The "Daily Worker" for October 7, 1940, contained an article entitled "Eight Columbia Professors Challenge Butler 'Support War or Get Out' Edict". According to this article eight Columbia University professors had challenged Nicholas Murray Butler's edict to accept his pro-war stand or 'get out' in an open letter. The letter, released through the American Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom was signed by Robert S. Lynd, Professor of Sociology, among others. The article does not describe the nature of President Butler's edict.

On October 24, 1940, Confidential Informant [REDACTED] furnished a letter dated October 15, 1940, on the letterhead of the Michigan Committee for Academic Freedom, Detroit, Michigan. This letter purports to give the full facts concerning the dismissal of certain students at the University of Michigan.

The following is quoted from this letter:

"Because the Administrative Officers of the University of Michigan refused to give any reason for their action, and because the facts in the case point so clearly to the conclusion that these students were victimized for their activities in behalf of peace, civil liberties, and labor, considerable indignation was aroused over the case in Michigan. The Michigan Committee for Academic Freedom was organized to make explicit the sentiment of many interested people that, right or wrong, these students should have had the opportunity of defending themselves before they were barred from their university. To request the basic American right of free public trial seemed moderate and reasonable, and the Michigan Committee for Academic Freedom has been working since summer for an opening hearing on the entire case.

"The response of individuals and organizations has been quick and highly effective. The Resolutions Committee of the American Federation of Teachers', National Convention passed a resolution condemning the action of the University; similar statements were issued by the National Association For the Advancement of Colored People, the National Executive Board of the American Newspaper Guild, the UAW National Convention, the American Civil Liberties Union, and numerous other organizations. Among the nationally prominent individuals who have also declared themselves in full support of the Michigan Committee for Academic Freedom are;...H. R. S. Lynd...."

The "Daily Worker" for November 19, 1940, contained an article entitled "Conference to Protect City Schools Here Tonight". According to this article, more than 500 delegates were expected to attend a conference to "protect democracy in New York schools," on the night of November 19, 1940.

The article states that the conference was expected to center chief attention on the witch-hunt activities of the Coudert-Rapp Legislative Committee which had attempted to obtain the membership rolls of Teachers Union, Local 5 on a subpoena. Also on the attempts to force members of College Teachers Union, Local 537 to testify in "star-chamber" sessions of the committee.

According to this article, the conference was called with the aid of the New York Conference for Inalienable Rights by Professor Franz Boas of Columbia, Professors Robert S. Lynd and Dr. Wesley C. Mitchell of Columbia and others.

The pamphlet recites a number of alleged instances of denial of Civil Rights to minority groups including the Communist Party and some of its officials. In conclusion the pamphlet states: "We point out sharply that this concerted campaign to lay the basis for outright suppression of the Communist Party is reminiscent of the postwar hysteria which culminated in the now universally condemned Palmer Raids. We are not Communists, and we are not concerned at this moment with the merits or demerits of the doctrines advocated by the Communists. We are interested only in the indisputable merits of our American tradition of free speech and in the consequences to the non-Communist majority of the suppression of the Communist minority."

T-1 [REDACTED] Confidential Informant [REDACTED] furnished photostatic copies of correspondence by William Wirt Lockwood and concerning him, including a communication dated March 21, 1941, from Bob Lynd of Columbia University, New York City to Lockwood asking the latter to attempt to have Joe Barnes do a book on the Soviet Union rather than on Germany. Lynd suggested comparing Germany with Russia as to "1. relation of economic to political power in each country; 2. the social structuring of life of the common people at grass roots in each country; 3. the freedom allowed the individual in each; 4. tolerance of diversity; 5. citizenship, literacy and devices (press, etc.) serving effective participation as citizen." Lynd added, "What we need on both countries is not books pro and con, but candid appraisals of strength and weaknesses".

After being interviewed in an applicant type case in April, 1950 Lockwood advised a Bureau Agent that inasmuch as Senator McCarthy's charges against Owen Lattimore had inferred that the magazine "Amerasia" and the Institute of Pacific Relations were Communist fronts, that Lockwood's name would probably come up as a former editor of both of these organizations. Lockwood commented that while he was connected with both organizations they were maintained as academic open forums and that Philip Jaffe later with considerable bias made them instruments for his personal point of view.

The problem shapes up as follows: we had planned to send some southern educator to Atlanta for a few days to interview academic people, newspaper men, and others who would have something to say about the Talmadge situation. On the basis of the report from our investigator the executive committee would decide on such a policy. Our general idea was to use this report as a basis for getting support chiefly from southern educators, behind the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. The Association is the chief accrediting agency.

in the south. It has set up a special investigating committee but will unquestionably move slowly and hesitatingly, as such bodies always do.

"From the south we have gotten frantic letters saying: Stay out. President Graham's judgment, as far as I can tell, is that we ought to devote our efforts to supporting the Southern Association. That is fine, but how do we do it? I still feel that we ought not let ourselves be blackmailed by Governor Talmadge (it reminds me very much of the standard argument about letting Catholics handle the Coughlin situation.) Here is a possibility which may satisfy people like [redacted]. Why can't we send an investigator down quietly? We could then use his report as a way of getting support for the Southern Association without any publicity.

The point to talk over with Graham is how can we best do what he thinks we ought to do.

2. [redacted] address is [redacted]

[redacted] Washington, D. C. I am enclosing a carbon of the letter which we sent to him. We sent the Shanley and Patterson reports and the Committee's statement to several members of the Council of the A.A.U.P. Quite a few have replied and the general tenor of the replies is that this is definitely a matter for the Council. Several people have written to us to make sure that we have written to [redacted]. Apparently he is a key man. However there are two things to take
