Of The World Staff.
Underworld sources in Tulsa furnished information used by postal inspectors and members of the Kansas state highway patrol when they raided a summer cottage near Hot Springs, Ark., in an effort to apprehend Alvin Karpis, public enemy No. 1, and two of his associates.

It was learned from sources here known to be reliable that Col. Wint Smith, head of the highway patrol, and one of his operatives, Joe Anderson, conferred with Tulsa officers and postal inspectors prior to the raid and got information that Karpis was "cooling off" near the Arkansas resort city.

Reported Unsuccessful.

Whether or not Karpis or his com-Whether or not Karpis or his companions were arrested could not be definitely ascertained early Tuesday morning. But Colonel Smith, in a communication to his Topeka headquarters, advised Frank Stone, his assistant, that neither Karpis nor any of his:companions were arrested.

Police Chief Joe Wakelin of Hot Springs corroborated Smith's statement.

Mr. Nathan

The raid resulted from information obtained through federal operatives at Tulsa and a man listed as Gover (Burrhead) Keady. There was no one in the house when the raiders arrived. I know that the raid was unsuccessful."

The Hot Springs chief's story, however, conflicts with earlier reports of the raid. Associated Press dispatches said two men and a girl were taken into custody and removed from the Arkansas city in an airplane.

moved from the Arkansas city in an airplane.

It was known that the postal inspectors were searching for Karpis, a second-rate Chicago hoodlum using the name of Harold Johnson and a girl whose name was not revealed. Although Karpis is primarily wanted in connection with the $200,000 Bremer kidnaping at St. Paul in 1934, the raid was in connection with the $46,500 Garrettsville, Ohio, mail train robbery Nevember 7, 1935.

Karpis, Harry Campbell, also of Tulsa and four others were named in connection with the mail train robbery after the arrest here February 24 of Keady, Tulsa gambler and underworld bodyguard.

Keady Identified.

Keady Identified. Keady was apprehended at a North Main street beer parlor by a picked squad of policemen and postal inspectors and was returned to Cleveland in connection with the mail robbery.

Arraigned in federal court there he is said to have been identified by at least two persons who witnessed the robbery of the Erie passenger Keady's haunts and associates have been checked closely here since he has been in custody and although denied by police, it is known that the Hot Springs tip originated with Keady's Tulsa friends who hoped to halp him.

Keady's Tulsa friends who hoped to help him.

Capt. W. E. Bassham of the Tulsa police department and Lieut. Earl Gardner admitted Monday they knew the Hot Springs raid was planned, but denied department of justice agents participated.

Lieutenant Gardner was the Tulsa officer who arrested Keady when he was taken to Cleveland. He said Keady had been traced for weeks following the Ohio robbery. S. E. Hattrick, Cleveland postal inspector, also had the Tulsa gambler under surveillance for several days before his arrest, believing the Tulsan would join other members of the gang.

Keady, known under a number of aliases, has been a Tulsa underworld character for a number of years. He once served as bodyguard for George Hurford, horse-race bookmaker.

Springs corroborated comment.

"Members of the Kansas state highway patrol, post office inspectors and Arkansas officers made a raid on the outskirts of this city for Alvin Karpis," Chief Wakelin said, according to Associated Press dispatches.

However, Wakelin agreed to discuss the case after he was informed that Wint Smith, chief of the Kansas State Police, had been quoted in an official statement as saying that the raid failed to apprehend Karpis, wanted for the $200,000 Bremer kidnaping at St Paul in 1934. Smith said he believed Karpis had been in the cottage, but had left.

No confirmation of Smith's statement was forthcoming from Federal operatives. Chapman Fletcher, chief of government agents in Arkansas, declared, "I didn't even know any Kansas highway patrolmen had been in the state."

Chief Wakelin said that the raid

Hot Springs—Federal agents who early yesterday swooped down upon a lonely summer cottage near this city on the Malvern road, firing tear gas bombs into the structure, prepared to leave the scene of the raid today after standing guard over the house through the night.

The agents still had given no hint as to the success or failure of their surprise move.

Several operatives, apparently in charge, met with representatives of the owners of the house this morning and made arrangements to pay for damage caused by the firing of the tear gas bombs into the house. A bed in one room caught fire when one of the missiles landed upon it.

Meanwhile, only conflicting reports were heard as a reminder of the secret raid, in which some said Alvin Karpis, the nation's No. 1 public enemy, was captured.

There were those who were confident the agents arrested the parties they sought, while others were equally certain that occupants of the house fled before the agents hurled their gas bombs through windows on both sides.

Chief of Police Joe Wakelin of Hot Springs said: "I know the raid was unsuccessful. There was no one in the house when the raiders arrived."

On the other hand, there was the statement of a Hot Springs farmer who told newspapermen he saw two men and a woman apparently in custody of five armed agents, a short time after the raid. Hot Springs officers said they considered the informant thoroughly reliable, and were puzzled at his statement, which conflicted with their reports.

Others who said they were passing by the scene of the raid a short time after agents stormed the house reported seeing several of the cars accupid by agents whisk away in the direction of Malvern, lending strength to reports that the raid was a success.

The agents themselves were non-committal.

At Little Rock it was learned that one of three agents who arrived there Sunday by plane from Cleveland had been checked out of his hotel by his two fellow agents, indicating that this agent left for so me unnanounced destination that the raid.

A sheek of airports falled to reveal flights by any specially charbered planes in which the G-men insight have transferred persons seized in the raid.

The exact number of agents participating in the raid could not be determined, with one agent replying to such a question with the statement: "I didn't count them"

But Chief Wakelin announced that Kansas state police and postoffice department investigators aided the G-men in their raid.

Lieut. Col. Wint Smith, whief of the Kansas state police, telephoned his Topeks office that the drive failed to snare Karpis, expressing the belief that the fugitive had been there but had left. Frank Stone, assistant to Smith, quoted his chief as saying he learned definitely that no arrests were made in the raid but that he did not know whether any had been made elsewhere. He said he was on the scene shortly after the raid.

"I didn't even know any Kansas highway patrolmen had been in the state. What authority would they have here," declared Chapmon Fletcher, chief of Arkansas government agents, when informed of Smith's announcement. No further comment was forthcoming on reports of the Karpis hunt or that the federals had taken several prisoners in the drive.

Doubt that an arrest had been made was expressed by Chief of Detectives Herbert Akers of Hot Springs, who displayed a police circular requesting detention of a man described as J. Milton Lett, south Coffeeville, Okla. He reported he believed Lett "and other fugitives were the objects of the federal hunt in this area" saying Lett was wanted by both federal and state officers for a bank robbery.

Wakelin stated the raid resulted from information gained by the operatives from a man he identified as Grover "Bur Head" Keady, Tulsa, Okla. He reported the man now in custody but did not know where he was held.

He quoted Smith and Joe Anderson, a member of the Kansas state police, as saying they were in the raiding party and that it was a failure.

Ben Murray, hog buyer, said he was "stopped by G-men" and questioned when he slowed his car in passing the place while the raid was in progress, observed two men and a woman apparently guarded by five armed agents in a drive near the house but was forced to drive off before determining what disposition was made of them.

Reports of a strange ambulance bringing "several persons" to a hospital also were heard, but a check here and in surrounding towns failed to disclose such a trip.

Officers questioned a negro maid formerly employed in the raided house by previous occupants. She reported she had not worked for those who recently lived there but had seen them when two men and two women arranged to rent the place about a month ago.

Officers reported the place, atop a hill and commanding a view in all directions, was believed to have been used once as a hideout by Pretty Boy Floyd before he was slain. The 27-year-old Karpis, accused of kidnaping Edward G. Bremer at St. Paul in 1934, also was reported to have gained a hideout in the neighborhood on Lake Hamilton only last fall.

Hot Springs Police Learn They Had Narrow Escape.

Hot Springs officers learned several weeks ago that Karpis was in this vicinity. They received their first tip on a Sunday when a car stopped in front of a drug store on lower Central avenue and a man went inside to buy bandages and antiseptics. A clerk in the store suggested that the person for whom they were intended might seed the services of a physician.

His suggestion was received so cold that the clerk became suspicious and notified the police.

Police learned, that the occupants of the car had rented a cottage on Lake Hamilton. They went out there the same afternoon but found the cottage apparently deserted. Since they did not have a search warrant, they did not attempt to enter.

Later they learned that Karpis and one of his men were inside the house at the time, prepared to kill the officers if they had attempted to enter.

The occupants of the cottage left immediately following the visit of the police.

Pingerprints obtained from the cottage were said to have established that Karpis had been there.

Hoping to throw the thugs off their guard, however, the police announced that their visit to the cottage was due to a mistaken tip and that they had learned that the cottage was occupied by a well-known and highly respected business man of Toledo, O.

Negro Girl Identifies Photograph of Hunter.

Following their visit to the house, the Hot Springs police officers interviewed a young Negro girl who formerly had worked at the house as a maid.

She said that three weeks ago a man

there and work for them.

The girl told them that she wanted to go back to school and so declined the offer.

She was shown a photograph of Hunter and asked if it resembled the man to whom she had talked.

"Yes, that looks just like him," was the reply. She said that he was the only man she had seen at the place.

The house is owned by E. E. Wood-cock of Hot Springs, who is in Louisiana at present. His son, Ernest, said that his father had leased the house about six weeks ago and that it had been occupied for about two weeks. He did not know who leased the house nor how many persons had been occu-

Special to the Gazette.

Hot Springs, March 30.—It was learned here late tonight that federal officers who raided a cottage on Lake Catherine, six miles southeast of Hot Springs early this morning, arrested at least one man. There is a possibility that two men might have been arrested.

The prisoner, or prisoners, were rushed away immediately. It is believed that they were taken either to Kansas City or Cleveland.

It was learned that the federal officers were looking for a man named Campbell, as well as for Karpis. Campbell is said to have been implicated in a train robbery, and to have been an associate of Karpis.

Also it was learned that the federal officers who made the raid this morning included postal inspectors and Kan-sas Highway Patrol officers as well as men from the Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation. To Capture Karpis.

Springs and on the road to Malvern early this morning.

They had hoped to capture Alvin Karpis, the nation's public Enemy No. 1, and his chief lieutenant, Harold Hunter, alias Fred King.

Although the government men announced that they found no one in the house there was an apparently well-founded report that they captured a man and a woman. It was believed that if any prisoners were taken, they were rushed to the Hot Springs airport and taken away in a plane. It was established that several planes arrived and left the airport during the early morning hours.

Hot Springs police said that they know that Karpis and one of his gangsters occupied the house several weeks ago. This was proved by fingerprints. They believed, however that the gunmen left hastily after police paid a visit to the house.

The raided house which is close to Potash Sulphur Springs, is located on a hill that commands a view of Lake Catherine and of the surrounding country, including roads that lead to the house.

Just Who U.S. Agents Did or Did Not Capture, Big Mystery Of Raid on Hot Springs House

By DEANE ALLEN. (Staff Correspondent.)

Hot Springs — Just who Federal question of the day in this city with dozens of theories and guesses being advanced as to the possible quarry.

The question was almost as important as the one, "Did they make an arrest of any kind?"

One Federal agent described the person as "a big shot." That set newspaper men to discussing who they consider "big shots."

Another officer, when asked the question, "Who are you looking for?" replied: "A fugitive from justice."

Others said they wanted a bank.

robber, a murderer, a train robber, a kidnapper, etc.

But the general belief was that Alvin Karpis, Public Enemy No. 1, was the man the Federal agents either captured or missed and one officer, not a Federal agent, remarked: "There was a $12,000 reward up for the man the agents expected to arrest. Now how many fugitives can you name who are worth that much money?"

He went on to answer his question by saying that there are two rewards up for Karpis, one of $10,000 and the other of $2,000.

Newspapermen and spectators alike were impressed by the way in which Federal agents covered the territory near the summer home following their raid. In charse of a feet of high-powered sedans, all heaving sither Oklahoms or Kansas

This person declined to say whether he had been questioned by the agents, but one of the long black cars was seen driving away as the newspapermen approached.

The agents looked through his car, he said, and then told him to turn around and go back and wait awhile. All persons were warned to stay away from the vicinity of the house.

Federal Agents Closely Inspect Hot Springs House; Persons Reported Taken Into Custody. By the Associated Press.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 31.
—Department of Justice agents who raided a summer cottage near here yesterday in a reputedly unsuccessful quest for Alvin Karpis, the No. 1 public enemy, today arranged with the owner to pay for property damaged in the raid, and prepared to vacate the cottage.

A large squad remained at the house during the night and this morning taking fingerprints from walls, furniture and personal effects found at the place, meantime maintaining silence on what quarry had prompted the rush on the hilltop residence.

Hot Springs police and Kansas state police who were in Hot Springs during the raid, expressed the belief it was an unsuccessful one, but persons living near the house still said three persons were taken into custody. Karpis, whose name has been linked with many crimes, is wanted principally for the $200,000 Bremer kidnaping of 1824.

Department of Justice agents who surrounded this comfortable farm house on a hilltop near Hot Springs, fired tear gas bombs into it and then occupied it in a raid about which they were highly secretive. Members of the raiding party declined to confirm or deny, a report that a man and two women were captured in the house or to discuss a report that they were seeking Alvin Karpis. One of the bombs ignited a bed. The partially burned mattress is shown in the left foreground. It was thrown out a window and the blaze beaten out.

Raiders Say They Failed To Capture Karpis.

A squad of not less than 15 government agents, brought here in airplanes and cars from Ohio, Oklahoma, Kansas and Arkansas, raided a two-story house at Lawrence Station, southeast of Hot Springs and on the road to Malvern early this morning.

They had hoped to capture Alvin Karpis, the nation's public Enemy No.

1, and his chief lieutenant, Harold

Hunter, alias Fred King.

Although the government men announced that they found no one in the house there was an apparently well-founded report that they captured a man and a woman. It was believed that if any prisoners were taken, they were rushed to the Hot Springs airport and taken away in a plane. It was established that several planes arrived and left the airport during the early morning hours.

Hot Springs police said that they know that Karpis and one of his gangsters occupied the house several weeks ago. This was proved by fingerprints. They believed, however that the gunmen left hastily after police paid a visit to the house.

The raided house which is close to Potash Sulphur Springs, is located on a hill that commands a view of Lake Catherine and of the surrounding country, including roads that lead to the house.

Visitors to Scene of Raid Meet Frosty Reception.

In the raid the federal officers crept close to the house and then shot out the windows with guns that fired tear bombs.

The sound of the shooting caused persons living in that section to hurry to the scene. They met with a frosty reception.

First to arrive at the road that leads from the Hot Springs-Malvern highway to the house was Mac McGuire, 45. He was stopped at the entrance to the grounds and compelled to remain within sight of several armed men hiding behind trees. He was compelled to stand there for about a half-hour, he estimated.

Other persons living in the vicinity were forbidden to enter the grounds. When news of the raid reached Hot Springs police headquarters, Chief Joe Wakelin, Chief of Detectives Herbert Akers, Lieut. Oecil Brock and newspapermen hurried to the scene.

In the rear of the raided house they were met by a squad of five government men, none of whom would reveal his

The man who appeared to be in charge of the quintette, told Chief Wakelin that no one was in the house.

The Gazette correspondent noted that a room on the second floor had been damaged by fire. On the ground beneath a window of the room were a partly burned mattress and pillows. He asked as to the cause of the fire and one of the government men replied that the fire had started when gas bombs and flares were shot into the house. He added that he and his companions had rushed in and extinguished the glames.

All the members of the raiding party were well equipped for their work. Each wore a bullet-proof vest and carried a gas mask.

When the correspondent asked parmission to look around, one of the federal officers snapped:

"Don't go in front of the house."
"Why not" asked the newspaper man,
"You might meet with a warm reception. Some of our men are in there and might not recognize you."

Observer Declares Two Persons Taken Prisoner.

The government men repeated (almost too emphatically, the correspondent thought) that no one was in the house when they broke into it.

However, a man who is well-known to Hot Springs officers and whom they consider thoroughly reliable, told Chief Wakelin and Detective Akers that he saw a car coming out of the grounds containing a government officer who seemed to be guarding a man and a woman.

Hot Springs Police Learn They Had Narrow Escape.

Hot Springs officers learned several weeks ago that Karpis was in this vicinity. They received their first tip on a Sunday when a car stopped in front of a drug store on lower Central avenue and a man went inside to buy bandages and antiseptics. A clerk in the store suggested that the person for whom they were intended might need the services of a physician.

His suggestion was received so coldly that the clerk became suspicious and notified the police.

Police learned that the occupants of the car had rented a cottage on Lake Hamilton. They went out there the same afternoon but found the cottage apparently deserted. Since they did not have a search warrant, they did not attempt to enter.

Later they learned that Karpis and one of his men were inside the house at the time, prepared to kill the officers if they had attempted to enter.

The occupants of the cottage left immediately following the visit of the police.

Fingerprints obtained from the cottage were said to have established that Karpis had been there.

Hoping to throw the thugs off their guard, however, the police announced that their visit to the cottage was due to a mistaken tip and that they had learned that the cottage was occupied by a well-known and highly respected business man of Toledo. O.

Negro Girl Identifies Photograph of Hunter.

Pollowing their visit to the house, the Hot Springs police officers interviewed a young Negro girl who formerly had worked at the house as a maid.

She said that three weeks ago a man and a woman came there and said that they had rented the house and asked of she would like to continue to stay there and work for them.

The girl told them that she wanted to go back to school and so declined the offer.

"She was shown a photograph of Equater and saked if it resembled the man to whom she had talked.

"Yes, that looks just like him," was the reply. She said that he was the snly man she had seen at the place,

The house is owned by E. E. Wood-sock of Hot Springs, who is in Louis-lana at present. His son, Ernest, said that his father had leased the house about six weeks ago and that it had been occupied for about two weeks. He did not know who leased the house nor how many persons had been occupying it.

Today's raid was made without knowledge of either Garland county er Hot Springs efficers.

Karpis Reported to Have Been Frequent Visitor.

It was reported here today that Karpis and his men have been frequent visitors in Hot Springs. It was said that they came here in planes sometimes, but more frequently in cars.

Karpis has long been hunted in connection with the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, brewer of St. Paul, Minn., who paid $200,000 to obtain his release.

Search Woods Near Malvern All Night as Result of Report.

State Police, Pulaski and Hot Spring county officers early today ended an all-night search of woods near Malvern for a man believed to have been Alvin Karpis, the nation's No. 1 public enemy, who is wanted in the $200,000 Bremer kidnaping.

Karpis is reported to have been the person sought in a raid on a house near Hot Springs by federal agents early Monday. The Department of Justice has not yet announced whether any arrests were made as a result of the raid.

Superintendent of State Police Gray Albright, Lieut. J. Earl Scroggin, state police identification expert; Pulaski county deputies Narkinsky and Stubbs and Sheriff T. S. Fisher of Malvern participated in the search.

Fisher of Malvern participated in the search.
Superintendent Albright said the learch was made after Sheriff Fishir received a report that one of three nen who drove a large car into the woods near Malvern, resembled lewspaper photographs of Karpis.
"A man living in the vicinity told the sheriff that he saw the car, which bore a New Jersey license plate, leave the highway and go into the woods about dusk yesterday." Albright said.

leave the highway and go into the woods about dusk yesterday." Albright said.

"He said that one of the three men in it looked like Karpis. A short time later, the man reported, a smaller car turned into the woods about the same place. The smaller car was thought to have been one stolen yesterday morning at Hot Springs."

Search Proves Futile.

The state police superintendent said the party of officers went to the scene at about 10:30 last night and searched the woods until 3 a. m. today, finding no trace of either car. Chapmon Fletcher, agent in charge of the Department of Justice field office here, said today he had not been informed of the raid. He declined to say whether he believed Karpis to be in this section.

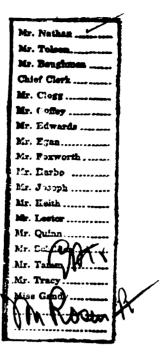

Meanwhile, federal men who raided the house near Hot Springs Monday, remained in possession of the property today, still maintaining a guard that was set up following the raid. The agents yesterday met with representatives of the owners of the house to pay for damage caused by the firing of two tear gas projectiles into the home. The windows were shattered and a bed was set on fire when one of the missiles landed upoor it.

And invariably, when the agents questioned a neighbor before newspapermen, those residents were reluctant to discuss the raid or any related incidents with the members of the press. of the press.

This person declined to say tell you if I heard a gun battle this morning."

This person declined to say whether he had been questioned by the agents, but one of the long black cars was seen driving away as the newspapermen approached.

Countless hundreds of reports on the raid seeped into Hot Springs within a few hours after the raid. The most reliable came from persons driving along the road shortly after daylight who were stopped by the agents.

One man said he was driving toward Hot Springs when he came upon two cars parked in the middle of the road blocking the highway. Two men armed with machine guns came toward him and he said he could see three other men, all armed with machine guns, standing behind nearby trees. The agents looked through his car, he said, and then told him to turn around and go back and wait awhile. All persons were warned to stay away from the vicinity of the house.

One Hot Springs man, hearing a report of the raid decided he would drive out to the house and see just what did happen. As he started up the long winding driveway to the hill-top home, he noticed that the place apparently was deserted.

"All the windows were open, but there were no cars around and I didn't see anyone near the place.

"I decided it might not be healthy up there so I turned around and drove all the way back to Hot Springs before I got up enough nerve to go back.

"Then when I did drive up to the

"Then when I did drive up to the house, several Federal men came out, asked me what I wanted and then told me to go on back to to I did."

Just how many agents participated in the raid also was an unknown factor with those who were asked the question, replying:

"I don't know. I forgot to count them."

But at one time shortly after the raid, newspapermen saw four agents outside the house, four more in cars along the road and an undetermined number in the house. It was also learned that several carloads of the agents drove away shortly after the raid and did not return to the scene.

An idea of what was going on inside the house was obtained by members of the press who glanced in windows to see men carefully going over furniture with fingerprinting equipment. No one was permitted to enter the house—not even Hot Springs or Garland county officers.

The agents were courteous and polite but emphatic in their refusals to answer questions. As one put it: "I'm a hired-hand like you are. Your orders are to ask questions, mine are to keep still. And that's the way it goes."

Some Claim Desperado Taken, While Agents Give No Hint.

By DEANE ALLEN. (Staff Correspondent.)

Hot Springs—Federal agents who early yesterday swooped down upon a lonely summer cottage near this city on the Malvern road, firing tear gas bombs into the structure, prepared to leave the scene of the raid today after standing guard over the house through the night.

The agents still had given no hint as to the success or failure of their surprise move.

Several operatives, apparently in charge, met with representatives of the owners of the house this morning and made arrangements to pay for damage caused by the firing of the tear gas bombs into the house. A bed in one room caught fire when one of the missiles landed upon it.

Meanwhile, only conflicting reports were heard as a reminder of the secret raid, in which some said Alvin Karpis, the nation's No. 1 public enemy, was captured.

There were those who were confident the agents arrested the parties they sought, while others were equally certain that occupants of the house fled before the agents hurled their gas bombs through windows on both sides.

Chief of Police Joe Wakelin of Hot Springs said: "I know the raid, was unsuccessful. There was no one in the house when the raiders ar-rived."

On the other hand, there was the statement of a Hot Springs farmer who told newspapermen he saw two wno told newspapermen he saw two men and a woman apparently in custody of five armed agents, a short time after the raid. Hot Springs officers said they considered the informant thoroughly reliable, and were puzzled at his statement, which conflicted with their recover. their reports.

Others who said they were passing by the scene of the raid a short time after agents stormed the house reported seeing several of the cars occupid by agents whisk away in the direction of Malvern, lending strength to reports that the raid was a success.

The agents themselves were noncommittal.

At Little Rock it was learned that one of three agents who arrived there Sunday by plane from Cleveland had been checked out of his hotel by his two fellow agents, indicating that this agent left for so me unnanounced destination shortly after the raid.

No Trace of Flights.

A check of airports failed to reveal flights by any specially chartered planes in which the G-men might have transferred persons seized in the raid.

The exact number of agents participating in the raid could not be determined, with one agent replying to, such a question with the statement: "I didn't count them."

But Chief Wakelin announced that Kansas state police and postoffice department investigators aided the G-men in their raid.

Lieut. Col. Wint Smith, chief of the Kansas state police, telephoned his Topeka office that the drive failed to snare Karpis, expressing the belief that the fugitive had been there but had left. Frank Stone, assistant to Smith, quoted his chief as anying he learned definitely that no arrests were made in the raid but that he did not know whether any had been made elsewhere. He said he was on the scene shortly after the raid.

Reports of a strange ambulance bringing "several persons" to a hospital also were heard, but a check here and in surrounding towns falled to disclose such a trip.

Officers questioned a negro maid formerly employed in the raided house by previous occupants. She reported she had not worked for those who recently lived there but had seen them when two men and two women arranged to rent the place about a month ago.

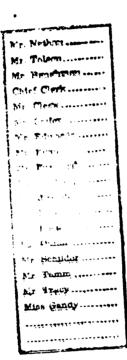

Officers reported the place, atop a hill and commanding a view in all directions, was believed to have been used once as a hideout by Pretty Boy Floyd before he was slain. The 27-year-old Karpis, accused of kidnaping Edward G. Bremer at St. Paul in 1934, also was reported to have gained a hideout in the neighborhood on Lake Hamilton only last fall.

15 PLACES RAIDED

Police Find 14 Closed; List Given by Radio "Ghost Reporter."

Fifteen two-man police squads made a foray late yesterday afternoon to as many alleged gambling resorts downtown on orders of Salety Director Eliot Ness and found all but one closed.

The raids were ordered, Ness said, after Radio Station WJAY's "Ghost Reporter," who has been predicting a series of raids in bookie joints for the last two days, telephoned a list of resorts he said were being openly conducted. .

The squads, assembled from the outlying precincts so that the members would not be recognized, found men playing cards at tables in most of the establishments, with no evidence of gambling in sight, police said. In a smoke shop at 2125 E. 2d Place itwo policemen confiscated betting slips and arrested Henry Bendau, 29, of 12720 Brackland Avenue N. E., on a charge of recording wagers.

Ness said the "Ghost Reporter," who has been conducting local exposes for nearly a week, said that the administration would be "ribbed" unless something were done about "The raids were ordered as routine operation," Ness said.

Only 3 Kidnapers Now at Large

G-men today have only three kidnapers to catch—a female impersonator, a "big time" gangster, and a Western thug—to wipe clean the "snatch racket" slate.

All other kidnaping cases since the Lindbergh baby was abducted have been solved and their perpetrators either have been executed or imprisoned. The Department of Justice has participated in solution of 62 abductions, including the Lindbergh case, since June, 1932.

At large now are the following:
Thomas H. Robinson, ir., charged with kidnaping Mrs. Alice V. Stoll in Louisville, Ey., October 8, 1934.

Alvin Karnis Public Enemy No. 1, who directed the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul, Minn., banker, on January 17, 1934.

William Mahan, Salt Lake City, who kidnaped young George Weyerhaeuser in Tacoma, Wash., last summer.

Asserting that the Ohio Penitentiary was a crime school which turned out bigger and better criminals, Frazier Reams, Lucas County prosecutor, told the Lawyers Democratic Club at Hotel Hollenden yesterday that if he were elected attorney general he would pursue the same course of action which had kelped drive crime out of Toledo.

"I don't believe that crime can be abolished," he said, "but so much of it is unnecessary. For years To-ledo had the highest crime record of

TOLEDO BLADE

No Martyry Aronol COLLECTION of evidence constituting what appeared to be one of the strongest gambling cases brought into court by the police in a long time wasn't enough to convict Bennie Aronoff. Look at the evidence and you wonder if it's necessary to bring a defendant into court and show him running a dice game in order to get a jury to decide he's guilty. A policeman testified he saw men gathered about two gambling tables shooting dice, that the lights flashed off and on, a man grabbed dice and money from the table, which the officer later recovered and identified in court. One citizen testified he lost money in a craps game at Aronoff's. Another said he placed bets on horses. Another policeman said he bought a horse race ticket, which was jerked from his hands and torn up when employes of the place became suspicious of him. Still another said he found $800 and a dice cup on a table which was covered hastily as he entered. Police Captain Clarence Fauble said there were 14 horse race charts in the place. Testimony showed Aronoff present when the raid was made. Two of these charts, some dice and dice table covers were introduced as evidence. Yet Bennie Aronoff doesn't run a gambling place. THE defense didn't have to introduce a witness. It based much of its argument on the fact that the police were singling out Aronoff for raids and arrests and letting the rest of the gambling boys run unmolested. That seems to us to be an oblique and specious argument, having nothing to do with the actual guilt or innocence of Aronoff. But it is a charge that has been heard before, and if it is necessary for the police to go out and bring in some of the others to prove that it isn't just Aronoff they're trying to get, then they should accept the challenge of this case and make the best possible case against all the others. It isn't possible, of course, to turn the whole Police Department into a gambling squad. Men are needed for other police problems, including the vitally important one of traffic control. But if the police are quite sincere in trying ti get The gamblers, let them direct those who can be assigned to gambling to go after all the gambling houses. Aronoff should not be allowed to get the martyr complex. It's up to the police to show the offensive is a general one, and not localized in Aronoff's place.

This Is the Cop Who Saved $109,000

Captain's Record Silent on How Economic Feat Was Done.

BY RALPH KELLY.

Police department records are surprisingly bare of information of Capt. Louis J. Cadek, the cop who made $109,000.

The records tell brusquely of 28 transfers in 20 years; of one suspension and an acquittal; of another suspension, dismissal and reinstatement, but nothing of how a cop could make $109,000.

The captain joined the police force in September, 1906. He was big. weighing well over 200 pounds, but that was not surprising for a cop. His first reports were not prose masterpieces, but neither was that surprising in a cop.

The records ignore him from 1906 to 1913. He was a number in the Seventh Precinct, 8205 Broadway S. E., and presumably spent his time trying doors at night, inspecting alleys and trying to think of something devastating to say, to a sarcastic sergeant.

In February, 1913, he took an examination and was made a sergeant. The records do not so state but shortly before this he met a man named Harry L. Davis who was trying to be mayor and Cadek, was of some slight service in Helping to spread the idea through the police department that Harry L. Davis was a good guy who would treat a cop right.

Safety Director Eliot Ness said Cadek had been relieved of duty rather than suspended because of the necessity of a hearing within five days in case of a suspension. Ness said he desired to do nothing to embarrass the county prosecutor in the grand jury investigation.

Director Ness and Chief Matowitz telephoned to County Prosecutor Frank T. Cullitan and offered any assistance that might be within their power in connection with the case.

Called Into Chief's Office. Capt. Cadek was called to Chief Matowitz's office late yesterday afternoon. This was after the grand jury investigation was well under way. Cadek was in the chief's office only three or four minutes. He left without making any statement. Earlier in the day he had declined to comment on the cass.

Chief Matowitz said he had told Cadek he was "relieved of duty pending the outcome of the grand jury investigation, or until we determine whether there is any basis for suspension from the force."

Cadek was appointed a patrolman Sept. 7, 1906. He was promoted to sergeant Feb. 1, 1913. He was made a lieutenant March 16, 1917, and attained his present rank May 1, 1918. A computation shows Cadek's total salary as a policeman was:

Capt. Cadek twice has been in major dimculties which brought departmental discipline. In 1932 he was suspended as a result of the notorious Nick Satulla case. This involved the "loss" of evidence in a policy game case. Cadek later was reinstated.

In 1933 Capt. Cadek was discharged from the service on charges of being willfully absent from his post and making a false report. Again he was reinstatement through the Civil Service Commission.

Observers at Central Police Station occasionally noted small occurrences in the captain's precinct which might be characterized as fishy but no one ever reported any major infractions of law or discipline.

In 1931, after 25 years of having almost been buried alive in the police department, at least as far as the public was concerned, the captain turned up as a fire-eating disciplinarian. He was then in command of the Fourth Precinct.

Nine prestitutes complained to Safety Director Edwin D. Barry that a squad under the captain's order had arrested them, taken them to the precinct station, kept them 24 hours incommunicade and had then driven them twenty miles into the country, where they were abandoned.

The evidence, several hundred policy slips, was later found in a locker at the Fourth Precinct from which it had never been moved. Cadek was surprised and said he couldn't understand how the patroiman could have made a mistake. He denied having anything to do with sending the patroiman into court to make his statement.

Cadek was acquitted of misconduct in this case, although Safety Director Frank J. Merrick said the police department's conduct concerning Satulia "stinks out loud."

Merrick and former Mayor Ray T. Miller made no secret of their distrust of Cadek. He was transferred around and in May, 1933, went to the Twelfth Precinct on the West Side, his first assignment across the river. Here he had another slight misfortune. misfortune.

A police squad, sent to investigate the presence of a drunken policeman at a restaurant in the Broadway district, found Cadek at about the same time. Davis said he was against the order and would permit nothing like it if he were again elected mayor.

Miller and Bafety Director E. E. Adams fired Cadek on charges of being absent from his post of duty and the Civil Service Commission reinstated him. Adams sued in the Court of Appeals to force the commission to rescind its order but Davis won the mayoralty just then.

Ezra Z. Shapiro, law director for Davis, dismissed the suit instituted by Adams.

A year later Cadek was in a mild brush with authorities when it was revealed that a dedendant in Police Court showed up with a card written by Cadek to Milton S. Firestone, Police Court lawyer, asking Firestone: "Kindly take care of this man; do not overcharge."

Cadek said he was an enemy of Firestone and couldn't understand the note. He finally admited writing happened after the usual investigating entery and things went on a usual.

May Be Beginning.

For years the rumor has kept itself alive that a few men in the Cleveland police department were "on the take." Suspicion had the habit of centering about a fixed small number in the department. Investigations have been started. Proof of guilt seemed impossible to get.

Facts now being unearthed in connection with Police Captain Louis J. Cadek may serve as a starting point for the kind of far-reaching, official inquiry that has long been needed. Cadek is relieved of duty pending the sifting of these charges.

Cadek has for years served in police precincts where vice, gambling and—in other days—bootlegging were reputedly most prevalent. Occasionally he was subject to measures of discipline by his superiors.

In Cadek's years as a policeman he received in wages less than $68,000. Yet it is now shown that he accumulated and deposited to his credit, though sometimes under assumed names, the tidy little fortune of $109,000. The question in which the public and the grand jury are interested is where the captain got the money. If he got it honestly he, need not hesitate to say where. If it came to him by methods which thrive best in the dark, that's a concern of the community and the law.

Testimony is now being heard in the grand jury room. Underworld characters are being called in. If "protection" from police interference was bought and paid for, these are the individuals who can tell the story. They know whether money was thus spent to thwart the law and, at least in a general way, to whom it went.

This may well be the beginning of a better day in the police department. Let the trail of alleged corruption lead where it will, and the penalties suit the offense.

The suspended captain must answer to the state if a crime was committed. He must answer to his superiors if their trust in him as a policeman was violated. In either case he must answer to the community whose order and safety he has pretended to cherish and protect.

Ness Expects Matowitz to Suspend Captain, May Withhold Final Decision Until Verdict.

HUGHES, VEASEY PROBE CASE; BAIL IS $10,000

'Not Guilty' Plea Expected at Arraignment on Five Bribery Counts.

Machinery for the ousting of Capt. Louis J. Cadek from the police department was set in motion late yesterday after his indictment on five counts charging soliciting and acceptance of bribes in the precincts he commanded during prohibition days. police-captain, who amassed saving accounts totaling $109,000 in three prohibition years while his entire salary for 30 years in the department was only $68,000, had solicited and accepted two automobiles and $26,000 in cash from two men for protection from enforcement of the liquor laws.

Police Chief George J. Matowitz assigned Inspector James J. Hughes and Deputy Inspector James E. Veasey to investigate the charges against Cadek and to make a report today on which departmental charges are expected to be based.

Will Plead Not Gullty. Safety Director Eliot Ness said be expected Chief Matowitz to suspend Cadek immediately upon filing of the charges. The director said regulations demanded that Cadek be given a hearing within five days after the Ming. He said he was advised, however, that he might withhold his decision until disposition was made of the criminal charges,

"That would be the fair thing to do," Ness said. "I don't believe any final action should be taken on the departmental charges until Capt. Cadek has had his day in court on the criminal charges. We can act then on these matters as they affect his status in the department."

Cadek is to be arraigned before Common Pleas Judge Frederick P. Walther today. Gerard J. Pilliod, counsel for the accused captain, was in court when Thomas C. Martinec, foreman of the grand jury, presented the indictment to Judge Walther.

Pilliod said Cadek would plead not guilty to the charges. He said neither Cadek nor he would have any further statement to make. "We will meet the issues in court," reporters.

The directors of the federal bureau of investigation said the Hamm kidnaping involved "the same gang" as the kidnaping of Edward Bremer, in which the Barker-Karpis gang was involved.

Those arrested were named as Charles J. Fitzgerald, Jack Pfeiffer and Edward C. Batholmey, postmaster at Bensonville, Ill. All suspects are now in St. Paul or en route there, Hoover

Also involved in the Hamm case, he announced, are Byron Bolton, now in jail at St. Paul for the Bremer kidnaping, Elmer Farmer, also convicted in the Bremer case, Arthur (Doc) Barker, serving sentence & Alcatraz island, California penitentiary, Fred Barker, killed by federal agents in a battle at Oklawaha. The actual perpetrators of the kidnaping were named by Hoover as Alvin Karpis, Arthur and Fred Barker, Fred (Shotgun Zeigler) Goetz, since killed; Fitzgerald and Bolton.

Hoover said "there may be more arrests soon." He added that all those arrested today had been charged under secret warrants on April 11.

The investigation chief said Mr. Hamm this morning identified the home of Bartholmey as the house in which he was held while the kidnapers awaited payment of $100,000 ranson which secured his release.

Kidnapad.June 15, 1933.

Hamm was kidnaped about 12:45 p. m., on Thursday, June 15, 1933, immediately after he had departed from his office in the Theodore Hamm Brewing sompany for luncheon. He was taken to a hideout where he was held until June 19, 1933. He was released at a point near Wyoming, Minn., after payment of the ransom. Hamm was president of the Brewing company.

Hoover said Pitzgerald was arrested in Los Angeles, Pfeiffer in St. Paul, and Bartholmey in Bensenville.

Karpis Is Only Plotter Still Evading Toils

Three in Prison, Two Dead of Outlaw Band That Snatched Wealthy Brewer and Collected $100,000 in Ransom

By United Press

WASHINGTON, April 18—Federal agents today lifted the curtain of mystery from the kidnaping three years ago of William A. Hamm Jr. with announcement that three alleged abductors had been arrested, three are in prison, two are dead and one—the notorious Alvin Karpis—at large.

The $100,000 kidnaping of Hamm, wealthy St. Paul brewer, was one of the few "unsolved" cases on the books of the federal bureau of investigation, which has long waged a search for Karpis as public enemy No. 1.

Widely Separated

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the federal bureau, announced that federal agents, striking simultaneously at three widely separated points, arrested:

Charles J. Fitzgerald, in Los Angels

geles.
Jack Pfeiffer, in St. Paul.
Edward C. Bartholmey, postmaster at Bensonville, Ill.
Hoover said in addition to the men arrested yesterday, the following were involved in the abduc-

Bryan Bolton, now in jail in St.

Paul.
Fred C. Goetz, known as "Shot-gun Ziegler," now dead.
Fred Barker, brother of Arthur,

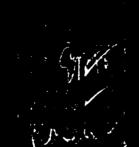

now dead.
Alvin Karpis, public enemy No. 1.

The Hamm kidnaping case was one of the most sensational in a series of abductions dating from the Lindbergh frime and drawing the federal agents into a nation-wide drive to stomp out the racket.

High Spots in Chase

Karpis once escaped when he shot his way out of an Atlantic City hotel.

shot his way out of an Atlantic City hotel.

Agents arrested "Doc" Barker and held him in Chicago and later closed in on Fred Barker in Florida.

In a machine gun battle with the outlaws, who were hiding out in an isolated house, Fred Barker and his mother, known to gangsters as "Ma" Barker, were killed. The agents said they found a smoking machine gun in the dead woman's hands.

Hamm was abducted shortly after noon on June 15, 1933, just as he left his office for luncheon.

He was taken to the Bensonville hideout, held there until June 19 and then released near Wyoming. Minn., after an intermediary had made the ransom payments.

Hoover told how William W. Dunn, an official of the Hamm Brewing company, received a telephone call less than two hours after the kidnaping, in which an anonymous person told him, "We have Mr. Hamm," and said Hamm was being held for $100.000 ransom.

Ransom 1s Paid

Ransom Is Paid

On June 16 Dunn received a telephone coll at 1/20 a. m., warning him against telling police of the telephonic communications.

Punn shortly thereafter received detailed instructions for delivery of the money, together with a warning that if instructions were not followed out the ransom would be increased to $150,000.

Dunn delivered the money by dropping the pakage on highway No. 61 near St. Paul.

"The investigation was continued by special agents of the bureau." Hoover's formal statement continued, and it has now been definitely ascertained that the kidnaping was perpetrated by Alvin Karpis Arthur R. Barker, Fred Barker, Fred Goetz, Charles J. Fitzgerald and William Bryan Bolton.

"Investigation has further disclosed that Mr. Hamm was held at the home of Edward C. Bartholmey, at present posimaster of Benson-ville"

Hoover said the warrants were issued by a federal district court judge charging Pirgenald Bolton Karpis, Barker, Efeiffer, Bartholmey and Farmer both "Conspiracy to kidnap William A. Hamm Jr."

SEEK TO INDICT SEVEN FOR HAMM KIDNAPING TOMORROW IN ST. PAUL

St. Paul, Minn., April 19.—[Special.] Indictment of seven men on charges of participating in the $100,000 ransome kidnaping of William Hamm Jr. wealthy St. Paul brewer, in June, 1933, will be sought here Tuesday when the federal grand jury convenes, according to George F. Sullivan, United States district attorney.

Alvin Karpis, national Public Enemy No. 1, is sought as the leader of the kidnap gang. The others against whom indictments will be asked are Edward C. Bartholmey, postmaster of Bensenville, Ill.; Elmer Farmer, for-mer tavernkeeper in Bensenville; Jack Pfeiffer, St. Paul gambler and night club owner; Charles Fitzgerald, a bank robber; Byron Bolton, and Arthur [Doc] Barker.

Bartholmey and Pfeiffer were arested at their homes Friday and Fitzgerald was seized Wednesday in os Angeles and is being brought to St. Paul. Barker is serving a life term in the government prison at Alcatraz for his part in the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, another wealthy St. Paul brewer, for whose release $200,000 ransom was paid.

On the eastern outskirts of the town is the Milwaukee railroad roundhouse. Blasts from its whistle, four times a day at 7 a. m., 12 noon, 2:20 p. m., and 3 p. m., recorded themselves so firmly in Bremer's mind that they furnished the government investigators one of the clews with which they narrowed the search for Bremer's prison to Bensenville. Switchmen, laborers, and trainmen come and go in the town, some of them boarding there, strangers among their number almost unnoticed.

HAMLET LONGS FOR OBSCURITY

Quiet Bensenville Shrinks from $300,000 Crimes.

In 1873 the Milwaukee railroad pushed its rails into Du Page through swhat is now the town of Bensenville. After the usual flurry of excitement attendant upon the coming of a railroad subsided, the farmers of the countryside settled down to the everyday business of using the town as a milk depot, the railroad established an office, and peace enveloped the community.

That same peace prevailed for more than 50 years, when suddenly the people of Bensenville were jolted out of their complacence on learning that one of the most daring band of outlaws in the country's history had used two of their respected neighbors as keepers of two millionaire kidnaping victims who were held for a total of $300,000 ransom.

Bremer Case as an Opener.

The first revelation came last year when federal agents of the department of justice arrested Harold Alderton, with the announcement that his home at 180 South May street in the suburb was the prison where Elward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker, wis held in January, 1934, until the Barier-Karpis gang collected $200,000 for in the penitentiary. Then last Friday the federal agents upset the town's complacence anew when three min called upon Postmaster Edward Edward Bartholmey, said they were postomic inspectors and invited him out to dinner. They didn't tell Bartholmey, but their dinner engagement was in Minneapolis, whither they went by plane.

Another Famous Abduction.

On Saturday Bensenville again was the center of a blast of publicity. D. M. Ladd, head of the Chicago office of the bureau of investigation of the department of fustice, and Edgar Hoover in Washington announced that Bartholmey's arrest solved the kidnaping of William Hamm Jr., wealthy St. Paul brewer, in June, 1933. Hamm, the agent, in June, 1933. Hamm, the agent, said, was held prisoner in Bartholmey's house until the Barker-Karpis gang got $100,000 for returning him to his family.

The arrest of the postmaster, who was politically active in the town for 15 years, was the main topic of conversation at street corner gathering after church meetings, in stores, and it is the several highly respectable family taverns.

Mrs. Sophie Thiemann, who is 72 years old, a widow, and a member of the old German section of the community, still runs the tavern her husband opened in 1895 to serve the farmers and the railroad men from the nearby roundhouse. She expressed the village sentiment concerning its unwanted notoriety this way:

"Nothing like this ever happened here before, and it's too bad. It's much worse than the time a farmer's wife jumped in a cistern and killed herself. Of course, we all feel sorry for Mrs. Bartholmey. She is a nice woman. But give them time and people will forget. Anyway, it's not like the old days. Nothing ever happened then."

"Strange as it may seen to some people, that person was not John Hillinger, 'Baby Face' Nelson, nor any of the rest of our so-called No. 1 public enemies, but a woman," says Mr. Hoover in an American Magazine article on which Courtney Ryley Cooper collaborated.

"The most vicious, dangerous, and resourceful criminal brain this country has produced for many years belonged to a person called 'Mother Barker' by scores of satellites.

To a great extent their criminal careers were directly traceable to their mother; to her they looked for guidance, for daring - resourcefulness. They obeyed her implicitly. So, too, did the other members of the Barker-Karpis gang of hoodlums, highwaymen, kidnapers, and murderers which she headed.

Barker's associates, Alvin Karpis, a slender man of twenty-six with brown hair and blue eyes, now holds the title of Public Enemy No. 1. Unofficial, it has been conferred by newspapers and the public. Only one criminal ever has been officially designated No. 1 by the Government. He was John Dillinger, and the designation was made by Attorney General Cummings.

Capone, commonly regarded as the vice overlord of Chicago, got his No. 1 title from the Chicago Crime Commission in 1930. Successful in eluding prosecution for any racketeering association, he was tripped for failing to pay his income tax and sentenced to serve eleven years.

As current holder of the No. 1 tipe, Karpis is wanted chiefly for questioning in the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer at St. Paul, Minnesota, on January 17, 1934. Bremer, a thirty-seven-year-old bank President, was released twenty-two days later, after the kidnapers extorted $200,000.

Since then Karpis has been hunted all over the country. He has shot his way out of two ambuscades. Only a week or the ago, Federal agents raided an Arkanias farmhouse, but Karpis was not there. His record includes sentences for burglary, two Unofficially designated as Public Enemies No. 2 and No. 3 are William Mahan and Thomas H. Robinson.

Mahan, who is known by no fewer than twenty-seven aliases, was born in North Dakota thirty-three years ago. He is of medium weight and height, has black hair and brown eyes. Sentenced to serve twenty years for robbery in Idaho in 1927, he was pardoned by the State Pardon Board in 1933 and less than two years later was boing bunted on the kidnaping charge.

This was the abduction of nine year-old George Weyerhaeuser, of Tacoma, heir to a lumber fortune, who was released unharmed eight days after his abduction on May 24, 1935. A ransom of $200,000 was paid to get him back.

As Public Enemy No. 3, Thomas H. Robinson, a tall, slender man of twentynine, with black hair and gray eyes, is wanted for the kidnaping of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, member of a prominent Louisville, Kentucky, family, on October 10, 1934. She was released after her family paid a ransom of $50,000. Because of Robinson's eccentricities, the police expected his early capture, but he has eluded them for two and one-half years.

WASHINGTON—(P)—Atty. Gen. Cummings Wednesday placed a price on the head of Alvin Karpis, "public enemy No. 1," and his limping pal, Harry Campbell.

The attorney general offered $5,000 "for information furnished to a representative of the Federal Bureau of Investigation which results in the apprehension of Alvin Karpis," and $2,500 for similar information leading to the arrest of Campbell.

The rewards were offered in special "wanted" notices carrying pictures of each of the outlaws.

Karpis was named Saturday as one of the plotters in the kidnaping of William A. Hamm, Jr., "St. Paul brewer, in June, 1933.

The reward offer is the first since the government offered $10,000 for the capture of John Dillinger and $5,000 for information leading to his arrest. Once a "tough guy"—a gangland machine gunner—BYRON, BOLTON (center), confessed Bremer kidnaper who turned state's evidence against his former underworld pals at previous trials, is pictured as he was being taken from Ramsey county jall (his home for more than a year past) to the federal court to appear before a special grand jury which is expected to return indictments against Barker-Karpis mobaters and alleged aids in the

Harry Campbell Is Linked In Hamm Snatch; $2,500 If He's Caught.

Terming him the nation's "most desperate uncaptured public enemy." the United States government today offered a reward of $5,000 for information leading to the capture of Alvin Karpis.

Another reward of $2,500 was of-fered, under the same conditions, for Harry Campbell, lieutenant of Karpis, believed to be his aid in a number of sensational exploits of outlawry.

News of the reward offers came in press dispatches from Washington today as, in St. Paul, a special federal grand jury heard additional evidence on which to base at least seven indictments in the $100,000 kidnaping, in 1933, of William Hamm, Jr., wealthy brewer.

Plot Cottage Revealed.

As the jury continued its deliber-ation today, it was learned that fed-eral tureau of investigation agents had located an aged couple who allegedly had rented a cottage near White Bear to Karpis and his mobsters early in the spring of 1933.

It was in this cottage apparently that the kidnaping plot was hatched. It is understood that the cottage had rented for the season and that $500 had been paid in advance. However, within a week or 10 days the mobsters were tipped off and they vacated the premises and moved to the now well known Verners and advance.

It was from the latter place that the mob made its sensational getaway while Mr. Hamm was still a captive.

Trial In Missouri.

Simultaneously, it was learned from reliable sources that Karpis—if and when he is caught and if alive when he is—will not be brought to trial in St. Paul, but will be taken to Missouri to face a state charge.
Missouri has capital punishment and Karpis is wanted for the slaying of a West Plaines, Mo., sheriff Dec. 19, 1931.

By Skin Of Their Teeth.

Bolton Before Jury.

Byron Bolton, whose testimony brought about the conviction of 10 persons and a plea of guilty from another in the Bremer kidnaping, was called before the jury today to tell what he knows of the Hamm kidnaping and what part Barker-Karpis mobsters played in the $100,000 snatch.
