LA 161-1893
JMK/gn

"933 North La Brea Avenue
Los Angeles, California
February 24, 1961
Time: 10:55 a.m.

"I, (Henry Salvatori, civilian) reside at 10463 Bellagio Road, Los Angeles 24, California, having been informed by Jack Gudalia, who has identified himself to me as a Special Agent of the Office of Naval Intelligence, that I am to bequestioned in connection with my past association in the Dante Alighieri Society during 1940, and having been further advised by Mr. Gudalia that I do not have to make any statement concerning this matter, and that any statement made by me may be used in evidence against me in judicial proceedings, wish to make the following voluntary statement. I make this statement with full knowledge of my rights under the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution concerning self-incrimination, and it is made without any threat having been made against me, or any promises extended to me.

"I was born March 28, 1901 in Rome, Italy. I am a male Caucasian, height 5'10", 180 lbs., of hazel eyes and gray hair. I derived my U.S. Citizenship through my father's naturalization.

"When Mr. Gudalia asked me about the Dante Alighieri Society, I showed him a statement from this Society for Dues, which happened to be on my desk. I became a member of this Society in 1958. Mr. Gudalia pointed out to me that the present Society was not in question, but the Society of the same name between 1935 - 1940 was a cited organization. I told him I had no recollection whatsoever of having belonged to this Society during those years, but stated that if I had paid any dues by checks, such would be revealed by my books. Mr. Gudalia and I then went to my Auditor, Mr. Robert Houston, in an adjoining room and asked him to look through my books in the years of 1935 through 1941 to determine whether I had made out any checks to the Dante Alighieri Society. To my surprise, we found a check had been made out by me to this Society on April 5, 1940 for $5.00. I still do not have any recollection of having attended any meetings, or even made out the check but, undoubtedly, my records are clear and I did send this Society a check for $5.00. Since I have no recollection whatsoever of this check, or of this Society during 1940, I cannot make any positive statement concerning it, but I am certain that had I known that this Society was in anyway infiltrated by subversive elements I would never had contributed to it.

"With regard to the Dante Alighieri Society to which I contribute to and am a member of at the present time, it is my firm belief, without any doubt, that this Society is a literary and musical society, which the name itself denotes. I have never attended a meeting of this Society since I first became a member -- not because of my questioning its activities, but because of lack of time. Since my literary and musical activities are limited, my only reasons for becoming a member of this Society were that Dr. Elmer Belt, who has a very fine collection of Leonardo daVinci works, was President of the Society and asked me to join. Dr. Belt, who is a medical doctor, has treated me on one or two occasions and is a prominent physician in Los Angeles whom I have known for a period of 10 or 15 years. Another reason that induced me to join is the fact that since I was of Italian birth, I did not want to give the impression to some of the members of this Society with Italian names that I was anti-Italian, especially, since our company conducts extensive operations in Italy and derives much profit from same.

"In any event, I did not give great consideration in joining this Society, and I have treated it more or less as a civic organization to sponsor an artistic movement in our city. I made the following personal donations to this Society:

March 26, 1958	$10.00
May 5, 1959	$14.00

"Through my wholly owned foreign company, which operates in Italy and other foreign countries the following donations were made:

May 16, 1958	$250.00
July 20, 1959	250.00
April 21, 1960	250.00

"My association with Dr. Belt has not been an intimate one, and as he is a well-known person in Los Angeles, I do meet him occasionally at affairs in Los Angeles, and have had occasion to have discussed general matters with him. From these very brief discussions I have faintly concluded that perhaps he entertains rather liberal views, but I have no real proof of this since my deductions are based on rather sketchy remarks.

"Again concerning the Dante Alighieri Society and my contribution to it in 1940, with reference to my Certificate of Nonaffiliation with Certain Organizations, DD Form 48-1, I indicated that I have never been associated with any organizations listed on that form, however, it has been pointed out to me that the Dante Alighieri Society was listed on this form from the years 1935 - 1940, and the only explanation I can give is my failure to notice this Society on the Form. I, undoubtedly, read through this form rather hastily because I was fully aware that I knowingly did not belong or was affiliated with any subversive organizations and, also, had I read it I would not have paid any attention to it because I was convinced I did not have any association with this Society and to this moment, I still have no recollection of it. I must admist this is a complete oversight and I had no intention of hiding this association in anyway. I have always been a vehement and strong opponent of any anti-American activity and I support any group or publication which fosters conservative thinking and anti-communist prgrams, and this fact is known to my large number of associates in this city and can be substantiated by anyone who knows me. I have been for many years a staunch Republican with conservative views, and at the present time I am the Finance Chairman of the California State Republican Finance Committee, as well as a member of the Republican National Finance Committee.

"In my company publication"The Profile" I have written several articles that clearly indicate my strong political sentiments and my undying opposition to the Communist movement.

"I am also a member of many other organizations of which I have given a list to Mr. Gudalia. These organization consist mainly of oil business affiliations and civic organizations. In addition, I am a member of the Board of Trustees of the University of Southern California, and am a Director of Transamerica, Citizens National Bank, and Litton Industries, and was formerly a Director of Consolidated Electrodynamics Corp. and the Telautograph Corporation. I am, in addition, to being a Chairman of the Board of Western Geophysical Company, principal owner and president of Grant Oil Tool Company whose offices are located at 2042 East Vernon Avenue, Los Angeles, California. I am one of the original stockholders of National Review and have supported this magazine throughout its publication history.

"Mr. Gudalia asked me whether I remembered the name of Alexander Solovov. I advised him that the name was slightly familiar and after a little discussion, I recalled 3 Russians visiting our plant in 1947 and I remembered that my brother, Albert Salvatori, took care of these people and he recalled this matter very clearly. Albert Salvatori took these men around the plant and had 2 of these men, Solovov and Ivan Popoff to his home for dinner. He recalled these gentlemen very well and was under the impression they represented the Amtorg Corporation and were interested in buying geophysical equipment. The Amtorg Corp. was a buying agency for Russia during that time. I do not recall these people at all, although I do remember 3 delegates visted our plant. However, I vividly remember the conversation these men had with my brother, Albert Salvatori, since this was related to me by my brother a day or two later. My brother can recall the details of these people, however I do recall my brother relating they were interested in the heating thermostatic control. This interested me because it revealed that their homes did not have the simple thermostatic controls, as otherwise they would not have shown the great interest that they did in this country. As I recall, their visit was a routine one. We did not show them anything of technical importance and we confined their visit to the Machine Shop and the Electronics Shop. But as far as I can remember no details of our geophysical equipment were given to them.

"When Mr. Gudalia asked if I had had any business contact in Brazil prior to World War II, I immediately recalled the incident which aroused the suspicion of a local Intelligence Agency of the FBI. Frankly, I thought that the interview with Mr Gudalia was prompted by this incident which involved

Brazil. I advised Mr. Gudalia of this incident as follows:

"Some time prior to United States entry into World War II, one of our company supervisors was in Rio de Janero contacting oil companies in South America for the purpose of obtaining geophysical contracts. As I recall, he spent several months in South America and made Rio de Janiero his headquarters. While there he apparently met an individual socially, whose name I do not recall, or doubt if I ever heard, who owned 25 filling stations in Brazil and was interested in buying some gasoline from the United States. Our supervisor, Mr. Michael Boccalery, wrote me a letter stating this man was anxious to buy gasoline, but since the market was dominated by big oil companies, he was unable to buy gasoline for his independent stations, and Mr. Boccalery was wondering if we could buy gasoline in California and make a little profit. I called someone at Tidewater Oil Company, and he advised me that such purchases are handled through an oil broker, and he gave me a name of an oil broker in Los Angeles. This man's name was Mr. Leh, and I called him and told him that we had an opportunity to sell some gasoline in Brazil and if he would quote me a price such that Boccalery and I would make a quarter of a cent a gallon that he could handle the negotiations for him. After sending 2 or 3 cablegrams back and forth to Boccalery it appeared that the transaction was becoming too involved and I turned the transaction over to Mr. Leh with the understanding that when and if the transaction was completed we would receive a small commission of a quarter a cent a gallon on all gasoline sold. I did not follow closely on this, but a month or two later Mr. Leh telephoned me and said he could not make the sale and I told him that as far as I was concerned he could handle it anyway he wanted and if the transaction was completed he could give ma a couple of cases of scotch as my commission. I never heard from Mr. Leh so I assume the transaction was never completed. However, a year later I received an inquiry from one of our Intelligence Agents regarding this transaction. At the time I told him about it I asked my secretary to bring me the file and I turned it over to the Agent, and told the Agent any information he wanted he could get from Mr. Leh. He left my office completely satisified with my explanation and I assume he went to Mr. Leh's office for an explanation.

"I am an avowed anti-Communist and have spent a lot my time and money fighting unamerican activities of all kinds and have published some articles expressing my viewpoints. I have given some copies of my articles to Mr. Gudalia, and also some correspondence on the same subject matter.

"The above statement was dictated to Myrtle H. May, my secretary, by me in my presence and typed by Myrtle H. May at my request."

Alphonzo Bell Will Run for Sixth Term From 28th District

DATED JAN 22 1970

BY CARL GREENBERG
Times Political Writer

Rep. Alphonzo Bell (R-Los Angeles), facing strong opposition by conservatives, Wednesday announced he will run for a sixth term from the 28th District.

The district extends from the Palos Verdes Peninsula through Santa Monica into the San Fernando Valley. It includes Bel-Air, founded by his father.

Bel-Air also is the home of conservative Henry Salvatori, wealthy oil man and industrialist and one of the chief supporters of Republican John T. LaFollette, an attorney. LaFollette won endorsement for the congressional seat last December from a group of 60 district residents, including Salvatori.

Salvatori said Wednesday he is serving on LaFollette's campaign committee and that the group that endorsed him covered the GOP spectrum, but "we all had one thing in common—that Bell should be replaced."

The industrialist said neither he nor the others like what he called Bell's liberal voting record. The American Conservative Union, he added, shows Bell's record "more liberal than the majority of the Democrats."

The decision by Bell, also a wealthy oilman, to run presaged one of the most hotly contested GOP congressional races in the June primary.

Last year, Bell, 55, was defeated in the mayoral primary. He then endorsed Councilman Thomas Bradley in Bradley's unsuccessful runoff against Mayor Sam Yorty. Salvatori was one of the prime figures in Yorty's campaign.

Bell, who was in Washington Wednesday, said, in announcing he will run again, that if he wins another term and if the Republicans gain control of Congress, his seniority will make him chairman of the subcommittee on science, research and development of the House Science and Astronautics Committee.

He also is the fourth ranking Republican on the House Education and Labor Committee and chairman of its general education subcommittee.

The announcement described Bell as a "close Nixon ally." He was Republican state chairman from 1956 to 1958 and Los Angeles County GOP chairman from 1958 to 1960. He also served as a member of the GOP National Committee.

Despite Salvatori's description of the ACU's compilation as showing Bell with a more liberal voting record than those of Democrats, Bell's announcement said that although he is considered a moderate:

"On most legislation . . . he has voted with the economy bloc in Congress, and for this he has often been endorsed by the Conservative Americans for Constitutional Action . . ."

He also said he has been one of the "most consistent" supporters of President Nixon's legislative program.

Last fall the congressman was uncertain whether he would run again. His wife had died in September.

Unruh, Salvatori Meet in Angry Confrontation

Candidate Takes Entourage to Bel-Air Home of Oilman in Kicking Off Gubernatorial Drive

BY RICHARD BERGHOLZ
Times Political Writer

For Democrat Jess Unruh, it was a slam-bang start of the fall campaign for governor.

There he was, on a bright sunshiny Labor Day morning, standing outside the gate to the Bel-Air residence of millionaire oilman Henry Salvatori, charging that Salvatori, one of Republican Gov. Reagan's closest advisers, stood to get a $4,113 property tax break if the governor's tax shift bill becomes law.

And there was Salvatori, fresh from the tennis court, and his wife angrily shouting through the gate at Unruh and the horde of newsmen and staff members who clogged the narrow Bel-Air street in front of the mansion. SEP

As Unruh made his brief spiel to newsmen about the $700,000 Salvatori residence and the benefits which might accrue in property tax relief under the Reagan plan, the oilman and his wife joined the fray and, at times, three voices were echoing in rising decibels simultaneously.

Calls Unruh Names

Salvatori called Unruh an "ass" and a "liar." His wife accused the Democratic candidate for governor of engaging in "cheap politics" and said he has no class.

It all began when Unruh, kicking off the fall campaign for governor, decided to show how the Reagan tax shift bill, in his view, works unfairly on different economic levels.

First, he took newsmen to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Blatt at 1034 Stearns Ave., just off Carthay Circle.

On the Blatts' front lawn, before newsmen and a gaggle of neighbors, he pointed to a prepared flipcard on a stand his staff had set up, showing that the Blatt's house is valued at $29,600, that they face an $82 tax increase this fall. He implied that the Reagan proposal does nothing much to help the Blatt family, but he did not go into details.

The Blatts—and just about everyone else on the block—are Democrats, Unruh staff members said, and they knew the tour was coming by.

Things were different when the Unruh-led entourage went to Bel-Air. There was Mrs. Salvatori standing behind the closed iron gate, forewarned by her neighbors and clearly irate about the whole thing.

Soon she was joined by her husband, decked out in tennis togs. He shook hands with Unruh through the gate, then exploded when the Democratic candidate began his spiel about the $4,113 tax relief which he said Salvatori would get from the Reagan bill.

Salvatori, standing in the driveway of his residence, interrupted Unruh to say, "Oh, you ass, you."

The Democratic Assemblyman and gubernatorial candidate charged that Salvatori is one of the key men in Reagan's "kitchen cabinet," and he identified him as "one of the men who are manipulating this Administration."

'Salvatori Relief Fund'

Unruh claimed that Salvatori's house is valued at $700,000, and his property tax relief under the Reagan plan would be $4,113, and he claimed that every renter in the state with an annual income of $8,000 or less would be paying $25 a year under the plan to the "Henry Salvatori tax relief fund."

"You're a liar, Mr. Unruh," Salvatori said as he stood at the legislator's elbow.

Unruh charged that Salvatori benefits from "tax loopholes." The old man repeatedly insisted, "I have no loopholes."

Mrs. Salvatori, who was furious at the Unruh intrusion, then got into the argument and made it a three-way shouting match.

"We worked for the money to pay for it," she said, referring to the house. "This is what you call cheap politics."

She said she resented "people coming on private property on a holiday" and said the confrontation is going to hurt Unruh politically.

"No wonder he (Unruh) can't raise any money for Democrats," Mrs. Salvatori said.

Unruh Meets Salvatori in Angry Clash

Her husband, a substantial financial contributor and fund-raiser in the Reagan campaign, called the Unruh-directed tour past his Bel Air residence "a cheap, political grandstand play."

"His campaign is dying on the vine," Salvatori said. "He knows he's licked."

Salvatori said he did not know the value of his real estate or the extent of his prospective tax relief if the Reagan program were to become law.

But he emphasized that "if he (Unruh) is trying to imply that I support Ronald Reagan to get tax relief, it's absurd, it's silly."

Question of Influence

Salvatori said he does not exert any influence on the governor. But he said he is a member of a group of men close to Reagan and that "I can call him and make suggestions, but he doesn't have to take them."

When Unruh walked away from the oilman and his wife, Salvatori challenged him to "come back here and debate this." Unruh refused, and said "send Gov. Reagan," referring to his repeated invitation to the governor to join him in televised campaign debates. So far, Reagan has refused.

Later, Unruh told newsmen that "we didn't know he (Salvatori) would be home." And he added that "we didn't violate his property rights" during the impromptu visit.

Only an hour earlier, the Democratic candidate had told a kickoff rally at his Wilshire Blvd. headquarters that the "Big Daddy" image he had in his past political career is gone now.

But it really was not all bad, he said.

Unruh said he got the "Big Daddy" appellation when he was almost 100 pounds heavier, and when as Assembly Speaker he ran the legislative body with a heavy hand.

Speaking in the third person, Unruh said "Big

September 8, 1970

Daddy" ran the Assembly "sometimes for the good of the Democratic Party, sometimes for the good of the people and sometimes for his own political good."

Unruh said he learned how to "arm-twist, to compromise, to make deals, to get the last extra vote."

This was the way things were done, he said, and he learned that "it was a game — and the people were entitled to something better than games."

Those "Big Daddy" days are gone now, Unruh claimed. "He isn't here anymore."

But Reagan and his supporters have made it clear they do not intend to drop the "Big Daddy" tag for Unruh.

As for Reagan, Unruh jibed that the governor really does not exist, that he is only a "pretty picture," a computer-produced "front for the special interests of California."

The big-money backers of Reagan really have their eye on the Presidency for him, Unruh said.

The Democrat continued the attack on Reagan at the traditional Labor Day picnic by the Alameda County Federation of Labor in Pleasanton. While Unruh was getting a warm welcome in Alameda County, Reagan was talking to the annual Retail Clerks Union picnic in Orange County.

Unruh Fails in Attempt to Get Reagan Into Debate at Airport

NED SEP 9 BY RICHARD BERGHOLZ
Times Political Writer

SAN JOSE—The big shootout Tuesday between Gov. Reagan and Democrat Jesse Unruh turned out to be a big bust. But Unruh says he's going to keep trying.

"We're not going to give up on this," the Democratic nominee for governor told his cheering supporters in one part of the San Jose Municipal Airport while Reagan met with newsmen in a closely guarded room a few hundred feet away.

"We're going to keep chasing him around this state," Assemblyman Unruh said. "Every time he turns tail and runs, we're going to raise the issue of why he's afraid.

"Is he afraid of the issues or is something else wrong when he will not stand up to me, man to man, to discuss what's wrong with this state?"

The Democrat and his staff went to elaborate lengths to phase in Unruh's schedule with Reagan's so both men would be in the same city and the same building at the same time.

Reagan was met by a band of his supporters at one gate to the terminal while Unruh was met by his backers—a somewhat larger group—at another gate.

Unruh dispatched his press aide, Lucien Haas, to negotiate with Reagan's press aide, Paul Beck.

It didn't take Haas long to report back that Beck said, "We don't want to have him over here (at the Reagan conference) and we're not going over there."

When Reagan finished his news conference, at which he complained he believed Unruh was trying to "badger" him with demands for a meeting, he left with a phalanx of security officers through a side entrance to the terminal.

Unruh walked out to an observation balcony and waved goodby when the governor's chartered plane took off for the next stop on his campaign tour.

On Monday, Unruh made an unannounced visit to the Bel-Air millionaire oilman Henry Salvatori, one of Reagan's closest advisers, to dramatize, he said, the disparity in property tax relief which would be granted to the wealthy over the less-affluent under the governor's proposed tax shift bill.

Salvatori angrily charged Unruh with a "cheap grandstand trick" and called the candidate an "ass" and a "liar" while Unruh talked to newsmen.

Salvatori is only the first of many Reagan backers who will be targeted in the campaign, as long as Reagan keeps ducking a man-to-man meeting, Unruh said.

He promised to "expose" the wealthy men behind Reagan as the campaign develops.

reductions in class sizes and several other accomplishment he said have occurred since he was first elected in 1962.

Rafferty spent considerable time defending his contention that California school children are performing better on reading achievement tests than they did eight years ago.

Rafferty said an independent consultant had reviewed the scores and found that reading ability has improved considerably in recent years.

Rafferty also declared that sensitivity training was likely to become an issue in the public schools soon. "I'm opposed to it. I will try to nip it in the bud," he promised.

The debate was the first face-to-face meeting of the two candidates. They are scheduled to meet again tonight in Torrance, but neither of the men is certain whether he will consider the debate.

Reagan Hits Unruh Conduct, Says He Harassed Salvatori

FED SEP 9 1970

BY CARL GREENBERG
Times Political Writer

SAN JOSE—Gov. Reagan accused Jess Unruh Tuesday of harassing Los Angeles industrialist Henry Salvatori by staging a campaign visit to Salvatori's Bel-Air home to attack Reagan's tax reform program.

The Republican governor criticized Unruh, his Democratic opponent, at the San Jose Airport where the Inglewood assemblyman vainly sought a confrontation with Reagan.

Unruh, accompanied by busloads of newsmen covering his campaign, went to the outside of Salvatori's expensive home Monday to illustrate his charges that Reagan's tax program, lost by one vote in the State Senate, would have benefited the wealthy. The Democratic candidate wound up with Mr. and Mrs. Salvatori angrily denouncing his conduct.

The governor told a press conference at San Jose that Unruh "is an elected representative of the people and I am hard put to find any justification" for Unruh to "harass" the Salvatoris.

"I think it's very unseemly for an officeholder," said Reagan, adding that Unruh's charges that the governor's tax plan helps the rich at the expense of the less affluent "are unfactual and untrue."

Reagan flew to Northern California Tuesday from Newport Beach on the second day of his campaign battle with Unruh, and hammered at what he alleges are too liberal welfare laws that have led to gross abuses at huge public expense.

REAGAN CAMPAIGN

Reagan also denied threatening to campaign against the 18 senators who voted against his tax plan and indicated support for one of them, Clark Bradley (R-San Jose), because Bradley's Democratic opponent, Reagan thought, would vote against all the governor's bills.

Reagan shook hands with numerous workers at the Westinghouse Electric Co.'s marine turbine plant in Sunnyvale.

He evoked laughter when he recalled that when Betty Furness was the hostess on the Westinghouse television show, General Electric had a show and "I was the Betty Furness on that program."

He told the workers, member of the Machinists Union, that "the truth is your backs are being broken by taxes" while those truly in need are hurting and others not in need are taking advantage of welfare law loopholes that must be ended.

In Hayward, Reagan got a tremendous ovation at a joint luncheon of that city's Rotary, Lions and Kiwanis clubs when he told the members "we'll be back in January, God and the voters willing," to try again for his tax reform program.

During a question period, he was asked what he would do if he were President "to bring peace to Vietnam and bring our American soldiers home."

Groans of disapproval and shouts of "don't answer that" exploded from the audience.

Referring to newsmen present, Reagan said, "I can just see their leads now, 'Reagan says if he were President . . .'"

Then, in serious vein, he replied that he has been briefed by President Nixon and others and:

"I believe the President of the United States for the first time in nine long, ugly years of this war has a workable plan for making the South Vietnamese take over their own defense and for bringing the boys home and I believe his plan, including the Cambodian operation, deserves the full support of the American people."

The club members burst into loud applause and cheers.

Reagan ended his second day of campaigning at a fund raising reception in Ross. Today he will visit Napa and Santa Rosa.

Reagan Calls Unruh Visit to His Home Act of Demagogue

BY CARL GREENBERG
Times Political Writer

SANTA ROSA—Gov. Reagan late Wednesday denounced Jess Unruh's visit to the governor's rented house in Sacramento earlier in the day as "cheap demagoguery."

The trip to the outside of the Republican governor's residence by his Democratic opponent was made to illustrate Unruh's claim that Reagan is tied to a small group of wealthy backers who bought the house so they could rent it to him.

It was the second such campaign device used by Unruh. The first was on Labor Day when the Democratic contender stood outside the Bel-Air home of industrialist Henry Salvatori, one of Reagan's supporters and a top GOP fund raiser, and accused Reagan of seeking property tax breaks for the wealthy.

Justifies Debate Refusal

"One thing my opponent has done is make it clear I was right in refusing to debate him," Reagan told a press conference here before flying to Los Angeles.

"His idea of debate obviously is cheap demagoguery."

At the same time, Reagan responded to Unruh's demand that he disclose his assets by saying that he could have made more money by staying in the acting business.

Reagan said he would not disclose his assets, that he considers this "an invasion of privacy" and that "I have no conflict of interest whatsoever."

'Terrible Thing'

"It's a kind of blackmail and I know it's a terrible thing to have the responsibility for those people's lives who are being held there . . . I think a man said it last night whose wife and child are in one of those planes over on the desert.

"Naturally, he wants his wife and child back but he had the courage to say that someplace along the line you have to draw a line against being blackmailed.

"You have to put your foot down and say, 'This we will not put up with,' and we once had a country in which they had so much respect for us because we were that way even in revolutions. It used to be that an American could simply pin a little American Flag on him and be safe even in the midst of a revolution in some other country, because the world knew that this country would go anyplace in the world to get back any citizen of ours . . .

". . . I think we can get back to that and it's just going to take the courage of the American people to say there is a price we will not pay to criminals' and blackmailers' nations of this kind and I hope we'll see evidence of that kind of a day."

Takes Courage

Reagan, who played guard on the Eureka College (Ill.) football team, stopped at the Hanna School, a residential center for neglected boys aged from 10 to 16, and was given a blue and gold "H" letter after doffing his coat and serving briefly as quarterback.

On Tuesday night, Reagan told several hundred persons at a reception at Ross in Marin County that Unruh had been guilty of "invasion of privacy" in visiting Salvatori's home.

Discussion Display

Then, discussing Unruh's display of placards outside the Salvatori home, designed to show that Reagan's defeated tax reform program would have given Salvatori and undue tax break because he is rich, the governor said:

"The figures he (Unruh) used proved that figures don't lie, but liars do figure."

Reagan told the group that a tax program Unruh had sponsored would have given Salatori, a $13,000 tax break on his expensive home as compared with an approximate $4,100 break under Reagan's plan.

However, the governor said he would be "very happy" to have an accounting firm go over his assets and issue a statement saying whether his holdings, in the firm's opinion, constitute a conflict of interest.

The governor's day started with a visit to a pants factory in Napa, where, discussing Arab guerrilla skyjacking, he voiced hope the United States would return to the day when it would not tolerate blackmail by criminals. He also opposed gun registration, saying that's how Hitler and other dictators gained control.

Plays Football

After a Napa service clubs luncheon speech in which he continued to hammer away at what he considers too liberal welfare laws, Reagan played football with youngsters at the Vianna Boys Center in Sonoma County's Valley of the Moon.

Although he said here later that he was leaving the solution of the Palestine Liberation Front hijackings to the State Department, Reagan said earlier in Napa:

". . . civilization itself, if it's going to continue, depends on the United States, but I think that here is an example of the type of enemy we're up against in the whole world scene, that would seize innocent people, threaten their lives, hold them as they're being held in return for getting criminals out of jail. /-33-/

Reagan to Fight Court Order on Welfare Funds

Assails Ruling on U.S. Withholding of Funds as 'Ridiculous'

BY CARL GREENBERG
Times Political Writer

Gov. Reagan Friday bitterly condemned as "ridiculous" a federal court order that would require California to increase welfare payments or lose millions of dollars in federal funds.

"We're going to fight this out if we have to secede," the governor vowed.

"If I sound mad, I am," Reagan told employes at the ITT Gilfillan, Inc., plant in Van Nuys, where he made a campaign stop.

U.S. Dist. Judge Alfonso J. Zirpoli of San Francisco Thursday ordered the state to pay within 60 days extra money under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program to reflect cost-of-living increases since 1957. An appeal by the state is being planned.

Ridiculous Decisions

Reagan said: "I think it's another one of those ridiculous decisions that make people impatient with the courts."

He also was critical of the judge for not permitting the state attorney general's office to present its arguments in defense of the state's position.

During his tour of the radar system plant, the welfare subject came up several times as the Republican governor spoke to different employe groups.

At another point, Reagan said:

"Frankly, I think it was about as ridiculous as some of the decisions we've been getting from other courts, including the (U.S.) Supreme Court."

The governor contended that the issue revolved around a technicality and that the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare has said the state does not have to pay more under the program.

Reagan said that when you "take on" a bureaucracy, "you are taking on a powerful enemy," but that "I've got news for 'em—We're going to fight this out if we have to secede."

He also contended there are 35 states paying less than California on the dependent children program.

Asked his reaction to the campaign conduct of his Democratic opponent, Assemblyman Jess Unruh, Reagan said he still feels Unruh is engaging in "cheap demagoguery" and:

"What I've seen so far, is an unwarranted invasion of privacy."

Salvatori Incident

The reference was to Unruh's Labor Day visit to the outside of the Bel-Air home of industrialist Henry Salvatori in Unruh's effort to show that wealthy persons such as Salvatori would have received large tax breaks under Reagan's defeated tax reform program.

Standing under a hot sun and speaking to several hundred employes during their coffee break, Reagan experienced some difficulty in getting an amplifier operative and brought laughs when he asked:

"Is there a doctor in the house?"

Questions from the employes dealt with their concern about property taxes, defense industry jobs and campus violence, as well as welfare costs.

Off and Running

"A front for the special interests of California," said Democratic gubernatorial candidate Jess Unruh, of Gov. Reagan.

"Demogoguery," replied the governor.

"Liar," said a bystander to Unruh.

"Cheap politics," added the bystander's wife.

And thus, the 1970 election campaigns were off and running in California.

The flamboyant assemblyman from Inglewood, former Assembly speaker, kicked off proceedings by leading a horde of newsmen to the Bel-Air mansion of millionaire oilman Henry Salvatori.

Unruh identified Salvatori as one of Reagan's "kitchen cabinet," said that he stood to receive a $4,113 property tax break if Reagan's stalled tax reform program ever became law, and claimed that every renter in the state with an annual income of $8,000 or less would be paying $25 a year to the "Henry Salvatori tax relief fund."

"Oh, you ass you!" said Salvatori, who by now had been drawn to the iron gates of his home. "You're a liar."

Group at Reagan's Home

Mrs. Salvatori played her bit, following which Unruh appeared with another entourage on the front lawn of Reagan's Sacramento home to assertedly illustrate a claim that Reagan is tied to a small group of wealthy backers who bought the house so they could rent it to him.

"I was right in refusing to debate him," said Reagan. "His idea of debate obviously is cheap demogoguery."

Reagan again refused an Unruh demand that he reveal his capital assets, saying that he had no conflict of interest, considered the demand an invasion of privacy and adding that he could have made more money by remaining an actor.

In another race due to be on the November ballot, Sen. George Murphy prepared to open his candidacy for a second term on the Republican ticket with a visit to various minority area schools that he had assisted during his term. Rep. John V. Tunney was off on his own campaign to raise an anticipated $1.3 million from wealthy Democrats for his fight against Murphy.

Meanwhile, incumbent Max Rafferty and Wilson Riles, his challenger for the post of state superintendent of public education, spoke out on the issue of busing. Rafferty vowed to fight the "poison" of busing public school children against their parents' wishes; Riles, deputy superintendent in Rafferty's department, said he would help any district that sought help on integration, which in his thinking remains a "local issue."

'Humiliating Defeat' for Unruh Predicted by Assembly Speaker

SEP 14 1970

BY RICHARD BERGHOLZ
Times Political Writer

SAN DIEGO—Because of his record of bossism and flipflop politics, Democrat Jess Unruh faces the "most humiliating defeat of his life" in the current race for governor, Assembly Speaker Robert Monagan (R-Tracy) said Saturday.

"Democrats are going to have a tough time convincing the public that the cook who poisoned the stew is best qualified to administer the antidote," the legislative leader told the Republican State Central Committee at its weekend meeting here.

Unruh, an Inglewood assemblyman who preceded Monagan as Assembly Speaker, is "going to be haunted by his political past" all the way through the current contest with Republican Gov. Reagan, Monagan said.

Explanation by Unruh

He said he was surprised that Unruh would "begin his campaign with a Halloween scene by playing trick-or-treat at other people's homes." He said he referred to Unruh's publicized visit to the Bel-Air mansion of millionaire oilman Henry Salvatori, a Reagan supporter, and to the Sacramento mansion bought by wealthy Reagan backers for the governor's use.

Unruh had said he made the visits to demonstrate what he believes to be the inordinate power a wealthy clique holds over Reagan and state government.

But Monagan said he didn't think the California voters were amused by Unruh's antics.

"Jess can spend all the time he wants camping out on the governor's front lawn," he said, "but the people of this state are not about to allow him inside the executive mansion."

Monagan, who had been chosen by the party leadership to make the major anti-Unruh speech of the three-day weekend convention, identified the Democratic candidate as "the darling of the Eastern Democratic establishment" and as "Big Daddy, the symbol of boss rule."

Step by step, he traced Unruh's legislative career, concentrating on the time after he was elected Assembly Speaker in 1961. Monagan gave Unruh credit for "modernizing and upgrading the legislative process," but said he did it largely to enhance his own power and glory.

The destruction of the Unruh empire began in 1963, Monagan said, when, during a fight over the state budget, he locked Republican legislators in the Assembly chambers in an attempt to make them vote for the budget bill, and when he stripped some of them of committee chairmanships or vice chairmanships.

To typify the Unruh approach, Monagan said, Unruh's "idea of conservation is still to cut down a tree, stand on the stump and give a speech about saving the redwoods."

He joked about Unruh's oft-stated attempts to debate Reagan on television. "In his last televised debate, Unruh came out second best to Mr. and Mrs. Salvatori," he said, referring to the heated exchanges when the Democratic candidate was challenged by the Salvatoris who called him an "ass" and a "liar" to his face.

Reagan Raps Unruh at State GOP Meeting

BY CARL GREENBERG
Times Political Writer

SAN DIEGO—Gov. Reagan Sunday threw his sharpest barbs so far against Jess Unruh, inveighed against "Jess Unruh" politics and sounded a battle cry for a Republican victory in November.

His forum was the closing session of the GOP State Central Committee's convention, and the several-hundred delegates repeatedly burst into cheers and applause as he fired them up for a down-to-the-wire campaign battle.

The people are with him, Reagan said, in standing for law and order, against forced bussing of school children and are "sick and tired of name-calling and personal affronts and personal attacks."

Considerably revising a prepared text — although his campaign staff said he stands behind its contents "as a public statement by him"—the governor had no more than mounted the rostrum than he began firing salvos at Unruh, his Democratic gubernatorial opponent.

At the outset, Reagan said that during all his campaign travels last week he got by "without making a single house call."

This alluded to Unruh's Labor Day campaign visit with newsmen to the outside-of-industrialist Henry Salvatori's Bel-Air home.

He said Unruh is running against Salvatori—or, perhaps, Dr. Earl Brian Jr., state diector of Health Care Services. Unruh claimed Brian got his job because his father helped Reagan during the 1968 presidential campaign. Unruh apologized after learning the elder Brian had died in 1960.

Reagan's bitterest jibe came at the tail end of his speech when he said that Unruh has made much of the need for conflict-of-interest legislation and that:

"Any man who needs a written code of ethics to tell him what he should or shouldn't do has no business in Sacramento."

The governor, seeking a second term, said millions of Californians:

—"Agree with us when we make it clear that we will not appease anarchy; when we support that thin blue line which stands between us and the rule of the jungle.

—"Are with us all the way when we say the doors and the teaching chairs of the university are wide open to qualified students [illegible] every race and religion, but that an Angela Davis cannot use academic freedom as a shelter for the very effort to destroy that freedom.

—"Are with us when we say and mean that a quality education must be provided to every child, but they have a right to expect us to work for the kind of equality of opportunity that will allow a citizen to have the economic ability to choose where he will live and they have a right to expect us to bring quality education to the place they've chosen to live and not put their children on a bus and do it the other way around."

Saxon Agrees to Hike Payment for Standard Packaging

Standard Packaging Corp., Stamford, Conn., and Saxon Industries Inc. of New York Tuesday overcame the objections of Los Angeles industrialist Henry Salvatori to their merger plan.

They agreed to increase by one-third the amount of Saxon stock which Standard shareholders will receive.

The plan remains threatened, though, by indications that the Federal Trade Commission may investigate its possible anticompetitive effects. The merger would create a firm with annual sales of $253.1 million on the basis of 1969 operations.

The two companies announced Tuesday that Standard will be merged into a subsidiary of Saxon through the exchange of four shares of Saxon stock for each eight Standard shares—up from the former three-for-eight ratio.

The change resulted from objections last month by Salvatori and other dissident Standard stockholders who argued that the original exchange ratio was unfair.

The companies also agreed Tuesday to sweeten the exchange ratio for holders of Standard preferred stock. Those preferred shares were originally to be traded for either 1.125 Saxon common shares or Saxon common with a market value of $33.50, which ever was higher; but the ratio was increased to 1.5 Saxon common shares or the same $33.50 in market value of the shares.

A lawyer for Salvatori here said the dissident group was satisfied with the new arrangement, and

Standard agreed to reimburse Salvatori's group "for its expenses, not to exceed $90,000."

Spokesmen said both companies postponed their respective special shareholders meetings, scheduled for Tuesday, until Oct. 2 "to allow time to notify the shareholders of the revised terms and also to study the letters received Monday from the Federal Trade Commission asking for further information."

The FTC had indicated Monday it would probably investigate the merger's effect on competition, since both concerns are major factors in the paper, packaging and office products fields.

In trading on the American Stock Exchange Tuesday, Saxon stock declined 1 5/8 to 15 7/8 on volume of 92,100 shares, and Standard shares advanced on the New York board to 7¼ up 1½, on turnover of 48,100 shares.

Saxon had 1969 sales of $174.9 million, and Standard 1969 gross revenues amounted to $113.2 million.

Christopher Backs Reagan, Criticizes Unruh's Campaign

BY CARL GREENBERG
Times Political Writer

SAN FRANCISCO—Former Mayor George Christopher of San Francisco Tuesday endorsed Gov. Reagan, once a political foe, for a second term and criticized the conduct of Jess Unruh, Democratic gubernatorial candidate.

Accepting a vice chairmanship on the Republican governor's campaign advisory committee, Christopher lauded Reagan for bringing "integrity to our state government."

"On the other hand, his opponent has embarked on a campaign of confrontation and invasion of privacy that is personally repugnant to me, and I want to emphasize that," said Christopher.

"A man's home is his castle. He should be allowed to live there in peace and quiet without attack from sidewalk circuses."

Christopher told a press conference that Unruh's Labor Day visit outside the home of Henry Salvatori, one of the governor's supporters, was "a terrible thing to do." and that it was one of the things that prompted him to endorse Reagan.

The former mayor said that it was "even more unfortunate" because Mrs. Salvatori had been rather ill recently.

Reagan Walkout Recalled

When he ran unsuccessfully against Reagan for the GOP gubernatorial nomination in 1966, Christopher and Reagan tangled often.

One of the incidents recalled Tuesday was a walkout by Reagan from a Negro Republican meeting in Santa Monica at which Christopher was present.

At that time, Christopher said Tuesday, he challenged "the truthfulness of his (Reagan's) statement that someone had accused him of being a racist.

Recalling that "things get heated" in campaigns, Christopher said he had "never harbored any feeling Gov. Reagan was a racist and I am morally assured beyond any shadow of a doubt there is no racism in his makeup."

In 1966 Christopher wrote a letter to Reagan accusing him of changing his story several times about his Santa Monica walkout, and told Reagan that "you simply stormed out . . . because a delegate asked you why you were against the 1964 civil rights bill."

The former mayor conceded saying in 1966 that Reagan belonged to some "liberal" organizations, but that he feels Reagan, a registered Democrat until 1962, had proved during the last four years that these are things of the past.

Another point made by Christopher was that "we depend on the rationality of the governor" to appoint judges of substance and reliability and that, Unruh's actions make him doubt the Democratic contender would make such appointments.

Christopher ran for lieutenant governor in 1962 as the teammate of President Nixon when he unsuccessfully sought the California governorship.

Before addressing a Chamber of Commerce luncheon in Daly City, Reagan signed six bills designed to give police additional legal weapons in fighting narcotics.

The governor said the measures mean "the people of California are making it absolutely clear to the pusher, the illegal pill peddler and the drug culture apologist that 'As of now, we are putting you out of business.'"

In the long run, though, Reagan later told the Chamber, "I don't believe it is possible to stop this [illegible] traffic that is the drug market" except through educational methods.

Among the bills he signed were those increasing penalties for drug pushers with prior convictions, providing intrastate controls on shipment and sale of dangerous drugs, and prohibiting disclosure of addresses and phone numbers of peace officers when the intent is to harm them or their families.

He told a questioner in the audience that he believes the death penalty is a deterrent to murder, but that he could not condone it if it were imposed on an "eye for an eye" basis.

Recalling that a clergyman suggested church bells toll for the only man executed in California since Reagan became governor, he said:

"Since January, 15 policemen have been executed in California and I've heard no one suggest tolling the church bells when that takes place, and it might be a good idea."

To Wealthy Reagan Friend, Freedom Is Everything

9/21/70

By WALLACE TURNER
Special to The New York Times

LOS ANGELES — Henry Salvatori, the son of immigrants, made it big and now at age 69 thoroughly enjoys the intimate friendship of his Mayor, his Governor, both of whom he helped elect, and his President, to whom he has been giving advice for a quarter century.

It has been 10 years since he sold out his company, the Western Geophysical Corporation, to Litton Industries for what he says was "several million dollars." In that decade, Mr. Salvatori has used his time and money to play a leading role in recapturing for conservatives some important offices in public life.

At the moment, Mr. Salvatori's relationship with Gov. Ronald Reagan is an issue in the gubernatorial campaign. It was dramatized on Labor Day by a confrontation in front of Mr. Salvatori's home with Jess Unruh, Mr. Reagan's opponent, during which Mr. Salvatori was heard on national television to call Mr. Unruh a "stupid ass."

Although Mr. Salvatori is unwilling to say how much money he has put into his hobby of politics, few would doubt that the total has run into the millions—over the years. A recent survey by the Citizens Research Foundation of Princeton, N. J., found that he and his wife gave $90,000 to the Republican party in 1968.

Freedom Is His Passion

He says his political philosophy is based on a desire to maintain a system giving wide personal freedom to individuals. Because he sees Communism as a serious threat to this, he is an avid anti-Communist, although he maintains that he could accept a Socialist system that would guarantee individual freedoms.

Mr. Salvatori, along with some other wealthy Californians, helped persuade Mr. Reagan to run for Governor in 1966, paying for the early stages of the Reagan campaign. Last year Mr. Salvatori managed Sam Yorty's successful reelection campaign as Mayor of Los Angeles. And Mr. Salvatori has known and counseled with Richard M. Nixon since the President's days as a Representative in Congress.

Recipients of Mr. Salvatori's money include the Institute for American Strategy, an organization created to resist Communism, the Christian Anti-Communist Crusade, the University of Southern California, the Mental Health Association of Los Angeles County.

He supports some Democrats, such as Senator Thomas J. Dodd of Connecticut and the late Harry F. Byrd of Virginia. But mostly he helps Republicans.

Strong and Vigorous

Mr. Salvatori functions from an 11th floor office in a building at 1901 Avenue of the Stars in Century City, a small piece of this metropolis that once was the 20th Century Fox movie lot. Through the smog, his corner office looks out to the north over a golf course and a part of Beverly Hills, and to the west over houses and business offices stretching to the sea.

In an interview in his office not long ago, Mr. Salvatori looked younger than his years, for he is strong and vigorous with the muscled body of a conditioned athlete. He has apprehensions and hears alarms, however.

"The Eastern press in particular always describes me by implication at least as if "I'm secret, or sinister, perhaps, a mysterious guy in the background," he said. "This isn't so."

He apparently has no ambition for office, appointive or elective, although he could probably have been named to some prestigous job any time in the last three years.

"Governor Reagan has not appointed me, for good reasons, my reasons to any position," he said.

Mr. Salvatori argues that on economic matters he is a liberal. For example, he supports the Nixon proposals for welfare changes through a guaranteed annual income. He is willing to go further, he says.

The key to his philosophy, he says, is to understand that he is for individual freedom and would even accept a Socialist Government if it left its citizens free to achieve. Communism, he is persuaded on the evidence he has seen, does not permit individual freedom and so he is opposed to it—at his bottom dollar and last ounce of energy.

Grew Up in New Jersey

"I made a statement to Nixon years ago," he said, "that we ought to establish one principle, that we will accept any proposal providing that it does not infringe or lead to erosion of personal liberties."

Mr. Salvatori, born in Rome, came to the United States as a child and grew up on a farm in southern New Jersey. His father was a wholesale grocer. He went to high school in Philadelphia, then to the University of Pennsylvania and Columbia University in the mid-nineteen twenties. He is married and has a daughter and a son who work with him in the Grant Oil Tool Company.

Years ago he became an expert in the then new science of testing for oil bearing structures by the seismic method. He built his company, did well in the process, then sold it to become a multi-millionaire. Yet he can say:

"I don't care whether I

EXHIBIT N

September 21, 1970

have nigh income taxes or low income taxes, providing it does not have an effect which will eventually destroy individual freedom. Income taxes may have been the salvation of our system."

Mr. Salvatori sounds outraged at the confrontation with Mr. Unruh, which occurred when the Democratic candidate held a news conference in the street outside the Salvatori mansion in Bel Air, alleging that the Governor's tax reform program would help Reagan friends like Mr. Salvatori.

"You know, I am very tolerant of unethical or mischievious things if it's done with intelligence," said Mr. Salvatori of that incident. "But that was stupid and he should have foreseen that it wouldn't do him any good. Plus the fact that he had the gall to come into my driveway."

Interested in Foreign Affairs

The big Salvatori interest is foreign affairs, resistance of Communism.

"All of our foreign policy has been a debacle, in my opinion," he said. "During the McCarthy era, I was for McCarthy, not because he was such a great guy, but he exposed the things that were going on."

Mr. Salvatori blames liberals "for whatever trouble we're in today," and he has a bitter feeling for critics of the Vietnam war.

He said he was "violently opposed" to the views of Senators George S. McGovern of North Dakota and J. W. Fulbright of Arkansas. "I spent a lot of money last time trying to defeat Fulbright," he said.

"These fellows to me are incomprehensible," he said. "I think their desire is beyond wanting us to stop the war. They want us to lose the war. They want us to be humiliated so we won't fly anything again."

Fears Fate of Rome

Yet, he said, these same men urge intervention to support Israel, which he also favors but which he thinks is an inconsistency for those who criticize the Vietnam war.

Mr. Salvatori is heavily involved in politics this year, with a close eye on the Reagan-Unruh race and a role in the re-election campaign of Senator George Murphy, who is being challenged by Representative John V. Tunney, a Democrat.

"I've been active in political campaigns for the primary purpose of conserving our democratic institutions," Mr. Salvatori said. "I don't think enough people recognize that a society can go to hell. If you study Rome, ancient Rome wasn't conquered by the barbarians. Rome was conquered from within. The whole society disintegrated."

He sees some of this disintegration in American society. Between sentences his wide mouth became grim, sometimes just a scar-like straight line between his nose and chin, as he said:

"We now disparage patriotism. The flag. Religion. Name it. Everything that we held as sacrosanct. Our Founding Fathers didn't foresee this. We have reached the point where all of our young people have none of these values and I'm not so sure that our society can continue to exist."

He blames public educational systems that are based on "materialism without any thought of a transcendent sort of feeling."

Helped Yorty Win

Meantime, he founds anti-Communist study centers, supports others that already exist and devotes most of his efforts and much of his wealth to electing some people and defeating others.

In a way the Yorty campaign last year was one of Mr. Salvatori's finest hours. The Los Angeles Mayor, one of the most controversial men in public life in the West, ran a poor second in the non-partisan primary, following Thomas H. Bradley, a city councilman who is a Negro.

Mr. Salvatori took charge after the primary, and said he put "considerable money into it." Mayor Yorty was re-elected. Mr. Salvatori said of the campaign:

A Point Made By Critics

"I tried to tell these Eastern people who were out here in droves that this was not a racist situation. It was a case of an ultra liberal group within the Democratic party trying to take control of a city by means of Bradley, who happened to be a Negro, who was associated with a Communist. [Mr. Salvatori did not name the Communist]. "I'm not saying that Bradley himself is a Communist, only a longshot. But a politician follows his supporters. He can't help it."

That general point is being raised by some of Mr. Reagan's critics. They point to the Governor's frequent telephone and personal contacts with Mr. Salvatori and other wealthy conservatives who have helped pay his campaign costs as well as having bought the house where he lives in Sacramento.

Mr. Reagan has retorted: "These people came and asked me to run. The only thing they have ever told me they wanted was good government."

During the interview, Mr. Salvatori, a healthy, vigorous, rich man in the cocktail hour of his years, compared his childhood memories with the lives of present young people born into relatively poor families.

"Mind you, we weren't rich in any sense of the word," he said. "But I never had to worry about a meal, and I always had a dime in my pocket."

"I see no objection to [illegible] living," he asserted. "I see nothing wrong with it. There's a lot of advantages. You have your friends around. I always had 10 kids out there when I went out the door. But for my son, growing up on an estate, it sometimes was lonely."

Plan to 'Dump' Nixon Charged

State Sen. Alfred E. Alquist said Thursday that a "Dump-Nixon" movement "engineered by anti-Nixon millionaires" Henry Salvatori, Patrick Frawley and Holmes Tuttle will be active after the Nov. 3 election in California.

Alquist, a San Jose Democrat seeking to unseat Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, said campaign workers for Gov. Reagan and Reinecke already have been told, by memorandum, not to disband their campaign structures after the election.

The movement, Alquist charged in a Biltmore news conference before addressing Town Hall, seeks to put Reinecke in Sacramento, Reagan in the White House and U.S. Sen. George Murphy back in the Senate—temporarily.

Alquist said that after Murphy's reelection, the "anti-Nixon millionaires" would make Murphy resign "partly because of his health and because Reagan wants that base (the vacated Senate seat, which the governor would then fill by appointment) to operate from."

COLUMBUS DAY OBSERVANCE

Salvatori Urges Americans to Resist Revolutionaries

OCT 13 1970

Americans were urged by oilman Henry Salvatori Monday to draw upon the experience of Christopher Columbus in resisting campus revolutionaries who would destroy the United States.

Salvatori was the keynote speaker at City Hall flag-raising ceremonies marking the 478th anniversary of Columbus' landing in the new world.

More than 300 Italo-Americans attended the event, which included tributes to Americans of Italian descent by Mayor Sam Yorty, Board of Supervisors Chairman Ernest E. Debs and Assemblyman Floyd R. Wakefield (R-South Gate), who delivered a congratulatory message from Gov. Reagan. 2 - 1 - 3

Italian Consul General Giorgio Carrega joined in raising the red, white and green Italian flag in ceremonies sponsored by the Federated Italo-Americans of California.

Salvatori, drawing a parallel between Columbus' discovery and today's academic disorders, attributed much of the Italian navigator's success to an inherited wisdom and a fund of learning.

Had he neglected either, he may well have failed, Salvatori said.

Yet today, he warned, many of the students and faculty in colleges and universities believe that values, principles and past wisdom are no longer relevant.

They are convinced, instead, he declared, that the total social system must be demolished "so that a new and radical social order may be created from its ruins."

"These revolutionaries and critics of our society, lacking wisdom and understanding and beguiled by Communist inspired ideology, focus on the unresolved problems of our nation and demand instant solutions," he said, adding:

"Deficient in perspective and realism and with little understanding of our inspiring history, they would destroy the highest civil order ever created by man—the United States of America."

It is true, Salvatori said, that all of America's ideals and hopes have not been fulfilled and "there is much to be done" to improve the quality of life—and ~~advance~~ opportunity and justice for deprived Americans.

But "there isn't the slightest doubt" that most problems will be resolved as long as the nation remains free, he said.

It is that freedom that is now threatened from within by an "erosion of the foundations of our nation," Salvatori said.

Forty, echoing Salvatori's theme, said it was ironical that while many persons behind the Iron Curtain strive to reach the nUited States to find freedom there are groups in this country "unappreciative of freedom and willing to try and destroy" it.

Some of the most loyal Americans, he noted, are people who have recent knowledge of how difficult life is in other countries.

Columbus' spirit is needed, he said, to "rediscover the great values of the United States."

He saluted Italo-Americans for their patriotism, sustaining their culture here and for "great contributions made to a free America."

Municipal Judge Joseph R. Grillo was master of ceremonies.

Unruh Visits Building Site, Hits Tax Rebates

THU OCT 22 1970

BY TOM GOFF
Times Sacramento Bureau Chief

SAN FRANCISCO—Democrat Jess Unruh took his traveling political road show Wednesday to a hole in the ground in the heart of this city's financial district to denounce once again Gov. Reagan's close association with powerful business interests.

Later, the Democratic candidate for governor crossed the bay to charge that Republican Reagan is supporting a controversial southern crossing Bay Bridge proposal as "a political payoff."

The San Francisco hole in the ground is the site of a new 48-story office building under construction by Transamerica Corp. as a headquarters for its subsidiary, Transamerica Insurance Co.

Loophole Charge

Unruh charged, as he did several weeks ago in a similar sidewalk appearance before an insurance headquarters building in Los Angeles, that the company through "tax loopholes" will get "a 100% rebate of property taxes" each year.

In the case of the San Francisco building, he said, the rebate will amount to more than $1 million a year once the building is completed.

The candidate pointed out that Los Angeles millionaires Henry Salvatori and Earle Jorgensen, heavy financial backers of the governor, are directors of Transamerica and benefit directly from the tax rebate. 1-27-1

Both Salvatori and Jorgensen are members of a syndicate of Reagan backers who bought the Sacramento home which the governor leases, Unruh pointed out.

Both men have contributed heavily to Reagan's political campaign.

In the afternoon, Unruh was taken on a rapid, no-stops-allowed tour of the Western Electric assembly plant in San Leandro by Personnel Director Vernon N. Rosa, who almost refused to allow the candidate to visit the plant.

Unruh was allowed to shake hands with company workers, most of whom wore Unruh campaign buttons, but everytime he attempted to chat he was hustled on his way by Rosa.

At one point it appeared as though the visit would be canceled on the front steps of the plant before it began.

Unruh had invited two union officials, President Loren Blasingame of Local 9415, Communications Workers of America, and Wes McHale, a shop steward, to accompany him on the tour.

Rosa and the plant manager said no. Unruh insisted. It finally was agreed that Blasingame and McHale could go, but in a second group widely separated from Unruh, the press and company officials.

Rosa said the company balked at the union men because it did not want the union to display a partisan position on company premises.

Unruh said he, if elected governor, would abolish such tax loopholes.

In another appearance, Unruh moved to the eastern shore of the San Francisco Bay to denounce Reagan's support of a long controversial southern crossing.

The candidate said the proposal, an on again, off again thing for many years, is "irresponsible" because it is not known at this time how it might affect the environment of the San Francisco Bay.

He said that money to be spent on such a bridge might better be used to complete a rapid transit line around the bay.

"Instead," he said, "Ronald Reagan wants to build a girdle of concrete freeway around the entire bay . . . just because his political friends expect a payoff."

Political Debts Alleged

He charged that Reagan was supporting the project because "he owes political debts to East Bay area publishers William Knowland and Floyd Sparks who are supporting this potentially disastrous project for purely commercial reasons."

Knowland, former Republican U.S. senator from California who was defeated for the governorship by former Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown in 1958, is publisher of the Oakland Tribune.

Sparks publishes papers in the Hayward area.

Both men have endorsed the reelection of Reagan.

The $500 million southern crossing proposal has been the subject of political bickering for many years. It would link the East Bay communities of Alameda and San Leandro to the San Francisco side of the bay south of the central district of the city.

Unruh Raps Reagan, Two Wealthy Backers

BY BILL BOYARSKY
Times Political Writer

Jess Unruh charged Tuesday that Republican Gov. Reagan's wealthy friends "can buy anything they want including the governor's house and quite likely even the governor."

In an afternoon of campaigning through the black community of Los Angeles, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate portrayed Reagan as a man who does not care about Negroes or other minorities.

"The governor we have right now has no relationship with the poor, with the black, with the brown, with anybody except his wealthy friends," said Unruh, standing on the concrete floor of the Watts Manufacturing Co., 1901 El Segundo Blvd., Compton.

1-30-4

Specific Targets

Specifically, Unruh criticized Holmes Tuttle, wealthy auto dealer who is head of Reagan's campaign advisory committee, and Henry Salvatori, oil executive and Reagan campaign supporter. Both are among the group which leases a Sacramento house to Reagan and his family.

Unruh said California "needs a governor for all the people."

"I certainly think I can be the governor for all the people who need a governor . . .," he added. "That doesn't include Henry Salvatori and Holmes Tuttle and the other guys. They've got money so they can buy anything they want including the governor's house and quite likely even the governor."

The 50 to 75 workers who took time out to listen to the candidate nodded appreciably and applauded.

Traveling through Los Angeles in his silver and green campaign bus, Unruh visited both black and white districts. Afterwards, Unruh predicted "this is going to be a very close election."

"I have been optimistic from the beginning and I am even more optimistic now," Unruh told reporters.

In an interview on his campaign bus, Unruh said he thought growing unemployment in California would help him somewhat in his campaign against Reagan, but not as much as it would assist Democratic Rep. John V. Tunney, running against Republican Sen. George Murphy.

Unruh was also asked by newsmen about his share of a Long Beach apartment.

News stories have said Unruh's share in the building amounts to $430,000—even though Unruh valued it at only $4,300 in his statement of finances. Unruh said the $430,000 figure is wrong because his share is heavily mortgaged and his equity amounts to only $4,300.

Unruh said "I would be very happy to sell it to the governor," for $200,000 and give half to charity and half to Reagan if he would debate Unruh.

Salvatori Confirms Contributions to 7 Senate Candidates

BY CARL GREENBERG
Times Political Writer

Henry Salvatori, wealthy Los Angeles industrialist, was a heavy contributor in at least seven Senate races across the country and also kicked in to several House contests, he confirmed Tuesday.

Although he did not disclose the exact amounts of his contributions, Salvatori, long a substantial giver to Republican candidates and causes, indicated they totaled many thousands of dollars.

A strong backer of President Nixon, to whose 1968 campaign he gave large sums, Salvatori also contributed to Gov. Reagan's first and second-term campaigns. He was the target of Democrat Jess Unruh several months ago in Unruh's unsuccessful drive for the governorship.

Salvatori said that in addition to contributing $5,000 to Republican Harold E. Wallace's unsuccessful campaign to unseat Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, he gave "similar" amounts to:

J. Glenn Beall Jr., Republican, who defeated Sen. Joseph D. Tydings (D-Md.).

Backed Conservative Buckley

James L. Buckley, Conservative, who captured Republican Sen. Charles Goodell's seat in New York.

Sen. George Murphy (R-Calif.), defeated by Rep. John V. Tunney (D-Riverside).

W. E. Brock III, Republican, victorious over Democratic Sen. Albert Gore, Tennessee.

Rep. Richard L. Roudebush (R-Ind.), who lost his fight to unseat Democratic Sen. Vance Hartke.

Sen. Thomas J. Dodd of Connecticut, who switched from Democrat to Independent, but lost his seat to Republican Lowell P. Weicker.

Salvatori declined to say exactly how much he had contributed to each campaign, explaining that the figures will become public when the candidates' campaign reports are filed. He also declined to identify the House candidates whom he aided.

With the exception of Buckley, Salvatori said, his contributions were made without any solicitation from the candidates for his help.

Staunch Nixon Supporter

"I am very opposed to those who have bucked the Nixon Administration on Vietnam," said Salvatori, a member of the American Security Council.

He said Mansfield falls into this category—"every time Nixon makes a move he's one of the first to speak up."

All those to whom he made contributions, Salvatori said, were opponents of doves on Vietnam.

"President Johnson and President Nixon would have done better if the doves hadn't made North Vietnam feel they could force us out of Vietnam," Salvatori said.

Salvatori said he had made similar "substantial" contributions regularly in past campaigns and that "all in all, I feel the Republicans and the conservative cause—on social issues—were advanced this year."

"The biggest defeat from my point of view was Murphy," Salvatori said.

He said he considered the GOP's net gain of two seats in the Senate a victory for Mr. Nixon "even though it wasn't as great a victory as we would have liked."

Unruh Says He'll Teach, Wri

BY CARL GREENBERG
Times Political Writer

"As soon as we get you back on the bus, we're all going out to pay a return visit to Henry Salvatori."

With a smile and a two-week-old mustache, Jess Unruh Tuesday thus greeted interviewers at his first press conference since his defeat Nov. 3 as the Democratic gubernatorial candidate.

It was a joshing reminder of his first campaign "spectacular"—when he took news media representatives out to Bel-Air and, standing outside the gates of the Salvatori home, assailed Republican Gov. Reagan's tax reform program and got into a verbal tangle with Mr. and Mrs. Salvatori, strong Reagan supporters.

Settling speculation about his plans, Unruh, whose term as an assemblyman will end in early January, said he will teach, write a book and magazine articles and lecture.

He said he wants to be free to criticize not only Republicans but Democrats and therefore does "not intend to dabble or participate" in selection of Democratic Party officials.

"My particular desire and aim is to continue to discuss issues and give voice to some of the frustrations in our society today," said Unruh at the Greater Los Angeles Press Club.

He said he meant such matters, for example, as inequitable taxation and distribution of education funds, and that through his teaching, writing and lecturing he can "give voice to people who have little voice" today.

Having authored legislation that, had it passed, would have created the post of ombudsman in state government to run interference for citizens with complaints, does he feel like an ombudsman?

"To whatever extent I can fulfill that role, I certainly do," Unruh replied.

Wants Depletion Cut

"There is no reason, outside of campaign contributions, why that should not be the case," said Unruh, adding that he still wants to see the oil depletion allowance cut and that Moretti is not beholden to the oil lobby.

Unruh said he is not supporting anyone for the Democratic state chairmanship and that any of the three prospective contenders, Rep. George E. Brown Jr., Leon Cooper and Charles Manatt, are acceptable. As a nominee, Unruh is a member of the Democratic State Central Committee.

Reagan may have a budget deficit but Unruh doesn't—in his campaign—because he's still getting small contributions, expects certain money commitments to be honored and might even wind up with a small surplus, he said.

UNRUH

Unruh said he wants to point out the connection between massive campaign contributions and the special privileges some interests get and that the book for which he soon will sign a contract will "be broader than kiss and tell."

He is "deeply indebted" to the news media, said Unruh, because its coverage of his campaign proved "millions and millions of dollars" were not needed for the campaign.

His visit to the Salvatori home, with the aim of pointing out that he felt a man of Salvatori's wealth would get a bigger tax break on his home under Reagan's tax reform plan than would a poorer homeowner, gained Unruh national publicity. It also probably cost him votes.

Joking Tuesday, Unruh said he had expected Salvatori to invite him out after the campaign because he got Salvatori hotel reservations in San Francisco during the 1964 GOP national convention.

Offers From UC

The former Assembly Speaker, who did not foreclose himself from a future candidacy, said it is "quite likely" he'll be connected with a California university. He's had offers from UC and the state colleges, he stated.

However, Unruh also will continue lecturing at Rutgers University.

Although he explained he didn't want to rehash the campaign, Unruh, asked for comment on Reagan's disclosure of an impending state budget deficit, said, "I'm surprised he didn't blame it on the previous Administration."

He's had offers of employment from private industry, Unruh declared, but has "no desire or intention" of accepting—"I know what they want me to do"—namely what other politicians have been asked to do, use whatever 'chips" they still have left to help the businesses through use of influence.

Unruh voiced hope the Democratic majority in the Assembly under the prospective leadership of Assemblyman Bob Moretti (D-North Hollywood), as Speaker, and in the Senate will produce tax and social reform legislation in 1971.

Mystery No More

There was a story here a couple of years ago about Don Newcombe and his white angel. Newcombe and the angel were doing a real-life takeoff on an old TV series called The Millionaire.

On each episode of that series, a very wealthy man—never identified—would have an agent give away a million dollars. The agent would give the money to, say, a struggling young couple. Then we would see how the money changed their lives.

Newcombe, the former Dodger pitcher, has been an agent of the white angel for five years. Don is not on the man's payroll, but serves as his consultant on minority affairs. The man is interested in helping blacks and other minorities. If he is thinking about making a contribution to a minority program, he will have Newcombe check it out first.

The Angel Unmasked

When Don told the story here a couple of years ago, he did not reveal the angel's identity. The man had asked him not to use his name. But Newcombe happened to mention the man by name in an interview the other day, saying he had done some work for him. The interviewer asked if this man was the angel. Don said yes.

Ironically, it turns out that the man is regarded by many in minority and liberal circles as one of the enemy. He is Henry Salvatori, multimillionaire industrialist, rigid conservative—and about the last man some would suspect of having any social awareness. Newk has decided it's time somebody said the man is not quite the heavy he has been cracked up to be.

"His reputation says he should be against blacks," Don said. "But he has given me over a quarter of a million dollars to put in the minority community, to help kids go to school and pay for people's homes and help churches and things like that. Over a quarter of a million dollars in five years. He didn't have to do that. But this is what he wanted to do."

Now, like viewers of The Millionaire, we begin to see what effect the money has had on the people it was given to.

Newcombe said Salvatori has contributed $50,000 to Verbum Dei High School in Watts. "It's a 99-percent black Catholic school," Don said. "Mr. Salvatori has bought scholarships for kids to go to that schol and five of these kids have gone on to Harvard and are graduating this year. They wouldn't have done that whitout this man's money."

Newcombe met Salvatori while working on a job-training program in Watts. A dinner was to be held to raise money for the program. A girl Don was working with had Salvatori's telephone number, but was afraid to call him. "He's too big," she said. "Give me the number," Don said. "All he can say is no."

Salvatori said yes. Asked for a $1,000 contribution, he gave $5,000.

Ali Honored Guest

The guy who interviewed Newcombe the other day had no idea Don was going to unmask his white angel. Don had asked the guy to come out and talk about a $15-a-plate dinner that will be held at the Palladium Friday night for the benefit of the Los Angeles Brotherhood Crusade.

The guest of honor will be Muhammad Ali. Many other black athletes (or ex-athletes) have said they will attend. Among them: Tank Younger, Bernie Casey, Rafer Johnson, Tom Hawkins, Ollie Matson, Tommy Davis, Bill Russell, Jim Brown, Ray Robinson, Elgin Baylor, John Carlos, O. J. Simpson, Willie Davis (of the Dodgers), Willie Davis (formerly of the Packers), Lee Evans, Joe Louis, Richie Allen, Lamar Lundy, Jim Gilliam and Newcombe.

Proceeds of the dinner will be used to help support social, educational and economic programs in the black community. But Newcombe said the dinner is not for black people only. It's for anybody who wants to go.

Newk said Ali, like Salvatori, has some good points a lot of people don't know about.

"You know my feelings about the black-white thing," Don said. "There's no militancy in me. But I've known this kid (Ali) since he came back from the Olympics with nothing on him but a gold medal. He's made some mistakes. He knows he's made mistakes. But this guy is one of the shining lights in the black community, regardless of what the government says he's done. He's a shining light as far as clean living is concerned."

Sitting with Newcombe during the interview was Al Patton, a former Globetrotter publicist who is helping promote Friday's dinner. He has known Ali for years.

"When he started this 'I'm the greatest!' business, I couldn't believe it," Al said. "I asked him what in the world he was trying to do. He said, 'You know, Al, if I didn't get up there and make a villain out of myself, there wouldn't be nobody in there to see me fight. Who wants to come and see two colored fighters, unless one is a villain and one is a hero? I made myself a villain so people would come to see me get my head knocked off.'" Newcombe said some misunderstanding has arisen from Ali's religious affiliation. "People get the Muslims mixed up with the Black Panthers," Don said. "The Muslims aren't militant. They don't go around fighting or shooting. In fact, if they are found with a gun in their possession, they are expelled from the Muslims.

"Ali doesn't believe in violence. I've known him since 1960 and I've found a lot of good in him."

The point, Newcombe said, is that a man can be closer to center on political issues than Salvatori, and closer to center on social issues than Ali, and still find things to admire in both.

Mr. HENRY SALVATORI, 457 Bel Air Road, telephone 270-4287, business - Grant Oil Tool Company, 1901 Avenue of the Stars, Los Angeles, California 90067, telephone 277-3444, furnished the following information:

At approximately 11:45 p.m. on February 24, 1976, he and his wife were asleep in their upstairs bedrooms, when he heard the door in the vestibule outside the bedroom being opened. As he opened the door from his bedroom to the vestibule, two masked men forced him back into his room and knocked him to the floor. After struggling with them for a few minutes, one of the gunmen demanded that he lie down on the floor. While he was struggling with the gunmen, his wife came to the door and was forced into the bedroom by one of the gunmen. After refusing to lie on the floor, he was forced onto his bed with his wife. While one of the gunmen was tying his feet, he reached back to a nightstand at the head of his bed and grabbed a revolver. One of the gunmen immediately grabbed his wrist and took the gun away from him. One of the suspects then cut the telephone cord from the telephone in his bedroom and used it to tie Mr. SALVATORI's hands and feet. His wife's hands and feet were also tied. After this was accomplished, the gunman who appeared to be in charge of the robbery demanded money and stated, "You have at least $20,000 here and if we don't get it, the Mafia will kill us." SALVATORI told the bandits that he never had large sums of money in the house and told the bandit that the only money he had was in his wallet in his suit coat located in the clothes closet. While demands were being made by the Number One Bandit, the Number Two Bandit stood at the end of the bedroom covering the SALVATORIs with a handgun. After the Number One Bandit obtained SALVATORI's wallet, he briefly counted the money and stated, "There's only a couple of hundred here." At which time, SALVATORI told him he should recount the money. The Number One Bandit then recounted the money in front of SALVATORI and asked if a particular bill was a hundred dollar bill. SALVATORI stated this indicated a possibility that the Number One Bandit may have a vision problem. He remarked that while he was being tied up, he was looking at the Number One Bandit through the stocking mask which he wore, and he noticed there appeared to be some type of grayish matter in the corner of his left eye. Number One Bandit then asked where the safe was and was told that no safe existed. After being convinced that there was no more money in the house, the bandit then asked for the jewelry and was told that the jewelry was in the bank. Number One Bandit then rifled the drawers in Mrs. SALVATORI's bedroom. Mr. SALVATORI then told the bandit that the most valuable thing in the house was their sterling silver, which was located downstairs. The Number One Bandit then went downstairs and then returned upstairs and obtained suitcases. After going downstairs, he then came back and took blankets in which to wrap the silverware. He then returned and indicated he needed a car in which to haul the silverware. He was told there was a car outside in the driveway. Sometime later, the bandit returned and obtained more blankets and requested another car. SALVATORI told him that another car could be located in the garage. After loading the loot in both cars, the bandit came upstairs and said, "I know you have a safe in this home and if you don't tell me, I will have to get the gang and rip the place apart from attic to basement to find it and you will be tied up a long time." At this point, Mr. SALVATORI told the robber where the safe was located saying that his wife would be able to open it for him. The robber untied Mrs. SALVATORI and took her to her bedroom, where the safe was opened. Mrs. SALVATORI was then returned to Mr. SALVATORI's bedroom and retied . The Number One Bandit asked the Number Two Bandit if he had a bag to put the jewelry in. The Number Two Bandit then tossed Mr. SALVATORI's toilet kit to him, at which time the Number One Bandit said it was too small. Mr. SALVATORI indicated to the Number One Robber that there was a department store shopping bag in the closet. The Number one Bandit there upon took the shopping bag and put the jewelry in it. He then went downstairs for a short time. Returning, he tied Mr. and Mrs. SALVATORIs' feet together and told them not to move or do anything for one-half hour. Mr. SALVATORI noted that it was now

1:30 a.m. and told the bandits that he would wait fifteen minutes. Before leaving, the bandits asked how to operate the electric gate and were given instructions by the SALVATORIs how to activate the switch either from the bedroom or the living room. After the robbers left, Mr. SALVATORI loosened his bonds with his teeth and then untied himself and his wife. He then immediately alerted the Bel Air Patrol and the Los Angeles Police Department (LAPD). At approximately 11:45 p.m. on February 24, 1976, she was awakened by a noise in her husband's bedroom. She went to her husband's bedroom and saw him struggling with two masked men. One of the men then ordered her to lie on the bed. She stated this man appeared to be the one in charge. After ordering her husband to lie on the floor, which he refused to do, the robber then placed her husband on the bed alongside of her. While this was being done, the other bandit stood at the end of the room and kept she and her husband covered with a gun. The bandit in charge then demanded money and was told by her husband that the only money was in the wallet in her husband's coat in the clothes closet. After obtaining this money, the bandit demanded other money, and she told him that the only other money was in her purse in the bedroom. After demanding money and jewelry, her husband told the bandit that the greatest thing of value in the home was their sterling silver, which was located downstairs. After gathering the silverware in blankets, the bandit returned upstairs and stated, "I was told there is a safe in the home and if you don't tell me where it is, I'll get the gang in her and ransack the place and get it all done." At this point, Mr. SALVATORI told the bandit where the safe was located. He untied Mrs. SALVATORI and took her into her bedroom, where she obtained the combination of the safe from a piece of paper which had been dumped out of her purse on the bed by the bandit. While Mrs. SALVATORI was working the combination on the safe, the bandit held a small light to the safe. After the safe was opened, he ordered her back into her husband's bedroom and retied her hands and feet with neckties. After returning to the bedroom, the Number One Bandit said, "Well, I found what we came for," and asked the Number Two Bandit to get him something in which he could put the loot from the safe. It was ascertained that [redacted] on March 1, 1976, had made burglary complaint to Los Angeles PD naming as suspect, [redacted] in theft of eight Taser (stun-guns) from [redacted] residence, [redacted] b6 b7C

[redacted] expressed fear of [redacted] (who is reportedly [redacted] vacated his residence in fear of [redacted] and stayed in hotel, [redacted] home being occupied by [redacted] b6 b7C

These two individuals kidnapped the [redacted] rode them around for awhile, talking to them and trying to find out [redacted] location, and eventually let them out in Azusa, California area. During course of break-in at [redacted] residence, [redacted] called LAPD. PD units arrived and found house vacant. Later same evening, [redacted] returned to area of [redacted] residence to obtain his vehicle, and escaped on foot from LAPD. [redacted] car impounded by LAPD. b6 b7C

Extensive investigation to date negative as to location of [redacted] and further identity of [redacted] (LNU). Artists composite (LAPD) made of [redacted] based on kidnap victims interview. b6 b7C

[redacted] spent night in Chicago and drove back to Los Angeles. b6 b7C

Lt. [redacted] in full agreement and requested that FBI file charges against [redacted] arrest him and attempt to secure recovery of property at Chicago. b6 b7C

SA [redacted] Chicago Division, FBI, contacted telephonically and advised of above, and in the process of securing complaint against [redacted] on ITSP charges. No press releases were made regarding this matter. SA [redacted] requested additional information as to details of trip by [redacted] from Los Angeles to Chicago, for purposes of ITSP complaint which to be filed morning of March 25, 1976.

Henry Salvatori, Wife Robbed

By JIM SMART
Evening Outlook Staff Writer

Two masked gunmen bound and robbed millionaire industrialist and political financier Henry Salvatori and his wife in their Bel-Air home early today. The robbers carted off nearly half a million dollars in cash and goods in the victims' cars, police said.

Neither Salvatori, 75, nor his wife, Grace, 64, was injured, officers said.

The robbers forced their way into the two-story house, which is near the headquarters of the private Bel-Air security patrol, shortly after midnight.

Salvatori told police the gunmen apparently entered the mansion by forcing open a downstairs window. They burst through a locked double door into the bedrooms occupied by the couple.

The gunmen, who wore nylon hose over their faces, forced Mrs. Salvatori into her husband's room.

The industrialist told police he grabbed his .32 caliber pistol, which he keeps near his bed, but the robbers overpowered him and took it away.

The bandits tied up the Salvatoris and then began ransacking the home, taking paintings from the walls, a $4,000 porcelain clock and about $250,000 worth of silverware.

Police said one of the gunmen stood watch over the Salvatoris, and the other robber may have been helped by other accomplices who remained downstairs.

They forced Mrs. Salvatori to open a safe in her bedroom, and removed jewelry valued at $200,000.

The men, each armed with a pistol, took Salvatori's wallet and removed $950, the victim told investigators.

The Salvatoris' belongings then were loaded into two of their cars — a 1972 Thunderbird and a 1976 Cadillac — and the robbers drove away.

The robbers left behind two other cars, a Mercedes and a station wagon.

According to police, the couple described the robbers as men in their twenties who were "firm and stern but gentle." At one point during the robbery, Mrs. Salvatori told police, she said she felt faint and the robbers brought her a glass of water.

Police said the Salvatoris managed to loosen their bonds shortly after the robbers fled, and notified officers.

Salvatori, owner of an oil company, has contributed heavily to various Republican political campaigns in past years, including that of former Gov. Ronald Reagan.

ROBBERY VICTIM—Industrialist Henry Salvatori manages a smile for photographers as he pulls out of his driveway this morning, several hours after he and his wife were robbed by two gunmen who broke into their Bel-Air home.

Gunmen Invade Salvatori's Home, Get $450,000 Loot

BY JERRY BELCHER and DOUG SMITH
Times Staff Writers

Millionaire oilman Henry Salvatori tried to fight off two young gunmen who invaded his Bel-Air mansion early Wednesday and carried off more than $450,000 in loot.

At one point, the 75-year-old Salvatori pulled a pistol on the pair but was quickly disarmed.

Salvatori suffered a 2½-inch cut on his right leg in a scuffle with the masked robbers but otherwise was unharmed. His wife, Grace, 64, was unhurt.

The two men left the Salvatoris bound hand and foot in an upstairs bedroom, then drove off with two carloads of jewelry, silverware and paintings.

They stole the Salvatoris' 1976 Cadillac and 1972 Thunderbird to haul away the loot.

The slender, gray-haired Salvatori is chairman of the board of Grant Oil Tool Co. and president of the HS Petroleum Corp. but he is better known for his political activities.

A prominent Republican, he has been a heavy contributor to conservative causes and a political and financial backer of former Gov. Ronald Reagan, former President Richard M. Nixon and former Mayor Sam Yorty.

In an interview at his Century City office Wednesday, Salvatori appeared calm and unruffled by the violent events of a few hours before. The interview was interrupted by a phone call Salvatori said was from Police Chief Ed Davis expressing his personal concern.

Police Sgt. Robert Hagenbaugh said Salvatori was "lucky" he was not shot by the gunmen.

"There wouldn't have been any violence if I didn't react," Salvatori said. He said the two masked men seemed surprised when he grabbed for his own weapon in a nightstand.

Salvatori quoted one as saying: "Can you imagine this guy pulling a gun on us?"

Salvatori described the attitude of the robbers as "polite and talkative." One of the gunmen sipped a Coke as he stood guard over the Salvatoris."

Salvatori said the two young men talked about being forced to commit the robbery by the Mafia, but he discounted that as "stuff nobody would believe." He said they told him "the Mafia had ordered them to get $30,000 or be killed."

Police said the gunmen entered the house through a downstairs window about midnight.

Salvatori said he went to his bedroom door when he heard a noise in the vestibule. Then the pair rushed into the bedroom, bowling over Salvatori. He said he scuffled with them for about five minutes.

"When you're involved," Salvatori said, "somehow you don't get scared. It just seemed natural for me to smash them down, but of course they knocked me down."

One of the gunmen brought Mrs. Salvatori from her bedroom into her husband's bedroom and both were forced to lie down on the bed.

Salvatori refused to lie face down as ordered. "I felt if I'm going to die, I'm going to die straight up," he said.

Using telephone cord, the gunmen tied the feet of the couple. It was then that Salvatori grabbed his .38 caliber pistol from the nightstand. One of the gunmen "pounced on me and took the gun away."

Salvatori's gun was part of the loot. "I'm going to buy another gun," the elderly oilman vowed.

One of the gunmen remained with the Salvatoris while the other gathered up silverware. The second man returned to the bedroom and told Salvatori, "Okay, we've got everything. Tell us where the safe is or I'll bring the gang in and we'll tear the place apart."

It was then that Salvatori finally told the robbers the location of the safe, which contained $200,000 worth of his wife's jewelry.

The silverware, which Salvatori said had been collected over the last 40 years, was valued at an estimated $250,000. Also stolen were several paintings, a $1,000 mink coat and $920 in cash.

Salvatori said although both robbers wore stocking masks, they appeared to be clean-cut, college types. Both were Anglos about 25 years old with brown hair. Both were about 5 feet, 9 inches tall and weighed about 155 pounds.

He said both were well-spoken, used no profanity and were considerate enough that when his wife felt faint, one brought her some medication and a glass of water.

Salvatori said that as the two were leaving about 1:30 a.m. they told him to wait until 2 o'clock before calling police. "Why not 10 minutes?" Salvatori asked.

He said they agreed and even set the alarm clock for 1:40. But Salvatori said he didn't wait and called police as soon as he could free himself from his bonds.

Industrialist Robbed In Bel-Air Mansion

By JIM SMART
Evening Outlook Staff Writer

Two masked gunmen bound and robbed millionaire industrialist and political financier Henry Salvatori and his wife in their Bel-Air home early today. The robbers carted off nearly half a million dollars in cash and goods in the victims' cars, police said.

Neither Salvatori, 75, nor his wife, Grace, 64, was injured, officers said.

The robbers forced their way into the two-story house, which is near the headquarters of the private Bel-Air security patrol, shortly after midnight.

Salvatori told police the gunmen apparently entered the mansion by forcing open a downstairs window. They burst through a locked double door into the bedrooms occupied by the couple.

The gunmen, who wore nylon hose over their faces, forced Mrs. Salvatori into her husband's room.

The industrialist told police he grabbed his .32 caliber pistol, which he keeps near his bed, but the robbers overpowered him and took it away.

The bandits tied up the Salvatoris and then began ransacking the home, taking paintings from the walls, a $4,000 porcelain clock and about $250,000 worth of silverware.

Police said one of the gunmen stood watch over the Salvatoris, and the other robber may have been helped by other accomplices who remained downstairs.

They forced Mrs. Salvatori to open a safe in her bedroom, and removed jewelry valued at $200,000.

The men, each armed with a pistol, took Salvatori's wallet and removed $950, the victim told investigators.

The Salvatoris' belongings then were loaded into two of their cars — a 1972 Thunderbird and a 1976 Cadillac — and the robbers drove away.

The robbers left behind two other cars, a Mercedes and a station wagon.

According to police, the couple described the robbers as men in their twenties who were "firm and stern but gentle." At one point during the robbery, Mrs. Salvatori told police, she said she felt faint and the robbers brought her a glass of water.

Police said the Salvatoris managed to loosen their bonds shortly after the robbers fled, and notified officers.

Salvatori, owner of an oil company, has contributed heavily to various Republican political campaigns in past years, including that of former Gov. Ronald Reagan.

4 OTHER HOMES IN AREA LOOTED LIKE SALVATORI'S

BY JERRY BELCHER
Times Staff Writer

Masked gunmen using methods similar to those of the two who robbed millionaire Henry Salvatori's Bel-Air home of more than $450,000 have pulled at least four other jobs in and around Los Angeles since the beginning of the month, police reported Thursday.

Including the jewelry, silverware and paintings taken from the Salvatoris early Wednesday, the loot from the five crimes totals approximately $700,000, according to Lt. Richard King of the Los Angeles Police Department's major crime task force.

Beverly Hills police Capt. Jose Paiz reported that a 1974 Mercedes-Benz automobile, stolen last Monday by two masked men who robbed a householder Monday night in that city, was found abandoned a block away from the Salvatori mansion.

Paiz said silverware and a television set were taken in the Monday robbery but the amount of the loss was not revealed.

Paiz said that similar methods were used in a Feb. 8 robbery of another Beverly Hills home, where $10,000 worth of jewelry, guns and cash was stolen but three masked men took part in that nighttime holdup.

King stressed that there is no proof that the same men who pulled the Salvatori robbery were also responsible for the others.

"We're not saying they're the same suspects but the suspects do some things that are similar in all five crimes," King said.

He declined to give specific details about the crimes.

The gunmen in the Salvatori robbery were described as Anglos, between 23 and 25, about 5 feet 9 inches tall and about 155 pounds.

Thieves Suspected In Other Robberies

Police believe two masked gunmen who held up millionaire oilman Henry Salvatori and his wife in their Bel-Air home Wednesday also may be responsible for other robberies in West Los Angeles, Beverly Hills and Van Nuys.

Lt. Richard King, of the Los Angeles Police Department's special crimes unit, said the same bandits may have bound and robbed three persons Monday in a Beverly Hills home, robbed a Van Nuys attorney in his home last week and bound and robbed a Bel-Air woman in her home last May.

Salvatori, 75, and his wife Grace, 64, were bound and robbed by two gunmen who burst into their home shortly after midnight. The bandits carted off more than $450,000 worth of silverware, jewelry, and cash. The robbers had so much loot they used two of Salvatori's cars to get away.

During that robbery, the gunmen, who wore nylon stocking masks, burst through a locked double door into the couple's bedrooms.

Salvatori grabbed a .38-caliber pistol from the night stand, but one of the bandits "pounced on me and took the gun away," Salvatori said.

One of the bandits remarked after the struggle: "Can you imagine this guy pulling a gun on us?" Salvatori said.

While one robber stood guard over both victims, the other gathered up a $250,000 silver collection, several paintings and a $1,000 mink coat. Mrs. Salvatori later told police it took her 40 years to collect the silverware.

After the two had loaded the stolen items into Salvatori's black 1976 Cadillac and a black and silver Thunderbird, they demanded to be shown the location of a safe in the house.

"We're gonna bring the gang in and tear the place apart," one of the gunmen said.

Mrs. Salvatori told the bandits where the safe was and opened it. The thieves took $200,000 worth of jewelry, police said.

Before fleeing, Salvatori had to tell the bandits how to operate electric gates so they could get away.

Los Angeles Police Chief Edward M. Davis called both Salvatori and his wife Wednesday and expressed his personal concern about the robbery.

Salvatori is chairman of the board of Grant Oil Tool Co. and president of the HS Petroleum Corp. and a director of Litton Industries, the parent company of Western Geophysical.

He is a prominent Republican and has been a heavy contributor to the campaigns of Ronald Reagan, Richard Nixon and former Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty.

Beverly Hills police said two masked gunmen broke into a home in the 500 block of Chalette Drive about 8 p.m. Monday and bound the owner and a maid.

During the robbery, the owner's wife entered the home and she, too, was bound.

re fleeing in their vic-
car, the robbers took silverware, jewelry, television sets and other household items, police said.

Police said the bandits also may be responsible for the robbery of a West Los Angeles attorney in his San Fernando Valley home and the robbery of a Bel-Air woman in her home last May.

Hunt Pushed for Pair In Looting at Bel Air

Investigators today pressed their search for two men who broke into the Bel Air home of multimillionaire Henry Salvatori, bound him and his wife, and made off with more than $450,000 in cash and valuables.

Neither Salvatori, 75, nor his wife, Grace, 64, was harmed by the gunmen early yesterday, but both were tied with neckties and ordered to lie on a bed while the bandits ransacked their two-story home for 1½ hours.

The exact value and the extent of items taken probably won't be known "for several days" until the Salvators complete an inventory of their estate.

Investigation of the case has been turned over to the major crimes division of the Los Angeles Police Department.

Among the valuables seized by the bandits were 96 place settings of silverware, about $900 in cash, an original painting, a mink coat and the contents of a wall safe which the robbers forced Mrs. Salvatori to open, said Sgt. Robert Hagenbaugh.

The stolen goods were placed in Salvatori's 1972 Thunderbird and 1976 Cadillac which were then driven away by the intruders, police said.

Salvatori, a well-known industrialist and philanthropist, told police he was awakened by the rattling of the double doors to his bedroom. He said he grabbed a gun from a bedside table and was about to hide behind a door when the gunmen burst in, knocking him to the floor.

The intruders then wrestled the gun from his grasp and went to Mrs. Salvatori's room and tied them both up.

Millionaire Henry Salvatori's 1976 Cadillac, stolen when two gunmen robbed him in his Bel-Air home last month, was found parked in the 2300 block of Beachwood Drive in Hollywood. A parking checker noted the car's license number on the stolen vehicle list. Another expensive automobile, which the robbers used to carry away loot from Salvatori's home, has not been found. Police report that a completed inventory values the missing property at $205,731, not including stolen antique jewelry and silverware on which no value has been placed.

Salvatori Loot Itemized

Police have released an inventory of items taken last month during a robbery at the home of Los Angeles industrialist Henry Salvatori.

Among the jewelry, silver pieces and art work valued at $205,731.76 which were taken in the holdup, was a painting by French impressionist Bernard Buffet, police said.

The painting, entitled "Bateau Dans le Port a Mare Basse," shows a fishing boat by a village, investigators explained.

One of the Salvatori's two cars taken in the Feb. 25 robbery, a Cadillac, was recovered yesterday in the 2000 block of Beechwood Drive, Hollywood, police added. Still missing is a 1976 Thunderbird with California license number 463 EHZ, authorities said.

The following is a summary of investigation to date regarding captioned matter.

The writer has been in daily contact with LT. [redacted] b6 b7C
[redacted] Major Crime Section, LAPD and his investigating staff regarding captioned matter, offering any assistance possible by the FBI and following this matter closely in an effort to ascertain if a federal violation is involved.

On 3/10/76 LT. [redacted] advised that his detail had received b6 b7C information from a source of Administrative Vice Detail, LAPD, that [redacted] FBI # [redacted]
FBI# [redacted] were overheard discussing SALVATORI robbery.
[redacted] FBI# [redacted]
[redacted] CII# [redacted]
reportedly also mentioned as invloved or have knowledge, instant case.

Record checking developed background of above individuals b6 b7C all of whom with the exception of [redacted] were known to the Los Angeles office. LAPD was made aware of information available at FBI, LA.

It was ascertained that [redacted] on 3/1/76 had made b6 b7C burglary complaint to LAPD naming as suspect [redacted] in theft of 8 Taser (stun-guns) from [redacted] residence; [redacted]

[redacted] expressed fear of [redacted] (who is reportedly [redacted], and [redacted] vacated his residence in fear of [redacted] and ~~xxxxxx~~ stayed in motel. [redacted] home being occupied by [redacted] b6 b7C

On the night of 3/17/76 two individuals, one being identified as [redacted] entered (broke in) [redacted] residence looking for [redacted] stating [redacted] owed them money, and that they had given him loot from a job, and that he had not paid them. These two individuals kidnapped the [redacted] rode them around for awhile, talking to them and trying to find out [redacted] location, and eventually let these people out in the Azusa, Calif. area. During course of break-in at [redacted] residence [redacted] called LAPD. PD units arrived found house vacant. Later same evening [redacted] returned to area of [redacted] residence to obtain his vehicle, and escaped on foot from LAPD. [redacted] car impounded by LAPD. b6 b7C

Extensive investigation to date negative as to location of [redacted] and further identity of [redacted] (LNU). Artists composite (LAPD) made of [redacted] based on kidnap victims interview. b6 b7C

Investigation indicates that [redacted] are logical suspects on SALVATORI robbery. Loot from robbery taken to [redacted] residence where it stayed for approximately three days. [redacted] contacted [redacted] reportedly a fence who was to dispose of loot. Loot reportedly taken to apartment of [redacted] in Beverly Hills, Calif. in a pickup truck [redacted] had use of. b6 b7C

[redacted] decided to cut [redacted] out of the proceeds. [redacted] took a drive to the Malibu, Calif. area, and reportedly [redacted] struck both [redacted] with unknown hard object. [redacted] head being severly hurt and he obtained emergency treatment. [redacted] reportedly fell out of the car and the car ran over his arm [redacted] leaving the scene.

[redacted] of the opinion that [redacted] set him up, and he ~~xxxxxxx~~ threatened to kill [redacted] continued to hide out from [redacted] The loot from the Salvatori robbery then reportedly moved, probably by [redacted] to another apartment in Hollywood, Calif. occupied by the [redacted] b6 b7C

[redacted] extensively interviewed concerning all of the above and on 3/22/76 moved back into his house under LAPD stakeout. [redacted] received telephone call from [redacted] afternoon of 3/22/76 and again threats made by [redacted]

It was ascertained that [redacted] had been in custody of LASO on burglary charge during actual time of SALVATORI robbery, but has since been released. b6 b7C

On 3/23/76 SA [redacted] Chicago Div., received telephone call from attorney [redacted] Chicago, Ill. to the effect that [redacted] had a client named [redacted] who desired to surrender himself to the FBI in connection with the SALVATORI robbery, and that federal violations did exhist as statelines [redacted] had been crossed, and that [redacted] was in fear of [redacted] b6 b7C

The above was undoubtedly the result of investigation at Los Angeles and interview of [redacted] who apparently telephonically contacted [redacted] in Chicago, who in turn contacted attorney, who called the FBI. b6 b7C

As a result of the above many telephone calls were made between Los Angeles and Chicago, USA's in both Chicago and LA, and the whole matter has been closely coordinated with LAPD and [redacted] of the DA's office Los Angeles. Eventually LAPD and DA's office Los Angeles put in contact with the above attorney [redacted] in Chicago. b6 b7C

It is now indicated that loot from SALVATORI robbery could be in Chicago area, based on originally statements by [redacted] to his attorney, who contacted FBI, Chicago. Later information from [redacted] through his attorney is that loot still in Los Angeles. b6 b7C

Investigation Los Angeles indicates that [redacted] flew to Chicago with jewelry and was followed later by [redacted] who drove hauling a trailer (loot). Fur coat from robbery reportedly sold in LA and [redacted] received $300.00 as his share.

LAPD and DA desire to obtain property (Salvatori's) before any deals made, and attempted to again contact attorney [redacted] in Chica go, and LAPD desires to fly back, interview [redacted] and based on results of interview, return of property etc will then consider deals. [redacted] in court am of 3/24/76 and unavailable. b6 b7C

Two Azusa Men Held in Robbery of Salvatori

BY MIKE SEILER
Times Staff Writer

Two Azusa men have been arrested and charged with the Feb. 25 robbery of millionaire oilman Henry Salvatori and his wife, Grace, at their Bel-Air mansion.

Silverware valued at $225,000—less than half the $500,000 in loot taken by two masked gunmen—has been recovered in Chicago and returned to the Salvatoris, Los Angeles police said.

Jailed in lieu of $250,000 bond each were James E. Bowell and Raymond E. Knaeble, both 20. Bowell is charged with 11 counts, including kidnaping, robbery and burglary. Knaeble is being held on nine similar counts.

Police said they were still looking for other suspects in the case, as well as for the Salvatoris' stolen jewelry, paintings and furs.

Salvatori, a prominent Republican and contributor to conservative causes, tried to fight off two men who invaded his home in the early morning hours. At one point, the 75-year-old Salvatori pulled a pistol on the pair but was quickly disarmed. He suffered a cut on his leg during the scuffle. Mrs. Salvatori, 64, was unharmed.

The two men left the Salvatoris bound hand and foot in an upstairs bedroom, then drove off with two carloads of their possessions.

Victims of a second robbery identified Bowell from mug shots and said he and his accomplice bragged of the Salvatori robbery, according to police. Bowell and Knaeble were arrested in Azusa Thursday night.

About $100,000 worth of stolen property was found in Knaeble's home, police said.

Suspects Charged Salvatore Heist

Two Azusa men have been charged by the district attorney's office with the $500,000 armed robbery at oil industrialist Henry Salvatore's Bel Air mansion Feb. 25.

James Edward Bowell, 20, and Raymond E. Knaeble, 20, were charged yesterday with multiple felony counts of kidnaping, burglary, armed robbery, assault with a deadly weapon, and grand theft of merchandise in connection with several residential robberies in West Los Angeles, including the break-in at the Salvatore home.

The suspects were arrested last Thursday in Azusa after a police officer spotted Bowell on a motorcycle. His picture had been distributed to local police after victims of a robbery earlier this month identified him from files.

Both men are being held in lieu of $250,000 bonds.

On the night of Feb. 25, two gunmen forced their way into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Salvatore, threatened them and bound them with telephone cord. The robbers, wearing stocking masks and surgical gloves, ransacked the home of an estimated $500,000 worth of jewelry, silverware, furs, paintings and two expensive automobiles.

Police said a large amount of stolen property was found inside Knaeble's home, including stereo equipment, cameras, silverware, tape decks and paintings.

With the assistance of FBI agents, more than $250,000 worth of silverware stolen from Salvatore's home was recovered in Chicago last week.

Azusa Resident Held in Robbery Of Millionaire

By PAT MARRINAN
Tribune Staff Writer

AZUSA — Two men were arrested and charged in connection with the Feb. 25 robbery of millionaire oilman Henry Salvatori after an Azusa police officer spotted one of the men riding a motorcycle through the city.

James E. Bowell, 20, of Burbank, and Raymond E. Knaeble, also 20, of Azusa, were being held in lieu of $250,000 bail each. Bowell is charged with 11 counts including kidnaping, robbery, burglary and grand theft. Knaeble is charged with nine similar counts.

Azusa Police Lt. Ray Roth said today that Officer Greg Waldon saw a man who fit the description of one of the men sought by the Los Angeles Police Department but when he tried to stop him, the man sped away on a motorcycle.

A high-speed chase ended when the motorcycle went out of control near Hollyvale and Rockvale streets in Azusa and crashed into a sign post.

The man reportedly fled into a residential neighborhood and was apprehended a short time later by Azusa Detectives Jeff Templeman and Ken Gradoville in the 700 block of Mathwood street where he had forced his way into a home and was holding a woman captive, Roth said.

The man was identified as Bowell and turned over to detectives from LAPD who identified Knaeble as the second suspect and later arrested him at his home on Soldano Street.

An LAPD spokesman said allegedly stolen property valued at more than $100,000 was recovered from Knaeble's home and identified by robbery and burglary victims in West Los Angeles, Beverly Hills and the San Fernando Valley.

The spokesman said detectives traced a large amount of allegedly stolen property to Chicago and with the assistance of FBI agents there and in Los Angeles, silverware valued at more than $225,000 was recovered.

That silverware was reportedly identified as about half the loot taken by two masked gunmen who invaded the Salvatori home in Bel Air Feb. 25.

Police said they were still looking for additional suspects in the case as well as the jewelry, paintings and furs taken in the robbery of the Salvatori home.

Investigators said the property recovered at the Knaeble home included stereo equipment, cameras, clothing, tape decks, silverware, sports equipment and paintings.

Roth said Waldon recognized Bowell from a photograph that accompanied a bulletin issued by LAPD Shortly after the Salvatori hold-up.

Major Crimes Unit Catches Salvatori Thieves

According to Los Angeles police detectives assigned to the new Parker Center based Major Crimes Investigation Section (MCIS), two 20-year-old boys from Azusa were responsible, at least in part, for the break-in and armed robbery at oilman HENRY SALVATORI's Bel Air home in West Los Angeles on Feb. 25th.

Taken into custody last Monday, March 29th, were JAMES EDWARD BOWELL and RAYMOND E. KNABLE.

Although police recovered two Salvatori automobiles earlier in other locations besides Azusa, some stolen property taken from Salvatori and from other residences was reportedly recovered by police at Knable's home.

Additionally, as verified by FBI Media Affairs AGENT RICHARD WOLFE on March 31st, the FBI office in Chicago located $250,000 worth of stolen Henry Salvatori silverware last week.

The seizures came off of the FBI's Interstate Transportation of Stolen Properties Squad, which is headed up in Los Angeles by veteran FBI AGENT ELMER F. LINBERG.

According to an FBI spokesman, $250,000 in stolen Salvatori jewelry is still at large.

DEPUTY DISTRICT ATTORNEY JOHN WATSON of the D.A.'s Organized Crime Section is expected to argue the case against Bowell and Knable at a preliminary hearing before Los Angeles Municipal JUDGE ROSEMARY DUNBAR in Division 33 on April 9th.

Henry Salvatori, the top robber baron in the Grant Tool & Oil Co., was often described during the RONALD REAGAN years as "the real Governor of California," and it should be noted that Henry Salvatori reacted to those who robbed him like a real tiger.

An appearance in court by Salvatori and his wife, GRACE SALVATORI, is anticipated on April 9th.

$250,000 Recovered In Salvatori Heist

Since the arrest last month of two Azusa men charged with robbery, police said they have turned up $450,000 in stolen property, including $250,000 in valuables believed taken from the home of industrialist Henry Salvatori.

James Edward Boswell, 20, and Raymond E. Knaeble, 20, were arrested Mar. 25 in Azusa and booked for investigation of robbery in the Salvatori case.

The loot, some of it recovered in the Chicago area, includes a large quantity of silverware investigators believe was taken from Salvatori last Feb. 25 when two masked bandits held Salvatori and his wife at gunpoint and ransacked their Bel-Air mansion.

Following the arrest of the two suspects, police said they learned of the whereabouts of the stolen property and began confiscating it from six Southland locations, but have been unable to find owners for some 800 stolen items worth $200,000.

More than $500,000 in jewelry, silverware, furs and paintings were taken from Salvatori's home.

During the holdup, Salvatori attempted to grab a gun from a drawer and was slightly injured in a scuffle that followed when one of the bandits grabbed the weapon.

Officers said they also recovered an estimated $200,000 in other stolen items, including cameras, jewelry, rare coins and other valuables.

The items, many of which were stolen from Los Angeles-area residents as early as last June, are scheduled to go on public display at noon today in the property room of police headquarters, 150 N. Los Angeles St.

ADIC, LOS ANGELES (80-54) 4/29/76

SAC ELMER F. LINBERG

COOPERATION WITH THE
LOS ANGELES POLICE DEPARTMENT -
MAJOR CRIME INVESTIGATION SECTION

Assistant Chief of Police DARYL GATES, Los Angeles Police Department (LAPD), telephonically contacted ADIC GEBHARDT approximately 4/15/76 indicating that he thought it would be a good idea if Mr. GEBHARDT, SAC LINBERG, and some of his people met for lunch at the Executive Dining Room of the LAPD to discuss some recent happenings in the HENRY SALVATORI robbery case.

On 4/26/76, ADIC GEBHARDT and SAC LINBERG met at the LAPD Executive Dining Room with Assistant Chief GATES; Commander [redacted] Investigative Services, LAPD; Lt. [redacted] Major Crime Investigation Section; and Lt. [redacted] Major Crime Investigation Section. b6 b7C

Chief GATES explained that until recently when a major crime occurred under LAPD jurisdiction, the LAPD would assemble a special investigative team to handle the investigation and upon the solution of the case, the manpower would go back to their respective divisions. In the recent budget request of the City of Los Angeles the LAPD requested funding for a special 12-man Major Crime Investigation Section, which was approved and funded by the city authorities.

Lt. [redacted] advised that during the HENRY SALVATORI investigation, two LAPD officers flew to Chicago for the purpose of recovering property taken from the SALVATORIs, and that the LAPD felt everything did not go as smoothly as it should in Chicago. [redacted] indicated that the attorney for subject [redacted] was reluctant to deal directly with the LAPD detectives and that he insisted on doing business with a b6 b7C

Chicago FBI Agent. He further indicated the LAPD detectives had to wait before being invited to the scene of where the loot was recovered. [redacted] further indicated that there is some feeling that complete cooperation does not exist at this time insofar as recovering the jewelry in Chicago. He also indicated that in the early stages of the SALVATORI investigation SA [redacted] sat in the offices of the Major Crime Investigation Section, LAPD, and was kept up to date on all of the developments, and was furnished copies of pertinent LAPD reports. [redacted] stated that the officers in the Major Crime Investigation Section could not understand why the FBI did not reciprocate and furnish them written reports. b6 b7C

SAC LINBERG responded to the comments of [redacted] as follows: b6 b7C

As SAC of the Criminal Division, he indicated that he would certainly be the first to look out for FBI interest in any case where the FBI had jurisdiction. He noted that the HENRY SALVATORI case was a matter of joint jurisdiction between the LAPD and the FBI; however, he recognized that the LAPD had identified, through intensive investigation, approximately five subjects in the Los Angeles area and, through the tremendous pressure put on these five subjects, a sixth subject by the name of [redacted] had fled to Chicago with some of the loot from Mr. SALVATORI's residence. LINBERG advised that Supervisor [redacted] and SA [redacted], to whom the case was assigned, had consulted with LINBERG and that LINBERG had advised both of them that since the LAPD had broken the case in Los Angeles, the FBI would defer and fully assist the LAPD in the further developments of the case. b6 b7C

LINBERG explained that in Chicago the attorney for [redacted] had telephoned the Chicago Agent and desired to surrender [redacted] to the FBI. At this point, no Federal process was outstanding. The Chicago Office of the FBI obtained a warrant for the arrest of [redacted] charging him with an ITSP violation. This was done with the full concurrence of the LAPD. b6 b7C

LINBERG explained the fact that the attorney for [redacted] desired to deal with the Chicago FBI Agent rather than the LAPD officers was a matter over which the FBI had no control. LINBERG pointed out that immediately after [redacted] attorney had led the FBI Agent to the loot, the LAPD officers were invited to share in its recovery and that further, the loot was turned over to the LAPD officers, who returned it to Los Angeles and to Mr. and Mrs. SALVATORI. It was further pointed out that through the good offices of the FBI, the warrant against [redacted] was dismissed by the U. S. Attorney in Chicago. b6 b7C

LINBERG pointed out that it was understandable that two police officers going into a strange city might encounter certain delays and difficulties due to the pressures of the moment and the strange surroundings. As a matter of pressure, [redacted] attention was called to the fact that one of the LAPD officers had made the statement in the presence of a Chicago FBI Agent that his mission in Chicago was of such great import that his entire career in the LAPD depended upon his successful completion of his mission in Chicago. b6 b7C

In regard to [redacted] comments about FBI reports not being turned over to the LAPD, both ADIC GEBHARDT and LINBERG advised that the Department of Justice rules preclude the dissemination of FBI reports or memoranda to outside agencies; however, full information had been disseminated orally by [redacted] to the Major Crime Investigation Section. b6 b7C

ADIC GEBHARD and LINBERG assured the group that they would determine if any current obstructions existed in the recovery of the jewels in Chicago.

Both ADIC GEBHARDT and SAC LINBERG indicated to the group that they could not understand why the LAPD felt there was a problem of any magnitude in this case since the FBI's posture was one of complete cooperation with the LAPD, looking toward the identification of all subjects and the recovery of all loot and its return to the SALVATORIs.

Lt. [redacted] mentioned a second case wherein he thought FBI cooperation might have been lacking. He related b6 b7C that during the past several weeks, two detectives from the Major Crime Investigation Section flew back to Boston to interview [redacted] a subject in the Munici Bond case involving the armed robbery of 1.4 million dollars worth of Municipal Bonds on 1/27/76 in Los Angeles. [redacted] indicated that the Los Angeles FBI had arranged with the Boston FBI Office that [redacted] would be available for interview on a certain date and that when the LAPD detectives arrived in Boston, [redacted] was not available. b6 b7C

ADIC GEBHARDT pointed out that this would not be at all unusual since the FBI has no control over individuals unless they are locked up, and that many times persons change their minds about being available for interview on a particular date; however, we would check on the matter and get back with them.

At the conclusion of the luncheon, Assistant Chief GATES, Commander [redacted] and Lieutenants [redacted] all expressed their admiration and continued goodwill toward the FBI. Chief GATES stated he had inquired of all of the other operations units prior to the luncheon, and all indicated complete harmony in their relations with the FBI. GATES stated that he thought the above matters should be discussed in the interest of future harmony. b6 b7C

Both ADIC GEBHARDT and SAC LINBERG are in agreement that the matters related above seemed to be the natural consequences of police officers traveling to cities in other states under great pressures and great expectations that things will happen which are not practical to come to fruition as soon as they expect.

Later the same day, Commander [redacted] was telephoned by SAC LINBERG and advised that a check with Supervisor [redacted] and SA [redacted] concerning the status of the investigation to locate the jewelry believed to be in Chicago resulted in learning that LAPD officer [redacted] had requested the Chicago Office of the FBI to hold up on the investigation to locate the jewelry since the LAPD believed it had a source who could furnish this information. [redacted] stated he was not aware of this and would check. SAC LINBERG pointed out to [redacted] it is unrealistic to expect the FBI b6 b7C to hold up its investigation unless some good reason exists and that the FBI has clear-cut interest in this case under the ITSP violation, and that the Chicago Office has a large stable of criminal informants who could be expected to come up with an answer as to where the jewelry might be located.

Commander [redacted] was also advised that a check with the Agents handling the [redacted] matter indicated that the LAPD detectives were in Boston on a Saturday and the case Agent handling [redacted] was in the Boston Office, and that when [redacted] telephoned the Boston Office, a clerk on duty, not realizing the Agent was in the office, had advised [redacted] the Agent was not in on Saturdays and that [redacted] should leave a message. [redacted] was advised there was no intention of hiding out [redacted] that he had been subpoenaed to come to [redacted] to appear before the Federal Grand Jury; and that he would be made available to the LAPD for interview if they so advised. b3 b6 b7C

An Azusa patrolman spotted Bowell riding a motorcycle on Mar. 25 based on an identification flyer distributed by the Los Angeles Police Dept.

Bowell crashed after a high-speed chase, officers said, and broke into the home of Diane Blair, 26. Police said they captured him as he tried to slip out the back door.

Dep. Dist. Atty. John Watson of the organized-crime section said Bowell led police to Knaeble's residence, 931 N. Salvano Ave., where the other suspect was arrested, and also gave a statement to Los Angeles police Sgt. Philip Sartuche.

According to Sartuche's testimony at a preliminary hearing, Bowell told him that they took the Salvatori loot to Rubin, who allegedly agreed to sell it for them. Knaeble and Bowell were expecting about a $75,000 cut, Watson said.

Following the dispute over their deal, the defendants broke into Rubin's home and stole the Salvatori loot, Satuche testified. They returned several days later and abducted the Georgianni couple in another unsuccessful attempt to locate Rubin, he said.

2 ARRAIGNED IN ROBBERY OF SALVATORI

BY WILLIAM FARR
Times Staff Writer

Two Azusa men were arraigned Thursday in Superior Court in connection with the $500,000 robbery of millionaire Henry Salvatori and a series of other alleged crimes, including the Taser "stun-gun" shooting of an Encino attorney during another holdup.

James Bowell and Raymond Knaeble, both 20, were being held in lieu of $250,000 and $100,000 bail, respectively.

They pleaded not guilty to three counts of robbery, three counts of burglary and single counts of grand theft, kidnaping, assault with a deadly weapon, and assault for the purpose of committing robbery.

Superior Judge Kathleen Parker ordered the two men returned to court June 17 for setting of a trial date and arguments on pretrial motions.

Bowell and Knaeble are charged with breaking into Salvatori's Bel-Air home Feb. 25 and taking approximately $250,000 worth of silverware plus jewelry, furs and paintings valued at about the same amount.

The 75-year-old Salvatori tried to fight off the intruders and at one point pulled a gun on them. He was quickly disarmed and he and his wife, Grace, were tied up before the burglars drove off with the loot they had packed into a 1976 Cadillac and 1972 Thunderbird owned by the Salvatoris.

Dep. Dist. Atty. John Watson of the district attorney's organized crime section said the two cars were found locally and most of the silver was recovered in Chicago.

Three nights before the Salvatori incident, the criminal complaint charges, Bowell and Knaeble broke into the Encino home of lawyer Bruce A. Thabit and shot him with a Taser gun while burglarizing the residence of $30,000 worth of items that included $500 in cash, jewelry, stereo equipment, television sets and an expensive chess set given to Thabit by gossip columnist Rona Barrett.

Thabit was struck in the cheek and lower hip by the metal prongs fired from the Taser, a nonlethal electronic device that shocks and stuns its victims.

Watson, who is prosecuting the case, said that on the night following the Thabit holdup, the two defendants broke into the Beverly Hills home of Mort Olshan and his wife, Sylvia. After tying up the Olshans and their maid, Maria Adkins, they took off in the Olshans' Mercedes Benz with an estimated $30,000 worth of loot, Watson said.

The criminal complaint against Bowell and Knaeble also charged them with a March 12 break-in at the Hollywood Hills home of Robert Rubin. Eight Taser guns and other items worth an estimated $2,200 reportedly were taken there.

Two Men Arraigned In Salvatori Theft

By City News Service

Two Azusa men were arraigned in Los Angeles Superior Court Thursday on charges stemming from the robbery of millionaire-industrialist Henry Salvatori and his wife in their Bel-Air home and the alleged taser gun attack on an Encino attorney.

James E. Bowell and Raymond E. Knaeble, both 20, are charged with 100 counts each of robbery, burglary, assault, kidnaping and grand theft. Bowell additionally is accused of false imprisonment and attempted escape.

The two defendants were arraigned before Superior Court Judge Kathleen Parker, and were ordered to return for a pretrial hearing June 17. Trial is set for June 28.

Charges against Knaeble and Bowell stem from a series of burglaries and break-ins at expensive homes in Bel-Air, Encino, Beverly Hills and the Hollywood Hills.

Both defendants were arrested March 25 in Azusa.

Authorities alleged Knaeble and Bowell stole $500,000 in jewelry, silverware, paintings and furs from Salvatori's Bel-Air mansion last Feb. 25. They also are suspected of having taken loot valued at $30,000 in two other burglaries, as well as four luxury cars.

Police said two masked gunmen broke into Salvatori's mansion and collected a 94-piece silverware set, a mink coat valued at $1,000, several paintings, jewelry and $920 in cash.

Salvatori, 75, tried to fight off the burglars with a pistol, but was disarmed. The wealthy oilman and his 64-year-old wife, Grace, were bound hand and foot in an upstairs bedroom as the suspects ransacked the house.

Police said the burglars piled their loot in Salvatori's cars — a 1976 Cadillac and a 1972 Thunderbird — and drove off. Salvatori sustained a 2½-inch cut on his right leg while scuffling with the thieves, but he and his wife otherwise were unharmed.

Knaeble and Bowell also are accused of:

— The Feb. 22 burglary and alleged taser attack on attorney Bruce A. Thabit, 40. Investigators said two men broke into Thabit's home in Encino and shot the attorney in the cheek and hip with the taser "stun gun."

The suspects fled with an estimated $30,000 in stereo equipment, jewelry, golf clubs, $500 in cash and a chess set. Police said the suspects loaded the loot in Thabit's 1976 Cadillac and fled.

— The Feb. 23 burglary of a home on Chalette Drive in Beverly Hills. Police said two suspects broke through the kitchen door and tied a 40-year-old man and a maid.

The suspects stole an estimated $30,000 in furs, stereo equipment, television sets and the couple's Mercedes automobile, as well as ransacking the home, police said.

— The March 12 break-in of a home in the Hollywood Hills. Investigators said the thieves took suitcases, clothing, jewelry and eight taser guns and 60 cartridges valued at about $2,200.

Radio broadcasts by FBI regarding missing SALVATORI vehicles put out on regular basis to all Bureau cars, LA Division in effort to locate cars. In addition quadrant searches assigned to several FBI agents in area of Bel Air, Beverly Hills, Westwood and UCLA area in effort to locate cars. UCLA campus police and BOYD LYNN, COP, UCLA requested to alert his department in effort to locate missing vehicles.

Through daily liaison with LT [redacted] and his investigative staff, SA [redacted] was advised of developments instant case, Salvatori vehicles recovered, development of suspects etc. b6 b7C

There was no indication of federal violation involved until 3/23/76 when attorney [redacted] Chicago, Ill., contacted SA [redacted] Chicago Division, and advised that his client [redacted] desired to surrender himself to FBI in connection with SALVATORI robbery, and that federal laws had been violated.

The above was result of LAPD investigation among associates of [redacted] who contacted [redacted] who contacted attorney, who contacted FBI. Indications were that at least part of loot from SALVATORI was in Chicago.

b6 b7C Many telephone calls were made to and from LAPD, Chicago Division, FBI etc. and LAPD, Lt. [redacted] being immediately advised of developments in Chicago by SA [redacted] put in contact with attorney [redacted] in Chicago, as was [redacted] Deputy District Attorney, Los Angeles who is handling instant case.

On 3/24/76 LT. [redacted] advised that [redacted] verified that silverware and painting from SALVATORI robbery had been transported by them to Chicago and delivered to [redacted] Negotiations broke down between LAPD, DA's office and attorney [redacted] in Chicago. FBI, Los Angeles and Chicago in constant contact. It was resolved that FBI file federal JTSP charges against [redacted] in an effort to recover property and assist LAPD. b6 b7C

Lt. [redacted] advised of this and in agreement. SA [redacted] handling case in Chicago, and was to file federal charges 3/25/76. On night of 3/25/76 subjects [redacted] arrested by Azusa, Calif. and LAPD. On morning of 3/25/76 [redacted] contacted [redacted] who contacted LAPD. Same date investigators [redacted] LAPD, MCIS, proceeded to Chicago. LAPD desired that SA [redacted] go with them. b6 b7C

LAPD investigators [redacted] working in conjunction with SA [redacted] FBI, Chicago recovered silverware and painting taken in SALVATORI robbery through attorney [redacted] At request of LAPD, SA [redacted] suppressed federal warrant. USA, Chicago declining [redacted] Property inventoried at FBI, Chicago and returned to Los Angeles by LAPD, and returned to SALVATORI residence 3/27/76. b5 b6 b7C

Recovery in excess of $250,000.00

It is felt that the cooperation between the FBI at Los Angeles and Chicago with the LAPD was of the highest caliber. The only purpose of the FBI filing federal charges, was to assist the LAPD, and the LAPD, LT. [redacted] was in agreement. When negotiations restablished between [redacted] his attorney [redacted] and LAPD and DA in Los Angeles, FBI Chicago held investigation in abeyance at request of LAPD, and no effort made to locate or arrest [redacted] b6 b7C

The only problem the writer can arrive at, is that the LAPD investigators, [redacted] who had proceeded to Chicago were apparently unaware that FBI was or had filed charges against [redacted] These officers also are of opinion that SA [redacted] had advised attorney [redacted] at some point in time that a federal warrant had been filed. Furthermore I believe that these officers were possibly ~~xixxxx~~ disappointed in the way the property was recovered. Apparently attorney [redacted] insisted that SA [redacted] FBI, Chicago be the only one to accompany him to recovery site, and upon arrival SA [redacted] radioed LAPD officers and other FBI agents adgising them of location of recovery site. Agents and LAPD proceeded to location and recoverd property. b6 b7C

It is felt that FBI, Los Angeles and Chicago did all that was possible to assist LAPD and recover property, and in having federal process supressed which had been secured to assist LAPD. No effort was made to scoop LAPD, and exblicit instructions regarding assistance was stressed throughout. FBI, put out no press releases in connection with the above.

2 Allegedly Tried to Kill Salvatori Holdup Suspect

Two men suspected of receiving a major share of the loot from the Feb. 25 robbery of wealthy oilman Henry Salvatori tried to kill one of the two alleged robbers, detectives here said Wednesday.

The objective, officers added, was to cut down the number who would share in the spoils obtained when two young gunmen invaded the 75-year-old Salvatori's mansion and carried off $450,000 in valuables.

The two alleged gunmen presently are in jail and one has pleaded guilty to participating in the robbery in which Salvatori sustained a cut leg while struggling with the intruders.

An international all-points bulletin went out Wednesday for the other pair and named them as Adrian Robert Rubin, 46, a film distributor who last resided in the Hollywood Hills, and Martin K. Bak, 25, a Chicago restaurant owner.

Officers said that two days after the theft, Rubin and Bak drove James Bowell, 20, to a beachfront and hit him over the head, intending to kill him. But Bowell escaped, ran to a county fire station and received emergency treatment.

About a month later, Bowell and Raymond Knaeble, also 20, were arrested in Azusa, where they lived, and were accused of the Salvatori robbery.

Bowell later pleaded guilty to four of the 11 counts of robbery with which he was charged. Knaeble, now being held in jail in lieu of $100,000 bond, has yet to plead.

2 Sought in Bel-Air Looting

Two men are being sought in connection with the $500,000 looting of a Bel Air businessman's home Feb. 25.

Henry Salvatori, 75, and his wife Grace, 64, were tied up and held captive at their home, 457 Bel Air Rd., while two men took valuables.

On March 25, James Bowell, 20, and Ray Knaeble, 20, both of Azusa, were arrested and charged with the robbery. Half of the loot was recovered.

Yesterday, police obtained warrants for the arrest of Adrian R. Rubin, 46, of 3555 Multiview Dr., Hollywood Hills, and Martin K. Bak, 25, of Chicago. The warrants state that both are wanted on suspicion of receiving stolen property and conspiracy to commit murder.

Slaying Attempt In Robbery Of Salvatori Told

From Evening Outlook News Services

Two men suspected of receiving a major share of the loot taken in the Feb. 25 robbery of wealthy Bel-Air oilman Henry Salvatori attempted to kill one of the two men arrested for the robbery, detectives said Wednesday.

Police Wednesday issued an international all-points bulletin for the pair who police believe wanted to cut down the number who would share in the $450,000 in valuables taken by the two gunmen who invaded the 75-year-old Salvatori's home.

Adrian Robert Rubin, 46, a film distributor whose last known address was in the Hollywood Hills, and Martin K. Bak, 25, a Chicago restaurant owner, are being sought.

The two alleged gunmen are in jail and one has pleaded guilty to participating in the robbery in which Salvatori suffered a cut leg while struggling with the intruders.

Officers said that two days after the theft, Bak and Rubin drove James Bowell, 20, to the beach and struck him on the head, intending to kill him. But Bowell made his way to a fire station and was treated for his injury.

Bowell and Raymond Knaeble, also 20, were arrested in Azusa about a month later and charged with the robbery.

Later, Bowell pleaded guilty to four of the 11 counts of robbery with which he was charged. Knaeble, now being held in jail in lieu of $100,000 bond, has yet to plead.

Guilty Pleas Filed

Raymond E. Knaeble, 26, of 931 N. Saldano Ave., Azusa, has pleaded guilty to robbery and kidnaping charges stemming from a series of crimes, including a break-in at the Bel-Air home of industrialist Henry Salvatori.

Superkor Court Judge Kathleen Parker scheduled sentencing for Sept. 21.

One of the robbery counts he admitted to yesterday was for the Feb. 26 robbery at Salvatori's mansion, where $500,000 in jewelry and other items were taken.

Knaeble also admitted to the Feb. 22 robbery of well-known divorce lawyer Bruce A. Thabit, 40, who was shot with an electric gun and bound in his Encino home as assailants took $30,000 in stereo equipment, jewelry and other items.

The kidnaping charge to which Knaeble pleaded guilty stemmed from the March 17 abduction of Frank Georgianni, 38, and his wife, Susan, 18, authorities said.

Knaeble's co-defendant, James E. Bowell, 20, also of the Azusa address, pleaded guilty June 29 to three counts of robbery and one count of kidnaping. He is scheduled for sentencing Oct. 7.

Authorities continued their search for two other men in connection with the case. They have been identified as Adrian Robert Rubin, 46, a film distributor who last resided in the Hollywood Hills and Chicago restaurant owner Martin K. Bak, 25.

AGREEMENT 2-3

May 10, 1976

TO: [redacted] b6 b7C
Major Crime Investigation Section

FROM: Investigators [redacted]
Major Crime Investigation Section

SUBJECT: [redacted]

SOURCE OF INFORMATION

Major Crime Investigation Section investigators first became aware of [redacted] on March 9, 1976, at 1030 hours. Investigators received information from Investigator [redacted] Los Angeles Police Department TEACH Unit, that [redacted], as well as other named suspects, were capable of being the local receivers of Salvatori's property loss. No information was furnished that [redacted] was in fact involved at this time. b6 b7C

MCIS investigators located a criminal history package on [redacted] and determined [redacted] had prior involvement as a receiver. His local address was determined to be [redacted] b6 b7C

On March 10, 1976, at 1145 hours, MCIS checked the address and found it to be a $100,000 plus value home with a rental in the rear. It is located on top of a hill overlooking Universal City. The house is a single story, white stucco ranch style with a two-car garage. There is a pool in the rear yard. The north face of the house is glass and overlooks the approach road to the house.

During the next several days, MCIS investigators made several attempts to locate [redacted] at his residence. These attempts were unsuccessful; however, investigators did discover [redacted] made a burglary report on March 2, 1976, claiming his [redacted] residence was burglarized by [redacted] took several taser guns from [redacted] during this burglary. This occurrence was handled by Hollywood Area investigators under [redacted] b6 b7C

INVESTIGATIVE DEVELOPMENTS

On March 17, 1976, MCIS investigators met FBI Agent [redacted] in San Diego. Agent [redacted] had executed a search warrant in Encinitas on an unrelated matter in which a large amount of silver items and jewelry was recovered matching the description of Salvatori's stolen property. MCIS investigators eliminated the property as belonging to Salvatori, however, a taser gun recovered was traced to [redacted] The gun was reported stolen under the above mentioned DR number. b6 b7C

On March 18, 1976, [redacted] were interviewed by MCIS investigators. The [redacted] had leased [redacted] residence on [redacted] and were currently residing there. b6 b7C

On March 17, 1976, the [redacted] home was invaded by two suspects later identified as [redacted] The suspects were looking for [redacted] and upon discovering [redacted] moved out, the suspects kidnapped both [redacted] in hopes they would reveal [redacted] whereabouts. During the kidnap incident, [redacted] indicated to [redacted] that he and [redacted] had given over $500,000 worth of stolen merchandise to [redacted] The merchandise was described as consisting of a large amount of jewelry with some stones as large as a person's thumb. [redacted] further told [redacted] was to fence the items and pay the suspects $40,000. [redacted] indicated that [redacted] had fenced other goods in the past. b6 b7C

On March 18, 1976, at 1500 hours, [redacted] contacted Hollywood Area burglary Investigator [redacted] regarding his burglary report. [redacted] During this conversation, [redacted] discovered that the [redacted] had been kidnapped by [redacted] who attempted to force information from them as to [redacted] whereabouts. Due to this information being discovered by [redacted] feared that the suspects would physically harm him if he were located. [redacted] then telephonically contacted MCIS and arranged a meeting for 1730 hours on March 18, 1976. b6 b7C

PERSONAL CONTACT WITH [redacted]

On March 18, 1976, at 1730 hours, MCIS investigators went to [redacted] and met [redacted] This location is a single-family, ranch-style home in [redacted] and is the residence of [redacted] a friend of [redacted] b6 b7C

The initial conversation with [redacted] amounted to the fact that he feared [redacted] and that if MCIS would protect [redacted] he in turn would reveal what he knew about the Salvatori case. No conversation relative to [redacted] possible involvement was initiated by MCIS at this time because [redacted] stated before he would assist MCIS, he wanted a meeting scheduled with his attorney, [redacted] and MCIS personnel. This meeting was scheduled for 1930 hours at West Los Angeles Police Station. b6 b7C

A meeting was held at the scheduled time at West Los Angeles Investigative Area. Those attending were Attorney [redacted] and MCIS personnel, Lt. [redacted] and Investigators [redacted] The purpose of this meeting was to establish what conditions must be met by all parties in order to secure [redacted] information. b6 b7C

The results were as follows:

1) MCIS would provide [redacted] with personal protection until such time [redacted] were apprehended. b6 b7C

(2) MCIS would also not seek local prosecution for [redacted] relative to the Salvatori case. b6 b7C

In return for the above considerations, [redacted] and Attorney [redacted] agreed to meet the following requirements:

1. [redacted] must reveal his total involvement concerning the Salvatori case immediately. b6 b7C

2. [redacted] must assist MCIS with total recovery of Salvatori's property.

3. [redacted] must furnish MCIS with a completely honest statement and testify accordingly in future criminal proceedings.

It was agreed that if [redacted] violated his conditions outlined above at any time, the agreement between [redacted] and MCIS was nullified. Attorney [redacted] explained these conditions to [redacted] and reiterated the importance of 100% complete honesty in dealing with MCIS. Both [redacted] agreed to meet these requirements. b6 b7C

[redacted] in the presence of [redacted], then revealed the following:

On February 25, 1976, at approximately 0230 hours, he was asleep at his [redacted] residence when he was awakened by [redacted] wanted to leave a large amount of stolen property taken from a robbery at his home. [redacted] directed [redacted] into an extra bedroom which had an exterior door and had [redacted] put the property in the room. [redacted] remained in his bedroom so [redacted] would not see [redacted] and later identify him. After all items were put into this bedroom, [redacted] examined the loot. b6 b7C

[redacted] stated he was astounded at the quantity and quality of the goods. The merchandise included an excessive amount of silverware, silver platters, candle holders, a painting, a fur coat, a porcelain clock, and a very large amount of red, white, and blue colored jewelry. [redacted] requested [redacted] sell the goods and he would return later for his money. b6 b7C

[redacted] stated the following day he attempted to contact some persons to purchase the goods without success. [redacted] refused to identify these persons at this time.

[redacted] stated that [redacted] returned and was displaying a Los Angeles Times newspaper account of the Salvatori robbery and exclaimed that the value of the stolen property exceeded his first estimates. [redacted] stated [redacted] became greedy and demanded $75,000 for the loot. [redacted] told [redacted] he was unable to fence such a large amount of property and requested [redacted] remove the loot to another location. Approximately two days later, [redacted] removed the loot. b6 b7C

[redacted] stated that [redacted] became upset because [redacted] had not arranged for a sale of the property and began to make threats. [redacted] stated he contacted a party named [redacted] (NFD) at the [redacted] was known to [redacted] and possibly had connections to sell the Salvatori loot. [redacted] stated to MCIS that [redacted] would buy the property intact if [redacted] would introduce [redacted]

b7C

[redacted] stated he arranged to have [redacted] return the Salvatori property to the [redacted] address; and when [redacted] arrived, he was introduced to [redacted].

b7C

Negotiations were conducted among [redacted] and a price was agreed upon. [redacted] stated that [redacted] drove a pickup truck loaded with the property and followed [redacted] in [redacted] vehicle to a location in [redacted] This location was an apartment house apparently to be used by [redacted] to store the property for [redacted] After the property was unloaded in the apartment location, the vehicles left for a meeting with [redacted] to be held in the Malibu area. After reaching the Valley area, [redacted] parked his truck and entered [redacted] car with [redacted] for the remainder of the rendezvous.

b6
b7C

[redacted]

b6
b7C

[redacted] stated he was forced to drive back to the [redacted] location where [redacted] acquired the Salvatori jewelry at gunpoint. [redacted] then forced [redacted] to drive into the Hollywood area near Santa Monica and La Brea where [redacted] got out of the car and fled on foot.

b6
b7C

[redacted] then stated he attempted to locate the apartment where the Salvatori property was being stored in Beverly Hills by driving up and down every street in the vicinity. His attempts were not rewarded.

b6
b7C

[redacted] stated that he remembered [redacted] in Hollywood and, therefore, he was possibly known by [redacted] in the Hollywood area. Since [redacted] he stated he had contacts that could possibly assist in identifying who [redacted] was.

[redacted] b6 b7C

MCIS investigators attempted to identify [redacted] stated he had no further information regarding the suspect, but felt he lived in Beverly Hills. Except for a general physical description of [redacted] no additional identifying information was provided by [redacted] stated that this was the total information he knew regarding the case.

The initial conversation was concluded and [redacted] was transported to the Wilshire Hyatt House where temporary residence was established. b6 b7C

During the next three days, [redacted] made several phone calls to unknown persons in an attempt to identify [redacted] Additionally, [redacted] took MCIS investigators to several porno distribution facilities and one book store in an attempt to identify [redacted] All these attempts met with negative results.

To further the investigation, MCIS drove [redacted] to Beverly Hills where many hours were consumed canvassing streets in search for the apartment where the Salvatori property was reportedly being stored. These attempts also met with failure in that [redacted] would not/could not locate the apartment. b6 b7C

On March 20, 1976, [redacted] stated that [redacted] had a girl friend he could contact in hopes of obtaining further information as to [redacted] identity. [redacted] made several telephone calls to this girl friend with negative results. [redacted] would not divulge her identity, but stated she would call him at the hotel phone number if [redacted] contacted her. [redacted] stated that the girl friend had been in contact with [redacted] and that he was out of state and would call again. b6 b7C

After no further contact with the female friend was made, investigators demanded the identity of the female. [redacted] gave her name as [redacted] and supplied her residence phone number. Investigators determined that the phone number was registered to a [redacted] Investigators went to this location and found it to be in the area as described by [redacted] in which the Salvatori property was taken. b6 b7C

[redacted] was taken to the [redacted] and asked if it was familiar to him as the location the Salvatori property was left by he and [redacted] stated it was and investigators questioned why he failed to divulge this address. [redacted] stated he knew he had knowingly failed to locate the apartment when MCIS investigators conducted him on a search the previous evening. He stated he did not want to involve [redacted] but now would fully cooperate in arranging an interview of [redacted] for them. b6 b7C

[redacted] was interviewed at her place of employment and would identify [redacted] only as a friend. She stated that [redacted] called her at her apartment and told her to go to a show and not be home one evening. b6 b7C

[redacted] had moved a large amount of silverware into her apartment and had removed it the same evening. She claimed she had not seen it upon her return. She also claimed to have met and known [redacted] for several months prior to storage in her apartment. She claimed [redacted] was out of town and it was either a two-hour travel or time distance away from Los Angeles. b6 b7C

Investigators located [redacted] vehicle in the parking lot of her place of employment and found it to have Nevada plates. Nevada DMV and assistance of Las Vegas Police Department eventually identified [redacted] has a minor arrest charge in Las Vegas and interviews conducted in Las Vegas positively identified [redacted] b6 b7C

[redacted] was confronted with the identification of [redacted] and he admitted he lied to investigators by not revealing the true identity of [redacted] as agreed initially. [redacted] was then confronted and she too admitted the true identity of [redacted] also stated [redacted] who lived in Chicago and furnished her name and address. b6 b7C

Due to the above lack of cooperation by [redacted] coupled with his violations of the agreement with MCIS, investigators contacted Attorney [redacted] on March 21, 1976, at 1430 hours to discuss the importance of his client's cooperation. [redacted] extended the promise that he would impress upon [redacted] the importance of complete honesty. b6 b7C

At 1730 hours on March 21, 1976, during a conversation with [redacted] regarding his false leads and information, [redacted] supplied investigators with the name and address of [redacted] as being in possession of Salvatori's Planchon Clock No. 1189. b6 b7C

MCIS contacted [redacted] and established that he did have the item. [redacted] asked [redacted] to keep the clock for him and the [redacted] agreed. Investigators recovered this item on March 21, 1976. During the recovery, [redacted] stated that he first saw the clock at [redacted] residence after being contacted by [redacted] to possibly purchase some items. [redacted] further stated [redacted] had displayed a large amount of jewelry at his residence as well as silver. b6 b7C

On March 22, 1976, MCIS terminated their residence with [redacted] at the Hyatt House and moved to [redacted] home. Again, [redacted] was asked to disclose all information he had regarding the case. [redacted] adamantly disclaimed further knowledge of any information claiming all property and further knowledge was with [redacted] b6 b7C

MCIS again contacted [redacted] to explore the possibility that [redacted] had left other property with [redacted] that he did not disclose. As suspected, [redacted] stated [redacted] had called him and requested [redacted] not to disclose additional information regarding other property. b6 b7C

[redacted] stated he was also given a large tear drop aquamarine stone suspended from a platinum chain. This item was not disclosed to police because [redacted] requested [redacted] not to divulge the item. [redacted] stated he became frightened and threw the stone into a large trash bin behind a market. It was never found. b6 b7C

On March 23, 1976, at 0830 hours, at Parker Center Police Headquarters, [redacted] made a statement that was electronically recorded and stenographically recorded indicating he had now divulged his total knowledge of the Salvatori matter.

On March 24, 1976, investigators of MCIS went to Chicago to further the investigation. MCIS met with a Chicago attorney, [redacted] b6 b7C

[redacted] is the attorney of record for [redacted] Negotiations were made to effect the recovery of the silverware and to interview [redacted] after recovery. [redacted] was interviewed on March 26, 1976, in the presence of his attorney and gave the following statement.

[redacted] stated he had known [redacted] for approximately one year, being introduced by [redacted] whom had been his employer while residing in Los Angeles. [redacted] claimed [redacted] approached him concerning the disposal of a large amount of silverware taken in a residential robbery by [redacted] requested [redacted] to assist him in disposing of [redacted] in order to have all the property for themselves. [redacted] solicited [redacted] to pose as a buyer with Eastern connections. The scheme being that [redacted] would convince [redacted] that these claims were legitimate. Arrangements were made to negotiate a sale price and locations to transact the exchange of property and money. b6 b7C

Unknown to [redacted] had agreed upon a secluded area in Malibu Canyon as the location of the phony payoff. [redacted] had asked [redacted], however, [redacted] would not agree [redacted] He did agree, however, [redacted] to be able to [redacted] in any manner of [redacted] choosing. A [redacted] was placed in [redacted] vehicle for [redacted] b6 b7C

After the transfer of silverware in Beverly Hills, the three arrived in the Malibu area. After arriving in a darkened, desolate location, [redacted] b6 b7C

[redacted] claimed [redacted] ran back toward the main highway. He picked [redacted] up from the roadway and drove in the direction of a fire station. While passing the fire station, both saw [redacted] at the fire station.

[redacted] returned to [redacted] residence and discussed their problems dealing with [redacted] after their lack of success in their Malibu venture. [redacted] was fearful of [redacted] stated he would move the silver from the [redacted] address. [redacted] completed b6 b7C arrangements to have the silverware stored and later transported to Chicago.

[redacted] was asked about the Salvatori jewelry and he denied taking any to Chicago, claiming all jewelry was retained by [redacted] stated that at [redacted] direction, the jewelry was wrapped in a package at [redacted] home. [redacted] instructed [redacted] to deliver the package, using [redacted] vehicle, to the parking lot at Schwab's Drug Store. [redacted] told him to give the package to a man who would approach the car upon his arrival. The transaction was made as directed by [redacted] denied any knowledge of jewelry or furs. b6 b7C

Investigators confronted [redacted] upon their return to Los Angeles regarding statements made by [redacted] again decided to change his original story regarding his involvement with [redacted] He admitted soliciting [redacted] to assist him in disposing of the silverware but denied involvement in any murder attempt on [redacted] claims both he and [redacted] returned to his residence and he obtained medical treatment for his arm. He claims it was after the Malibu affair that the burglary of his residence occurred. [redacted] still insists that he gave all the jewelry to [redacted] who transported it to Chicago and he was to benefit from it's disposal. b6 b7C

[redacted] was re-interviewed again at Parker Center where he admitted conspiring with [redacted] to kill [redacted] In [redacted] own words, [redacted] killing was "a mutual agreement" between he and [redacted] once again stated he had no more knowledge of the Salvatori case and he was unable to lead officers to any property recovery. To display his honesty, [redacted] asked to take a polygraph examination. b6 b7C

On April 9, 1976, at 0830 hours, [redacted] was scheduled to take a polygraph examination at LAPD-SID. Prior to this examination, [redacted] requested to contact his attorney, [redacted] His request was based on the fact that investigators warned [redacted] of his Constitutional Rights. b6 b7C

[redacted] request to speak with his attorney was granted and [redacted] called [redacted] office advised [redacted] that the polygraph was totally voluntary; and if he wanted to take it, it was all right with [redacted] Regarding the advisement of rights, [redacted] attorney advised him to make no statements. b6 b7C

After a conversation between [redacted] and his attorney, [redacted] stated he was advised against taking the polygraph and making statements. However, [redacted] stated in spite of this advice, it was his desire to go against his attorney's wishes and complete the examination and further questioning. b6 b7C

[redacted], LAPD Polygraph Operator, upon conclusion of the polygraph examination, advised [redacted] then requested the presence of MCIS personnel and he explained [redacted] b6 b7C b7E

he knew where a piece of Salvatori jewelry was located on his property.

[redacted] agreed to take investigators to recover this item. The item was a diamond earring containing nine diamonds and valued at $4,000. It was found in a plastic sandwich bag and was hidden in some ivy growing on a fence on [redacted] property. [redacted] stated he kept the earring for personal reasons and concealed it's recovery from MCIS knowing this violated his agreement. b6 b7C

Investigators notified Attorney [redacted] of these developments and told [redacted] that all deals extended to [redacted] are null and void. b6 b7C

April 9 1976

On April 12, 1976, 1650 hours, MCIS investigators received a phone call from [redacted] stated he had met with [redacted] and that [redacted] had located a person who might be able to assist in recovery of outstanding property. [redacted] told MCIS he was meeting with this person on April 13, 1976, to determine the degree of helpfulness. [redacted] advised he would contact MCIS after this meeting. On April 13, 1976, at 1300 hours, [redacted] called back and advised no new developments occurred. b6 b7C

On April 20, 1976, investigators met with an informant and discovered that [redacted] b6 b7C b7D

On April 22, 1976, at 1600 hours, MCIS investigators again met with Attorney [redacted] at his office. [redacted] was advised again that all deals with [redacted] were off and that appropriate complaints would be sought against [redacted] stated he understood and agreed with investigators that [redacted] had lied and misled investigators from the first meeting on. b6 b7C

[redacted] explained to investigators that [redacted] and an acquaintance of [redacted] were enroute to his office and that investigators should talk to the acquaintance in hopes that this person might be able to assist investigators. b6 b7C

This person turned out to be the wife of the informant who obviously had some interest in [redacted] No firsthand knowledge was related at this meeting. The woman was motivated by directing investigators away from [redacted] in Chicago. b6 b7C

On April 26, 1976, investigators contacted [redacted] Chicago attorney, [redacted], and arranged for a meeting with [redacted] in his office. [redacted] was advised telephonically that investigators had developed information that [redacted] had not been truthful in his dealings with MCIS. [redacted] was advised that no deals would be extended to [redacted] and that all information would be utilized to assist investigators with appropriate criminal charges to be filed on [redacted]. b6 b7C

On April 27, 1976, investigators met with [redacted] and advised [redacted] of the above. [redacted] in his attorney's presence, admitted the fur coat transactions with [redacted] as described. He admitted he withheld this information willfully. [redacted] again stated he had no Salvatori jewelry and that the jewelry was disposed of as earlier stated in Schwab's parking lot. [redacted] agreed to take a polygraph scheduled for 1700 hours on April 28. b6 b7C

A polygraph examiner was supplied by Chicago Police Department. At 5 p.m. Attorney [redacted] arrived at the selected polygraph location and stated he advised his client not to submit to a polygraph examination. Attorney [redacted] then gave investigators a green flannel bag containing four watches, three rosary chains, and one gold chain. [redacted] stated that [redacted] surrendered these to him for delivery to investigators. [redacted] stated [redacted] told him they represented all the Salvatori property he had except for approximately 1/2 ct. of stones dismantled and sold. [redacted] told [redacted] regardless of the fear of prosecution, he wanted to return these items. [redacted] stated that the remainder of Salvatori's jewelry was in [redacted] possession or available to [redacted] then stated that his client would surrender to MCIS investigators on a warrant with an extradition waiver. b6 b7C

MCIS investigators returned to Los Angeles and obtained identification of three items of jewelry by Mrs. Salvatori as that taken in her residence robbery. No further contact has been established with [redacted] pending warrant service. b6 b7C
