On April 6, 2005, SA [redacted] conducted internet searches in response to information provided by [redacted]. During an interview on 4/04/2005, [redacted] indicated that BRUCE IVINS was obsessed with anything related to sororities. IVINS had a particular slight with Kappa Kappa Gamma (KKG), as he was either turned down on a date, or dumped, by a member of KKG. IVINS made it a point to find out the secret rules and rituals of KKG. He read books and internet articles relating to the sorority. SA [redacted] conducted an internet search using the term "Kappa Kappa Gamma" and obtained a hit for the web site <http://www.kappakappagamma.org>. SA [redacted] printed pages titled "Learn About Kappa" and "Kappa Facts."

b6

SA [redacted] conducted a Google internet search (www.google.com) to determine the presence of a Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority in the vicinity of Princeton, New Jersey (NJ), as IVINS' father attended Princeton University. The search yielded a Kappa Kappa Gamma listed at 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, NJ 08542, telephone (609) 497-3393. Notably, the mailbox, identified during the Amerithrax investigation to be contaminated with Bacillus anthracis Ames spores, was located at 10 Nassau Street in Princeton, NJ. The KKG address and the mailbox on Nassau street were 0.03 miles apart. SA [redacted] printed the page identifying the location of Kappa Kappa Gamma in Princeton, NJ. A Choice Point search, using the search criteria "20 Nassau Street; Princeton, NJ 08542," confirmed that a business named Kappa Kappa Gamma was located at the address.

Learn About Kappa

Kappa's golden key, fleur-de-lis and caduceus of arms represent friendship rooted in a tradition of high standards.

These standards are as important today as they were in 1863 when Kappa Kappa Gamma was founded by six young women at Monmouth College, Monmouth, Illinois. Since that time, Kappa has grown to 131 collegiate chapters and nearly 300 alumnae associations worldwide.

Kappa promotes, through its standards, a broad college experience. Scholarship or intellectual development is our top priority, and the impressive achievements of our members attest to this. In Kappa, scholarship programs provide an atmosphere for academic accomplishment emphasizing that each member attain her "personal academic best."

Cultural growth is important as well. Kappa Kappa Gamma encourages members to seek opportunities for self-growth in a variety of interests in the chapter, campus, and in the community. Kappa Kappa Gamma also provides leadership opportunities in a mutually supportive environment.

Kappa members believe that philanthropy or mutual helpfulness is of significant importance. Awareness of the needs of others is raised by participating in campus philanthropy events, quiet moments of companionship with nursing home residents or raising dollars for the Kappa Kappa Gamma Foundation.

Kappa is proud of its programs of consequence, its high standards and adherence to ethical principles, and of its countless members whose accomplishments have provided a better life for others.

Kappa Kappa Gamma at its core is friendship, leadership and scholarship. It provides an opportunity and experience for a lifetime.

Mission Statement
 Kappa Kappa Gamma is an organization of women, who seeks for every member throughout her life bonds of friendship, mutual support, opportunities for self-growth, respect for intellectual development, and an understanding of and an allegiance to positive ethical principles.

Statistics
 Kappa has 131 collegiate chapters and nearly 300 active alumnae associations.

More than 200,000 Kappas have been initiated since our founding at Monmouth College in Monmouth, Illinois, on October 13, 1870, by six pioneering women. Kappa is a women's fraternity – the word sorority was not coined until after our founding.

Badge
 The golden key was selected by the Founders as the badge of Kappa Kappa Gamma. The badge is worn strictly as an emblem of membership and only by initiated members. Members may not lend their badges to anyone except other Kappas. To keep badges only in the possession of members, it is encouraged that the badges of deceased members be returned to Headquarters.

Colors and Jewel
 The colors of the Fraternity are light blue and dark blue which have been described as those shades which in light and dark tones reproduce the "soft velvety blue approaching the cornflower in shade," which is also a description of the sapphire, the Fraternity jewel. The sapphire is recognized as a symbol of truth, sincerity, constancy.

Flower: The fleur-de-lis was chosen as the Fraternity flower.
Owl: The owl is the bird of wisdom.
Coat-of-Arms: The Fraternity Coat-of-Arms.

the Fraternity flower because of its general dignity, stateliness and grace, and because it combines the two blues of the Fraternity in one flower.

as well as the bird of Minerva, the Goddess of Wisdom.

combines the well known symbols of Kappa Kappa Gamma: the key, the Greek letters, the fleur-de-lis, the owl and the two blues.

ABSTRACT

Title of thesis: DEFINITIONS OF HAZING: DIFFERENCES AMONG SELECTED STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS

Chad William Ellsworth, Master of Arts, 2004

Thesis directed by: Dr. John Zacker
Department of Counseling and Personnel Services

Fraternities, sororities, military organizations, athletic groups, and marching bands commonly are associated with hazing activities. Although such organizations have been linked to hazing activities, the fact that there is no common definition of hazing has hindered any real effort to challenge and combat such activities.

The purpose of this research study was to investigate if the activities students define as hazing activities differ among the selected student organizations. The selected student organizations included fraternities, sororities, Reserve Officer Training Corps, NCAA athletic teams, and marching bands.

This research study discovered statistically significant differences ($p < .05$) among the selected student organizations for physical hazing activities and psychological hazing activities, as well as statistically significant differences ($p < .05$) between women and men for physical hazing activities, psychological hazing activities, and other hazing activities. Finally, this research study found 10 activities students in the aggregate identified as hazing activities, which moves us toward a common definition of hazing.

Despite the fact that fraternities receive much of the media's attention for hazing activities, it is a concern for sororities, too (Nuwer, 1990). In 1982, the Alpha Delta Pi chapter at the University of Southern California was found guilty of hazing after an intoxicated pledge had to have her stomach pumped. Likewise, in 1988, the Alpha Chi Omega chapter at the University of Maine was suspended after three pledges were blindfolded and branded in a cemetery [redacted] in a 1983 letter to the News-Post of Frederick, Md., said, "I am especially incensed at vitriolic attacks on our practices of 'hazing,' which non-Greeks fail to realize serve numerous valuable functions," (Nuwer, 1990, p. 231) [redacted], a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma, said hazing built loyalty to the pledge class and sorority, strengthened the pledges' mettle, and weeded out weaker pledges. The vice president of [redacted] sorority soon thereafter said [redacted] did not speak for the organization and that hazing activities were isolated.

According to Kimbrough (1997), hazing became a part of the pledging process for Black fraternities and sororities as early as 1900. However, the hazing activities developed separately from those in White Fraternities and sororities. For example, pledges of historically Black fraternities and sororities were made to stand in single file lines, dress alike, and march in a group around campus. Although the pledging process had not received official sanction from any of the National Pan-Hellenic Council (NPHC) organizations, members of these organizations considered hazing activities necessary and traditional parts of the process of becoming a member. By the 1980s, hazing had become enough of a concern for historically Black fraternities and sororities that NPHC's member organizations made a radical change in the structure of their organizations.

session of his daughter's sorority and a brother fraternity. After a few minutes, Eileen believed he was sincere.

The father said that his daughter's ordeal began when she picked an assignment out of a hat. Because the father was so evasive, Eileen pictured a gang rape or molestation until finally it dawned on her that the members had required the girl to submit to an enema. Why she complied, the father did not know, but she had. Her pants had been pulled partially down; her buttocks, exposed. The brothers made crude remarks. The girl became hysterical. She had since dropped out of school, believing her reputation permanently scarred.

Lunati listens. Assuming the story's truth, could the one-time Surfer Girl see the person she had been eleven years earlier doing such a humiliating thing?

"If that was Hell Night, yes," she says.

Could she envision the so-called Doughgirl or the other pledge sisters submitting to similar abuse?

"Absolutely."

Women do not often go on the record advocating hazing. In fact, sorority representatives are even more vehement in attacking the practice than are their male counterparts. Nonetheless, a woman will occasionally speak in favor of hazing, and her reasons invariably echo those more commonly uttered by men. "As a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma, one of our nation's oldest and most prestigious college

Suzanne Kilgannon, an Alpha Sigma Alpha member and employee, reveals some disturbing experiences she had while visiting chapters across the country in an article in the sorority magazine The Phoenix. She saw "pledges do horrible things in order to prove their worthiness to be Alpha Sigma Alphas." She believes that hazing undermines a chapter's goals and causes pledges to feel misled about the sorority's ideals as presented during the rush period.

Klan's Richard Klein suggests that as women have evolved into more aggressive drivers and smoke and drink more often, they might also imitate undesirable male hazing practices. Some cases suggest that Klein's perception may not be too far off the mark:

- In 1978 the Alpha Kappa Alpha chapter at the University of Texas was found guilty of such hazing offenses as "requiring pledges to ingest unpleasant food, to recite sorority history and other information excessively and under duress, and to do physical exercises for failure to perform expected tasks," said assistant dean of students David McClintock.
- Alpha Delta Pi sorority at the University of Southern California was found guilty of hazing after an intoxicated pledge had to have her stomach pumped in 1982.
- A University of Maine sorority, Alpha Chi Omega, was suspended in 1988 after members branded blindfolded pledges in a cemetery. Three pledges received minor burns when a metal brand-bearing the group's Greek initials—heated over a candle flame was pressed against their flesh.
- During the late eighties senior Sara Hardon, a Delta Nu sorority president at Dickinson College, resigned because "some girls felt that hazing was the backbone of the sorority." Among other things, pledges were forced to sit on a block of ice and tell jokes until they made the sisterhood laugh. The sorority was censured by the college for two years after pleading guilty to hazing charges.

In the eighties some universities took the positive step of banning little sisters' groups, which are created out of inherently sexist attitudes and sometimes lead to sexual abuses. Women are rushed for little sisters'

One document [redacted] was a handwritten letter from BRUCE IVINS to [redacted] does not recall this particular letter, [redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted] does not remember any correspondence with IVINS. [redacted] was only familiar with the letter from IVINS because [redacted] had recently provided [redacted] with a copy, after providing investigators with same.

The letter from IVINS suggests he was already known to [redacted] although [redacted] could not recall any additional communication with IVINS. [redacted] thought [redacted] would have made copies of anything relevant, [redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted] also did not recall a letter to the editor of the Frederick News-Post (Frederick, Maryland) purportedly written by [redacted] justifying the practice of hazing by [redacted] sorority, KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA, which was included with the letter from IVINS. [redacted] has no recollection of the letter to the editor or the name [redacted] There are no specific hazing incidents regarding KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA which stand out to [redacted]

[redacted] located one short handwritten note with an envelope addressed to [redacted] attached, and three letters signed by BRUCE IVINS. [redacted] sent the original letters to PI [redacted] via overnight mail on 03/29/2007, and they were received on 03/30/2007.

The items sent by [redacted] include: one handwritten note from IVINS dated 06/01/1982, with an envelope address to [redacted] attached; one typed letter signed by IVINS dated 05/18/1982; one handwritten letter from IVINS dated 05/29/1983, with a copy of a letter to the editor by [redacted] (the letter to the editor is referenced in the IVINS's letter to [redacted]); one typed letter signed by IVINS dated 05/26/1986. Also enclosed with the materials was a photocopied pamphlet for KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA. [redacted] does not know which letter the pamphlet was originally enclosed with, nor does [redacted] know for sure it was provided by IVINS. [redacted] advised that [redacted] likely separated any news clippings mentioned in IVINS's letters into a separate file.

The documents provided by [redacted] are enclosed in a 1A envelope.
