Re: Paula Broadwell

Dear

Through this letter, we are transmitting the executed consent form that you asked our client, Paula Broadwell, to complete, subject to the following observations:

1. Ms. Broadwell's consent to the search of the accounts listed in the attached document shall not be tantamount to an admission of any kind. Nor shall it waive her rights or privileges beyond the specific rights expressly waived in the consent form.

2. Ms. Broadwell does not know the login and password information for the accounts listed in the attached document, and her record of them is stored on the computers that agents seized, in a consensual search of her house, on November 12, 2012.

3. As discussed, you will let us know when the searches of the accounts listed on the attached document are complete, so that Ms. Broadwell can access them and retrieve from them the data that the government does not need. Some of these accounts include the full range of personal data, such as contacts

This is one of those items we've been working on. The attached are results of domestic travel by both David Petraeus between his resignation from CIA in November 2012 and the FBI search of his home in April 2013. This time frame corresponds to potential storage of the Black Books in an unsecure space, i.e. between the removal of the in the home and recovery of the Books by the FBI.

b6
b7E

As noted below, there appears to be no travel during this time in which both David were out of town at the same time. We were previously aware of David's travel to Los Angeles in March 2013. He spoke at USC and spent time with hi retired Army Col During this visit, between Petraeus and Broadwell.

b6
b7C

Additionally, check was also completed b and no international travel by David was found during the dates above.
