JOHN EDGAR HOOVER

Proteje el FRENTE INTERNO

HASHINGTON.—Después de la declaración de guerra de los Estados Unidos contra las fuerzas agresoras del mundo, el señor John Edgar Hoover, director del Negociado Federal de Investigaciones, adscrito a la Secretaría de Justicia de los Estados Unidos, o sea el Servicio Secreto Federal, se ha convertido en uno de los funcionarios públicos más importantes de la nación. Está encargado de la dirección de una extensa red de servicios de protección del frente interno de una nación en guerra. Cuando comenzaron las hostilidades, se encargó al Servicio Secreto Federal la custodia de las grandes industrias de guerra, los planes militares y el pueblo en general, contra actos de sabotaje y espionaje, tanto de parte de los enemigos externos como los internos.

El éxito del señor Hoover y el Servicio Secreto ha sido sensational. Ningún agente enemigo ha podido cometer acto de sabotaje alguno en los Estados Unidos. El espionaje está bien dominado: los pocos intentos iniciados por los espías fueron frustrados casi en su mismo comienzo. Esta tarea immense de cuidar y vigilar la movimientos de los agentes del enemigo requiere, como jamás había sucedido, la atención absoluta de todo el personal del servicio.

El señor John Edgar Hoover ha servido durante diecinueve años leal y desinteresadamente a la nación. Lleno de energía, juventud y ganas de servir, fue nombrado en mayo de 1924 director del Negociado Federal de Investigaciones. Habiendo estudiado a fondo los principios de Washington y Lincoln y lleno de fe en Dios y en su patria, se hizo cargo de su importante puesto en una época en que el pistolero y el pandillero andaban a sus anchas por la nación.

Dedicándose con todo el vigor de sus veintinueve años al exterminio de los malhechores, el joven funcionario obtuvo el éxito que deseaba, llevando a un "enemigo del público" tras de otro. No podía ningún criminal escapar de las pesquisas del Servicio Secreto, que se convirtió en la primera dependencia de policía de los Estados Unidos. El señor Hoover, personalmente, es enemigo acérrimo de pistoleros y pandilleros, y no contra todos aquellos que alejadamente faltan a la ley.

La mejor manera de hacerse cargo de la labor llevada a cabo por el Negociado Federal de Investigaciones es comprendiendo su director. Es un hombre que cree en la democracia, en el pueblo, en su esperanza y en su aspiraciones. Entiende los problemas del pueblo, porque es un hombre del pueblo. Su ambición es formar a la nación, exenta de la perniciosa influencia de los eranínales. Hacia los que son sinceros, tiende su mano amiga y voluntaria.

Es defensor de todas las razas. Ha protegido a miles de residentes leales, pacíficos, nacidos en el extranjero, contra las vejaciones de los comités de "vigilancia" nacidos de la historia del "patriotismo" bético. En los casos en que acusó falsamente a los nacidos en el extranjero de ser partidarios del fascismo, el señor Hoover mandó investigadores para arrancar de cuajo el rencor y sus propaladores, restablecer la confianza entre los vecinos y que se habla奔sido con fidelidad y en el propio hogar de la víctima del rumor.

John Edgar Hoover nació en Washington en 1905. Es bachiller y licenciado en derecho, y varias importantes universidades le han conferido el título honorífico de doctor en derecho. Desde 1921 está empleado en la Secretaría de Justicia, habiendo sido ascendido a su actual puesto en 1924.

Su doctrina queda definida en estas palabras:

"Existe en la historia de la civilización períodos de progreso y desánclito, de guerra y de paz, de depresión y de prosperidad. De los períodos de incertidumbre han podido derivarse oportunidades para el aprovechamiento de los errores del pasado, y la formación de un futuro mejor. Las obligaciones que hemos contraído con otros, y más aún con las generaciones del futuro, nos obligan a aplicar todas nuestras energías, para hacer frente a cada nueva autoridad con valor y determinación y con la seguridad de que la razón puede todavía ser la fuerza".

Refiriéndose a la América, el señor Hoover ha dicho esto: "La América debe hacerse cargo completo de su gran responsabilidad en la creación y sostén de un espíritu directo de elevada convivencia. Deberá salir de lo más recóndito del alma, colocando a Dios y a la patria en el primer y más alto puesto. Nuestra parte de América fué constituida por la fe, el trabajo y los esfuerzos, y todos debemos y tenemos que conservarla a todo costo".

~~SECRET~~ 8 THE WASHINGTON NEWS (FINAL EDITION)

September 25, 1943

Let's Back The Attack with War Bonds!

A MESSAGE ON THE THIRD WAR LOAN from J. Edgar Hoover . . .

Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation

Complacency is one of our most serious shortcomings. But we must not be complacent about the war effort. Each hour which passes represents millions of dollars in war materials and the lives of some of our loved ones—brother, father, husband, sweetheart, or friend. Our successes should give us encouragement, but they must not lull us into a sense of false security. Such an attitude is dangerous; what is more, it may prove fatal to our entire cause.

The war has not yet been won. The final battle has not been fought. A long road still lies ahead and each American must put forth a still greater effort if he is to contribute his share to achieving final victory.

I can think of no more patriotic way for us here at home to aid in ending the war just as soon as possible than by buying War Bonds. We may feel we have bought as many as we can afford, but we must go beyond this. Remember the sacrifices of those in the Armed Forces. They are giving to the limit. We must do likewise.

I strongly urge that all Americans go all out in the Third War Loan. Buy until it hurts and then buy still more. Unless we Back the Attack and increase our purchases of War Bonds, the drive to final victory will be delayed proportionately.

Again expressing my admiration for the excellent work of your Department in support of the President of the United States and in support of the never-failing friends of the President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, may I congratulate you on having been accorded the inclosed Editorial by the most influential newspaper published in Rochester and vicinity.

P.S.

You will be very kind to pardon my delay in mailing this letter to you.

The reason, for the delay, was caused by the fact that the Democrat and Chronicle Information Clerk downstairs and her Manager informed me that copies of the Democrat and Chronicle for July 27th "were upstairs on the Second Floor".

Afterwards, the young man, in charge of the back issues of the paper, informed me that July 27th issues were "sold out".

A friend of mine brought a copy of this issue from his Rochester address, last evening, August ninth, 1943.

Sincerely,

John White Johnston

He's Made Good

It took a great war to bring the real value of John Edgar Hoover's achievements home to the American people, and to silence the political sniping that occasionally, before the war, tried to interfere with his successful attacks on the politician-gangster rings which held American cities, particularly Chicago, in their grasp.

Hoover got Dillinger, and several lesser desperados, whose exploits baffled local and state police forces. He made the "heat" of the Federal Bureau of Investigation something to be feared by the hardest-boiled gang leader who could snap his finger at local law-enforcing authorities.

Hoover was ready for the war. If business and political considerations kept his organization from doing what it might have to stop Japanese spying and espionage in the Hawaiian Islands before Pearl Harbor, his force was both alert and effective on the mainland of the United States to know what Axis agents were doing and to thwart many of their schemes.

Yesterday was the 35th anniversary of the FBI's establishment, but it is no disparagement of those who ran it before to say that it never really came to life until he took it over 20 years ago. He insisted on trained men; he kept politics out of it; he went through with any assignment he was given. Axis spies soon found that an "effete and decadent democracy" was more than a match for them, as their superiors have discovered on the battle fronts.

Hoover said yesterday that neither fascism nor communism had been able to get a foothold here because the American people are basically sound, they believe strongly in democracy. That's the perfect answer to rabble rousers of the type Detroit has suffered from in recent years, and some other sections.

Hoover's faith and the effectiveness of his work in combating enemy plots and intrigues deserves both official and general public recognition.

Dear Mr. Hoover,
FBI Headquarters
Washington, D. C.

My dear Mr. Hoover:

Upon hearing the announcement this morning over the radio, that this was the ~~anniversary~~ Thirty Fifth Anniversary of the F.B.I. and the Twenty Sixth of your connection with the Board ~~on~~ it, I desire to join your many friends and admirers in extending congratulations.

Fifteen years ago last April was my first and only personal contact with you, but since that time I have watched your achievements with increasing admiration.

You will doubtless recall visiting the parsonage home of a little Methodist Minister, late one afternoon, in a little town down on the coast of this State, seeking information concerning parties reputed to be connected with the shipment of a couple of cars of imported liquors from a nearby isolated railway station. We went to the home of a Mr. Willis and he gave you information as to where the liquor was brought ashore and where shipped from.

The next morning we met on the way to the Post Office, and strolled together through the town, planning some method of travel that you might visit the boy's School where the stuff was brought ashore, without the use of a taxi driver. I suggested borrowing a car from a neighbor if I might make the trip with you. You accepted and we had a very pleasant trip out to the School, and thence to the R.R. Station where it was shipped away.

I was transferred to Asheville, N.C. that fall, and no one except the Mr. Willis we visited, ever heard from my lips, that you and I had any part in the round up and conviction of the leaders of the transaction.

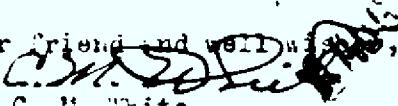

I heard afterwards, that the men involved, though the loss of the liquor and court cost and fines amounted to about $35,000, ~~had~~ bankrupted a large Hardware Company and a Fish Dealer. Be that as it may, they all went out on Bankrupt pleas.

I do not rejoice over their financial downfall; but am thankful that a trick which they had doubtless played on a smaller scale, was discovered and future large ones prevented.

My health failed me nearly two years ago, and I am now "shut-in" retired minister. I have my little home about ten miles west of Asheville, N.C. in the village of Candler, N.C.

If you ever have reasons to pass this way, would appreciate a visit from you.

Wishing you many more years of good health and successful ones in your difficult field of needed service, may I sign myself,

Your friend and well-wisher,

C. M. White

Dear Mr. Sears:

The splendid telegram sent to me by my associates in the Philadelphia Field Division was truly heart-warming. In reading the fine spirit expressed by you folks I realize that it is through just such esprit de corps and the enthusiastic efforts of our employees, working for a cause they believe in, that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has built for itself, during the past thirty-five years, the place it holds in our national life today.

Many thanks for your comments on my radio message and for your congratulations on my Twenty-sixth Anniversary of service.

Dear John:

The twin anniversary on July 26 of the founding of the Bureau and of your own first association with it gives me a welcome and appropriate opportunity to say to you as a citizen of this country that you and the Bureau have done a fine job for all of us.

You and your associates have made this country a better place to live in for most of us by making it a bad place for criminals. Your FBI is a model of civil service and its personnel comprise the highest type of civil servants this country has yet produced. So here are the best of anniversary wishes for you and the FBI with the hope that you and your organization long shall wave.

NOTHING TAKES THE PLACE OF LEATHER

THE BOSTON HERALD, THURSDAY, JULY

History of FBI

The Federal Bureau of Investigation celebrated its 35th birthday recently, and J. Edgar Hoover has directed it for him for 30 years; the public heard little of it or him until the early 30's. The gangsters had done almost as they pleased during the prohibition period. They were too much for municipal and state officials and for Uncle Sam's agents themselves in various places.

After the repeal of the 18th amendment, they were still expanding their field until they ran afoul of Mr. Hoover. With warm encouragement from the Department of Justice he had reorganized the personnel of the bureau, staffing it largely with lawyers and college men, had modernized its methods and had co-ordinated its operations with those of local officials. It took him only a short time to run down the weight of the underworld figures and take away the tinsel crowns of the little Caesars.

That was spectacular work and it won the admiration of the public and justified additional appropriations. But it was the quiet, routine, undercover accomplishments, beginning before Pearl Harbor and carried through afterward, which were the most creditable of all. In the 30 hours following the attack, the FBI arrested about 1800 enemy aliens whom it had been watching for many months previously.

This was an admirable beginning and the record to date has been just as noteworthy. There has been no Black Tom explosion. We have had little sabotage of any kind. That disruption of industrial output on which the Nazis counted confidently did not take place. Even the thousands of Japanese on the west coast were taken care of individually or en masse.

Today we have a federal agency which will stand comparison with Scotland Yard and with the French police of other days, although the tasks of the FBI are infinitely more difficult than those of the foreign counterparts. We are indebted mainly to Mr. Hoover for this achievement. He reorganized well, he has administered skillfully and, what is extremely important, he has managed to keep his office free from politics and to win the confidence of the public. He and the agency both deserve congratulations on this anniversary.

Dear Tom:

I see by the current press that a resolution has been introduced proposing a medal to Mr. J. Edgar Hoover for meritorious service in time of war as well as in peace as head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and I hasten to express to you what I know is in your own heart, - a sincere and cordial endorsement of that proposal.

As you know, I have been a student of men, and, as you further know and have known all down the years, few men have had more opportunity to or been closer students of men in public life than have I. And, as you also know, my one criterion has been, "Have these men served their trust faithfully?" By these critical, impersonal and far-reaching studies, I have been able to arrive at somewhat conclusive judgments of a large number of our public and prominent men.

In my mind and in such judgment, no man in America has served the cause of this nation more faithfully, more ceaselessly, more unselfishly than has J. Edgar Hoover, nor has any been more forward-looking as to the dangers confronting this nation or fought more tirelessly to be prepared to meet and thwart those dangers when they should come. In a word, J. Edgar Hoover is the epitome of the whole people's faith in their government, for he has not let them down, nor verily do I believe that he ever would.

He therefore deserves that recognition, richly. And it should be bestowed in as solemn a public ceremony with as many outstanding representatives of all branches of the government as well as of the common people who are the backbone of this nation and whom he and his fine staffs serve so heroically and in such quiet unassumption, as possible present.

Sincerely,

RHM-hr ENCL CTT

I think the job you have done, and are doing, is one of the greatest pieces of national defense that any man or any organization has ever done in the history of the United States. If this medal is the Congressional Medal of Honor, it isn't big enough, but whatever the nature of the recognition may be, you have the satisfaction of knowing that among the men in the United States charged with the responsibility of enforcing the law, you have been first in being awarded a distinguished service citation, which is in the heart of every peace officer in the United States.

Ambassador Presents Order of Police Merit To FBI Director

The Cuban government yesterday conferred upon FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover its highest law enforcement honor—the "Order of Police Merit."

The medal was presented in behalf of President Fulgencio Batista and Gen. Manuel Benitez, chief of the Cuban National Police, by Ambassador Aurelio F. Concheso. The presentation of the medal, which was brought to Washington by Capt. Oscar Gutierrez of the Cuban National Police, was made in Mr. Hoover's office in the Justice Department.

The Ambassador said that the medal was awarded to Mr. Hoover in recognition of his "able co-operation in the prosecution of espionage and other enemy activities."

In accepting the award Mr. Hoover said that he looked with pride upon the spirit of friendship and co-operation that exists between the Cuban National Police and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"Already the common understanding and the joint efforts of our two organizations have forged a chain of protection against the Axis forces that would raid and disturb the peace of the Americas," he declared.

"What has been accomplished in the past is only a forerunner of what we can expect in the future in maintaining the security of our two countries."

Holland Society Awards FBI Director Medal For Outstanding Service

By JAY LEWIS

When J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, was presented with the gold medal of standing service by the Holland Society of New York at the annual dinner of that organization, those present were informed by William Van Wyck, president of the Holland Society, that the award was made for outstanding important, or meritorious work public servant in the past year, said Mr. Van Wyck as he pinned the medal on the lapel of Mr. Hoover's coat.

That was last Thursday night in the Plaza hotel, New York.

Everybody stood and applauded and certainly it seemed as if Mr. Hoover's cup of happiness was overflowing. And it ought to have been, for the distinction of having been awarded the medal of the Holland Society is an honor keeping with the years and dignity of that body, whose members trace their lineal descent from the first settlers of New Amsterdam and the days when the Dutch East India Company started what afterward became known as the fur trade with the Indians.

Those were the days when Albany was known as Fort Orange and James II was still the Duke of York, for whom Col. Nicholls renamed New Amsterdam.

English names in the Holland Society may be traced to the fact that the Dutch came into their own again with the bloodless revolution of 1688 when James fled to France and William of Orange, who had married the daughter of James, came to the throne.

Dutch and English came into agreement, the Englishmen taking over the government. The burghers were perfectly content with the name of New York. All they wanted was liberty to pursue their ordinary lines of business in peace and without unnecessary interference. Live and let live was their motto. They were always tolerant.

The New Amsterdamers became New Yorkers.

The Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch
Norfolk, Virginia
Tuesday, November 24, 1942

This observance of the English to the Early Dutch is recognized by the Holland Society who passed descendants of the pioneer English eligible for membership. It also accounts for the names of some descendants of the Early Huguenots which appear on the membership rolls.

The gold medal of the society also has an interesting background. It is an enlarged reproduction of the first medal, or coin, on which the American flag appears thirteen stars as well as thirteen stripes. The medal was struck in Holland, probably at The Hague, in 1782, a year before the peace of Paris was signed and the United States was recognized by Great Britain. It commemorated a treaty of commerce between Holland and the United States and confirmed the impression in England that the Dutch looked with favor on the American colonies.

It was into The Texel that Paul Jones took his prizes, the Serapis and her consort, after the immortal seafight off Flamborough Head, a fact that James W. Gerard did not fail to include in his address.

The former ambassador did not deliver the address. Much to his own disappointment and the regret of the sympathetic society, he was unable to attend.

It seems Mr. Gerard, who now must be close to 75, was having his afternoon constitutional in the neighborhood of his home, a day or two before the dinner. Just as he stepped off the sidewalk at the 66th street corner of Fifth avenue, a big motor truck came tearing in his direction.

Being of the opinion that motor trucks apparently recklessly operated are good things to avoid Mr. Gerard stepped backward and came in contact with a hydrant he had not noticed. He fell heavily, struck the back part of his head and was considerably shaken up.

His physicians refused to allow the former ambassador to attend the banquet but his speech was of such importance that Mr. Van Wyck decided that it would have to be presented by deputy.

Judge Henry E. Ackerson, Jr., of the Supreme Court of New Jersey, was chosen to read the address and he certainly brought out every point in the forceful oration.

Mr. Gerard's address was short, direct and unmistakably a hit with all who heard it, especially his reference to those who would do away with the Bill of Rights.

The articles in the Bill of Rights, he said, was the essence of freedom and democracy. They might be added to but nothing should be taken from them and while he made no reference to the part that George Mason played in getting them into the constitution of the United States he told all present that the rights of free speech, free assembly and to petition were incorporated in the demands made by the Dutch burghers of William the Silent when the father of the Dutch Republic led the fight against Spanish tyrants.

Nor was the speech made by the medalist, J. Edgar Hoover, any less effective. He brought his audience to their feet and received a salvo of applause that must have warmed his entire being, so hearty and spontaneous was the tribute and the congratulations that were showered upon him at the finish made it evident that everyone present agreed with his expressed sentiments.

Incidentally, Mr. Hoover was introduced by Harold O. Voorhis, treasurer of the society, in a particularly apt presentation of Mr. Hoover and his work as director of the FBI, the only head of a bureau in Washington who was not considered a bureaucrat, said Mr. Voorhis, a statement that brought out a sharp volley of applause.

You will have noticed that the burgher guard appeared in the serving of the Hutsot. On the menu it was recorded as Hutsot Bizzonder but to the Holland Society members it was a rite in remembrance of the siege of Leyden by the Spaniards, delivered by the Prince of Orange and the Master Beggars when all seemed lost. They broke down dikes and flooded the land so that the ships bearing food and munitions might reach the beleaguered city.

The flood forced the Spaniards to flee and the people of the city sallying forth 365 years ago, found in the deserted catup a savory dish stewing upon the fire. To the famished heroes of Leyden that stew was a feast, never to be forgotten and today it is known as the Hutsot.

Even the distinguished guests thought the Hutsot the best portion of the dinner, for it was a savory stew.

The distinguished guests included J. A. Gastmann, consul general of the Netherlands in New York; Rear Admiral Reginald H. Edwards, governor of the New York Society of the Founders and Patriots of America; David Van Pelt, president of The Netherlands Society of Philadelphia; Maxmore Kendall, president of the New York chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution; Edward R. Edwards, president of the St. David's Society of the State of New York; George D. N. Haggard, president of St. George's Society of the State of New York; William W. Drake, president of the St. Andrew's Society of the State of New York; John F. Phelan, of the board of stewards of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick of New York; Col. Francis R. Stoddard, president of the St. Nicholas Society of New York; Ralph A. Burnet, president of the Sons of the Revolution in the State of New York; King Smith, governor of the Society of Colonial Wars in the State of New York and John Stevens Melcher, chancellor of the Colonial Order of the Garter.

Domine Segni, Dr. Seeger, of the society, also sat at the head table and pronounced the blessing on the gathering. William Van Wyck, who presided with singular dignity but with perfect poise, tact and tranquillity, kept things well in hand with never a sign of proddness.

This guest sat at Table No. 4 just in front of the presiding officer and the speakers of the evening at the head table.

At table 4 sat Col. Robert P. Day, retired British Army officer and quartermaster on the staff of Field Marshal Haig in the Old World War; B. W. L. Sommer, judge of the former mayor of Newark; Hon. Francis L. Vanden Bosch, Dr. A. C. Barlow, of the faculty of Columbia University; Hugh Bradford D. Ainslie, Talbot B. Dows, Charles L. Schenck and William Van Alstyne.

On this desk today is a souvenir of the occasion, a personal gift from the president of the Holland Society. A bronze replica of the gold medal which is awarded every year and which this year went to J. Edgar Hoover, the Director in Applied Criminology.

J. E. Hoover/Awarded Public Service Medal

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was awarded the Gold Medal of the Holland Society for Distinguished Public Service last night.

The award took place at the fifty-eighth annual banquet of the organization and marked Hoover's twenty-fifth year with the FBI.

The citation was read by Harold O. Vorhies, chairman of the Holland Society Medal Award and secretary of New York University.

The latter commended Hoover for the success of his administration as head of the FBI and declared that Hoover had built the finest law enforcement agency in the world.

Through carefully selected and well-trained personnel, strategic organization, fine equipment and scientific technique.

The F. B. I. chief in his address of acceptance warned against a breakdown of the home and its teachings by a watchword that has resulted in a big increase in crime by the youth of the nation.

James W. Cagney, former ambassador to Germany, also addressed the meeting. He said that with American and British troops holding part of north Africa and driving toward complete occupation of the African-Mediterranean coast, Hitler must defend the long stretch of coast from the Pyramids almost to the gates of Istanbul.

Holland Medal for Service to FBI Chief

Special to The Chicago Herald-American.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, today holds the gold medal of the Holland Society for distinguished public service.

The award was made at the 58th annual banquet of the organization last night and marked Mr. Hoover's 25th year with the FBI.

The citation was read by Harold O. Voorhis, chairman of the Holland Society medal award and secretary of New York University. It commended Hoover for the success of his administration as head of the FBI and declared he had built the finest law enforcement agency the world has ever known through carefully selected and well trained personnel, strategic organization, fine equipment and scientific technique.

WARNING BY HOOVER.

FBI's chief in his acceptance warned against a breakdown of the home and its teachings by a wartime spirit that "has resulted in a big increase in crime by the youth of the nation."

James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany, addressing the meeting, told his listeners that with American and British troops holding part of North Africa and driving toward complete occupation of the African Mediterranean coast, Hitler must defend the long stretch of coast from the Pyrenees almost to the gates of Istanbul.

Discussing post-war treatment of Germany, Gerard suggested "a Danubian empire, a federal state with a king or emperor at its head."

SEES A "U. S. OF EUROPE."

Gerard envisioned a league to include the separate states composed of Czechs, Slavs, Croats, the Hungarians and Austrians—"all separate states, having like us a common customs frontier, a common coinage, representatives elected according to population and two senators from each state."

"Another Balkan league," he said, "might include Rumania and Jugoslavia, with Bulgaria absorbed by Jugoslavia."

Hoover also touched on the North African campaign, asserting:

"It surely marks the turning point in the war, but victories to date are not enough for we have just begun to fight."

"It is the days and weeks and months ahead that will count. Hitler cannot possibly stop our combined strength."

WESTMORELAND OBSERVER

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

July 25, 1942

My dear Mr. Hoover:

I extend to you my personal message of greetings on this day which marks the occasion of the graduation of the nineteenth class of the FBI National Police Academy. During my administration I have witnessed the establishment by you of the National Police Academy as an integral part of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Under your direction and inspiration this Academy has made an important contribution to the police of the Nation. You have trained the teachers who have carried the benefits of their training to more than one hundred thousand American police officers.

This month, I am advised, marks the seventh anniversary of the founding of the FBI National Police Academy. When I issued the Directive of September 6, 1939, Designating the FBI as the coordinating agency in the field of counterespionage, countersabotage and in other fields opposed to subversive and fifth-column activities, the FBI and the police of the Nation were ready for prompt action. The FBI and local, county and state law enforcement agencies have joined in an effective and successful undertaking in maintaining our internal security against enemy agents, while our Military, Naval and Air Forces are engaging the enemy wherever they may be found, the FBI and its cooperating agencies are finding the enemies within our gates who seek to destroy our liberty and our freedom. This work, which the men and women of the FBI are doing, is vitally essential to our war effort in order to insure our victory.

I wish to add my personal congratulations to you, since tomorrow, July 26, 1942, marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of your official services with the United States Department of Justice. Your leadership, foresight and direction have brought the Federal Bureau of Investigation to the forefront among all the law enforcement agencies of the world. Your services to our citizens and to our Nation have been conspicuous in efficiency, in effectiveness and in results. I am sure that all our people have just cause to be grateful to you for your fine work and splendid leadership both in peacetime and in war.

Very sincerely yours,

Franklin D. Roosevelt

Holland Society Awards FBI Director For Outstanding Service

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The Holland Society of America, which has its headquarters in New York, tonight presented its annual gold medal to J. E. Clegg, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, at a dinner at the Hotel Plaza here. Mr. Clegg accepted the medal in behalf of his bureau.

The medal, which was presented by George W. Gerard, president of the society, was a gold medallion with an interesting background. It is an enlarged reproduction of the first medal, or coin, on which the American flag appears, thirteen stars as well as thirteen stripes. The medal was struck in Holland, probably at The Hague, in 1782, a year before the peace of Paris was signed and the United States was recognized by Great Britain. It commemorated a treaty of commerce between Holland and the United States and confirmed the impression in England that the Dutch looked with favor on the American colonies.

It was into The Texel that Paul Jones took his prizes, the Scopis and her consort, after the immortal night off Flamborough Head, a fact that James W. Gerard did not fail to include in his address.

The former ambassador did not deliver the address. Much to his own disappointment and the regret of the sympathetic society, he was unable to attend.

It seems Mr. Gerard, who now seems to be close to 75, was having his afternoon constitutional in the neighborhood of his home, a day or two before the dinner. Just as he stepped off the sidewalk at the 60th street end of Fifth avenue, a big motor truck came tearing in his direction.

Racing of the notion that motor trucks apparently recklessly operated are good things to avoid, Mr. Gerard stepped backward and came in contact with a hydrant he had overlooked. He fell heavily, struck the back part of his head and was considerably shaken up.

The physicians refused to allow the former ambassador to attend the banquet but his speech was of such importance that Mr. Van Wyck decided that it would have to be presented by a deputy.

Justice Henry E. Ackerson, Jr., of the Supreme Court of New Jersey, was chosen to read the address and he certainly brought out every point in the forcible oration.

Mr. Gerard's address was short, direct and unmistakably a hit with all who heard it, especially his audience in those who would go away with the Bill of Rights.

The article in the Bill of Rights, he said, was the essence of American Democracy. They might be willing to let nothing should be taken from them and while he made no reference to the part the Oregon Massacre played in getting them into the constitution of the United States he told all present that the rights of free speech, the assembly and to petition were incorporated in the demands made by the Dutch members of William the Silent when the Father of the Dutch Republic led the fight against Spanish oppression.

FBI Director Hoover To Get Cuban Medal

MIAMI, Nov. 12.—Capt. Oscar Gutierrez-Barrios, of the Cuban national police, flew here today on his way to Washington, where he will present a special citation and Cuban medal to J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The citation, from President Kennedy, thanks the FBI for its cooperation in his apprehension by the German agent Henrique M. Ladd, in Cuba, and for all its running down of fugitives in the past.
