between drug addiction and sex offense. (If a man is a serious addict, very often sex life is nonexistent, Dr. Gebhard says.)

The above has written another "egg-head" article in which he makes light of the danger of sex offenders and he indicates that he and his associates are firmly convinced that "lurid" warnings to children concerning sex offenders "tend to encourage a sort of paranoid fear of all strangers and all men" without preventing any significant number of offenses. He says that the man who molests a child is usually not a stranger but someone who knows the child. He says that sexual crimes are far rarer than the headlines would indicate.

His article is a summary of his book which will appear in July, 1965, and is the first of two articles to appear in this publication summarizing his book. The article to appear in June will explain the misconceptions held by both sexes concerning the attitude of each other toward sex.

Bufiles reveal Gebhard was contacted in July, 1957, by the Bureau at Indiana University in connection with the collection of obscene material it held for use in connection with its research. Gebhard declined to furnish the names of persons who furnished them the material since he had promised his sources not to reveal their identities.

OBSERVATIONS:

There is, of course, no way that Gebhard or the Bureau can determine how many children have been saved from being molested by vicious sex offenders and statistics are not maintained concerning the acquaintanceship of the offender with his victim. Regarding his allegation that sex crimes are rarer than headlines would indicate, the 1963 Uniform Crime Reports indicate a 2.3 percent increase over the preceding year in forcible rape, and other sex offenses (including statutory rape) increased by .9 percent. The 1964 preliminary release issued in March on crime statistics reflects a 19 percent overall increase in the forcible rape category which

THE 1965 KINSEY REPORT

Our Dangerous Sex Laws

By DR. PAUL GEBHARD

LADIES' HOME
MAY, 1965

One spring evening a young man in California carefully took all the identification papers from his wallet and left them behind at his home. From his automobile he removed the registration certificate, bearing his name, which state law requires to be attached in plain view to the steering column. He hid this in the glove compartment, locked it—and then went on the prowl. He soon found a woman walking alone on an otherwise deserted street, forced her into his car, drove her to a lonely dirt road and raped her. But the car got stuck, and he needed help getting it started again; so he had the woman get out and give the car a push. As she shoved against the rear bumper, her eyes were only inches from the license plate. She had plenty of time to memorize the number, and as soon as he let her go she reported it to the police. The young man went to prison, where he was still serving his sentence when I interviewed him.

This man was one of many, young and old, in prison for sexual offenses of all kinds, whose cases are summarized in the new report that the Institute for Sex Research will publish in July. His particular story is of special interest for two reasons. He comes close to what public opinion regards as the vicious and uncontrollable "sex criminal": His crime was premeditated, his victim selected entirely by accident; he struck at the first woman he found, without regard to her age or physical appearance. And he also exhibited a peculiar quirk that seems common to these men: Although he was extremely careful about his wallet and his registration certificate, he was grossly careless on the matter of the license plate, a detail that anyone smart enough to take the other precautions might have been expected to remember.

At the very beginning of the institute study, when the late Dr. Alfred Kinsey, Dr. Wardell Pomeroy and I began visiting prisons to conduct our interviews, we were struck by the fact that very few of the prisoners resembled the boogeyman of popular imagination—the "sex fiend," hopped up by dope, his imagination fired by pornography. Some, indeed, were the most pathetic and harmless of bumbler. And virtually all were what modern slang calls losers: They were generally from low-class homes; they had very little education or success at jobs, and they went about their crimes so ineptly that they practically fell into the arms of the police.

For the readers of the Ladies' Home Journal, perhaps the outstanding message of the new report is that the average American woman and her children are in far less danger of becoming victims of a sex criminal than is generally supposed.

We live in an age of frank discussion, and newspapers, therefore, feel far freer than in the past to talk about sex crimes on the front page and in considerable detail. Prosecuting attorneys lecture about sex criminals, sometimes with more eye to headlines than to facts. The police visit schools to show movies warning girls against talking to strange men. As a result, we seem to be threatened by danger on all sides. Unmarried women living in big cities ask for unlisted phone numbers to avoid the obscene calls. Suburban mothers drive their daughters to and from school to thwart the lurking stranger. But the truth is:

Sexual crimes, especially those involving force or violence, are far rarer than the headlines would indicate. Moreover, the kind of men who get involved in sexual offenses tend to be concentrated in the poorer neighborhoods of our cities; they live and commit their crimes largely on their own side of the tracks. The chances that a woman living in a good neighborhood will encounter a sadistic rapist, or that her daughter will be injured by an attacker, are not very much greater than the danger of being struck by lightning.

The stereotyped "sex criminal" of popular imagination turns out to be many different kinds of men. Contrary to general belief, few of them take dope, although many of them do commit their crimes under the influence of alcohol. And few are in any way inspired by pornography. As the institute's previous reports have shown, pornography of all kinds is mostly read and enjoyed by men of more than average intelligence and with vivid imaginations. The men in prison for sexual offenses, on the other hand, turned out to be men of rather low intelligence and imagination. Their disinterested and indeed scornful attitude toward pornography was perhaps best summed up by one fairly typical prisoner who told me, "You can't do nothin' with a pitcher."

Belate Dr. Kinsey's Institute for Sex Research tells for the first time why the public picture of typical sex offenders is wrong; why the significance of sex crimes may have been greatly exaggerated; and how girls, without knowing it, can provoke molesters.

Many of the mothers of America should find reassurance in this fact. Boys, at puberty, often begin to take a surreptitious interest in risqué magazines, and sometimes wind up with collections of outright pornography. A mother who finds such possessions hidden in her son's room need not be unduly concerned, for this does not mean that he will grow up into a fiend or a pervert. Not one of the men we interviewed seemed to have gone to prison as a result of exposure to pornography, either immediately before his crime or even at some distant time back in his adolescence.

Another reassuring truth we found is that, while experiences with phone callers, exhibitionists and Peeping Toms can be shocking and distressing, these men are generally harmless. The Peeping Tom is frequently a man who resorts to peering at women behind windows because he lacks the courage to have anything to do with women at closer range. And the exhibitionist, in most cases, is not really making a sexual overture; in fact, he would probably flee in panic at any sign of interest on his victim's part. These men are the sorriest of the sexual offenders—men who are often incapable of normal sexual relations and therefore resort to such substitutes, men who are in almost every case psychologically sick. In many ways it is foolish to think of them as criminals and send them to prison. What they really need is psychiatric treatment.

At the other extreme is that highly dangerous man who attacks a little girl. The rape of a child is, of course, a horrible thing, and often causes appalling physical injuries. Even in prison the men guilty of such a crime are totally ostracized by their fellow inmates, including the most callous safecrackers and most brutal murderers. Fortunately, although most people have the opposite impression from reading newspaper stories of child-molesting, these men are the rarest of sex offenders.

The unpleasant topic of child-molesting deserves a good deal more frank discussion than it has ever had in the past, for it conjures up a picture that is usually far more lurid than the facts.

ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT BOOKS OF 1965 IS THE FOURTH OF THE FAMOUS "KINSEY REPORTS," WHICH WILL BE PUBLISHED IN JULY. LIKE THE PREVIOUS REPORTS, IT IS DESTINED TO BE BOTH HIGHLY CONTROVERSIAL AND INFLUENTIAL. BEGUN IN DR. ALFRED C. KINSEY'S LIFETIME AND COMPLETED BY HIS SUCCESSORS AT THE INSTITUTE FOR SEX RESEARCH AT INDIANA UNIVERSITY, IT IS A MASSIVE STUDY OF 2,721 MEN. OF THESE, 1,356 WERE SERVING PRISON TERMS FOR SEX CRIMES. IT REPORTS MANY SURPRISING NEW FACTS ABOUT THESE CRIMES AND THEIR CAUSES. IT ALSO CONTAINS INVALUABLE ADVICE—AND REASSURANCE—FOR PARENTS, AND PROVOCATIVE OBSERVATIONS ABOUT LAWS AND CUSTOMS THAT GOVERN SEXUAL BEHAVIOR. THIS SUMMARY OF THE REPORT WAS PREPARED EXCLUSIVELY FOR THE JOURNAL BY DR. KINSEY'S SUCCESSOR AS DIRECTOR OF THE INSTITUTE FOR SEX RESEARCH, WITH THE ASSISTANCE OF ERNEST HAVEMANN, WHO HAS CLOSELY FOLLOWED THE WORK OF THE INSTITUTE FOR MORE THAN A DECADE. THE NEW REPORT IS ENTITLED SEX OFFENDERS: AN ANALYSIS OF TYPES (HARPER & ROW). THE BOOK WAS WRITTEN BY DR. GEBHARD IN COLLABORATION WITH HIS ASSOCIATES JOHN GAGNON, WARDELL POMEROY AND CORNELIA CHRISTENSON.

When the newspapers report that a man has been arrested for molesting a little girl, or "making overtures," as the papers sometimes say, most readers jump to the conclusion that it was a case of rape or attempted rape. Actually, most cases of child-molesting are something quite different. Strange as it may seem, most of these men find their erotic pleasure in merely fondling little girls, and often do not even attempt to touch their private parts. Of the child-molesters whom we interviewed, only one in 10 had made an attempt at rape.

Even the other nine-of-10 cases, of course, are most distasteful to contemplate—but the fact is that they are far less serious than generally believed. Most of the little girls who have gone through such an experience hardly know what happened to them and are upset very little, if at all—unless their parents or the school and police authorities, as so often happens, become panic-stricken. The moral for parents, in the unlikely event they should ever face this situation, is to remain as calm and reassuring as possible—for it seems to be largely the parents' reaction to the experience, rather than the experience itself, that is traumatic for the child.

This raises some serious doubts about the wisdom of the frequent warnings that young girls keep hearing nowadays about lurking strangers. The actual rapist is as rare and his actions as unpredictable as a mad dog; there is really nothing that a parent can do, short of maintain a 24-hour-a-day vigil, to prevent his attack. The other child-molesters, though somewhat more common, do not in themselves (continued on page 121)
