MICHAEL FLANNERY is currently facing a Grand Jury inquiry into Irish Northern Aid's fund-raising and the various rules governing compulsory immunity could see him facing a jail sentence if he refuses to answer questions. According to Flannery the American authorities are afraid of the publicity this would cause and he says that should one of the I.N.A. elders die in jail it would be worth millions of dollars in collections!

Attempts to display I.N.A. as a fund-raising body buying arms for the I.R.A. have always failed. Flannery points out that the money they send to Green Cross and An Cumann Cabhrach would not cover the massive amount which has to be paid to prisoners' dependants each week.

Michael Flannery was born in Knocknasheegowna, near Shinrone, in North Tipperary in 1902. His family had a history of involvement in the national struggle.

Title 8, U.S.C.
Section 1326

JOSEPH CAHILL,

Defendant

EASTERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK, SS

[redacted] being duly sworn, deposes and

b6

says that he is a Criminal Investigator with the Immigration and Naturalization Service duly appointed according to law and acting as such.

On or about May 4, 1981, and continuing to the date of the filing of this complaint, the defendant JOSEPH CAHILL having been previously excluded and deported from the United States to Dublin, Ireland, reentered and was found in the United States in violation of Title 8, United States Code, Section 1326.

The source of your deponent's information and the grounds for his belief are:

1. An examination of the files of the Immigration and Naturalization Service reveals that the defendant JOSEPH CAHILL was ordered deported after a hearing on September 8, 1971, and that the defendant, a citizen of Ireland, was deported from New York, New York on September 8, 1971.

b6
b7C

2. Statements to your deponent by Federal Bureau of Investigation Special Agent [redacted] that he saw a man who he believes to be the defendant JOSEPH CAHILL at 465 East 9th Street, in Brooklyn, New York on May 4, 1981.

3. Statements to your deponent by Special Agent [redacted] that on June 20, 1981 he and other agents executed a search warrant at 465 East 9th Street, Brooklyn, New York and located a Republic of Ireland passport bearing the name of the defendant JOSEPH CAHILL.

b6
b7C

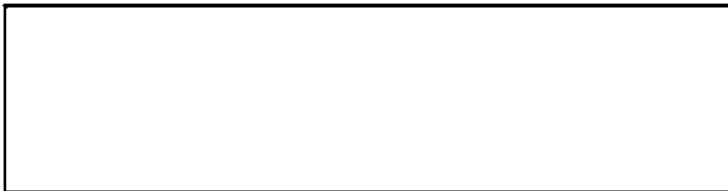

4. Statements to your deponent by Special Agent [redacted] that the man whom he believes to be JOSEPH CAHILL and whom he has observed in Brooklyn is the same man whose photograph is attached to and part of the deportation file pertaining to JOSEPH CAHILL which is maintained by United States Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS).*

5. That the deportation file referred to in paragraph three above includes the photograph and fingerprints of JOSEPH CAHILL and of no other person.

6. Your deponent has contacted the Central Office of INS and has confirmed that the defendant JOSEPH CAHILL has neither applied for nor has been granted the authorization of the Attorney General to reenter or remain within the United States.

WHEREFORE, your deponent respectfully requests that the above-mentioned defendant JOSEPH CAHILL be dealt with according to law.

The 1980 Lowell, Massachusetts Telephone Directory reflects the following at telephone number (617) 454-7530: Edward B. Vinton, 320 Parker Street, Lowell, Massachusetts. ~~(S)~~ (U)

A review of the most current (1/10/80) Census for the City of Lowell reflects the following at 320 Parker street that city: 1) Mary M. Vinton, date of birth 1/1/26; [redacted] 3) Joseph L. Fahay, date of birth 1/1/10. ~~(S)~~ (U)

The Lowell City Directory for 1979 lists (Mrs.) Mary Vinton, telephone number 454-7530 and Joseph Fahay, no telephone number noted, at 320 Parker Street. The 1975 Directory reflects (Mrs.) Mary Vinton, widow of Edward, at 320 Parker Street. The 1970 Directory reflects Edward B. Vinton, occupation: construction worker, residing at 51 Prett Avenue, Apartment 56, telephone 454-7530, Lowell. The above 320 Parker Street address appears to be at least a two-apartment residence over a vacant commercial business space. ~~(S)~~ (U)

Review of the records of the Bureau of Vital Statistics, Lowell, reflects the following: Mary Margaret Vinton, nee Flood, date of birth 5/10/25, place of birth Lowell, Massachusetts, husband Edward B. Vinton, husband's date of birth 12/18/21, husband's place of birth Charlestown (Boston), Massachusetts, husband's date of death 6/27/72 at Lowell, husband's last residence 51 Prett Avenue, Lowell, Massachusetts. (S) (U)

A review of information available to the Boston Office reflects that subject Edward B. Vinton is deceased as of June, 1972 and that his wife Mary Margaret Vinton, the daughter of Patrick H. and Sabina J. (Cromey) Flood, continues to list her residence and telephone in the name of her deceased husband. In respect to the two dates of birth listed above for subject's wife, Boston believes the date of birth 1/1/26 to be in error and that Mary Vinton's date of birth is 5/10/25. (S) (U)

A review of Boston indices regarding Edward B. and Mary M. Vinton failed to reflect any information identifiable with same. (C) (U)

A review of the records of the Massachusetts State Police, that repository for criminal records for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, failed to reflect any information identifiable with subject's wife Mary Margaret Vinton. (S) (U)

In that subject is deceased, captioned matter is being placed in a closed status. In that there is no information available to Boston indicating any specific PIRA affiliation on the part of Mary Margaret Vinton, subject's wife, [REDACTED] regarding same. (C) (U)

By airtel dated 8/24/81, captioned "EDWARD B. VINTON,

closed the Vinton inquiry, it having been determined that Harrison had attempted without success to contact unknown persons at the Vinton residence telephone and in that the records of the City of Lowell reflect that Edward B. Vinton died 6/27/72 at Lowell, Massachusetts. Vinton's wife Mary Margaret Vinton, nee Flood, has apparently maintained the telephone at her Lowell residence in the name of her deceased husband. Apparently no information is available to New York reflecting actual contacts with anyone at the Vinton residence. As noted below, the wife of the late Edward B. Vinton is the daughter of captioned. (S) (U)

In response to a request for additional information, New York by TT dated 5/7/81, advised that Harrison had on 4/19/81 (not 4/29/81 as in Par. 3 above) contacted or attempted to contact on two occasions telephone number (617) 452-9668, Flood, and that one of those telephone calls consisted of a twelve-minute conversation with the subscriber (i.e. Patrick H. Flood, captioned subject). (S) (U)

By TT dated 5/27/81, New York was asked to confirm that the above telephone calls to the Flood residence (617) 452-9668 were attempted/completed on 4/29/81 and not 4/19/81. (S) (U)

By airtel dated 8/7/81, the Bureau provided Boston a national security letter requesting telephone toll billing information on the Flood residence, this in part as an attempt to determine if the Flood residence telephone was being used to contact the George Harrison [REDACTED] principles in New York. The latter were arrested by Customs and FBI in New York 6/19-21/81, and charged with violation of Federal Firearms Statutes. (S) (U)

By re a/t, Boston set forth telephone toll information regarding subject's residence telephone (617) 452-9668, this for the period 2/15/81 through 7/26/81. There were no overseas telephone calls, one telephone call to Bloomington, Illinois, and six calls to two telephone numbers at Garden City, New York. The latter New York telephone numbers are not known at Boston to be previously associated with the Harrison investigation. Boston is holding in abeyance [REDACTED] regarding the persons identified as subscribers to telephone numbers appearing on the Flood residence telephone records until New York completes a review of both its ELSUR indices and those transcripts obtained in the New York Harrison investigation. A review of Boston indices failed to reflect any information identifiable with subject or John G. Flood of Lowell, Massachusetts, the latter identified below. (C) (U)

A review of records, Bureau of Vital Statistics, Lowell, Massachusetts, reflects that Patrick H. Flood, born 2/15/1893 in Lowell, Massachusetts, SSAN 034-01-5947, the husband of Sabina J. (Cromey) latter born Ireland, and last of 18 Atlantic Street, Lowell, died at the age of 84 on 4/18/77. Flood's prior employments are as follows: U.S. Navy 1919, Steam Fitter 1922, Carpenter 1925, and Carpenter, City of Lowell, 1977. Flood's children are listed as follows: Patrick Henry Flood, DOB 1/4/19 at Lowell, Massachusetts, occupation: chauffeur (1946), married to Ellen (Highland); John G. Flood, DOB 2/18/22 at Lowell, Massachusetts; and Margaret Mary (Flood) Vinton, DOB 5/10/25 at Lowell, Massachusetts, married to Edward B. Vinton, DOB 12/18/21, Date of Death 6/27/72. (C) (U)

A review of the 1980 Lowell Telephone Directory reflects the following: telephone number (617) 452-9668 subscribed to be Patrick H. Flood, 18 Atlantic Street, Lowell; telephone number (617) 453-7908 subscribed to by P. Henry Flood, Jr., 17 Atlantic Street, Lowell. (C) (U)

The 1/10/80 (most recent) Census, City of Lowell, reflects the following: Patrick H. Flood, Jr., DOB 1/4/20 at 17 Atlantic Street, Lowell; John G. Flood, DOB 2/18/25 at 18 Atlantic Street, Lowell; Mary M. (Flood) Vinton, DOB 1/1/26 at 320 Parker Street, Lowell [REDACTED]; Sabina Flood, DOB 4/17/1883 at 18 Atlantic Street, Lowell. (C) (U)

Records, Massachusetts Division of Motor Vehicles reflects the following: Patrick H. Flood, SSAN 027-05-3801, DOB 1/4/19, at 17 Atlantic Street, Lowell, registration L12310--1971 Oldsmobile, blue, four door hardtop. John G. Flood, SSAN 024-120-172, DOB 2/18/22, at 18 Atlantic Street, Lowell, registration FLOOD--1980 four door green Oldsmobile 98 sedan. (C) (U)

The 1979 (most recent) Lowell City Directory reflects Patrick H. Flood, Jr., at 17 Atlantic Street, is employed as a motor equipment operator, City of Lowell. His wife Ellen is listed as employed as an Administrative Assistant, County Registrar of Deeds, Lowell. In a 1956 Lowell City Directory, John G. Flood is listed as then employed as a subcarrier, U.S. Post Office. (C) (U)

New York advised that Harrison had a twelve-minute telephone call with the subscriber of telephone (617) 452-9668.
That subscriber, captioned subject, is deceased. In the absence of better information as to whom Harrison was in conversation with at the Flood residence and the nature of that telephone call,

In an attempt to determine if MICHAEL FLANNERY, Irish Freedom Committee (IRC) or Fight for Irish Freedom (FIF) maintained savings, checking accounts or safety deposit boxes. A subpoena for the United States District Court, Eastern District of New York for all documents and records relating to any accounts or safe deposit vaults held in the above names.

This subpoena was issued with negative results at the following banking institutions:

Ponce de Leon Savings and Loan, 37-47 82nd Street, Queens, New York (NY)
Banco de Ponce, 83-22 Baxter Avenue, Queens, NY
Jamaica Savings Bank, 37-02 82nd Street, Queens, NY
First Federal Savings and Loan, 37-04 Junction Boulevard, Queens, NY

A subpoena was also issued to Macy's Department Store, [redacted], Herald Square, NY, NY, for all applications and signature cards and any other information obtained during any credit check of account number 85 66 7536, MICHAEL FLANNERY.

[redacted] advised that this particular account is an extremely old account and Macy's only maintains credit applications and records for short period of time. Upon review of Macy's records [redacted] advised that the application was filed in 1955 and therefore Macy's would not have the desired records.

HARRISON-Falvey

defense committee

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

I, the undersigned George Harrison, issue the following statement in regards to my arrest, indictment, trial and subsequent acquittal on alleged charges of supplying military equipment to the Irish Republican Army for use against the British Army of occupation in British occupied Ireland.

The record has shown that I was born in County Mayo, Ireland, over 67 years ago, and that I have resided in the United States since 1938. That my family settled in New Hampshire over one hundred years ago, and that my parents and brothers are all buried there now. I have always felt proud that my father, Thomas Harrison, and my uncle, Anthony Harrison chose that state because its motto is "Live Free or Die" (Reagan and Thatcher please note).

I served in the armed forces of this nation from November 1942 until February 1946, and I labored in the Amoured Car Industry and was employed by Brinks Inc. for thirty three years. I was arrested with my comrade, Tom Falvey, on June 19, 1981 by Government Agents for alleged violation of the Federal Firearms Laws. I register no complaints regarding the conduct of the arresting officers who merely acted as the instruments of the pro-British policies of the right wing fascist Reagan-Haig Administration with the criminal British government and its criminal leader Thatcher. However, I cry foul in respect to the desecration of my home later that night.

At approximately 12:30 a.m., while I was in custody, some 20 agents assisted by a large sniff dog, surrounded, entered and held my home under siege for over eight hours. The only people in the house at the time were my eighty-three year old sister, who has a cardiac condition and my niece, a nurse in her thirties. A destructive search was made of the house, including my sister's apartment. All monies found were taken, plus my bank account books. The search party saw fit to seize all papers relating to my past life, including family mementoes of my deceased parents and brothers, as well as years worth of sentimental materials, clippings, correspondence and historical documents relating to the fight for Irish freedom and struggles for freedom in other parts of the world.

Summarizing the above as viewed by me, the Government Agents avoided the light of day and came in the dark like thieves in the night, putting my home under siege and held two women under house arrest for over eight hours. I compare the conduct of the special agents with the conduct of the Black and Tan thugs who wrecked and desecrated Irish homes in the Ireland of my youth and with their successors in infamy, the S.A.S. British thugs who maim and murder in the Ireland of today.

It was with pride that I stood trial in that courtroom because there in spirit stood with me some of Ireland's America's and the world's famous rebels. It may seem strange to some that I should say this although it should not be so. Be that as it may, there where I stood in their time, place and generation stood not only Pearse, Connolly, Tone, Emmett, Davitt, Lalor, Stephens, O'Donovan, Rossa, John Boyle O'Reilly, Liam Mellows, Charles Kerins, Bobby Sands, but also Eugene V. Debs, Joe Hill, Nathan Hale, The Molly Maguires, Tom Mooney, Lolita Lebron, Leonard Peltier, Gary Tyler, Solomon Mahlango - the list is endless. In fact, the prisons of this country, of Ireland, of South Africa, of Israel, the Phillipines, Lebanon, El Salvador, and Poland, fill daily with people whose crime was to love justice, freedom, humanity and to value such things more highly than they valued their own lives, safety, well being or the law.

For what is law? Is it stronger than life itself or man's desire to be free? Pearse, executed in 1916 said "no" and so say I.

I stood at trial, but did those who have callously pitted man against man, woman against woman, white against black, Jew against Arab, Protestant against Catholic? No.

Did those who supplied guns and plastic bullets to maim and murder children and civilians in British occupied Ireland. No.

Are those who supplied guns to murder missionary nuns in El Salvador, to murder Salvador Allende in Chile, who was like Bobby Sands, an elected representative of his people and did those who supplied Cluster bombs to Israel to maim and murder Palestinian refugees? No.

Are those who have taken the money, hard earned by the people to buy arms and build nuclear weapons in the name of profit, free enterprise, and power, to be tried? No.

But I, who's sole crime was to have believed that justice and freedom were worth fighting for even in the evening of my years, I had to stand trial. I have only this to say, people such as I should not have to stand trial because we are innocent of crime. We have not profited or sought to profit from the poverty of others, nor have we hated or sought to foster hate against any race, colour or creed. We have not killed or sought to kill, stifled or sought to stifle the spirit soul or dignity of humanity. If in today's society such principles constitute a crime then today's society is itself criminal, and the special F.B.I. agents who hover over Irish communities like birds of prey, seeking their victims, are criminal and the instruments of the criminal, imperialist policies of Ronald Reagan and Murderer Thatcher--the real criminals and terrorists of this world. It is my privilege to stand with those in all lands who will not be criminalized.

Finally, if the future of America depended on Prosecutor Kirby, with his ill concealed anti-Irish and pro-British attitude and with the government thugs who desecrated my home then the future would be bleak indeed. However, the future lies not with them but with the genius of our defense counsel, Frank Durkan, Bill Mogulescu, Michael Kennedy, Eleanore Kennedy, Michael Dowd, Larry Vogelmann, Barry Scheck, David Lewis and with all the brilliant students from the Benjamin Cardozo Law School, who assisted in our defense.

The future lies too with a fairminded judge, and an impartial jury, composed of all the ethnic people of this nation Black, Hispanic, Italian, Irish. I have no idea as to their religion or political affiliations but I salute all of them now, for the singleminded courage they displayed in an American Court of Justice. Arrayed against us was all the apparatus of a pro-British government administration in Washington D.C., plus the hidden influence of British intelligence and the spectre of the villainious woman Prime Minister Thatcher.

There in that court with us stood our brilliant defense team, the solidarity of our people who filled the courtroom day in and day out for eight long weeks. The ghost of Bobby Sands whose name was mentioned so many times, came back to haunt his murderer Thatcher. Then despite some futile attempts by Kirby and his superiors to prevent her appearance, Bernadette Devlin McAliskey, Militant Irish activist appeared as a character witness for two of the defendants.

It is my privilege to have known her as friend and comrade for thirteen years but I was never more proud of her than I was when she walked to the witness stand and described the abominable conditions in British occupied Ireland, the murder of thirteen civilian demonstrators in Derry on Bloody Sunday, the murder of H-Block activists in their homes and the attempt on her own life and her husbands by British armed thugs, less than two years ago.

She was followed by David Ndaba, a representative of the African National Congress who has spoken at rallies for Irish political prisoners many times in the past, and by fellow workers and friends of the defendants. The victory in the courtroom was a victory for the free institutions of this country, for trial by jury which this pro-British administration would like to end, and replace with the Diplock Juryless Court system of liar Prior and Thatcher.

The victory also upheld the honour of Ireland and the right of her faithful sons to fight back against their oppressors, and to use the same language against them that Washington used here during the American Revolution and that is the language that comes out of the barrel of a gun. What must be emphasised to Thatcher and her collaborators in Washington D.C. is that an active phase of the fight for Irish freedom is in progress now since 1969. That it is in correct historical line of succession to all the militant efforts to drive the Brits out since they first came to rob and pillage in 1169. That it is by Irish' will and not by English pleasure we intend to win our freedom, and that any armed Brit in Ireland must be regarded as a legitimate target of war by the I.R.A.--the historical army of resistance to British rule in Ireland.

Let it also be clearly understood by Madame Thatcher and her partners in infamy in 10 Downing, her colleagues in Washington D.C. and her quisling in Leinster House, that the fight for Irish freedom is not an isolated phenomenon, that it is all part of the fight for human freedom and justice which is taking place in the world today--in Latin America, the Caribbean, the Philippines the Middle East, in Racist Africa, and the attempt of the Argentine people to recover what is rightfully theirs, the Malvinas Islands. The patriot blood shed in all those areas of struggle all flows into the same ocean of independence which will eventually reach high tide and will sweep away all the upholders of tyranny fascism imperialism and discrimination. It will jail those who put them there. Then what a beautiful world it will be.

In closing I wish to extend my deepest personal thanks to all those who stood up to be counted with us during the past intense months. We are indebted indeed to all the members of the Harrison-Falvey Defense Committee who worked themselves to the bone to focus attention on our case and raise funds for our defense. We again thank our defense team, the Benjamin Cardoza Law School, the law firm of O'Dwyer & Bernstein, and the National Lawyers Guild which all of our defense team are privileged to hold membership in. We were also benefited by the genius of Cathy Bennat of Texas.

I now appeal to all concerned to translate all their enthusiasm, genius and sense of commitment into a concentrated effort of support for our comrades yet to stand trial, because they refused to remain neutral while their countrymen hungered to death for justice in protest against the naked rule of British bayonets.

We are part of the vanguard of the struggle of humanity now and if we can maintain the intensity of united effort then the day will soon dawn when the foul and obscene policy of collaboration of our government with the criminal British and with their fellow criminals will end and a free Ireland will emerge from all the pain, suffering and torture of the centuries. When it does I hope that Bernadette Devlin McAliskey will emerge as its first Prime Minister and that she will welcome to Ireland our splendid defense team and the jury whose sense of duty and courage I again salute. The respect I feel for them is matched by the contempt extended to the government special agents Stephens, Colletan, Winslow, Auld, Schwartz, Evans, who baited Irish people and ravaged their homes with their sniff dogs in the interests of Maggie Thatcher. I recommend them and pro-British Kirby for the position of screws in H-Block. Regardless of the intragisence of those individuals, it is my wish that any of the wounds they have inflicted on our people will not produce permanent scars between Ireland and America. I trust that the help extended to us by the National Lawyers Guild, the Cardoza Law School students, in the recent trial, the splendid and untiring fund raising effort of I.N.A. for so many years, and by our defense committee will serve as the connecting links between the two countries until British influence ends and then we will all be happy again.

In the meantime may the spirit of Bobby Sands and his fellow martyrs in all lands animate us with the strength to carry on until we achieve peace, freedom and justice for the people of this world whether they be black, white, yellow or brown.

Sincerely,

George Harrison

Title:

The Trials of Michael Flannery

on:
Office:

To supporters of the Irish Republican Army, Michael Flannery is a hero. To the Irish government, which bitterly protested his election as grand marshal of this year's St. Patrick's Day parade, he is a gunrunner who goes to mass in the morning and spends the rest of the day supplying the money that buys the guns that kill Irishmen as well as British soldiers. To Flannery, the turmoil over his election is meaningless, because sacrifice for "the cause" is the central reality of his life.

MAYBE it's all there — all the small ironies and large contradictions of Michael Flannery's 81 years — in this opening scene.

It is the autumn of 1981, and Michael Flannery is on his way home from morning mass, which is the way he begins most of his days — paying his respects to the Creator very first thing. He's just turned toward the homestretch — 91st Street in Jackson Heights (Archie Bunker's kind of block), where he and his wife, Margaret, have lived for more than 50 years — when he realizes that what he has taken for the street's humdrum activity is starring Michael Flannery. That is, he's at the center of a little dance, and all the other dancers are these stock-straight young people, the kind he'd want the next generation to be, and they've all begun to close in around him like an unfolding flower, all these serious looking agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"Michael Flannery?" one of them says, in a careful-courteous way, and doesn't Flannery already know they've recorded his voice and face enough times to make him eligible for a Screen Actors Guild pension. But they've got to run out their little playlet, and so, Flannery barks, "Yes?" And the agent tells him he's under arrest for his part in a conspiracy to supply guns to the outlawed Irish Republican Army in Northern Ireland — with the other young men and one young woman arrayed around Michael Flannery as if they had him figured to try an acrobatic tumble behind a parked car where he'd stashed an old Thompson submachine gun, so as to make a roaring, rat-tat-tatting last stand of it.

His neighbors are in their own predicament. They had indifferently registered Flannery's movements, watched the young people close around him, done a routine search of their memories for the faces — "Michael's nephews and one of his nieces? — No-o-o!" — and then, as the little drama accelerated, begun to work their neighborly heads to make sense of what they were witnessing, only to be led to the impossible conclusion that "Oh my... God... as I live and breathe... old Mr. Flannery... pillar of Blessed Sacrament parish... guardian of 91st Street... proud citizen... good neighbor for all these many years... has just been... ARRESTED?"

Far off, the stream of huntsmen in their scarlet coats seemed almost to glide across the hills of County Tipperary, Flannery remembers. They were from another world, these gentry who rode to the hounds in the fall, a world of stately Georgian mansions, formal gardens, fine carriages and power.

They were the landlords, and as they ran roughshod through the harvested fields, it was easy enough for Flannery to see they didn't belong to the land the way he did, or his father, or his father's father.

"The hunt" was an annual demonstration of their lordship over the land. In the decade before Flannery was born, one of his uncles, John Quirk, had sickened of this spectacle and gone up to where the huntsmen were gathering and announced that they would not be trampling his fields this year. They had looked down their aristocratic Anglo-Irish noses at him from the summit of their snorting horses, as if Flannery's uncle were a rabbit, or perhaps the fox himself, who was addressing them. A constable was summoned, and Flannery's uncle spent a week in Limerick jail for the crime of trespassing.

Someone fashioned a song from the episode: "On the first of November, on famed Faerie Hill / The sportsmen all gathered, old Reynard to kill," it began, memorializing John Quirk's gesture of defiance. The closing line goes: "The black crow of a judge says John Quirk broke the law / But the devil to him, and Dublin Castle's jackdaw."

To John Quirk and his relatives, Dublin Castle was the symbol of English rule in Ireland. The law was the will of Dublin Castle more than it was the will of the people. The gentry didn't speak "the Irish," nor did they care to speak it. The government and the courts were theirs. But there had been another time — when the law and the land had been in the hands of Flannery's people. That was in a past that seemed no closer than the time of Adam, and all that remained of it were the ruined abbeys and castles that were scattered across County Tipperary, and all the other counties of Ireland, too.

There were two faiths in the Irish country world of Flannery's growing-up years — the Catholic and the Fenian — and they were intertwined. Flannery's people believed they had been driven from two gardens: the one that the priests talked about, the Garden of Eden, with the rest of mankind; the other, the one his older brothers and Sean MacDiarmada and Padraic Pearse and the other itinerant patriotic organizers talked about, was the "garden" of Irish nationhood, and that had been their trial alone.

It had taken Christ's blood sacrifice to regain the promise of the Garden of Eden for mankind, the priests taught. It would take the blood sacrifice of Irish manhood to regain the dream of an Irish nation, the patriotic organizers preached.

Things were better now, Flannery's father told him. In the time before Michael Davitt and the Land League had brought some measure of law and rights to the Irish countryside, Flannery's father's father had been driven from three farmsteads by a notorious tyrant of a landlady, Lady Carrington.

The year Flannery was born, 1902, the Boer War was winding down. Flannery's people saw the Boers' struggle as a heroic act of defiance against the same forces that they felt had robbed them of their culture, language and land.

Flannery's father and brothers and neighbors were forever discussing the courage of the Afrikaaner rebels. In their homes and fields they would cheer on the Boers' struggle and denounce England, and then out on the roads and on the great estates where many of them worked, they would be tipping their hats to the lords and gentry who ruled their world. "And haven't we won all the world's battles but our own?" the people would lament at night around the fire when the talk was on.

It was counts one and three of the five-count federal indictment, drawn up under the name of Assistant U. S. Attorney David Kirby, that included Flannery's name. "On or about the 23rd of December, 1980, and the 20th day of June, 1981 the defendants, Thomas Falvey, Michael Flannery, Daniel Gormley, George Harrison and Patrick Mullin, did knowingly and intentionally combine, conspire, confederate and agree to commit offenses against the United States," count one began.

"On or about June 19, 1981, the defendants, Thomas Falvey, Michael Flannery and George Harrison, received and possessed a quantity of firearms, to wit, forty-seven machine guns of various types, which firearms were not registered to any of the said defendants in the National Firearms Registration and Transfer Record as required by law," count three stated.

And on . . . and on . . . with the language thick with "wherebys" and "to wits," so that by the end it was hard for Flannery to say just what he was being dragged into the dock for. Well, the devil could take the indictment and its bloated language, as far as he was concerned. What it all came down to was this: The operation had been lured onto the rocks by the same character who had been hounding Irish history since the English first cast their eyes across the Irish Sea — the Informer. Flannery knew the particulars of each betrayal better than most. The Irish past was almost as much of a passion with him as the present struggle. He knew all of it — all the battles and their dates, all the chieftains and martyrs, all the near-victories and catastrophic defeats. The whole thing was a sad affair, one long chronicling of man's inhumanity to man, as he saw it. But there was a terrible beauty to it, too: the way the Irish had endured and how they had sacrificed themselves in generation after generation.

Flannery carried seven centuries of Irish history around in his head. The last century, in which he had played his own part, he carried in his heart and in his bones. The first English commander in Ireland had been a Norman knight named Strongbow in the 12th Century. More than anything else in this world, Flannery wanted to live long enough to know the name of the last.

The arms merchant with whom George Harrison had been dealing for almost 20 years, a man by the name of George DeMeo, had been arrested by the FBI and "turned." One day he told Harrison that he was handing his business over to a younger man. John White the new fella's name was. Except John White the new fella's name wasn't. Winslow was his name. Special Agent John Winslow to the FBI — with a lovely reddish-blond beard, with an open boyish way about him, with a recorder and tapes for the federal prosecutor when the time came.

Well, Assistant U. S. Attorney Kirby could go on all he wanted about intentional combines and conspiracies and confederacies, and about unregistered machine guns — Flannery had never met with Special Agent Winslow, and Flannery had never possessed any firearms. That was Harrison's department. Flannery had played things just the way he would have in the old days in Ireland, during "the Troubles."

He knew the game. He had been an officer in the Irish Republican Army before he was out of his teens, a member of the North Tipperary Brigade's "flying column," an elite commando unit. As a member of "the column," he had forsworn drinking and smoking. It was like being a member of a warrior caste, like the Fenian militia of ancient Ireland. Commanding men much older than himself, he had seen the world he'd been born into turned upside down, and he had given over his body and soul to the turning.

Portlaoise Prison, Mountjoy Jail, the infamous Curragh concentration camp — he had celebrated his 19th, 20th and 21st birthdays interned in one or another of them. All the terrible hardship Flannery accepted with the rigor of a religious novice.

Whatever your part in an "operation," you did the job assigned to you and you didn't ask questions. That was the way it had been with Harrison and Flannery all along. Flannery's job was to serve as a conduit for the money that supporters in America would offer "the cause" for the purchases of arms. Harrison's job was to purchase the arms and see to their shipment. Flannery never asked Harrison any questions; he was as scrupulous about that as he would be examining his own conscience before confession. He would later testify that once, nearly 20 years before, when he began working with Harrison, Harrison had mentioned to him that his arms contact was "a government man." Harrison had said he was "a fella by the name of DeMeo." Flannery had asked him nothing more about it. That would have been a breach of procedure. People gave him money, and he would make sure it got to Harrison. It was a simple as that.

They had Harrison dead to rights, there was no denying that. And they had Tom Falvey and Patrick Mullin, too. They'd either taped them making the deals or arrested them with a cache of guns in their possession. They had very little on Danny Gormley, though. And they had nothing on Flannery. As the autumn of 1982 approached — the time when "the IRA gunrunners" were to be tried — that became clearer and clearer.

The whole of the government's case against Flannery amounted to a telephone conversation he had had with Harrison on the night of June 19, 1981, in which he had uttered two dozen or so carefully chosen words, in full expectation that his phone was being tapped, 10 of which were "very good," repeated five times over.

There was no mention of guns or money in the conversation. Harrison had asked if he could come over to see Flannery, and Flannery had said, yes, of course, come along. Harrison had gone to Flannery's house that evening, and Flannery later admitted giving him $17,000. But no one else had witnessed the exchange. The money Harrison was given, and which he later handed over to "John White," was never traced to Flannery.

Flannery could go home, even if the others would have to face a federal penitentiary; of that much his attorney was confident. There was one hitch, however. The team of seven lawyers had decided to base the whole defense on Harrison's contention that DeMeo, the arms merchant he had been dealing with for all these years, had represented himself as "a government man," an operative for the Central Intelligence Agency, and Harrison had had every reason to believe — in fact, along with his attorney, still believed — that he was telling the truth.

What they needed was someone to support Harrison's claim, to take the stand and say, "Yes, George Harrison told me that the operation had the U. S. government's sanction, in the person of CIA operative George DeMeo." There was only one among his codefendants who was ready to say that Harrison had ever spoken those words — Flannery.

To testify to this, Flannery would have to admit to his involvement in the operation. The attorneys left it up to Flannery to decide. The trial would be an ordeal, not only for him but for his wife, who was in frail health.

When the defense attorneys came to Flannery, he responded as if he'd been given an order. There was no sense talking about Robert Emmet or Pearse or Connelly or any of the other martyrs, if you weren't willing to follow them, Flannery believed. You had to be ready to take your place, and if you weren't, then what good were you at all? The way he saw it, he had been born into certain circumstances that had to be righted. There was one ideal to which his whole life had been directed: an undivided Irish Republic, 32 counties, north and south.

Well, they'd all hang together, then. And wasn't that the way it had always been?

Through the shadows that the "el" casts across the October Sunday afternoon, the old Irishmen walk up from Broadway. They gather at Gaelic Park, in the west Bronx, from all the places they have scattered, trickling, along with the younger generations of immigrant Irish, through the small doorway of the park's main entrance, to become, once again, briefly, a people.

Today is Michael Flannery Day. Posters with Flannery's photograph are displayed inside and outside the park, as if perhaps he were standing for office rather than on trial in Brooklyn Federal Court. To the right of the photo is a long list of the organizations to which he has offered most of his life. Included are his membership in the North Tipperary Brigade IRA/Irish Northern Aid, and in the Tipperary Men's Association, which he co-founded and served as U. S. representative. It's also noted that he's a past president of the Gaelic Athletic Association and of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, that he was the division historian of Clan Na Gael . . . and on and on.

A battered, rusting, corrugated tin wall topped by whorls of barbed wire — like the barrier of an internment camp — runs along the park's southern side. Inside the park, the atmosphere is more like that of a fairground in rural Ireland. Rickety plank stands ring a vast grassy expanse where hurling and Gaelic football are played on Sunday afternoons. The whole place has a makeshift, sad and ramshackle quality about it. Like the centuries-old experience of these people, if there is to be any dignity or cheer to this day, it will be left to the people and their trade in talk and song to provide it.

On the playing field, the County Kerry Association's Gaelic football team is repeatedly stampeding toward the County Cavan Association team's goal. The crowd of about 2,500 people gives only half its attention to the game.

Just above the park, to the north, the Broadway train yards loom, with lines of grotesquely graffiti-covered subway cars set to idle on the massive elevated platform.

Flannery moves through the crowds, on this, his day, like a shy child at his birthday party. He is slightly stooped, but he is so tall, over six feet, that he towers over most of the older men. He is skinny, but more in an adolescent than in an old man's way. He has a long, thin, handsome face that in photographs always seems solemn and — perhaps because of the organization with which he is most often associated, the IRA — murderous. But the camera misses at capturing the liveliness of his small, brown eyes; they are as lively and playful as a young girl's eyes, and they light up his face and make it seem mischievous.

The men close in on him with gruff, comradely phrases. "Good man, Mike," they half-whisper. The women greet him with more dramatic exclamations and turns. "Oh, Michael Flannery," one woman half sings, "there never was a better man for Ireland!"

At half time of the Kerry-Cavan game, Flannery and four other men gather on the sidelines in front of a decrepit wooden booth where the park's primitive public address system is housed. After some perfunctory opening remarks, the microphone is handed over to Sean Lynch, who has traveled to America to mark this occasion as the representative of Sinn Fein (Ourselves Alone), the political wing of the Irish Republican Army:

"On behalf of the unconquered, undefeated Irish nation, I say greetings," Lynch begins. He has a rich tenor voice that, even with the faulty sound system, rings with conviction. The people begin to prick up their ears; the man who can master words still has a high place among them, and they turn from their chats and their children. "Down through the long ages of the Irish nation's struggle, great men like Mike Flannery have had to sacrifice themselves to the cause of freedom," he roars. "This is a great turnout here today. A great demonstration of solidarity with the fight for freedom which is happening right here in a courthouse in Brooklyn, New York."

He has no prepared text, but the words and images pour out of him as he ranges over the 800 years of English involvement in Ireland. He shares a patriotic mythology with his audience as storied, complex and compelling as the Bible: There are the names of a hundred heroes he can call on, from Brian Boru in the 10th Century to Bobby Sands in the 1980s: there are again as many songs and stories; and always, amid his riffs of remembered wrongs, there is the one villain, like a steady bass line. He can call it by enough names to make a listener wonder if it had a hundred heads: John Bull, Butcher Thatcher, Cromwell's inheritors, the crown, "mother" England — each with its own special connotation and shade of condemnation.

Lynch's voice cracks off the corrugated tin of the park's southern side, screeches above the metallic scree of subway cars leaving the yard, and sluices between the stands and into the casino bar where the men stand three-deep. The park is brought together by the scratchily amplified words; the people listen in silence.

Beyond the rites of this transplanted world, Flannery might be indistinguishable from the millions of New York's elderly. But here, beside this speaker, surrounded by these people, he is a chieftain, a flesh-and-blood icon of "the cause."

"Thank God, for the likes of men like Mike Flannery," Lynch wails. "Their work will bring us a new day. We will have the Ireland of Padraic Pearse. An Ireland, free and Gaelic. A nation once again."

A swan, ensnared by bands of barbed wire, struggles at the center of the T-shirt Sally Markham wears to the trial.

"I Have the Spirit of Freedom" is blazoned above the swan. "Bobby Sands" is printed beneath it. Irish history has come to the federal courthouse on Cadman Plaza in Brooklyn.

The mostly older Irishmen and Irishwomen who, with fierce devotion, fill the gallery of Judge Joseph McLaughlin's courtroom each day have christened the seven defense lawyers "the Beyond-the-Pale Defense Team" — "the Pale" being those lands (Dublin and its environs) that first fell under English domination in the 12th Century, and "beyond the Pale," Gaelic-speaking Ireland. T-shirts — sold during breaks in the proceedings — celebrate the new identity of the lawyers, all of whom are working without a fee.

Assistant U. S. Attorney David Kirby has been branded "the Weasel." Kirby is young, capable, and fervent in his prosecution; he is also tough, testy as an irascible cat, and — with his delicately trimmed, dirty-blond beard — fitting himself to a pre-cast niche in the collective unconscious of the "stalwarts," the place of the persecutor.

"Kurrby," the stalwarts mutter, as if it were a curse.

"Kurrby's workin' at the behest of Her Majesty's government," they grumble.

"Oh, Kurrby and his insinuat' questions!" they cry. "Kurrby's a clever head on his shoulders. Thank God, he's such a great and lovely bore."

As an antidote to the assistant U. S. attorney, they have chosen Michael Kennedy, Flannery's lawyer, as their champion. Kennedy is middle-aged, with wavy, coppery-red hair, a ruddy complexion, and an eagle's threatening gaze. He can be stern and ceremonious, in a priestly way, at one moment, and warm, ironic and poetic the next. He is able to turn quickly and masterfully from courtly to funny to furious, and no matter which face he assumes, he manages to communicate a sense of outrage — an outrage that, if Flannery feels at all, his deeply ingrained stoicism doesn't allow him to display — that his client, 80 years old as the trial begins, has been brought before this court.

"We're in great shape with your man Kennedy at the helm," one of the stalwarts brags.

"Did you ever see a more distinguished gentleman?" another asks.

"Isn't he gorgeous?"

"Oh, Kurrby," trills a third, "you've met your match in Michael Kennedy."

And so, with all the players in their places, the stage has been set for Flannery to rise from the great raft of the defense table to which he,

his four codefendants and their lawyers clung for the two months of the trial and take the stand to provide the connecting thread to Harrison's claim of U. S.-government sanction for his two decades of shipping of guns to the IRA.

"Your honor, I call Michael Flannery," Kennedy says, and the gallery stiffens and breathes as one.

"Have you, sir, over the years, gotten money for the use of the Irish Republican Army?" Kennedy asks Flannery, after establishing his residency in America since 1927, his acquisition of American citizenship in 1933 and his employment by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. from 1928 to 1968.

"I have," Flannery answers. "There had been a general exodus of young men and women from Ireland from 1924 to 1927, and I came here purposely to organize them, so they would be a help to the IRA at home, to complete the freedom of Ireland."

"During the time of the fighting, 1920, 1921, do you know where it was that the bulk of money and the weapons for the IRA, to carry on their fight were coming from?" Kennedy asks.

"From America," Flannery answers.

'No matter which face Flannery's attorney assumes, he manages to communicate a sense of outrage.'

"And is that a tradition that has continued to this date?"

"It is."

"I would like to direct your attention to the late '50s or early '60s," Kennedy says in a slowed, careful voice. He is now at the epicenter of the defense's purpose for having Flannery take the stand. "Did there come a time when George Harrison came to see you with a particular plan or proposal?"

"Correct," Flannery answers. "He came and told me he had got a very good source, government protection, to send arms to Ireland."

"And did he mention the name, if you can recall, of this very good source, with government connections?"

"He did."

"What was the name of that man?"

"DeMeo." Mission accomplished. Job well done, Lt. Flannery.

Kirby takes a vigorous, valiant crack at toppling the whole story. He makes his points, and he damages Flannery's credibility in the process. But it is a risky business, trying to undermine an 80-year-old man in front of a jury of 12 New Yorkers, that most empathetic of breeds in the matter of underdogs. Long after Kirby finishes with Flannery, several of the jurors continue to glower at the assistant U. S. attorney.

The next day, a headline in the New York Post howls:

B'KLYN JURY ACQUITS IRA GUNRUNNERS

Below that, the paper adds the line, "CIA had to know" of arms shipments, says juror," reflecting only a fraction of the vigor that the stalwarts in the packed courtroom had shown the previous afternoon after the foreman rose to his feet and answered "not guilty" 15 times to the clerk's roll of the 15 separate charges.

"It's a great day for Ireland! Up the IRA!" they chanted. "God bless America!" they cried. "Thatcher got bad news today!" they shouted. "Old Ireland was victorious for once, and it was almost worth the 800 years of waitin'."

The story should end there, perhaps, or later, on the evening of the verdict, amid the deliriously happy tumult of the victory party at the Tower View Ballroom in Woodside, with the Armagh pipers leading the defendants, the seven lawyers and two of the jurors through the throng of celebrants, to the peals of "The Minstrel Boy." The story of the trial ends there, but Flannery's story does not.

It is dusk, 10 days after the acquittal, and the old man waits for a Manhattan-bound train at the 90th Street station in Jackson Heights. He has jostled with a BBC film crew in front of his house this morning, bartering words on the subject of his acquittal for the opportunity to deliver a history lesson on "the Irish question."

Now he is headed to a meeting of

The Manhattan chapter of Irish Northern Aid in a small room above O'Lunney's Bar on Second Avenue, where he will battle the plaintive squeal of the slide guitar leaking up from the downstairs lounge, to discourse, as both scholar and participant, on the most recent century of Irish history.

Earlier in the day, Her Majesty's minister for Northern Ireland, James Prior, has landed at Kennedy Airport, dispatched by Prime Minister Thatcher to scold the American judicial system for its findings in the matter of Flannery and his four codefendants. Prior preceded Flannery into Manhattan by several hours — although not by subway.

The old chieftain is happy as he waits, anonymously, on the darkening, almost empty platform. He is greatly flattered that they have sent the "head gaff" over. Before he faced Kirby on the witness stand, he had wondered if he would be afraid. But it had been no different from when he'd been in the thick of a "job" during "the Troubles." He'd always kept his head. Bits of poetry had come flocking into his head when he was on the stand. He had quoted from the poet John O'Hagan in trying to explain the awful power of the gun: "The tribune's voice and the poet's pen / May sow the seed in slavish men. / But 'tis the sword, the sword alone / Reaps freedom's harvest when 'tis grown." Now, he sensed, they were close to the end.

When you're old, they say you become more accepting of death, Flannery reflected. But that wasn't the way with him at all. When he had been young, and risking his life in one engagement after another, he hadn't a care for death. If it came, it would find him fighting the good fight, and that was all a man could ask, he believed. But now it frightened him.

He wanted to see the end of all of the sadness and struggle and sacrifice — the final summing up. The time was coming, he could feel it deep in himself. Just to be able to see the end of this, that's all.

On 7/15/83, John G. Flood, 18 Atlantic St., Lowell, Mass., was interviewed and at the beginning of the interview, Flood was given an explanation of the FBI's responsibilities in the area of terrorism. John G. Flood, DOB 2/18/22 is on disability retirement from the U.S. Post Office since 7/30/71, for a related back injury.

Flood was totally cooperative and agreed to answer any questions. Specifically, telephone calls to the New York City area and various conversations with a George Harrison in the year 1981 were put to Flood. Flood advised he does not personally know George Harrison and has not seen nor heard from him in over ten years. George Harrison is the [redacted]

[redacted] Sabina Flood, John G. Flood's mother. Sabina Flood died in 1982; father, Patrick H. Flood died in 1977. Numerous telephone conversations were held between [redacted] and Sabina Flood plus numerous other Flood [redacted] relatives and friends who reside in the New York City area.

Based on the above information plus the fact that no substantial verification of subject's involvement in IRA activities has ever been developed nor any other Flood family members in the Lowell, Mass. area, captioned matter is being discontinued and this matter is being placed in a closed status to be re-opened should pertinent information be developed or received.

Approximately 100-125 people attended this activity, including a number of people from the M19CO and the MOVIMIENTO PARA LA LIBERACION NACIONAL (MLN). Literature was distributed by a representative of the Irish Northern Aid Committee who was also responsible for selling the tickets used to buy drinks.

The program included music, poetry, and short dramatic presentations portraying Irish heroes. The dramatic presentations were done by [redacted]

b6
b7C

[redacted] One of the poems was read by [redacted]

Following the above activities was a lengthy speech by GEORGE HARRISON. HARRISON was introduced as someone who has been bringing guns from the United States to Ireland for the past 30 years. HARRISON himself stated that he joined the IRA when he was 15 years old and he has been doing work for the IRA for 48 years. HARRISON's speech included a discussion of the historical connection between MARXISM and the IRA which dates to the 1800's.

HARRISON was extremely critical of a speech made by DANIEL PATRICK MOYNIHAN in which MOYNIHAN urged appeasement with Britain. HARRISON made it clear that MOYNIHAN was an enemy.

HARRISON stated that he could be contacted through the Irish Northern Aid Committee in Chicago.

During the evening, HARRISON spent quite a bit of time talking separately to [redacted]

THE NEW YORK OFFICE IS IN ACCORD WITH FBIHQ IN REGARD TO BRINGING THIS PART OF THE OPERATION TO A CLOSE BY EXECUTING COURT-AUTHORIZED SEARCH WARRANTS [REDACTED]

b7E

THE NEW YORK OFFICE HAS BEEN IN CONSTANT CONTACT WITH THE USA'S OFFICE, EASTERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK (EDNY), PREPARING THE NECESSARY PAPERS FOR THE SEARCH WARRANTS AND, HOPEFULLY, THEY WILL BE PRESENTED TO THE DISTRICT COURT TODAY.

SAC, DIVISION IV, DISAGREES WITH FBIHQ THAT IN ADDITION TO THE SEARCH WARRANTS, WARRANTS SHOULD BE SECURED FOR THE ARREST [REDACTED] PRESENTLY UNDER INVESTIGATION.

THE USA'S OFFICE FEELS THAT THE CASE LACKS PROSECUTIVE MERIT AT THIS TIME. [REDACTED]
