K3 Two sheets of typewriter samples taken from Smith=

Result of examination:

The typewritten letters received in this case bearing the typewritten name "D. B. Cooper" and the envelopes containing these letters have been designated Q23 through Q28, Q33 and Q34.

It was not determined whether the typewriting on Q23 through Q28, Q33 and Q34 was prepared on the typewriter used to prepare K3 because of a lack of significant defects; however, nothing of particular significance was noted in the comparison.

K3 was photographed and is returned herewith.

Re: RANSOM MONEY

The ransom money obtained by Northwest Airlines was microfilmed by the [redacted] The original roll of film contained on one reel, was picked up by SA [redacted] and sent to the Laboratory by United Airlines courier. Since the above roll of film contained the serial numbers of $230,000, it was necessary to furnish the serial numbers of the $30,000 which was not included in the ransom (the ransom being $200,000).

b6
b7C

Because the Laboratory was having difficulty with eliminating the serial numbers, they requested we obtain the complete list of serial numbers which were deleted from the original listing of the $230,000.

In the meantime, the [redacted] had prepared another amount of ransom money of $230,000 and included in that, the $30,000 which had been taken from the first ransom money as mentioned in paragraph one above.

b6
b7C

The [redacted] then loaned to us, two reels of microfilm which contains their current ransom money and which included the bills which had been taken from the first ransom money. These two rolls of microfilm were sent to the Laboratory and were used to compile an accurate list of the ransom money given to the hijacker.

b6

All three reels of film returned by the Bureau with the following dispositions:

The reel containing the ransom money given to the hijacker is being maintained in the Seattle Office as evidence

Mr. J.E. Milnes
Special Agent in Charge
Federal Bureau of Investigation
1015 Second Avenue
Seattle, Wash. 98104

February 1, 1972

Re: Your letter of Nov. 29th, '71

Dear Mr. Milnes:

Thank you for expressing your appreciation of my observations. I see someone else had observations along the same line and put them to good use in a later hijacking. I fail to see, however, why the Air Force allowed the parachute bugging to be printed in the papers.

I hear now there is great alarm concerning the number of hijackings recently. Among other things, I'm sure another escape is feared. I have given this matter some thought, and therefore, I have another observation you might benefit from:

The only obvious deviation from the established pattern "Mr. Cooper" used that has not been tried is to actually jump from the plane with the hostage. If the hijacker has a small plane or car as an escape vehicle and a pre-determined jump-site, he could pull it off.

Parachutes can be designed to control the rate of descent via draft holes in the top center of the silk, I believe. Therefore, the way to foil the escape would be to radically vary the descent factor of the parachutes. ie: one drops quickly, one floats for a long time. This would separate the hijacker from his hostage and foil his drop; meanwhile helicopter teams could rescue the hostage, subdue the hijacker, while the Air Force could track the escape vehicle.

This idea would probably not work as smoothly as presented here, but it is a way to stop such an occurrence. You may rest assured I keep these ideas to myself, and for added credence, I was granted a security clearance while employed at the Boeing Co.

Thank you for your time. I don't expect you to reply to this letter. Just keep it in your hip pocket, just in case.

The hijacker of Northwest Airlines Flight #305 was given four parachutes while the plane was on the ground at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport. Two of these parachutes were apparently used by the hijacker when he parachuted from the plane. The remaining two parachutes were still on the plane when it landed at Reno, Nevada. One of the parachutes was intact, but the other had been opened and three of the shroud lines had been cut.

Northwest Airlines, Minneapolis, contacted the Seattle Office on February 3, 1972, to inquire as to the disposition of the two parachutes which had been left on the plane. advised he has been receiving inquiries from the person who supplied the parachutes either to have the parachutes returned to him, or have Northwest Airlines pay for them.

when the above facts were discussed with him, advised that no evidence, which includes both of the parachutes, should be returned at this time, as this
