OF 01 WAS FOUND MURDERED ON THE CAMPUS OF U OF C AT APPROXIMATELY 1:15 P.M.

INVESTIGATION CONDUCTED AT CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, THROUGH THE POLICE COOPERATION PROGRAM HAD DETERMINED THAT CULIANU LEFT ROMANIA WHILE IN HIS EARLY TWENTIES TO STUDY IN ITALY AND FRANCE. AFTER HAVING EXPERIENCED SEVERAL CONFRONTATIONS WITH THE "SECURITATE", THE ROMANIAN INTERNAL INTELLIGENCE SERVICE.

IN 1972, CULIANU RECEIVED POLITICAL ASYLUM STATUS IN ITALY. AFTER RECEIVING DOCTORATE DEGREES IN ITALY AND FRANCE HE LEFT TO TEACH AT THE UNIVERSITY OF GRONINGEN, NETHERLANDS FROM 1976 TO 1985. WHILE IN THE NETHERLANDS HE BECAME A NATURALIZED CITIZEN.

IN 1986 CULIANU WAS INVITED TO THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO, WHERE HE HAS REMAINED UNTIL THE TIME OF HIS DEATH. CULIANU NEVER RETURNED TO ROMANIA BUT WAS ALWAYS VERY OUTSPOKEN AGAINST THE ROMANIAN POLITICAL SITUATION. CULIANU'S AREA OF EXPERTISE WAS ANCIENT RELIGIONS TO INCLUDE WITCHCRAFT AND LIFE AFTER DEATH STUDIES. NONE OF WHICH HAS BEEN DEVELOPED TO BE A MOTIVE TO THE MURDER.

Ceausescu terrorists unchecked

By Andrew Borowlec
THE WASHINGTON TIMES

A prominent Romanian professor is shot to death on a Chicago campus. The face of a former government official is slashed with razor blades in Switzerland. And dozens of Romanian exiles receive notes and telephone calls threatening imminent death.

Romanians living in the West blame the Securitate, the dreaded police of the late-dictator Nicolae Ceausescu. Renamed innocuously "the Romanian Service for Information," it has apparently become a state within the Romanian state, using the time-tested methods of intimidation and brutality. Its objectives are obscure.

Its former agents still occupy diplomatic posts, and some have been named ambassadors since the toppling of the Ceausescu regime in December 1989, according to Romanian expatriates.

"Nothing has changed," said the exiled writer Dorin Tudoran, who has been threatened with death by anonymous callers. "It's the same thinking, the same pattern — and mostly the same men."

Suspicion centered on the former Securitate after the death of professor Ion Cullianu in his office on the campus of the University of Chicago last week. His two assailants fled after firing a number of shots into his head.

Mr. Cullianu, an outspoken critic of Romania's post-revolutionary government, had received threatening telephone calls for weeks before, Mr. Tudoran said. The calls forced the professor to cancel a planned trip to Romania.

In March, Romania's first post-revolution vico president, Dumitru Mazilu, was attacked by two men in Geneva. They slashed his face with razors, saying, "You will remember us every time you look in the mirror." Mr. Mazilu was hospitalized for two months.

Some Romanian sources claim that during the communist era Mr. Mazilu was an instructor at the Securitate's academy for spies.

In Romania, a number of outspoken critics of the government have been attacked and beaten, emigre sources said, basing their information on contacts with relatives inside the country.

Diplomats confirm that Romania is undergoing a critical period. Some say there is a political vacuum in which the government is giving a free rein to the security apparatus headed by Defense Minister Victor Stanculescu.

He and his deputy for foreign intelligence, former Soviet KGB agent Mihai Caraman, had become Romania's "most powerful men," said Ion Mihai Pacepa, a former Romanian master spy who defected to the United States 11 years ago.

"They do what they want."

Mr. Pacepa, who maintains contact with Romania, claimed that the government headed by President Ion Iliescu has been promoting former Securitate generals to high posts and naming some of them as ambassadors. Most newly named Romanian diplomats are members of the intelligence service, he charged.

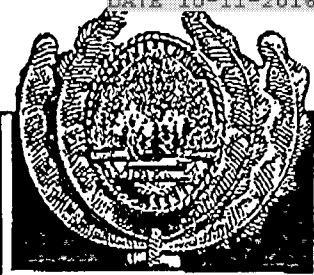

He cited the case of Securitate Col. Petre Sandulescu, appointed ambassador to Ecuador. Another senior Securitate official, Arabic-speaking Gheorghe Serbanescu, is ambassador to Kuwait, Mr. Pacepa said.

Mr. Pacepa also described Constantine Statescu, ambassador to the Netherlands, as Ceausescu's former chief of staff and Nicolae Ecobescu, ambassador to Greece, as the dictator's former chief of protocol.

"There is definitely a pattern in all activities abroad," said Andrei Codrescu, a Romanian poet who now lives in the United States. His book on Romania, "A Hole in the Flag," is about to be published.

"There are rival gangs in the new Securitate," he said. "There are right-wingers, left-wingers and ecologists. I think that Cullianu's murder is a significant warning to all of us, a message."

According to some diplomatic sources, the secret police are manipulating the right-wing nationalist organization Ultra.

CEAUSESCU'S SECURITATE

On the eve of the revolution that toppled Nicolae Ceausescu, the Romanian security police, or Securitate, consisted of four major components:

- Securitate combat units with artillery and armor — 70,000
 - Territorial network to watch the population — 20,000 secret policemen.
 - Ceausescu's personal militia — 40,000 men
 - Paramilitary border guards — figure unavailable.
- After the revolution, some 6,000 of the 10,000 Securitate officers were integrated into the regular army. The makeup of the security force today remains largely a mystery.

Graphic by Paul Woodward / The Washington Times

Juliana Pilon, vice president of the National Forum Foundation in Washington, said the new security police is "paradoxically, considerably stronger" than old Securitate, which dominated Romania's life under Ceausescu.

The power of the security apparatus is accentuated by instability in Romania.

"The situation in the country is fluid and the prospect of the collapse of the government is very real," Mrs. Pilon said, adding that the new Securitate has not succeeded in intimidating the population to the same extent as its predecessor.

She said the reorganized security apparatus was now under the direct control of President Iliescu.

But Mr. Pacepa said Mr. Iliescu "is losing his grip on bureaucracy." Romania, he concluded, "is still run by the same old underground mafia as during Ceausescu's regime."

One Western diplomat described the government headed by Prime Minister Petre Roman as being "weak to the point of inertia." Since it was put in office in the spring of 1990, he said, the government has failed to introduce badly needed economic reforms.

Private enterprise has not been encouraged, and potential foreign investors have shown little if any interest in 1990 the first year after

The undersigned, Ioan Petru Culianu, hereby testifies under oath to the following:

I, Ioan Petru CULIANU, residing at 1700 East 56th Street, Apartment 906, Chicago, Illinois was born in Iasi, Romania on January 5, 1950. I defected from Romania on July 4, 1972, never again to return there. Presently, I am a citizen of the Netherlands by way of naturalization. In the two years between 1970 and the time of my defection in 1972, I was a member of the Romanian Communist Party. My circumstances at the time forced me to become a member, although I have never embraced any communist ideology.

I come from a family of intellectuals with democratic convictions. My mother's father, Petru Bogdan (1870-1944) was one of the most famous Romanian physicists and the Rector of the University of Iasi for 12 years. He was a defender of the Jews against the fascist organization of the Iron Guard and would not tolerate persecution of Jews at his university. He was known for his balanced democratic position in a greatly explosive time in Romanian history. My aunt Ana Bogdan lost her job after World War II for her militant pro-American convictions. Several members of my extended family were large landowners in Romania, who lost their land to the Communists.

In the autumn of 1969, I was a student of the Faculty of Romance, Classical and Oriental languages of the University of Bucharest, Romania, where I was studying Italian and Romanian language and literature. I was the best student of the section, and later graduated in 1972 with the average grade of 9.87/10. I had never taken part in any political activity. One day, a secretary of the Faculty, [redacted] (now [redacted] and living in [redacted] told me that a representative of the Securitate, the Romanian equivalent of the KGB, wanted to speak with me. Until the most recent events in Romania, the secret police were a very powerful and terrorizing body. Everyone feared the secret police. This security agent told me to meet him in an empty classroom. He introduced himself as Captain Ureche (a word in the Romanian language meaning "ear", which I assumed was some sort of alias) of the Council of State Security. This first encounter was brief, about twenty minutes long, yet scary. He gave me an appointment for a few days later in a private apartment in the center of Bucharest, close to Lipscani Street. We took many detours to get to the location, walking through many alley ways. He wanted to impress me with these detours, so that I would think our clandestine meetings were especially grave. There he asked me questions for about forty minutes, about my publications and my friends - both Romanians and foreigners. I gave extremely vague answers. He was not satisfied with my answers. He tried to encourage me to be more open with him, suggesting that if I cooperated, any of my professional goals could be attained easily as a direct result.

A few days later, a good friend of mine, [redacted] (now residing in [redacted], the best student of the Spanish section of the same faculty was also interrogated by the same Captain Ureche. The secret police solicited our cooperation, as we were the highest ranking students in our respective departments. At that time, the secret police were known to recruit the top Romanians in all fields, so that they could control the people from top down. Although the Captain had warned us each not to talk to anyone about these encounters, we told each other everything in detail. It appeared that after my meeting in the apartment, both of us had been given different telephone numbers and had been asked by the captain to call him as soon as we were in possession of information that could interest him about friends, colleagues and professors. He explained to each of us that he was interested, for instance, in hearing about people who expressed the intention of leaving the country or who criticized the government. Not wishing to contradict or provoke him, within a few months I called him once, in order to tell him that... I had nothing to tell.

In the meantime, since neither my friend nor I wished to comply in any way with his request, we decided to find a way to be left in peace by the Secret Police. A friend of his (who had, if I recall well, a political function) told him that the only way to escape further interrogations was to become a member of the Communist Party. Indeed, a recent law that had been publicized by the newspapers stated that a member of the Communist Party could not be interrogated by the Secret Police without authorization from his or her party Secretary. By then, all this news seemed very persuasive. On the other hand, most if not all of our colleagues with the same "bourgeois" intellectual background had already become members of the Communist Party (yet, most held democratic convictions like myself). To become a party member was a very easy and short process. Both of us were accepted as members during the same meeting. I believe that the time was the end of January 1970. Obviously, I felt now confident that the time for me dealing with Captain Ureche was over.

Unfortunately, this confidence was premature. During the spring of 1970, he appeared again and called me for a third meeting. I told him immediately that I was now a member of the Party and that he needed the approval of the Party to interrogate me. He became very angry and said that it was a trifle for him to obtain the authorization of the Party. He asked me to wait for him a few days later, in the evening, inside of the administration building of the university. He arrived there at the given time and tried to impress me by showing that he had keys to the offices in the administrative building. He unlocked the door of the administrative personnel office where the personal files of faculty and staff were kept. It was generally known that functioning employees of that personnel office were controlled by the secret police, because that office essentially determined what the job assignments of graduating students would be. Alternating threats and promises, he asked me again to report to him any information about anything in my environment that I felt he should know. He was interested in virtually everything, ranging from theft to political treason. This time, however, although scared, I declined politely but firmly. I explained to him that I believed in his "good intentions", but that the focus of my activity was my scholarly work. "You have your important job," I told him, "and I have mine. Perhaps mine is objectively less important, but to me it is subjectively just as important as yours." This meeting took thirty to forty minutes. Again he was not satisfied with anything I had told him. In his eyes, the result must have been inconclusive, for he urged me to call him up again. But I had decided to make an end to this menacing "conspiratorial" relationship with Captain Ureche. I was distressed. Since joining the Party had not been enough to rid myself of this parasitic situation, the only thing I had left to do was talk to one of my professors. My professor, (now living in [redacted] was at that time a very powerful person, because he was the [redacted] in the ministry of Education.

[redacted] of international renown, knew me very well as a student in many of his classes and had offered me a job as librarian in the Oriental Association, [redacted]. After speaking with me, he immediately promised to help. As a result thereof, I was called by the [redacted] who told me plainly that the Secret Police would from then onward stop bothering me. He also added that I had made a big mistake. I later learned that [redacted] probably had the grade of colonel with the Secret Police.

All [redacted] told me came true. Captain Ureche indeed ceased bothering me, but new troubles followed in his place. Beginning in the Autumn of 1970, the magazines which had been printing my short stories and reviews since 1967 started rejecting them all of a sudden. In 1971, a volume of short stories of mine was set to be printed by the publishing house known as "Eminescu" in Bucharest, but the publication was suspended in June of that year. Ironically, the volume had already been advertised in the 1970 catalogue. Furthermore, for two months I anxiously visited the window of the Ministry of Education almost every day to see if my passport was available, only to be continuously disappointed. I had been awarded a scholarship by the Italian Ministry for Foreign Affairs, which entitled me to take summer courses in Siena from July 1 to August 31. The Italian government awarded the scholarship to the highest ranking student in Italian at my university. I was very excited about the award, but I needed a Romanian passport in order to leave the country. My disappointment was enormous, when still without a passport, I knew that the program had already begun without me. Only by mid-August was I told

b7C

that my trip had been cancelled. The secret police had punished me for not cooperating with them.

In 1972, I graduated with very high grades. When students in Romanian universities graduate, the personnel office distributes jobs to them. Technically, no one knows what position he or she will get, but most students lobby for positions that they want, with the help of influential professors. So in reality, most high ranking students know ahead of time what their job assignments will be. Supported by [redacted] I hoped that a doctoral assistantship would be created for me in the Department of Italian, which would have given me the opportunity to continue my clandestine study of the History of Religions, which I had already begun years earlier. Such an academic discipline was not taught in any Romanian university and was not ideologically acceptable to the Ceaucescu regime, so any attempt to learn the subject had to be secret. Ironically, I subsequently received a doctorate degree in History of Religions at the Catholic University in Milan, Italy in 1975; doctorate degree in History and Philosophy of Religion at the University of Paris in 1980; and a Docteur d'Etat es Lettres et Sciences Humaines, the highest international doctoral degree recognized today, in 1987. It seems odd that I would ultimately base my academic career on a discipline which was forbidden for me to study in my homeland. [redacted] had assured me that I would have that post. I had no reason to doubt it. At the time when the posts were officially distributed among graduates, however, [redacted] unfortunately was attending an international conference abroad. As a result, no doctoral assistantship was on the list for me. Instead, I was given a post in the Moldavian village of Breaza, district of Suceava, to teach Romanian language in an elementary school. The news came as a great shock

to me. The post was one which was clearly not fit for the top student in the Italian department.

That very day, however, I had obtained something much more precious - a passport in order to attend the summer courses offered by an university in Perugia, Italy as winner of the same Italian scholarship that had been awarded to me the previous year. Apparently, a professor and Arabic scholar, whom I had befriended, had given me a good reference to the secret police. He assured them that if I accepted the scholarship to Italy, I would return to Romania without hesitation. With that passport, I left Romania on July 4, 1972 and have never returned since then.

b7c

I was a member of the Romanian Communist Party for two and a half years. If I recall well, we had Party meetings every month, and I attended most of them. Yet, during most of those meetings, I would study the Sanskrit language out of a very large Sanskrit-English dictionary and would barely pay any attention to the meeting. Everyone knew this fact, and even now when I meet in the Free World some of those who were my colleagues during that time and who have since left Romania, they still remember my behavior at those meetings. Only once did I speak in a Party meeting, and that was to come up in defense of a student who had not declared that her parents had been rich landowners before World War II and was therefore going to lose her membership in the Party. I supported her in order to spare her serious harm. As everyone else, I knew that being expelled from the Communist Party was a very bad thing, since no career of any kind is possible to an expelled member. Besides attending meetings, I never had any function of any kind in the Party organization. I was merely a physical addition to the Communist Party, and made no substantial contribution to it in any way.

When I defected in 1972, Italy granted me political asylum. I later learned from two eye-witnesses that in 1973, I was formally expelled from the Communist Party in absentia. Since the date of my escape from Romania, I have been constantly engaged in activities meant to expose the crimes and the failure of the Communist dictatorship in Romania and to denounce the falsehood of Communism in general. I hope the reader will not take it as a sign of immodesty if I will observe that my Anti-communist activity in itself has been so eloquent and consistent during the whole period since 1972, that I do not need a patent of anti-communism from anyone. Instead, I could be asked by many Romanians, in the United States or elsewhere, to give them such a patent. In Romania, I had been politically persecuted and indirectly forced to join the Communist Party. Based on the evidence I was able to produce, I was granted political asylum in Italy in 1972. I was recognized again as a political refugee in The Netherlands in 1981. Dutch law concerning political asylum is based upon the same principles as are applied in the United States.

I have also very close ties with two outspoken former dissidents of Romania. [redacted]

[redacted] became a dissident after visiting me in exile in the Netherlands and experiencing democracy for himself. Soon thereafter, he became Romania's most coherent and dignified dissident, writing several articles and spending time in Romanian prison. [redacted] is now, under the new Romanian government, [redacted] Included as one of my best friends is another important Romanian dissident, [redacted] [redacted] who lost his job, was expelled from the Party, and was eventually placed under house arrest because of his political views. Under the new Romanian government, he is now

Generally, my anti-communist activities have been numerous from 1974 to date. Since 1973, I gave interviews and wrote broadcasts in Romanian language for such radio programs as "Free Europe", "The Voice of America", and the BBC - all programs which are known for their anti-communist positions. I published essays and book reviews in all major journals of the Romanian anti-communist exile community, such as Limite (directed by Virgil Ierunca), Ethos (directed by Virgil Ierunca), Revista Scriitorilor Romani (directed by C. Sporea), Contrapunct (directed by Ion Ratiu), and Agora (directed by Dorin Tudoran). I had a permanent section in the journal Contrapunct from 1985 until the cessation of the journal in 1986. Between 1982 and 1986, I was the Vice President of the Section Religion of the Roumanian Cultural Center in Paris - an anti-communist organization founded in 1949. I am presently an editor of the journal Agora, directed by a famous Romanian dissident, Dorin Tudoran, and sponsored by the American Foreign Policy Research Committee, 3615 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, PA 19104. I belong to the Executive Committee of the American Romanian Academy located in Davis, California, which is known for its anti-communist activity. In general, my criticism of communism always has been made from a democratic position, one which I never have abandoned.

More specifically, I must mention my anti-communist writings and broadcasts published and/or transmitted from 1973 to date. One of my first writings was the short essay entitled "Exile", written in 1974, when I was 24, and printed in August of 1975 in Limite #19. My argument was that the Romanian exile should be conscious that there is no return to' one's homeland unless that homeland is radically changed. For this early essay, I became, in 1984 and 1985, one of the permanent targets of communist criticism found in nearly 30 articles published in the Romanian magazine Luceafarul of Bucharest, written by an essayist who signed under the pen name of Artur Silvestri. I do not recall any such article in which, if I was not criticized at length, I was not at least mentioned as being one of the eight major Romanian defectors, together with famous exiled personalities such as Paul Goma, Virgil Ierunca, Monica Lovinescu, and others. I never replied to these injurious articles and did not collect them, but others did. I never envisaged political activity as the most important part of what I am doing, and therefore I could not afford to spend more time on it than what was left between scholarly books and articles (14 books - a few forthcoming - and well over 200 articles from 1973 to date).

In 1975, I wrote an article about the writer Vasile Voiculescu (Ethos 2, p.258-68), a victim of the Romanian Communist regime, and about his subtly subversive narrative, published after his death by the communist regime. This article amplified a review previously published by me in 1973 in the anti-communist magazine, Revista Scriitorilor Romani (Munich). All reviews published by me in Romanian exile journals such as Limite, Ethos, etc., from 1974 to date contain anti-communist undertones.

In 1978, I gave the Italian reporter Giampaolo Romagnato an interview for the newspaper, Il Popolo (July 27), in which I condemned communist totalitarianism in general.

In 1982, I wrote a review of the book Short Waves (Unde scurte, in Romanian) by the famous anti-communist reporter Monica Lovinescu, who worked 40 years for the "Radio Free Europe" program based in Munich and Paris. This review showed particularly well my clear-cut position concerning Romanian communism, which I accused of having destroyed all spiritual values of Romania and having introduced arbitrary values dictated by censors and mendacious politicians.

On November 6, 1984, I lectured upon invitation of the Faculty of Theology of the University of Gronigen (The Netherlands) on the relation between church and state in Romania. I condemned the suppression by the communist regime of the United Church in 1948-49 and the serious restriction of religious freedom in Romania.

In January of 1985, the journal Limite published another long review of mine of a book by the Romanian philosopher Gabriel Liiceanu, in which I repeated my accusations concerning the cultural policy of the Romanian communist government in even more articulate terms.

On February 12, 1985, I was invited by the Theological faculty of the University of Gronigen to lecture on the consequences of the Yalta Convention of 1945 for Romania. I explained to the audience how the Soviet Army instaurated communism in a country of 18 million people, which prior to World War II contained only 800 communists. I retraced step-by-step the horrors of the communist takeover between 1944 and 1949.

In 1985 and 1986, I published several articles in the magazine Contrapunct. Although the general topic of the articles was religion, they contained a particularly stringent analysis of the causes of the anti-communist dissent in Poland, as compared to the lack of dissent in such countries as Romania, Bulgaria, or the Soviet Union, which at that time were still in the aftermath of the Breshnev era.

In 1987, my article "'Zapadniki' et 'Slavianofily'", written in French, introduced the volume edited by G. Conio, Sauf-conduit: La vision russe de l'Occident. This article contained a criticism of Russian communism and an interpretation of the so-called Communist Revolution of 1917 in terms of Russian imperialism. Now part of these ideas seem to have been accepted even by Russian officials, but then they were not.

From 1986 to 1988, I prepared several broadcasts in the Romanian language for Radio BBC of London. Some of these broadcasts were published in the anti-communist journal Dialog of Munich (but due to frequent travels I never received the copies of the journal). In all of these radio transmissions, without exception, I found a way to criticize the cultural policy of the Romanian communist regime and its obsolete structures. My anti-communist transmissions had assumed such direct tones, that even the BBC rejected two broadcasts for which I had been invited to write at Christmas in 1988.

Indeed, my anti-communist activity was particularly intense in 1988 and 1989. In 1989, the publisher, Jaca Book, printed my volume of short stories (in Italian) with the title The Emerald Collection. One of these short stories is an allegory of the fall of the corrupted Romanian communist regime under Nicolae Ceausescu. At the end of 1989, I redacted an appeal for the liberation of the Romanian dissident Dan Petrescu, signed by many American citizens, and wrote articles and radio programs, in which I took a very clear position on the Romanian dictatorship of Nicolae Ceausescu, whom I call "the greatest thief in the history of humankind."

The above examples are only extracts of my continuous attacks directed against the communist dictatorship of Romania since my defection. All statements made by me above are substantiated by attached and unattached evidence and can be corroborated by all persons of importance in Romanian exile today. In Romania, while in my early twenties, I did not understand much about political ideologies. Politics were a frivolous obstacle to my higher education. Yet later, while in exile, it became quite clear to me that although I had joined the Communist Party in order to escape the pressure of the secret police, I had always been a democrat with anti-communist convictions. I will always remain a staunch anti-communist. My political activities opposing communism, since my exile, have outweighed exponentially any political connection I may have had with the Communist Party.

Fingerprints and palm print obtained at the crime scene by Chicago Police Department will be submitted to FBIHQ-Latent Section when they become available.

The Bureau has been requested to gain access to a ~~secret~~ compartment within victim's digital diary and determine what information was stored.

The Director of Security, U of C, provided FBI and Chicago Police Department with a list of registered Romanian students and faculty that is being searched for pertinent information.

For information of Legat Rome, the last recorded action of the victim was a telephone call on 5/21/91 at 1302 hours to telephone number [redacted] duration one minute and 12 seconds. Victim's address book listed [redacted] with telephone number [redacted] and victim's digital diary listed [redacted] [redacted] which may possibly be identical to the last telephone call made by victim. The international operator was unable to complete the call attempted by Chicago Police Department. [redacted] revealed that [redacted] were victim's good friends and fellow professor from the Netherlands. Investigation to date has not determined the nature or destination of victim's call on 5/21/91.

Victim's associates and friends [redacted] were contacted, but no positive intelligence was developed. The victim was outspoken against the Romanian government and participated in a weekly column published in LUMEA LIBERA, New York. Apparently he received written threats in response to his column, but did not retain any evidence. The [redacted] [redacted] indicated that she felt [redacted] may have been embarrassed by the threats and did not wish to alarm his family, as he was very protective in nature. [redacted] confirmed this information. The victim telephonically contacted [redacted] on 5/17/91 and indicated he would not travel to France and Romania at the end of June, as scheduled, in light of the threats he had received. He did not elaborate on the threats.

b6

[redacted] examined all items and documents in victim's apartment and office and was unable to provide tangible evidence to Chicago Police Department. [redacted] opined that some of victim's computer discs containing future publications were missing and

For the information of the FBIHQ Laboratory, on May 21, 1991, Ioan Petru Culianu, DPOB 1/5/50, Iasi, Romania, a visiting professor at the University of Chicago (U of C) was found murdered on the campus of the U of C at approximately 1:15 p.m.

Investigation conducted at Chicago, Illinois, through the police cooperation program had determined that Culianu left Romania while in his early twenties to study in Italy and France, after having experienced several confrontations with the "SECURITATE", the Romanian Internal Intelligence Service.

In 1972, Culianu received political asylum status in Italy. After receiving doctorate degrees in Italy and France, he left to teach at the University of Groningen, Netherlands from 1976 to 1985. While in the Netherlands he became a naturalized citizen of the Netherlands.

In 1986 Culianu was invited to the University of Chicago where he remained until the time of his death. Culianu never returned to Romania but was always outspoken against the Romanian political situation. Culianu's area of expertise was ancient religions to include witchcraft and life after death studies, none of which has been developed to be a motive to the murder.

To date, investigation by Chicago Police Department (CPD) has not resulted in the determination of a motive, although speculation in the Romanian Community is that Culianu was silenced for his open criticism of the new regime in Romania. Culianu's wallet containing currency and credit cards were undisturbed. Details of the murder, as reflected by CPD, are that Culianu was killed by a single shot .25 caliber bullet to the back of the head while using the bathroom facilities located on the 3rd floor across from his university office. To date there have been no witnesses to the crime.

The enclosed digital diary belongs to Ioan Culianu. Seventy names with addresses, telephone numbers and fax numbers were obtained from the telephone list within the digital diary. The digital diary also revealed Culianu's schedule for the month of May. A secret compartment within the digital diary can only be accessed by utilizing a password provided by the deceased. The FBI at Chicago, with the help of [redacted] attempted to gain entry to the secret compartment without success. Referenced telcal determined that FBIHQ has had success in the past in gaining entry into the secret compartments of digital diaries.

Ioan Culianu (left) had become internationally famous as a religion scholar before his death. He'd also become engaged to Hillary Wiesner (right), whom he'd met on the University of Chicago quad.

HYDE PARK GOTHIC

The murder of a brilliant and popular religion professor stunned the University of Chicago campus last May. The search for a suspect has touched on the occult—the professor's field of study—and wound through the paranoid maze of Romanian politics. But the killing remains unsolved—an enigma eerily foreseen by the dead man himself

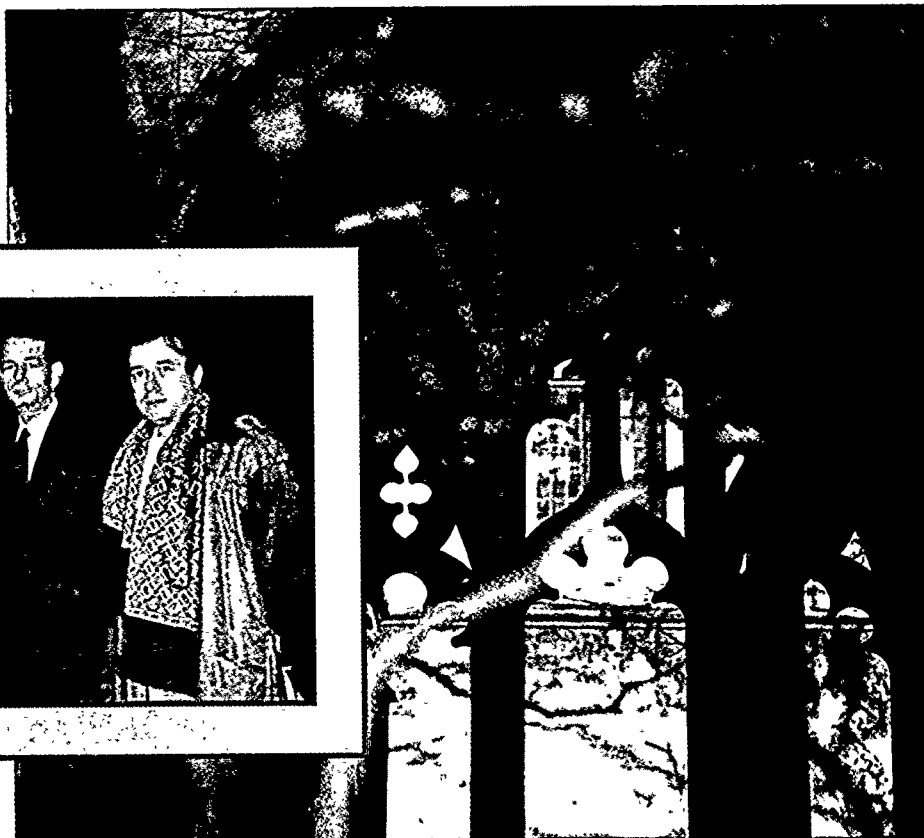

ONE NIGHT AT A PARTY, A charismatic University of Chicago divinity school professor named Ioan Culianu told his students' futures. His field was the occult; the exercise was instructive. One by one, his students entered the bedroom of his Hyde Park apartment, where the scholar selected cards and geometric figures. He uncovered one graduate student's concealed panic over her career. He told another, "You're humiliating yourself in a love triangle." His accuracy "knocked the wind out of me," she later said.

How does it work? they asked him.

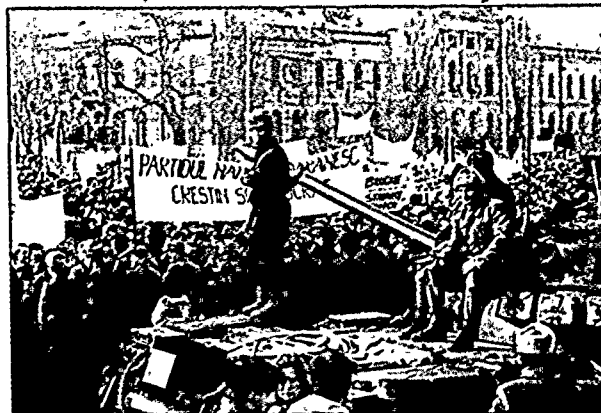

"It works because it works. It's all in the mind."

One student couldn't accept the answer. "Look, if I shot you in the head, would that be in the mind, too?" The professor had no answer to that. And the student, in light of what happened, later regretted asking.

Professor Ioan Culianu, a 41-year-old Romanian exile, was adored by students and championed by scholars from author and linguist Umberto Eco to Yale literary critic Harold Bloom. Fluent in eight languages, author of 14 books, holder of three Ph.D.'s—including the world's highest degree from the University of the Sorbonne—Culianu was "brilliant, famous in Europe," says Moshe Idel, a professor at Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

As a teacher he was open, funny, and unforgettable. But as a person he was secretive, isolated; he looked as if he were "hiding something," says friend and fellow Romanian Stelian Plesoiu in Chicago. Tall, with a dimpled smile and deep eyes that looked somewhere beyond you, Ioan Culianu proposed in his scholarly and fiction writings that multiple universes coexist, that the mind creates reality, and that magic can outperform modern science. In May, with three books due, a wedding planned, and a long-coveted return to his native Romania about to happen, he was host for a triumphant international conference at the University of Chicago titled Other Realms: Death, Ecstasy and Otherworldly Journeys in Recent Scholarship. Four days later he was dead in a campus murder Chicago police said was among the strangest they had ever seen.

The killing happened in a divinity school men's bathroom, on a gorgeous sunny afternoon, while hundreds of people filed through the building for a book sale. The single, lethal bullet from a .25-caliber gun was the one immediate clue. The murder stunned the school, stumped the police, and terrified students. After nearly eight months, the killing remains unsolved, and it has evoked as many multiple, disturbing possibilities as the professor's own prolific scholarship.

To some the motive was clear. For almost two years, Culianu had vehemently protested the new Romanian government's legitimacy; many insist the killing was a political assassination with international implications. Others swear it could not have been. They argue it was the act of a student or colleague, or even a practitioner of the occult arts the professor explored. "You've entered a complicated, balkanized maelstrom of paranoia," says Andrei Codrescu, a friend, fellow Romanian, and noted National Public Radio commentator.

Eriest of all was the victim's gift for prophecy, as recorded in his detective and fantasy fiction. He wrote in parable of political events that materialized months or years later. He wrote of mysteries and murders remarkably like his own. Most of all, he wrote of the human mind's power to transcend any limit—even death. "One thing about Ioan," says divinity school student Michael Allocca. "If anyone could reach us from where he is, he could."

IOAN CULIANU (PRONOUNCED EE-AHN COO-lee-AH-noo) was born January 5, 1950, in the Romanian town of Iasi near the Soviet border. Majestic boulevards, stone cathedrals, crooked alleys, and an air of ghosts characterize Iasi. Culianu's paternal great-grandfather and grandfather presided over its university, Romania's oldest. During Romania's era of fascism and Axis alliance, his grandfather became famous for defending Jews by wielding a marble-handled cane against their tormentors.

The boy grew up under the Communists, who came to power in 1947. The party seized his family's imposing mansion and confined them to four rooms infused with the "bitter smell of decomposing upholstery," Culianu later wrote. Barred from playing with other children, he amused himself with solitary games in the estate's walled garden. On his office desk after his murder, Chicago police found three walnuts from that garden.

Ioan Culianu witnessed the psychological decline of his father, a dissident lawyer and mathematician. (His mother was a chemistry professor.) "We lived in fear of Securitate, the secret police," says his sister Therese Petrescu over a crackly phone line from Bucharest. His father could not publish or find a good job; he died at 50, a broken man. "Ioan never spoke about him," says his 28-year-old fiancée, Hillary Wiesner.

At 20, the young man placed first in the national literature and language exams. Securitate summoned him, as they did all top graduates. In Bucharest, a Captain Ureche "took me through many alleyways," Culianu wrote in a 1989 statement to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. "He had the keys to the [Communist Party] personnel office." Ureche urged Culianu to inform on teachers and friends. When the young man refused, he, too, like his father, found he could not get a decent job or publisher.

Unlike his father, though, he managed to escape, winning a scholarship to study in Italy. On July 4, 1972, he defected. Romanian writers abroad have been beaten or killed, most recently in Toronto and Geneva, and his subsequent achievements—the three Ph.D.'s and prolific publication—all came as he moved in fear through Italy, France, and the Netherlands (he was a Dutch citizen), convinced he would never see his family again.

But the years of exile also gave him key world contacts, especially with another Romanian exile, the late Mircea Eliade, the University of Chicago's acclaimed religious scholar. Eliade encouraged Culianu's research into secret, ancient religious sects, and so he avidly studied medieval mysticism and archaic astral religions. "He felt he was from another century," suggests his fiancée. He became expert in courtly love and adoration art, and later covered his apartment walls with reproductions of Botticelli's haunting Primavera. After a failed marriage he came to Chicago through the influence of Eliade, where he became a visiting professor in the history of religions.

In Hyde Park, he began his research in earnest—working to recast concepts of magic, sex, and the self. He had, suggests Michael Fishbane, a divinity school colleague, "the linguistic capacity, the originality, the boldness, and the energy to produce an enormous life's work."

SUNLIGHT FILLS THE UNIVERSITY of Chicago quad on a lazy afternoon. Divinity student Greg Spinner, tall and unkempt in cut-offs and mountain boots with no socks, is talking about his teacher. "Losing him was like the burning of the Library at Alexandria. There's so much he knew, it'll take years just to sift out what he could tell you in a second."

Culianu's scholarship ranged widely—from the study of multiple universes, to the mind's phantasms, to nuclear physics, to the spiritual techniques of ecstasy. The three books his estate published posthumously give a good idea of his breadth: One covers the history of secret gnostic sects; another is on otherworldly and afterlife journeys; and the last is a comprehensive dictionary of religions written with Mircea Eliade, which is already a best seller in (continued on page 124)

Wirtz's secretary, Cindy Krch. "They don't even want to retire." Former Blackhawk players also speak well of the team's owner.

And despite the family reputation for being tight with money, Wirtz is involved in many charities in town, most notably Maryville Academy. He gives generously and has raised millions for the school over the past 22 years.

Maryville was the pet charity of Wirtz's wife of 33 years, Joan Roney Wirtz. Together they raised five children, two boys and three girls. Joan Wirtz was warm, funny, and known for her charity work and her gaited show horses. Hockey wasn't her greatest love, but, like her mother-in-law, she logged countless hours at the Stadium to keep her family together. "One night, Joan was sitting in the stands, talking to a friend," says Wirtz. "And the puck comes flying out of the rink and took her right ear off. We attached it right there in the training room. It took a little while before she'd come back again."

In 1983, the same year that Arthur died and months after Bill's mother was buried, Joan died of cancer. Four years later, Bill married Alice Pirie Hargrave in a private ceremony at the Fourth Presbyterian Church. The Pirie family, of Carson Pirie Scott & Company, and the Wirtzes were old friends. "That was a difficult time," says Bill's brother, Michael. "At first the kids weren't all that interested in seeing Bill remarried." And the two women are quite different. Joan was earthy. Alice, or "Ittie," as friends call her, is described as more elegant and poised.

Ittie Wirtz, though, has embraced hockey like a true member of the family. On a typical game night, Wirtz drives her to the Stadium, leaving his teal-blue Lincoln Town Car idling with an attendant. Ittie expertly weaves through the pregame crowd. "I hate to miss the national anthem," she says. Meanwhile, her husband lags behind, jawing with a fan.

Eventually, Ittie splits off to take her seat and Bill goes off to his inner sanctum, where he watches the game on television from the satellite feed that is being blacked out virtually everywhere else in the city. Bill and his brother share a desk, a huge expanse of mahogany, where they sit facing each other like players in a game of chess. Michael, who is heavysset, like his father, is Bill's right-hand man. "We work well together," Michael says. "But Bill is definitely in charge."

Maintaining the empire is a family affair. Rocky Wirtz, named in honor of the boxer Rocky Marciano, runs the family's liquor business, and Bill's nephew Bruce MacArthur runs one of the banks. Bill's younger son, Peter, founded a concession company, Bismarck Services, which now supplies the Chicago Stadium. (In 1986, Bismarck was awarded the Chicago Park District's concession contract, a ten-year deal worth at least $58 million.) Alyson, Bill's youngest, has joined Peter's firm. The other two daughters are artists. Gail is an art therapist, and Karey paints furniture.

Not 20 yards down the hall from Wirtz's office, a party is in full swing. But few people venture in while he's watching his team on the ice. One who does, oddly enough, is former coach Billy Reay, the victim in the famous story of the Christmas Eve firing. "Bill's like a son to me," Reay confides. The two embark on a rambling, 30-minute reminiscence of hockey days gone by and a retrospective of Bobby Hull's career (both agree he was a better player than his son Brett). "You know, we never would have lost Bobby if Bill had been in charge of the team then," says Reay. "Bill understood the importance of Hull. But Bill's father was alive then and Arthur was a businessman above all else."

Reay finally leaves for home. "People think I fired Billy with a note under the door—that I didn't have the guts to face him," says Wirtz. He insists that that's not what happened. He says he had learned that Bobby Orr was leading a player revolt against Reay as coach and the players were planning to boycott a practice. "I didn't want Billy embarrassed like that," he says. So he sent word for Reay to see him before practice. The coach was dismissed at that meeting. (Later, Reay says that Wirtz's version of the story is true.)

Much later that night, Ittie and Bill walk through the nearly deserted stadium to the gate where their idling car waits, its heater warming the interior. If all goes as planned, in a few years nights like this will wind down a block east at a new stadium. As for all the talk about legacies, Wirtz smiles.

"Believe me, if we could survive in this building," says Wirtz, "I'd do it. I love it that much. But if Jerry and I didn't build this new building, our teams couldn't survive past the year 2000. This is not an ego thing," he adds before driving off into the night.

France. "His focus," says Fishbane, "was on the common, inner structures of the mind revealed in these diverse fields."

Because he linked the occult, physics, magic, eros, and history his scholarship sometimes was mislabeled as New Age. It was far more: Ioan Culianu sought the underlying logic and beliefs common to religions of all kinds. He wanted to understand "the patterned predictability of thought itself," wrote Lawrence Sullivan, director of Harvard's Center for the Study of World Religions, in the preface to Culianu's book Out of This World. Culianu's encyclopedic study of folk-magic rituals led him to the idea that the human mind is infinitely powerful—it creates virtually everything we perceive, even truth. "He made two key contributions," says Carol Zaleski, a Smith College professor of religion. "One was in the sheer mass of his erudition. But his main interest was in understanding how the mind invents imaginary worlds and makes them so real they, in effect, become real."

Yet more than scholarship, it was his personal warmth students talk about. "He met us at the door on the first day of seminar and greeted us by name," says graduate student Michael Allocca. "I looked forward all summer to seeing him," adds Greg Spinner. "I'll just never know anyone like him again." Spinner and Allocca persuaded him to give them a course in his specialty, divination. Their final exam was to predict the future.

One day on the university quad, in 1986, Culianu met a blond Harvard graduate student who bore a striking resemblance to his portraits of Botticelli's ideal woman. "My friends couldn't believe him," says Hillary Wiesner. "He invented a kind of religion focused on me. . . . It was a little overwhelming." When they saw the movie Cyrano de Bergerac, though, she understood, at least a little. "He cried at that movie," she says. "In his mind he was Cyrano, alone, on a secret ideal quest against impossible odds to avenge his father and the past."

AS A WILLING EXPATRIATE, IOAN CULIANU closely followed the politics of his homeland, from a distance, for 21 years. But after the Romanian revolt of Christmas 1989, he became a much more outspoken dissident. In the last 15 months of his life he wrote more than 30 articles attacking Romania's new leaders. He published in Free World, a New York-based émigré newspaper, and in Corriera della Sera, an Italian national daily. He made scathing

BBC and Radio Free Europe broadcasts. He gave newspaper interviews. He wrote chillingly prescient short stories about a mythical totalitarian country he called Germania, his fictional Romania.

To understand this sudden conversion to activism requires an understanding of Romania, and its history. Squeezed by the czarist Russian, Ottoman, and Austro-Hungarian empires, it is a poor, mountainous, oft-conquered country haunted by identity crises—a Latin land of Roman origin that's long been dominated by foreign powers. For centuries, the Romanian people have been subjected to one sadistic, corrupt leader after another—first foreign, then native. (The most famous Romanian, Dracula, is a fictional character based on the aptly named 15th-century prince Vlad the Impaler.) Democracy is foreign; witch-hunts, xenophobia, and anti-Semitism are tragically familiar.

In the late 1930s, a fascist party called the Iron Guard grew in power, despite the constitutionally mandated rule of the Romanian king. In 1944, the young King Michael infuriated the fascists by capitulating to the Russians too soon, in their view. When the Communists took over after World War Two, many Iron Guardsists escaped—to Chicago. "You have an archipelago of old but active fascist communities here," says a source who asks not to be named.

The 1989 Romanian revolt against the dictator Nicolae Ceausescu seemed, at first, a wonderful reversal of Romania's long, dark history: It seemed to echo the joyful democratic upheavals in Poland, East Germany, and Czechoslovakia. But the Washington Post's Jack Anderson recently confirmed what Culiianu and others had already been saying about the Romanian revolt: It was, in part, a sham. Two weeks before the rebellion Culiianu told students to watch events in his country. There, in December 1989, a genuine people's revolt against Ceausescu's tyranny began. But that revolt apparently galvanized a small, entrenched group within the Ceausescu regime to push forward a coup they'd long been planning, with KGB support. According to media reports, the gun battles the world saw on CNN over Christmas 1989—as viewers cheered for what they thought were freedom lovers fighting to establish democracy in Romania—were actually the result of a power struggle among Securitate's secret-police forces and the Romanian army. The real revolutionaries already had been crushed. It seems now that a faction of Securitate won.

Under the new regime of President Ion Iliescu, established after the battles begun in 1989 finally ended—and Ceausescu had been executed—much of the Securitate apparatus was re-established with a new name, the Romanian Information Service. The new leaders did introduce freedom of speech, election, and assembly—though these freedoms have so far presented little threat.

Within weeks Ioan Culiianu was among the first and loudest to label the supposed "people's revolt" a military coup. But his fiction had been even more perceptive: Six months before anyone thought Ceausescu ever would be toppled, Culiianu published a short story in Italy, "The Intervention in Germania," that described a rebellion that proceeded roughly along the same lines as Romania's revolt. A second story, "Free Germania," told of a military coup that takes place during a genuine, populist revolt. In the story, while secret-police factions battle for control of the streets, coup leaders film exhumed corpses to inflate the number of battle deaths and confuse the public. During a special Nightline investigation, Ted Koppel said that someone within the new government of Romania had done exactly that: dug up paupers' graveyards and stacked their contents on a cathedral's steps. But Culiianu's story gave details of the infighting within the secret police and the exile of the losing faction's leader. Reality in Romanian politics, as in Culiianu's fiction, had become a mind game.

A month before he died Ioan Culiianu was interviewed by the new Romanian dissident magazine 22. "He gave the most devastating indictment of the strange new union of Far Left and Far Right in Romania," says Vladimir Tismaneanu, a University of Maryland professor and New Republic contributor. In the interview Culiianu called Securitate a police force "of epochal stupidity and yet unseen profundity." When pressed on Romanians' free press and elections, he replied that the main benefactors were newly free fascists. In one swoop the professor had antagonized the Far Right and the Far Left.

It's perhaps not surprising that Ioan Culiianu worried about acts of retaliation. A month before the revolt, his Hyde Park apartment had been ransacked. The Chicago police report shows that a TV, computer, floppy disks, and some bottles of wine were stolen. He believed that Securitate was warning him, says his friend Stelian Plesoiu, "because he was petitioning to get his sister and brother-in-law out of Romania. He was very angry the Chicago police did not take him seriously." Others disagree about the break-in. "It was nothing political, just a bad neighborhood," says Greg Spinner, who helped his professor subsequently move out.

Culiianu moved into a high-security high-rise on Lake Shore Drive. He never mentioned to university friends the death threats that reportedly followed. "He was a very stiff-upper-lip type," says Spinner. "He just kept the door shut." Nor did he tell his fiancée of any threats. But she had hints. "He would get letters written in Romanian, then quickly throw them away," Wiesner says. "He never said a word to me."

One person to whom he did mention the death threats was Dorin Tudoran, a poet who is the U.S. representative of Romania's new opposition party based in Washington, D.C. "The threats came in letters or over the phone. He didn't know their source," Tudoran says. "They said they would kill him if he kept writing about Romania. First, he was amused. Then he became frightened. Finally he stopped."

Yet in April 1991, a month before he was killed, Ioan Culiianu got involved even more deeply in politics. He acted as host to the exiled, elderly King Michael in Chicago, saying he was the best hope for stability and democracy in their divided country. However, three days before he was killed, after much indecision, Culiianu canceled a long-awaited return to Romania, where he'd planned to visit his ailing mother and attend a key conference of the Romanian-American Academy, a scholarly group known for its anti-Communist activity. He then changed the locks on his office door.

ON HIS LAST DAY OF LIFE, IOAN CULIANU taught from 10 to 11:30 a.m., picked up his mail, and went to his third-floor office. He looked exhausted, but most attribute that to the recent conference on the afterlife he had led. Graduate student Alexander Argüelles chatted with him after class. "I was presenting my first paper to the faculty that day. I was nervous. He said, 'You have nothing to fear, Alex. See you in a couple of hours,'" Argüelles recounts. "I'll never forget his smile."

The third-floor bathroom where Ioan Culiianu was slain is a quiet place. A window overlooks a serene courtyard. In one stall a tiny swastika—probably unrelated to this crime—is etched into a toilet-paper holder.

The killer perched on a toilet seat and pointed a gun down at Professor Culiianu's head. The single bullet sliced through his brain and exploded out a nostril. The killing was so precise that when a student entered the bathroom minutes later there was virtually no blood at first, only a bluish arm dangling below the partition.

His keys were still in his pocket. A black opal watch remained on his wrist. No money was stolen; nothing was disturbed in his office; no one saw the killer flee. The gun was never recovered. Opposite the bathroom an elevator flanks a janitor's storage closet. A murderer could hide in the closet, then flee either by elevator or by one of two stairways—the steep back stairwell being most likely—and melt fairly easily into the divinity school's annual book sale downstairs. The men's-room window leads onto the roof, where window washers that day had ladders set up.

The execution-style killing immediately suggested a professional murder. "But a professional would have shot several times. This was an amateur," police commander Fredrick Miller maintained. "Mostly we see Baretts or Uzis down here, never a .25."

After performing the autopsy, Cook County's chief medical examiner, Robert Stein, disagreed. "The people who did this had to know what they were doing," Stein said. "Because, if it was multiple gunshots, someone would have heard and come running. To kill with one shot from a gun as small as a .25—that's not easy."

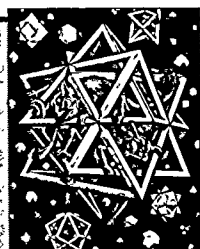

More contradictions and rumors followed. The day of the murder a rumor started that National Public Radio's Andrei Codrescu had killed himself (police first said Ioan Culiianu had committed suicide). "I traced that to California," Codrescu says of the story he quashed on NPR's All Things Considered. "There the trail vanished." Still, after the murder, Codrescu canceled the Chicago stop on the national tour for his book investigating the Romanian revolt, A Hole in the Flag.

The next day a fax arrived for Culiianu from King Michael in Switzerland. When the king had visited Chicago a month earlier, Culiianu promised to send him his and Mircea Eliade's books. Your box arrived, the fax said, but it was opened, and empty. What did you send us?

No one knows who tampered with the box, or how. But at a recent Paris party for Romanian exiles, dissident Cornel Nicolescu says, King Michael responded to the story. "The Swiss police always open my mail, looking for bombs," he said. "Maybe they forgot to put Culiianu's books back in."

The puzzles multiplied. In his office desk, Culiianu's secretary found a letter dated 1983 from his old university teacher, warning him in French that Romania's secret police were pursuing him. She turned it over to the police. His sister Therese Petrescu then reported that her brother's diary was missing. "If I die," he had written this past year, "they better burn my diaries." But Hillary Wiesner said he never kept a diary during their time together.

"THE GUYS IN THE SECRET POLICE ARE
SURE THEY'D
OF US," SAYS
WRITER ANDREI CODRESCU.

The widow of Mircea Eliade, a woman Culiianu doted on, began receiving menacing calls at her Hyde Park home. Eliade had named Culiianu his literary executor, a huge honor considering the number of Eliade's papers still to be published. But in the years before his death Eliade himself had come under attack as an alleged former member of the Iron Guard. His widow changed her phone number and left Chicago for an extended period.

A few weeks later the Romanian-American Academy meeting in Bucharest failed in its main goal, to attract émigré scholars. "The meeting was not expressly political, but many of us had hoped to help the opposition to organize," says Mircea Sabau of the University of Chicago, a friend of Culiianu's. "After the killing, that didn't happen."

Finally, new death threats began to reach other Romanian writers in the United States. Vladimir Tismaneanu came under attack in Romania's resurgent Far Right press: "Watch out rat," one article warned, "the rat patrol is after you." Dorin Tudoran began receiving threats that actually named Culiianu. "I get calls that say, Give up your work for Civic Alliance [Romania's opposition party] or we'll send you after your friend Culiianu. We have a bullet with your name on it." A past guest on the MacNeil/Lehrer program who had weathered house arrest under Ceausescu, Tudoran canceled an NBC-TV interview out of fear.

"The language of the threats I get," says Tudoran, "is exactly the same as the threats Ioan Culiianu said he received."

THERE COULD, OF COURSE, BE A MORE ordinary explanation for Culiianu's murder: a disgruntled friend, an angry student, a colleague jealous of his renown. But look for clues in his personal life and you find Ioan Culiianu had a "poignant innocence," as one student put it. He was so focused on work he once wrote a book in five weeks. In photos he favors a colorful silk scarf and European suits; for a Halloween party, he dressed up as Dracula. "He loved to shop," says Wiesner of the scholar whose writings linked marketers with ancient shamans. "He often ordered whatever they advertised with his credit-card bill, like a combination siren, flashlight, and radio. He was really a bit childlike."

If there is evidence for an amateur's motive, it is well hidden. Many students say Culiianu could be brash and brusque with entrenched experts in his field if he considered them misguided. But those who knew him or attended his last conference, a meeting on after-death journeys that ended four days before his murder, saw no sign of scholarly feuds; they speak only of serious, quiet research. "He sat back and let everyone say their piece. He didn't push his work at all," says Carol Zaleski. "The conference was very straight, very dry," adds Alex Arguilles.

What of the occult, then? Culiianu spent his professional life exploring and exposing practices many take with dead seriousness and wish to keep secret. He researched magic in both high and low culture—from 1,000-year-old monastery texts to the newest Chicago palm reader's advertisement. On occasion his enthusiasm got him into trouble. At one lecture in France, three self-identified witches objected to his topic. He, the other lecturer, and several in the audience became seriously ill. "I have since desisted from that practice," he wrote in the preface to his book Eros and Magic in the Renaissance.

Other strange things happened to him. Once he received a huge, erroneous settlement from his Dutch insurance company; another time a store clerk emptied her register for no reason and handed him the cash. He returned the money on both occasions. "Ioan had a weirdness magnet," suggests Greg Spinner. "He just attracted weird things."

MANY ROMANIANS THEMSELVES QUESTION a political motive in this murder. Why kill a professor in Chicago who was not a real political player, when you're part of a shaky government yearning for U.S. aid? "A million others were more involved in the opposition than he was," insists Paris-based dissident Cornel Nicolescu.

The political knot is hard to unravel. Start with those closest to home, Chicago's Far Rightist exiles. They would have disliked his support of the king and his calls for a full investigation into Romania's World War Two genocide of hundreds of thousands of Jews. Culianu had also discussed converting to Judaism. But none of these would seem to be sufficient provocation for murder. And Chicago's Iron Guardists are old men now; they make unlikely suspects, Andrei Codrescu concludes.

At the other extreme, Romania's factionalized secret police seemingly has made a specialty of terrorizing dissident writers all over the world. As recently as 1990 in Geneva, Securitate men beat a former minister nearly to death, then stole his book manuscript on the 1989 revolt, says Liviu Cangeopol, a writer for the Romanian exile newspaper Free World. In 1986 a Romanian publisher in Toronto was murdered. A former Securitate chief who defected to the United States tells a particularly grisly story in Andrei Codrescu's book. Securitate once detained dissident writers at its Bucharest headquarters for hours without questioning them. Years later each writer contracted cancer. None realized that while there they had been exposed to high doses of radiation, says the former Securitate chief.

"These guys [in Securitate] are masters of deception," says Codrescu of the secret police; its members sometimes even pose as Iron Guardists. "The confusion around this case is a trademark of theirs." Codrescu believes he himself is a target. "I'm sure they'd like to get rid of all of us," he says cautiously. By this reckoning, Culianu's murder was a message. "They go after someone less famous whose death would not create too much noise for an investigation," says Mircea Sabau. "That's how they frighten us."

What could Romania's secret police have feared from a religion scholar a continent away? According to investigative reporter Tad Szulc, writing in Penthouse, thousands of agents escaped Romania during the revolt. Many are setting themselves up now in Europe and Third World countries with state money stolen during the years of Communism. Sources who asked not to be identified say they are in North America, as well. Vicious, desperate to remain hidden, these exiles could conceivably have the clearest reason for killing a college professor if he knew of or got caught in a web of hidden connections—the very stuff of Culianu's fiction.

Others fear he was murdered to deliver a simple message to those who might try to organize the splintered Romanian opposition for upcoming elections: Shut up or we'll get you right where you work, in the middle of the day.

WHEN IT COMES TO BALKAN INTRIGUE, the Chicago police are out of their element. "We had 12 murders today," a detective told Hillary Wiesner at the time of Culianu's death. "We don't have the time or the budget." Many friends are critical of the police investigation, saying it never got anywhere and is now dormant. "They didn't check his mail. They hardly checked his apartment," says Stelian Plesoiu. "They didn't check his computer records. Right in the garbage can, they left his income tax and financial records, sealed."

"We checked it all out," responds Wentworth District detective Al McGuire. "We used the credit-card companies for his financial records." The FBI provided an agent who spoke Romanian.

The enigmatic killing still grips all those who knew Ioan Culianu. "I can't stop thinking about him," says his research assistant Nathaniel Deutsch. "He was just getting started in so much great scholarship."

The correlation between his writing and his death is perhaps the most unsettling element of all. Ioan Culianu believed in multiple universes—probably because he lived in multiple, intersecting worlds himself. He taught students "to suspend disbelief," says Greg Spinner, to become good detectives of the occult—and he believed East Europeans had to do just that in unraveling the strange twists of politics in a region with such a labyrinthine past. He understood, too, the pull of history—and the forces that sometimes rewrite it. "I feel the insidious power of the past shaping me to its shadowy purpose," one of Culianu's fictional narrators concludes.

The very month Culianu died, his final short story, "The Language of Creation," appeared in Andrei Codrescu's magazine Exquisite Corpse. It tells of a historian "forty years old, living in a high rise security building on the Lake." He teaches at a "grey and renowned Midwestern University." He comes to possess a strange music box that contains in code the language spoken by God: the Language of Creation. The three former owners of the box have all met with murder over past centuries. The first owner, in fact, was caught in a plot with a government minister "whose import probably exceeded the understanding of either one." The current owner considers using the box against a "distasteful political regime" but fears the same fate as those who came before him. As much as he tries to break its secret code, he never can. Finally, after much indecision, he leaves the music box at a yard sale in Massachusetts and escapes to freedom from what had become an intellectual prison posed by its secret.

One wonders what would have happened if, after 20 years of exile, with all of his accomplishments and so many ahead of him, Ioan Culianu had simply left his own past, and escaped—if he'd not spoken up, if he'd ignored the realities he seemed to divine before they could even exist.

Look deep into the circumstances of his murder, and it begins to prickle beneath the skin that nothing solid may ever be known. Had Culianu learned something dangerous? Had his prescient writing touched off someone's fears that he knew more than he did? Long before his murder, he seems to have intimated even the frustrations of those trying, vainly, to decipher his death. "Not even the cessation of my existence," he wrote in one story, "could reveal the secret." ~

Upon arrival, Swift Hall was noted to be a four story brick structure. It houses classrooms and offices for the Divinity School on the campus of the University of Chicago. The reporting detectives were directed to the third floor men's washroom.

Entering Swift Hall, one can use a large staircase or an elevator to reach the upper levels.

The victim was found in the third floor men's washroom. This is the only men's restroom on the third floor. The victim had been removed prior to the reporting detectives' arrival.

The washroom measures approximately 20 by 15 feet. Entrance is gained through an unlocked wooden door. It is open to the public. Extending along the west wall are three wash basins, a partition, and four urinals. The north wall contains a blue radiator and three windows above it. The west window is open. An overhead fluorescent light is on.

The east wall contains five toilet stalls with doors. For the convenience of this report, the stalls are numbered one through five with the stall closest to the entrance door as being number one. Paper towels and a recessed waste basket occupy the south wall adjacent to the wash basins. A search of this waste basket met with nothing of evidentiary value.

The victim was in stall number four seated on the toilet. Feces was in the toilet along with toilet tissue. Stall number five is to his immediate right. The doors to the stalls open inward. The victim's stall was locked when he was found.

A spent bullet was found on the floor in front of the toilet in stall number five. A spent .25 caliber casing was also found on the floor of this stall to the right of the toilet. (See Evidence category of this report)

The victim occupied the office immediately to the east of the washroom - Room 304. To the immediate west of the bathroom is Room 306 which houses secretaries. Directly across from the lavatory are two double doors that lead to a back staircase. At the first floor, there is a sign on the exit door that warns that an alarm will sound if the door is opened. This alarm is not activated during the day. This door leads out to the quadrangle of the campus.

[redacted] was then interviewed by the Reporting Detectives. [redacted] is a [redacted] whose office is adjacent to the washroom in which the victim was found. At approximately 1305 hours [redacted] said she heard a single gunshot coming from the area of the men's bathroom. She did not look out into the hallway or hear any other unusual noises. As there was a book sale in the building that day, [redacted] stated that there was an unusual amount of foot traffic in the building. This interview was then terminated.

[redacted] was then interviewed and related in summary that she has been [redacted] Her office is also located in the room adjacent to the bathroom. [redacted] last saw the victim at about 1130 hours when he picked up his mail. He finished class at 1120 hours and had no other classes for the rest of the day. When she last saw the victim, he was in good spirits.

Shortly after 1300 hours, one of the women in the office turned to her and said, "Did you hear that?" [redacted] replied, "No." The other woman said, "It sounded like a pop." Shortly thereafter, a student ran into the office and said that there was a guy in the bathroom turning blue and that someone should call the police or an ambulance. This interview was then concluded.

[redacted] was then interviewed. He related in summary that he is a [redacted] [redacted] Shortly after 1300 hours, he went to use the third floor men's washroom. He does not recall seeing anyone else in the hallway as he approached the washroom nor does he recall seeing anyone else as he entered the washroom. As [redacted] approached the urinal, he saw a hand hanging limply under the door of stall number 4. He also noted small droplets of blood on the floor.

[redacted] noted something looked odd about the hand, it looked slightly bluish. He called out and received no reply. [redacted] then ran into the office next door and told the staff that there was a man in the bathroom in need of help. The secretarial staff asked him if the man was breathing or talking. [redacted] went back toward the bathroom and met a female student in the hall. He explained the situation to her and the two of them opened the bathroom door. From the entrance, [redacted] crouched down so he could see underneath the door of the stall. He could see the victim's naked buttocks and left hand crouched between the toilet and the south wall of the stall. He also saw a large pool of blood. [redacted] ran back to the office and told them to call the police. He then ran outside the building to try and flag down University Security. [redacted] further stated that he never saw a weapon in the bathroom. This interview was then terminated.

[redacted] was then interviewed by the Reporting Detectives. [redacted] stated that she was walking toward the office next to the men's bathroom when she saw [redacted] talking excitedly. He seemed upset. She had just looked at her watch so she knows it was 1306 hours. As she neared [redacted] she heard him saying that there was a body and blood, someone ought to call the police. She and [redacted] opened the door to the bathroom. [redacted] stayed by the door. From her vantage point she could see the lower portion of the body and blood. She saw no weapon. [redacted] ran downstairs to get help and another [redacted] approached the door to use the bathroom. [redacted] told him not to go in and explained about the body and the blood. This [redacted] now known as [redacted] went into the bathroom and found the door to the stall to be locked. He looked under the stall and then went into the fifth stall and climbed over the top. [redacted] asked him what he saw and he replied, "You don't want to know." [redacted] checked for a pulse and could not find one. He then unlocked the door to the stall. The paramedics arrived moments later. [redacted] did not know that the victim had been shot until she was told some time later. This interview was then terminated.

b6
b7C

[redacted] was then interviewed and stated in summary that shortly after 1300 hours he came upstairs to use the washroom. He saw [redacted] in the hall and they told him someone had apparently committed suicide in the bathroom. [redacted] thought somebody should check it out so he walked into the bathroom and looked under the door of stall number 4. He saw a body hunched over and a pool of blood. The door was locked, so he went into the farthest stall from the entry door and climbed over the top into the stall with the victim. [redacted] tried to find a pulse but could not. He then unlocked the door to the stall but could not open it as the door opens inward and the body was blocking it. He then climbed out the way he came in.

University Security then arrived and looked over the top of stall from both sides. They found a bullet and a casing on the floor but did not disturb them. [redacted] never saw a gun.

[redacted]
[redacted] was interviewed and related that she spoke with the victim at approximately 1250 hours in his office. They talked about a conference that the victim held last week at the University. He was in good spirits. She knew of no enemies and nothing appeared unusual. She then departed to teach a class.

She went on to say that the victim is Romanian but a Dutch citizen. He is active in Romanian politics. He has written several articles protesting the present Romanian regime.

[redacted] was interviewed and related in summary that he considers himself a personal friend of the victim as well as a [redacted]. He knew of no enemies at the school.

The victim had briefly mentioned that he had some political problems in Romania. He had planned to visit his family in Romania last summer, but he was warned to stay out of the country and Romanian affairs. This had something to do with articles published by the victim, but Ioan did not go into specifics.

[redacted] was contacted in Cambridge, Massachusetts. She was of the opinion this incident is over Romanian political matters.

An interview of Ioan that appeared in the April issue of Twenty Two, a Romanian newspaper, Ioan spoke out against the Secret Police in Romania. He has written several articles against the Communist government. In the April article, he was very outspoken about the repression in present Romania. She knew of no enemies among the University population. She could add nothing additional at this time.

[redacted] was interviewed and related that he is in [redacted] for the summer. He did not believe that the victim was shot over Romanian politics. Ioan didn't seem to care anymore. Their area of expertise is attractive to "wackos". Some of the students are very bizarre. If Ioan felt threatened in any way, [redacted] would know about it. Ioan never mentioned anything. [redacted] was instructed to contact Area 1 should he learn of additional information relative to this matter.

[redacted] identified several Romanians in the United States that might provide assistance in this matter, as per attached FD-302 dated 5/31/91. The results of those interviews are not available to date.

Fingerprints and palm print obtained at the crime scene by Chicago Police Department will be submitted to FBIHQ-Latent Section when they become available.

The Bureau has been requested to gain access to a ~~secret~~ compartment within victim's digital diary and determine what information was stored.

The Director of Security, U of C, provided FBI and Chicago Police Department with a list of registered Romanian students and faculty that is being searched for pertinent information.

For information of Legat Rome, the last recorded action of the victim was a telephone call on 5/21/91 at 1302 hours to telephone number [redacted] duration one minute and 12 seconds. Victim's address book listed [redacted] with telephone number [redacted] and victim's digital diary listed [redacted] which may possibly be identical to the last telephone call made by victim. The international operator was unable to complete the call attempted by Chicago Police Department. [redacted] revealed that [redacted] were victim's good friends and fellow professor from the Netherlands. Investigation to date has not determined the nature or destination of victim's call on 5/21/91.

Victim's associates and friends and [redacted] were contacted, but no positive intelligence was developed. The victim was outspoken against the Romanian government and participated in a weekly column published in LUMEA LIBERA, New York. Apparently he received written threats in response to his column, but did not retain any evidence. The [redacted] indicated that she felt [redacted] may have been embarrassed by the threats and did not wish to alarm his family, as he was very protective in nature. [redacted] confirmed this information. The victim telephonically contacted [redacted] on 5/17/91 and indicated he would not travel to France and Romania at the end of June, as scheduled, in light of the threats he had received. He did not elaborate on the threats.

[redacted] examined all items and documents in victim's apartment and office and was unable to provide tangible evidence to Chicago Police Department. [redacted] opined that some of victim's computer discs containing future publications were missing and

Chicago Division has received numerous calls from the Romanian community requesting information and alarm at this situation. Apparently the conference of The AMERICAN ROMANIAN ACADEMY to be held in Bucharest, Romania, will suffer poor attendance in light of CULIANU's murder.

Professor Ioan Cullianu, 41, was found dead in a third-floor bathroom at the Divinity School of the University of Chicago last month. Police have ruled the shooting a homicide.

Whodunit?

Relatives say politics may be behind U. of Chicago professor's murder

By SHARON COHEN
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — It is a whodunit rife with rumors of revenge, political plots and international intrigue. And it all began with a single shot on a late spring day on the University of Chicago campus.

One bullet killed Ioan Cullianu, a religion professor and prolific scholar who churned out scores of academic tomes on topics such as near-death experiences, altered states and the supernatural — and some biting attacks on the government of his native Romania.

Ioan Cullianu was intrigued by mystery in life. In death, he has stirred up a mystery of his own:

Who would kill a courtly, popular, respected professor?

"We're just flabbergasted at all the circumstances surrounding this," said Detective Commander Fred Miller. "We are investigating as we normally do ... but this is really one for the books."

Friends and family suspect Cullianu may have been murdered to muzzle his harsh criticism of Romania. They said he had received threatening letters and changed his office locks. Four days before his death, they said, he canceled a trip home this summer to see his mother because he feared for his safety.

"All I know was he was getting threats, and his life was in danger," said his sister, Therese Petrescu.

"He never said a name," she said "but it was clearly assumed" the Romanian secret police were involved.

"I'm certain there is a connection, but I cannot accuse anyone directly," Petrescu said. "We are convinced — all my friends and family — that it is a political crime."

Police — who are being assisted by a Romanian-speaking FBI agent — won't comment on the political angle, though they say there's nothing to early rumors about the occult. As the weeks pass, they're still searching for clues or tips.

"Hopefully, we'll strike oil on one," Miller said. "We don't have the investigative leads we have in other cases."

They have no eyewitnesses, no weapon, no known motive.

Cullianu, 41, was shot once in the back of the neck May 21 in a locked bathroom stall near his third-floor office in the Divinity School, probably by someone firing downward from the next stall.

Police have ruled out robbery, however, noting that his wallet and an expensive watch and ring weren't taken. They also say it doesn't appear to be a professional hit. "They will usually shoot more than once," Miller said.

If Cullianu was fearful, many people didn't know. One colleague who saw him moments before he was shot said he eagerly talked of plans to visit his fiancée this summer to work on a novel with her.

Professor

Ioan Culiianu was a man "who had projects for 10 lives," his sister said.

He spoke six languages, read a dozen more, mastered Italian cooking, wrote 18 books, authored more than 250 articles and could expound on everything from Plutarch, the ancient Greek biographer, to Toontown, the chaotic cartoon world in the film "Who Framed Roger Rabbit?"

But the Romanian exile who left home in his 20s, studied in Italy and France, collected three Ph.D.s, and taught in the Netherlands, where he became a citizen, also had strong feelings about his native country.

"My brother has always thought the only way for Romania to get out of its disastrous situation was to tell the truth, the naked truth. He was very cutting, almost cruel," Petrescu said in French through an interpreter. "My brother wanted to do everything in his power and his ability to help his country."

Fellow exiles suspect his blunt talk about Romania, before and after the 1989 overthrow of Romanian dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, may be linked to his death.

"I tend to think there was a political connection," said Andrei Codrescu, an author, radio commentator and Culiianu acquaintance. He noted that in a recent interview with an opposition newspaper published in Romania, the professor "expressed the opinion that the Romanian revolution was a coup d'etat started by the Securitate (secret police), with help from the KGB."

That idea isn't new, Codrescu said, but "there was something new in his tone. He was challenging the Securitate."

Others in the Romanian community now are fearful they could be next.

"Many of us are afraid by this possibility of being killed. We are very critical, too," said Liviu Cangeopol, a columnist for Lumea Libera, or Free World, a weekly Romanian newspaper in New York that ran about 30 Culiianu articles.

Petrescu said her brother received threatening letters after his newspaper pieces. Though Culiianu was primarily a scholar, she said, "He always thought about his country and ... you cannot think of Romania without being political."

Dorin Tudoran, a Romanian magazine editor and friend in Washington, D.C., said Culiianu didn't initially take the threats seriously, then became more alarmed and "was really astonished about how dirty" they were.

It wasn't the first time he sensed trouble. His sister noted her brother's apartment was burglarized in 1989 and that some computer disks were destroyed and others were missing.

Friends, though, say it could have been a simple break-in; his neighbors had massive security and Culiianu had just moved in and hadn't yet installed extra locks. He quickly found another place to live.

About two years ago, Culiianu also told graduate student and friend Gregory Spinner that he feared he'd be detained if he returned to Romania.

But he continued to speak out. Graduate student Michael Allocca said Culiianu circulated a petition before Ceausescu's fall on behalf of his brother-in-law Dan Petrescu, who, according to his wife, was subject to house arrest. Petrescu and his wife, a dissident writer, now live in France.

Culiianu also gave a lecture last year about Romania and "stated without a shadow of doubt that it was not a grassroots revolution," Allocca said.

Still, he yearned to see his 83-year-old mother, a former professor, and "missed his country a great deal," Mrs. Petrescu said. "He agonized over the decision whether to go or not."

His affection, though, was mixed with shame.

Spinner said he and a friend once gave Culiianu a sticker emblazoned with "Proud to be Romanian." "He said, 'Oh, I am not proud.' ... He put it in his desk. It was obviously painful to him."

A specialist in the history of religions, Culiianu was scheduled to become an associate professor July 1. He also recently had founded a journal "Incognita" and co-sponsored a conference on other realms.

At a memorial service, Divinity School professor Wendy Doniger recalled that if she asked Culiianu about a topic, "he would not only tell me the best book about the subject, not only lend me or give me the book, but offer to introduce me to the author."

Some friends who are convinced Culiianu's murder was politically motivated are doubtful it will ever be solved.

"There are so many things involved in this crime, it will make the work very tough for everybody," Tudoran said. "I don't see much hope. Probably it will remain a mystery."

Title: AUTOPSY REPORT: U OF C
PROFESSOR MURDERED

Character:

by Scott Burnham
(Ethan Michaeli contributed to this story.)

Homicide detectives and an autopsy report performed on a University of Chicago professor confirmed he was fatally shot Tuesday while sitting in a bathroom stall located next to his office.

The autopsy showed a bullet fired from a .25 caliber automatic handgun entered the back of Ioan Culianu's neck. According to an Area 1 detective commander, an unidentified gunman shot the Romanian native "in a downward fashion" after allegedly waiting for him in an adjoining stall.

The assailant may have fled unnoticed down a staircase located across the hall from the bathroom, Miller theorized. Police had no suspects Wednesday and did not recover a weapon.

"We don't know what the motive is at this time," Miller said. "We are investigating and we don't know where our investigation will lead us... We have a mystery on our hands and we're trying to solve it."

Rumors circulated on the university's campus Wednesday morning, while student's and colleagues of Culianu, 41, spoke in remembrance of him during a campus mass.

Culianu, a professor of religion and Christianity, was an outspoken critic of the government of Romania and had written numerous articles criticizing both the Ceaucescu regime as well as the newly installed government headed by Ion Illiescu. Miller refused to speculate if Culianu was a target of a political assassination as a result of his criticisms.

At around 1:05 p.m. Tuesday,

Culianu was found slumped over in the fourth stall of the bathroom located on the third floor of the Divinity School, Swift Hall 1025 E. 58th St.

"The stall was locked," Miller said. "The student entered the stall and saw the blood. He went out in the hall and called another student and they called the Police Department and we were subsequently called to the scene."

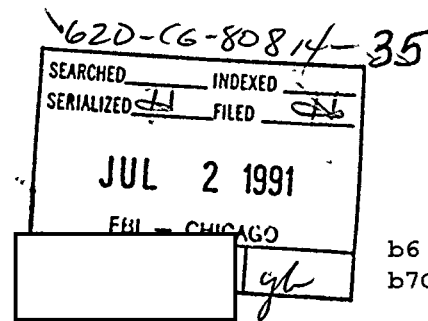

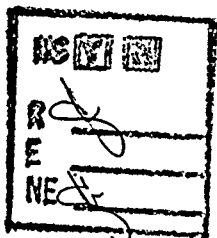

University police arrived at 1:10 p.m., Miller said.

A secretary, whose office was nearby, reportedly heard one gunshot fired minutes earlier. Witnesses had reported seeing Culianu in the Hall's cafeteria at 12:50 p.m.

Miller said the School of Divinity experienced an "unusual amount of traffic" due to a book sale conducted on the ground floor, making it difficult for co-workers or students to notice anyone suspicious.

Miller said he would not rule out the possibility of calling in the FBI to aid in the investigation if needed. Five Area 1 detectives have been assigned "around the clock" to work on the case, Miller added.

The killer of a University of Chicago Divinity School professor may have left his fingerprints and shoe prints in a college bathroom stall from where the fatal shot was fired, detectives said Thursday.

However, police fear the killer's prints may have been destroyed when around 25 students and faculty members entered the washroom to try to aid the victim before police and security guards arrived.

Technicians must also eliminate fingerprints and shoe prints left by a graduate student who climbed over a stall wall to unlock the door of the stall in which the professor, Ioan Culianu, 41, was shot Tuesday, said Area 1 Detective Cmdr. Fred Miller.

Culianu had planned to return to his native Romania last year but the Romanian government advised him against making the trip because of his writings in opposition to the regime of former Romanian dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, detectives said.

The FBI was asked Thursday to join the investigation because of Culianu's overseas background. Miller said the FBI could aid in contacting foreign governments and police agencies if that is necessary.

Ceausescu, a hard-line Communist leader, was executed with his wife after being ousted from power. Culianu apparently still has relatives in Romania, police said.

Culianu told a friend he had received threats, but gave no details on whether they stemmed from turmoil in Romania, the friend said.

Detectives continued questioning

the victim's associates, students, fellow faculty members and friends as they sought a motive. Robbery was ruled out because Culianu's money and other valuables were not taken.

An autopsy showed Culianu was shot in the back of the head with a .25-caliber pistol in a third-floor washroom in Swift Hall, 1025 E. 58th St. Police believe the killer fired over the top of a partition while standing on a toilet seat in an adjoining stall.

Culianu told a friend, Stelian Plesoiu, he had received threats, which Plesoiu said were "probably from the Romanian section of Chicago."

Culianu, a popular professor, was a citizen of the Netherlands.

A memorial service will be held at 4 p.m. June 3 in the U. of C.'s Rockefeller Chapel. Funeral arrangements are incomplete; a university spokesman said.

The Political Career of Mircea Eliade:
a response to Adriana Berger.

Bryan S. Rennie. New College, / Edinburgh. ^{EH1 2LU} February, 1991.
Mound Place / ¹

Bryan Rennie is a graduate student in the department of theology and religious studies at the faculty of divinity of the University of Edinburgh. He is currently in the final year of his doctoral research and is completing a thesis on the rationality of Mircea Eliade's radical pluralism. He has previously published an article on Kali, in the journal of religious studies of the university of Patiala, and book reviews of Wendy Doniger's Other Peoples' Myths and Samuel Levin's Metaphorical Worlds, in Style. He currently has two articles on Eliade, "The Meaning of Implicit Religion and the Implicit Religion of Meaning," and "Ivan Strenski's Support for Mircea Eliade's Theory of Myth" under consideration by the Journal of Religion and Religion respectively.

"Anti-Judaism and Anti-Historicism in Eliade's Writings," a paper written by Adriana Berger and presented on her behalf at the American Academy of Religion Annual Meeting in New Orleans in November of 1990 continues the attack on Eliade's political and personal history made in her article of 1989, "Fascism and Religion in Romania." (Annals of Scholarship, 6 no.4, (1989):455-465.) Despite its questionable relevance to the significance of Eliade's work as a historian of religion, this attack should not go unanswered, especially after its airing at such a prestigious gathering. Although I am not myself a reader of Romanian and thus cannot check all of Berger's references, I am familiar with much of the material relating to Eliade's thought and history and believe that I can give an adequate assessment of the argument and much of the detail given in Berger's articles. In both these articles, for example, Berger makes much of the British Foreign Office material relating to Eliade's posting at the Romanian Legation in London in 1940 and the suspicions of the British Government concerning his political sympathies. These documents are preserved at the Public Records Office in London and I have been able to inspect them and assess the degree to which they support Berger's conclusions and the picture they give of that period of Eliade's life. As to the other material, I can do no better than to refer the reader to Eliade's own Autobiography vol.II, chs. 15, 16, and 17, the relevant sections of the Journals vol.I, and to Ricketts, Mircea Eliade: the Romanian Roots, especially chs. 22, 24, and 27, which deal quite openly and clearly with Eliade's perhaps misguided nationalism and his anti-democratic tendencies. Also worthy of note in this context is the article by Seymour

Cain, "Mircea Eliade, the Iron Guard, and Romanian Anti-Semitism," in the Jewish journal, Midstream, 35 (1989):27-31.

Before the AAR Berger claimed that "official biographies" make "a deliberate effort to conceal" Eliade's "collaboration with the Iron Guard and Romania's Nazi governments." ("Anti-Judaism," p.13) This must refer to Ricketts' volumes as the only biography in the English language. Her earlier article was actually a review article focused on the second volume of Eliade's Autobiography and on Ricketts' work. In it she has made a more direct attack on Ricketts' contribution, complaining that he "begins with Eliade's childhood and early youth rather than with a survey of the historical and cultural climate from which Eliade emerged." (462) In order to avoid this type of criticism allow me to give a brief synopsis of the political situation in which Eliade found himself prior to his "exile" in Paris. Romania had gained its independence only following the first World War in 1918 and had subsequently been governed as a monarchy. In the turmoil of inter-war Europe, dominated by the rise of German and Italian fascism to the West and Russian communism to the East, Romanian nationalism had given birth to the "Legion of the Archangel Michael," a movement founded by Cornelia Zelia Codreanu and his father in 1927. Although explicitly committed to a religious and spiritual renovation of the Romanian people this movement was capable of overt violence and was responsible for the assassination of the Romanian Prime Minister, I. G. Duca, in 1933. Codreanu was at the time cleared of complicity in that crime. The Legion spawned a para-military organisation and was soon given the name "Iron Guard."

Threatened from all sides, the monarchy under King Carol II imposed a fascist inspired dictatorship in February of 1938, with Patriarch Miron as President and Armand Calinescu as minister of the interior. Together they set out to crush their popular rival, the Iron Guard. On the grounds of slander against the Romanian scholar, Nicolae Iorga, Codreanu was arrested and imprisoned for six months. This was soon increased to ten years at hard labour and eventually, in November of that year, the King and Calinescu ordered his execution. Other Legionary leaders, and their intellectual supporter, Eliade's friend and mentor, Nae Ionescu, were arrested in April.

To quote Ricketts at this point,

Between January 1937 and the imposition of the royal dictatorship in February 1938, Eliade gave open and enthusiastic support, through his periodical writings, to the Legionary movement. Because of the eight or ten explicitly pro-Legionary articles he wrote in this period of slightly more than a year, and because of the close association with Nae Ionescu who had been a Legionary supporter (though he was never a member) since late 1933, Eliade became suspect in the eyes of the government. (op. cit. p.882. This is hardly seeking to conceal Eliade's connection with the Legion.)

In mid-June of 1938 Eliade's house was searched and papers were taken away, mainly correspondence in English from scholars such as Ananda Coomaraswamy and Raffaele Pettazzoni who were contributing to Eliade's journal of Comparative Religion, Zalmoxis. Eliade himself managed to evade arrest by retiring to the country after an anonymous telephone call warning him of the impending search. General M. M. Condeescu, the president of the Society of Romanian Writers, and related to Eliade through his first wife, Nina, contacted Calinescu, who assured him that there were no accusations against Eliade, who accordingly returned to Bucharest. However, on July 14th his house was raided by the ^{Siguranta} ~~Securitate~~ and Eliade was taken to their headquarters for questioning. He was held there for three weeks and told that he could leave as soon as he signed a "declaration of dissociation" from the Iron Guard. Eliade refused to do so on the grounds that to dissociate himself from this popular movement at that time was to dissociate himself from his entire generation. In the first week of August he was transferred to the internment camp at Miercurea Ciucului where many other Legionary supporters were being held. Eliade was treated relatively well; despite having to sleep on the floor of a permanently lighted cell at the ^{Siguranta} ~~Securitate~~ H.Q. for three weeks, he was not actually tortured. It seems likely that Calinescu's regime were primarily interested in him as a spokesman of the Romanian youth. He was 31 at the time and his popularity had been well established by the publication of his best-selling novel, Maitreyi four years earlier. Thus his dissociation from the Legion would have been a useful propaganda coup for the royal dictatorship, of which Eliade did not fully approve, mainly because of its acceptance of Western, fascist ideology.

When Eliade began coughing blood in October of that year it seems equally clear that that government did not want his death in internment for exactly the same reasons. Fearing tuberculosis they had him transferred to a clinic at Moroeni. As it transpired the blood was from a ruptured vein in his throat, a relatively minor condition brought on by excessive coughing, in turn caused by incipient pleurisy, which could easily have developed into T.B. had the government not acted so quickly. He was given a clean bill of health and on November 12th, almost four months after his arrest, he was simply released. However, his employment at Bucharest University as the assistant of Nae Ionescu was lost and Eliade was without work. For some time he worked at the Society of Romanian Writers, but the unexpected death of General Condeescu in the spring of 1939 removed his "protector." He still had friends, however, and Prof. Alexandru Rosetti prevailed upon Constantin Giurescu, the minister for propaganda of the Carol regime, to send Eliade to Britain to work for the Romanian Legation there in the office of Press and Propaganda. It is worthy of note that this same Giurescu who helped Eliade later enjoyed some favour under the communist Ce^ușescu government.

Eliade and Nina set out for London in early April and it is at this point that the documents kept at the Public Records Office begin to be relevant. Unfortunately, there are no records of diplomatic appointments kept by the British Foreign Office for the year of 1940. The documents referred to by Berger as revealing that "the inclusion of his name among the names at the Romanian Legation raised objections from the British Foreign Office" ("Anti-Judaism," p.9. "Fascism and Religion," p.459, n.9) no longer exist. The index of records (see appendix) does list these files (T7026/318/383), but only as referring to Eliade as "on the staff of the Romanian Legation," with no mention of any objections to this. The other file to which Berger refers (T6561/1522/378) is a later file referring to his visa for Portugal. This explains why Berger refers to these files but does not quote them.

Since his arrival at the Romanian Legation in London on the 15th of April, 1940 Eliade's diplomatic status had not been recognised by the British Government. Unfortunately the actual reasons given for this refusal of recognition are not given in any of the documents preserved in the Public Records Office. There are, however, several possible explanations. His recent incarceration as a sympathiser of the Legion of the Archangel Michael is not the least among these. But there are others. Although Viorel Virgil Tilea was not appointed as Minister until February 1st, 1939 he, and other members of the Legation under him, had been in Britain for some years and their loyalties were assured, or at least known. Tilea himself had been President of the Anglo-Romanian Society in Romania and along with D. Mateescu, for example, was regarded as zealously anglophile. New arrivals, favoured by the current regime, were automatically regarded with suspicion. The very fact that they had been appointed to the Legation after the establishment of the fascist inspired royal dictatorship was enough to connect them with anti-British sympathies. And yet it was this very fascist/royalist dictatorship which had had Eliade incarcerated for four months. It should be noted that both the regime which imprisoned Eliade and the movement which he was imprisoned for refusing to disown are now called fascist.

King Carol abdicated in 1940 and General Ion Antonescu and Horia Sima declared a "National-Legionary" state. Tilea was recalled from his position as Romanian Minister in London but refused to return. Thereafter all Romanians who continued to show allegiance to the Legation under the acting Chargé d'Affaires, Radu Florescu, were eventually seen by some as those who "threw in their lot with the Iron Guard by remaining on the Romanian Legation under M. Florescu."¹ Florescu was evidently regarded with deep suspicion and a Foreign Office note of 21st of September, 1940 reads, "we must request his removal as soon as M. Stoica takes up his duties."² However, Florescu's removal was never effected. On the first of September, 1940, Eliade's appointment at the Legation in London ceased and in mid-September he and his wife and several other Romanians moved to Cambridge to escape the Blitz. Shortly thereafter he was appointed Secrtaire Presse at the Romanian Legation in neutral Portugal.³

However, while Eliade's application for an exit permit was still under consideration the suspicion of his political sympathies surfaced. When six British subjects were arrested by "Iron Guard Police" in Romania and brutally treated and tortured, the possibility arose of arresting some Romanians in direct retaliation.⁴ Messrs Treacy, Anderson, Young, Brassier, Miller, and Clark presented accounts to the Foreign Office which indicate that during five days of detention they were significantly ill-treated by the Iron Guard although the official civil authorities showed them proper respect.⁵

Mr. P. J. Dixon of the Foreign Office wrote to Sir Norman Kendal at New Scotland Yard on the 4th of October, 1940 that when we heard of the first arrests of British subjects in Romania last week, M.I.5 were asked to produce a list of suitable Romanians in this country for possible arrest as a retaliatory measure. M.I.5 finally admitted that they were unable to produce any names since their card index of Romanians had unfortunately been destroyed by hostile action. They added that so far as they knew there were very few undesirable Romanians in the country and that a good many of them were Jews.

I then approached New Scotland Yard, who have now produced a list of eleven possible candidates. I have since spoken to Mr. Howe who is dealing with the matter. He says that very little is known about these people but he hopes to produce further details by Monday. I asked him to bear the following points in mind:-

- (a) We would not wish to arrest any Jews;
- (b) It would be useful to know if any of the candidates are known to be pro-British, since it would be a mistake to arrest them;

(c) The ideal candidate would be persons against whom something is known, particularly if it concerned anti-British activities.⁶

Eliade was not included on this particular list, which was made up of businessmen and women and excluded all diplomatic staff. Evidently the government was taking the standard quid pro quo approach and seeking to arrest only civilians, rather than to expose their own diplomatic staff in Romania to the danger of retaliatory arrest. However, the Romanian legation included several people, like Eliade, whose status was not recognised. Although he was listed as an "official in active service of the Legation" attached to the Press and Propaganda Office by Radu Florescu in a document of 28th of October, 1940, when Florescu called on Lord Dunbar on the 2nd December he was told that it was impossible to place Eliade on the Diplomatic List.⁷ Florescu continued quite strenuously to try to obtain Eliade's inclusion on the Diplomatic List, but to no avail.

Sir Reginald Hoare, head of the British Mission in Bucharest, had telegraphed Dixon on the 7th of October to say that the "arrest of any six Romanian nationals merely [as] hostage would in no way strengthen my hand." On the bottom of this telegram, which is preserved at the Public Records Office, P. L. Rose, Dixon's immediate junior at the Foreign Office, has written "I still think we might arrest perhaps one or two hangers-on at the legation - such as M. Eliade who is known to have Iron Guard sympathies: it would evidently be useless to do six indiscriminate arrests." Dixon, however, adds to this, "I doubt whether, in the light of the considerations adduced by Sir R. Hoare, it is worth pursuing this question."⁸ Yet the very fact that he had been considered for such retaliatory arrest would ensure that Eliade would never be accorded diplomatic status. Berger has made some political meat of the application of this term, "hanger-on," to Eliade ("Anti-Judaism," p.9, "Fascism and Religion," p.459.). However, the Foreign Office used the term even for British citizens attached to their Legation in Romania, quite legitimately, but without diplomatic status.

Dixon's recommendation notwithstanding, the question of Eliade's possible arrest was pursued. A note from Commander Croghan of Naval Intelligence Division which considers the attitudes and sympathies of several members of the Romanian Legation indicates that this option was being kept open.⁹ It is this same Croghan who describes the telegram cited by Berger in both articles. In this telegram, which itself is not extant, Eliade reportedly denounces one Dimancescu of the Romanian Legation as Anglophile, and requests that he (Eliade) be appointed in the latter's stead. He also is said to have "added to his message the Romanian equivalent of 'Heil Hitler.'" ("Fascism and Religion," p.459, "Anti Judaism," p.10.) These events are quite possible, and quite explicable. Several of the members of the Legation were actively Anglophile, as we have seen, and were seeking to continue to be paid by their government for the privilege of remaining in Britain with no intention of serving their government. Some people might consider this "deserving" of denunciation. The government of the royal dictator, Carol, had actually been overthrown by General Antonescu, with the backing of the Iron Guard and considerable popular support, and recognition of the

"conducator" was a condition of loyalty to the current government. It seems that Croghan's informant in this matter was Dimancescu himself, who was evidently motivated by fear for his employment and fear of returning to his own country. The former fear seems to have had grounds as he is not mentioned in a list of salaried members of the Legation sent to the Foreign Office in October and it appears that he may have indeed been replaced by Eliade. However, in the same file which refers to this telegram Dixon said of Eliade, "There is considerable disagreement as to his sympathies and a minute has just reached us from the P.I.D. urging that he is a man who might be useful to us."¹⁰ One Captain Campeanu, who is also mentioned in the N.I.D. document, left no such doubt in the minds of British Intelligence. He was arrested by M.I.5 on the 7th of November and incarcerated in Pentonville Prison.¹¹ He was finally released only when his transport out of Britain had been assured on the 28th of March, 1941.¹² Eliade, on the other hand, although clearly thought to be connected to the Iron Guard, was viewed rather differently. Specifically, he was known to be anti-German and thus potentially useful to the British Government.¹³ Mr. Philip B. B. Nichols, Dixon's immediate senior at the Foreign Office, wrote concerning a discussion he had had with members of the Romanian Legation on the 28th of September, 1940,

I asked what was the position of M. Eliade, concerning whom we had a request from Prof. Mitrani that we should facilitate his departure. M. Styrcea said that M. Eliade was an intellectual with Iron Guard leanings. He had written a book on Yogi in India. He thought it possible that if he returned to Romania he might well become closely identified with Iron Guard activities.

On October 1st, 1940 Nichols further asked Tilea about the possible return to Romania of Eliade.

M. Tilea made it plain that he hoped it would be possible for H. M. Government to refuse facilities for the return of any of his Romanian personnel. His reason was that if we facilitated the departure of M. Eliade, the Romanian government would then inquire how it was not possible for eg. Captain Iliescu and M. Styrcea to return; and he was strongly of the opinion that these two latter would be of more use in this country.¹⁴

In another Naval Intelligence document Eliade is mentioned in a list of Romanian Legation personnel who would require passage out of Britain. Everyone listed, it states with the exception of M. Eliade, are anxious for their departure to be postponed as long as possible...Captain Iliescu...is known to be very pro-British; he therefore fears that he will be killed, if he returns to Romania. M. Eliade is an intellectual, to some extent a supporter of the Iron Guard, and is willing to return to Romania.¹⁵

Professor Mitrani, referred to by Mr. Nichols above, was then at Balliol College, Oxford as a Fellow of the Royal Institute of International Affairs. According to a note from Mr. Dixon he "frequently assured us that Eliade is a friend," but his word alone could not be relied upon in such matters of diplomacy.¹⁶ Beginning in late September 1940 Mitrani made several polite requests on Eliade's behalf for permission to leave the country, but was equally politely refused by Philip Nichols, initially in deference to Tilea's tacit request, but eventually quite truthfully because the U.K. to Lisbon service was over-subscribed and seats were being given to people on important government business.

Although pressure was still being brought to bear from Rose in the Foreign Office, from Mr. White of M.I.5, and particularly from Dimancescu, to detain Eliade, Dixon and Nichols were not convinced. "It will be seen that the suggestion is that to allow Eliade to return to Romania will be dangerous for the loyal Romanians remaining in this country," wrote Mr. Nichols, having considered the others' arguments. However, he continued, "I do not myself believe there is much in this, particularly if Eliade stays in Lisbon." It was eventually decided, in response to some pressure from the Romanian government, to allot two seats for Eliade and his wife on the Bristol to Lisbon service on the 9th of February, at least four months after he had made his first moves to leave the country.¹⁷ At this time Dimancescu wrote to the Foreign Office suggesting that if they wished to delay Eliade's departure further, they could simply make one seat only available to him on the flight. Eliade would not leave his wife behind and so would be prevented from leaving the country, whilst the British government would be seen to have fulfilled their political obligations.¹⁸ I believe this speaks for itself as regards Eliade's loyalty to his wife, and as a condemnation of Dimancescu's underhand tactics, probably inspired by the loss of his salary. The British government did not act on his recommendation.

The members of the British Legation to Romania were in the process of withdrawing, a state of war having been declared between the two countries effective from 7th December, 1940. Under such conditions the British government was responsive to requests concerning the movements of Romanian Legation members to avoid retaliation impeding the movement of their own diplomats. On the 13th of November Dixon wrote to a Mr. McCombe of the treasury that "unless and until relations are broken off with Romania, it seems to us that members of the Romanian Legation must be treated in these matters as representatives of any other neutral government."¹⁹

Despite Radu Florescu's petitions and despite Eliade's appointment as Secrtaire Presse to the Press and Propaganda Office in Lisbon, the British Government never did acknowledge Eliade as having diplomatic status. Florescu tried sometimes dubious means to ensure Eliade's diplomatic recognition, at one time simply writing that "M. Eliade who according to my previous communication has been granted diplomatic privilege," when this was not so.²⁰ It is noteworthy that even Tilea joined in the voices speaking out for Eliade's departure and invoking the latter's "tuberculosis" as grounds for granting an exit permit.²¹ However, the initial suspicions of Military Intelligence, fuelled by Dimancesu's protestations, had never been allayed. Thus when Eliade presented himself at the airport in Bristol claiming diplomatic status, carrying a courier's passport stamped "diplomatique" but not signed by the relevant British authorities, and carrying a diplomatic bag, he was treated by the Security Control Officer as something of a fraud. Military Intelligence, whose job it is to act on suspicions, were suspicious that Eliade would leave the country with sensitive documents and had ordered in advance that all his belongings be thoroughly searched. The Romanian Legation, in fact the whole Romanian Government, were treating Eliade as a bona fide member of the Legation and of diplomatic status. One wonders whether Florescu had actually admitted to Eliade his failure to secure the Foreign Office's recognition, although Tilea claimed that he had warned Eliade not to carry any couriers.²² It is hardly surprising then that an embarrassing incident ensued.

Eliade, considering himself to be a member of the Legation, was incensed at being stripped and searched, and thought the refusal by the Security Control Officer to allow him to carry his diplomatic bag out of the country without search to be a breach of protocol. He evidently complained bitterly to his home government. On the 13th of February the Foreign Office received a telegram from Sir Reginald Hoare, the third paragraph of which read,

It appears that Mr. Eliade who, according to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, is cultural attaché of the Romanian Legation and bearer of a diplomatic passport was most rigorously searched at Bristol airport a few days ago and [the] diplomatic bag which he was carrying was returned to the Legation. It is obvious that any repetition of this treatment will lead to reprisals here.²³

Evidently the Romanian Government were consistently insisting on Eliade's diplomatic status at the highest level. The British Government were just as consistently refusing to recognise it and immediately replied to Sir Reginald that the facts are as follows:-

Mr. Eliade was not, as has been claimed, cultural attaché to the Romanian Legation in London and had no diplomatic status, a request by the Romanian Chargé d'Affaires to have him placed on the Diplomatic List having twice been refused. On being questioned at the airport, Mr. Eliade first claimed that he was Press Attaché, but subsequently admitted that this was not so. A place was reserved for him on the aeroplane to Lisbon at the urgent request of the Romanian Government, but no prior notification was received that he was to carry a diplomatic bag. An examination of his courier's passport and of his ordinary passport showed that the Legation had not complied with the regulations regarding temporary couriers with which all Missions in London are fully acquainted. The Security Control Officer accordingly invited him to obtain his Legation's confirmation of his bona fides. Mr. Eliade refused to return to London for this purpose, but stated that he would burn his bag. The S.C.O. refused to allow this, and Mr. Eliade then handed in the bag for return to the Romanian Legation and it was duly returned to them. It will be clear from the above that the diplomatic bag was not taken away from Mr. Eliade and that the incident was due entirely to his not possessing diplomatic status and to the failure of the Legation to obey the regulations regarding temporary couriers.²⁴

Thus the British Government justified its actions without breach of protocol, ensuring Eliade's departure from Britain without any possibility of his transporting sensitive information, and forestalling, as far as possible, any direct retaliatory action against British diplomats still in Romania. This was in fact successful and the British Legation left Romania without serious incident on the 15th of February, after which date all diplomatic relations with Romania ceased. Eliade states that his first knowledge of the severance of diplomatic relations came on the evening of February 10th, the same day he flew to Lisbon (Autobiography vol.II, p.89.)

Such an action was not without risk, however, and a further telegram from the U.S. Ambassador in Bucharest on the 14th of March again refers to the incident.

Our contact with the authorities concerned make it clear that the suspicion is hardening that the British authorities are not putting themselves out to provide places on planes to Lisbon for the remaining members of the Romanian Legation and their families who wish to leave. This coupled with a smouldering resentment over the treatment reported accorded to a member of the Legation and his family who departed before the British Minister left here may lead to serious misunderstandings and consequences. The report of the official in question has been received from Lisbon and states that both he and his family were stripped and searched and their possessions upset and thrown about, and a bag of diplomatic correspondence taken away from him. The attitude of the Romanian authorities is that Sir Reginald Hoare and the large party of British who accompanied him were permitted to depart on the personal pledge of the British Minister that every effort would be made to facilitate the departure of all members of the Romanian Legation in London who wished to leave.²⁵

There is possibly a clash of styles of diplomacy here between the British who proceeded very cautiously and correctly, "by the book," and the Romanians who seemed to consider a certain amount of bluff and bluster, exaggeration and occasional downright lies, to be the normal stuff of foreign relations. The diplomatic necessity of presenting the facts in the light most favourable to one's own government causes occasional questionable statements, such as the Foreign Office's claim above that "the diplomatic bag was not taken away from Mr. Eliade" when it obviously was, and their refusal to recognise that he was secrtaire presse to the Legation in Lisbon. That Eliade may have exaggerated the treatment he received on his departure from Britain is hardly damning evidence.

That the suspicions which fell upon Eliade were finally unfounded seems to be indicated by the pattern of events which followed upon his departure from London. There is no evidence that the Legation staff who remained in Britain suffered any persecution at his instigation. Eliade only once again visited Romania and there is no evidence that he was particularly highly regarded by or involved with the increasingly fascist regime, or with the Iron Guard. Otherwise he did remain in Portugal until the end of the war as Nichols had hoped, when his break with Romanian politics was final. Radu Florescu was allowed to remain in Britain, despite the low opinion in which he had been held, when he offered his services, "in the matter of pursuing an activity controlled by your institutions which aims at the re-birth of the Romanian nation in self-determination with Great Britain's help and wisdom."²⁶ Evidently the suspicion with which he was regarded and which had fallen on Eliade by association was eventually dispelled. Even the Iron Guard, initially suspected to be "merely German tools" of whom General Antonescu was "completely the prisoner,"²⁷ were regarded with less suspicion. Following further intelligence, including the interception of Guardist literature en route for Detroit, U.S.A., they were seen rather as a dangerous, over-emotional, 17

popular and religious movement whose nationalism occasioned an inherent anti-German tendency and thus British Intelligence "suggests that attempts should be made in Romania at securing the adherence of the Iron Guard."²⁸ Of course the violent anti-semitic atrocities of which the Iron Guard were guilty occurred some time after Eliade had left the country and he cannot be realistically seen to share any culpability in respect of such actions. When the Iron Guard assassinated Nicolae Iorga, to whom Berger refers as "the anti-semite, Iorga ("Anti-Judaism," p.6.) in November, 1940 Eliade deemed them to have "nullified the religious meaning of the 'sacrifice' made by the Legionaries executed under Carol and had irreparably discredited the Iron Guard." (Autobiography vol.II p.69.) Also, the fact that after the execution of C. Z. Codreanu, his father established an alternative Legionary movement in opposition to Horia Sima's Iron Guard suggests a change in the nature of the Guardist movement with which some of its original leaders, let alone possible sympathizers, could not tolerate. The British historian, Seton-Watson, originally recognised that Eliade was pro-British although a sympathiser of this "milder" wing of the Guard. Under the influence of Dimancescu and in the increasing paranoia of an embattled nation he later became profoundly suspicious of Eliade as a potential spy. However, this does seem unlikely, even though any descriptions of war damage which Eliade sent back from Britain to Romania certainly could have been used as propaganda, whether or not this was his intent.

Although these documents do not give hard evidence either way about Eliade's connection with the Guardist movement, circumstantial evidence; the fact that the British did not see fit to arrest him; their eventual reconciliation with Radu Florescu, who was likewise under suspicion; the fact that Eliade remained in Portugal; and the possible alternative explanations, serves to minimise the significance of any such connection.

One conclusion which can be drawn from this inspection of the available information is inescapably that Berger has been strongly biased in her treatment and presentation. She has referred to Foreign Offices files which, although listed in the index, are no longer extant and which thus cannot provide any real evidence. (T6561/1522/378; T7026/318/383) She has quoted several references ~~the~~^{to} Eliade's being "a member of the Iron Guard" without reporting that the same sources admit that there was "considerable disagreement as to his sympathies," (N.10 above.) and, in fact, she can adduce no hard evidence that Eliade ever was a member of the Guard. She has made statements which are completely unsupportable, such as; "Eliade was detained in England because of his political activities on behalf of the Iron Guard and also of Nazi Germany." ("Fascism and Religion," p.459, "Anti-Judaism," p.9.) This is clearly not the case; Eliade was detained in Britain originally at the request of V. V. Tilea and later because of suspicions that were never confirmed of his anti-British propagandising. She has failed to recognise even the possibility that Eliade's actions could be more easily accounted for by his loyalty to the country of his birth than by any malice against anyone. While we must guard against the situation which Seymour Cain reports in Romania of Eliade being "idolised by the public, and no real criticism of his work is allowed," we must just as zealously guard against personal antipathies being allowed to bias our presentation of the facts. To baldly state that "Eliade was not a Cultural attaché (or Secretary) as he had stated in interviews, diaries, and in his Autobiography," ("Anti-Judaism," p.9) is to attempt to make a liar out of Eliade by wholly ignoring the fact that he was appointed to the Press and Propaganda Office of the Lisbon Legation, a fact which Berger accepted in her earlier article. ("Fascism and Religion," p.460) Berger has completely failed to indicate any actual activity in which Eliade might have been involved which might justify the slur of "anti-Judaism." Seymour Cain's article on exactly this topic is a level-headed contribution to this debate, and he makes the clear statement that he "never saw the slightest sign of anti-Semitism in [Eliade's] works or in his person. He always impressed me as a good man as well as a great creative scholar, and above all, as a treasurable human being." ("Mircea Eliade, the Iron Guard, and Romanian Anti-Semitism," p.27.) I should hope that such a personal assessment is actually more weighty evidence than such a tendentious rendition of "factual history" as Berger present us in her papers. Finally, when Berger writes that Ricketts distorts Eliade's articles and quotes them out of context ("Fascism and Religion," p.463) I can only assume after an inspection of this data that she is wrongly assuming Ricketts to use the method which she so clearly applies herself.

● Cînd scrii în șase limbi, nu prea ai o limbă a ta

Gabriela Adameșteanu: Cîți ani a-vei cînd ai plecat din România?

Ioan Petru Cullanu: 22. Ca revista voastră.

G.A.: Ești probabil singurul care ai plecat la vîrsta aceasta, care îți permite să aparți mai profund lumii noi în care ai intrat.

I.P.C.: Unii au plecat și mai devreme. De exemplu, Andrei Codrescu. El este și un mare scriitor, dar este și extraordinar de apreciat ca reporter în Statele Unite. Și ca poet este foarte bun, dar succesul nu vine de la poezie, ci de la faptul că are foarte des emisiuni pentru National Public Radio, post foarte ascultat de intelectuali. Radioul de stat din Statele Unite nu prea are bani (doar radiourile private au fonduri serioase), însă el face programe de foarte bună calitate. Și Andrei Codrescu e unul dintre garanții acestei calități. Cu mine este altceva. Eu scriu în șase limbi. Cînd scrii în șase limbi, nu prea ai o limbă a ta!

G.A.: Ai continuat să scrii literatură în anii aceștia?

I.P.C.: Am scris, am intrerupt. N-am avut, de fapt, o limbă în care să scriu.

G.A.: Cînd începi să scrii într-o limbă o pierzi pe cealaltă?

I.P.C.: Cred că da. Trebuie să hotărăști bine în ce limbă scrii. Eu am plecat din Italia, deci limba italiană o stăpînesc foarte bine, dar doar în ultima vreme am scris în italiană: pentru că e cu totul altfel cînd scrii în pierdere și altfel cînd îți se cere să scrii ceva. Mi-am făcut două doctorate în Franța, imi scriu cărțile științifice în franceză, dar cu literatura am sovăit foarte mult. Pînă la urmă am început să scriu în franceză, dar am publicat în Italia. Lucrurile nu merg întotdeauna așa cum te planuiești. De fapt, nu merg niciodată cum te planuiești.

G.A.: Ai încetat să scrii în limba română imediat după ce ai plecat?

I.P.C.: Nu, nu. Am scris în română diverse romane pe care le-am aruncat. Sînt fericit că am făcut așa: mi-am dat seama ce șansă extraordinară ai cînd nu există o șupapă imediată unde să-ți arunci ce scrii.

G.A.: Este o șansă?

I.P.C.: Da. Mă gîndesc că uneori scriitorii foarte prolifici au avut neșansa de a putea publica totul.

G.A.: Te gîndești și la Mircea Eliade, la o parte din proza pe care a scris-o în țară?

I.P.C.: Da. Numai că era cu totul altă situație. Erau multe cereri din partea editurilor.

G.A.: Dar nu toți scriitorii epocii scriau la fel de repede o carte. Chiar el a mărturisit că o regretă, în LES PROMESSES DE L'EQUINOXE.

I.P.C.: Partea fantastică din proza lui Eliade rămîne, în orice caz, foarte interesantă. Or, în jurnale, el afirmă că cel mai rapid a scris anumite proze fantastice. Deci, nu cred că de vină e neapărat viteza.

G.A.: Tu scrii repede?

I.P.C.: Nu. Într-o vreme scriam foarte repede. Dar povestirile, totdeauna mi-au cerut timp. Ele cresc așa, puțin câte puțin, ca niște plante. Probabil că miile intram în minte cînd mă apuc să scriu și mă dădău colo. Cam știu ce este, adică, cînd mă apuc de scris pînă nu știu. Dar asta înseamnă că nu poți scrie prea multe.

● Am fost, cu timp, în România...

G.A.: Ai urmărit ce s-a petrecut în acest timp în România?

I.P.C.: Am urmărit cu tot mai mare durere, încă din primăvară. Sau din iarnă. La început n-am avut nici o suspiciune. Am fost cu toții duși foarte bine de nas de către cine a organizat marele șocariu pentru Televiziune. Nu?

G.A.: În primele luni ale anului trecut am trăit (ca atîta altă lume) cu impresia că Televiziunea noastră „cea bună” s-a stricat după două săptămîni. Mai tîrziu m-am gîndit că se poate că totul să fi început chiar bu prima imagine.

● Într-o vreme scriam foarte repede...

I.P.C.: Da. Numai că acest scenariu fusese studiat foarte bine. S-a spus că a fost cea mai reușită și spectaculoasă operație K.G.B. după retragerea armatelor din Afganistan. Evident, K.G.B.-ul are o tradiție destul de serioasă de succese, mai ales în străinătate. Înăuntrul Uniunii Sovietice se pare că sau cam pierde teren sau studiază scenariile foarte... neliniștitoare.

G.A.: Totuși, lumea a ieșit spontan în stradă. Și aceasta este și teza României Mari: că nu a existat o revoluție.

I.P.C.: Nu știu. O fi specificul na-țional... că dictatura lui Ceaușescu formează specificul românesc, atunci ceva sînge sigur că era necesar. Dar acestea sînt doar ipoteze.

G.A.: Sînt puțin jignită cînd pui totul pe seama K.G.B.-ului. Cum, Securitatea română nu putea organiza
și singură totul?

I.P.C.: Proștia Securității române este epocală, de o profunzime nemai-văzută.

G.A.: De ce trebuia o tranziție atît de spectaculoasă, cînd în toate cele-lalte țări din Est nu a existat nici un mort?

I.P.C.: Eu nu știu acum cîte vic-time au fost prevăzute, dar cred că o anume vărsare de sînge era prevăzută.
Dacă nu aveai sînge, trebuia să-l faci să curgă. Doar țările din Est n-au avut nici un Ceaușescu. „Luxul” acestui numai românii și l-au permis.

G.A.: Ci, a putut fi de mare pe-neală a lui Ceaușescu, dacă într-o singură zi dintr-un dictator atîtputernic a ajuns un autostopist?

I.P.C.: Asta arată că întreaga Secu-ritate l-a lăsat baltă. El se ducea în reduțele lui, la Tîrgoviște, și acolo găsea armata instalată, dar nimeni nu-l primea. Dorin Tudorău toamă a scris un articol foarte frumos, în care spune că de fapt tot ce se întimplă (nu e ipoteza lui) în Uniunea Sovieti-că și în țările satelită, este pur și simplu un plan al K.G.B.-ului. Probabil că la un moment dat K.G.B.-ul lucrînd pe super-computere... (sînt niște mașini care costă zeci de milio-ioane de dolari și pot să-ți facă un model al lumii pentru cîteva zeci de ani sără chiar mai mult) — în timpul lui Andropov... a văzut că modelul nu ducea nicăieri. Și atunci și-au dat seama că fără a trece la o economie de plată, pierderile vor fi mai mari decît câștigul. El au dărîmat zidul, ei sau început, evident, toate mișcările în țările satelită.

G.A.: Dar nu ți se pare că acum țările satelită scapă?

I.P.C.: Îți spun drept, nu mi se pare deloc. Germania este lovitura cea mai spectaculoasă dată de sovietici. Germania intră în seama acum din consorțiul vest-european: acesta va fi prețul plătit pentru anexarea Germaniei de Est. Prețul politic, nu cele
9 miliarde de dolari, cadou făcut Uniunii Sovietice s-a.m.d. Dar politic, chiar dacă va rămîne în N.A.T.O., țese complet din umbrela occidentală, iar N.A.T.O. se va schimba complet. Deci
e o foarte mare victorie sovietică, cu Germania de Vest ieșită din programul politic comun al țărilor din Europa de Vest din cauza Germaniei de Est, din cauza partidului socialist. Se pare, acum, în momentul de față, că K.G.B.- ul nu domină situația în Uniunea So-vietică. O fi așa, n-o fi știu, nu știu.
Poate există din nou un plan diabolic.

G.A.: Doar n-o să-mi spui că K.G.B.-
ul este și la Vatra Românească?

I.P.C.: Pentru Vatra Românească ajunge Securitatea. K.G.B.-ul are a-totul merge ca pe roate în România.

I.P.C.: Sînt subțiri pe care, cu neavînd nimic de-a face cu politica, nu le știu. Dar pot să-mi dau cu pre-supusul. Pentru o vreme era intermediar în problema Orientului Mijlociu. România a fost locul unde emi-sarii secreți ai Organizației Palesti-nense puteau trimite emisarii secreți ai Israelului ș.a.m.d. Un loc unde s-au desfășurat probabil operații pe care noi nici nu le bănuim. În privința lui Iliescu, nu mi se pare că el ar avea acea poziție cheie pe care primul liberalism al lui Ceaușescu l-a asigurat-o la începutul anilor '70. Iliescu e un nou venit...

G.A.: Dar, de exemplu ce se în-tîmplă la bulgari nu-ți încurcă puțin scenariul? Ei au depășit handicapul alegerilor. Și Parlamentul lor și pre-ședintele, Jelle Jeleu, ales din opoziție, oferă mult mai multă credibilitate.

I.P.C.: Deci vrei să spui că pentru ce se întîmpla în România nu trebuia să acuzăm K.G.B.-ul, c. Securitatea zura pe care-l admiram pînă la revoluție. După care, nu-l mai admir. Din fericire, eu am cunoscut mai mult lucrurile care rămîn, decît cele care nu rămîn. Există o formulă de ro-mane din care scăpau puțin, formula lui Constantin Toiu: că poți să critici orice, dacă la un moment dat spui că a venit lumina...

G.A.: Care este în Statele Unite situația literaturii raportată la critica literară?

I.P.C.: Toată opinia asupra a oricui în viața intelectuală americană e în-cută, practic, de un singur ziar — New York Review of Books. El face timpul frumos sau timpul urât. Nu e chiar singura publicație, dar e cea mai importantă. Lucrurile care se întîmplă aici, în America — justificat sau ne-justificat — sînt cele mai importante datorită largimii pieței, economiei, a tracției pe care o au imediat în media din Europa Occidentală. Eu nu cunosc sistematic literatura americană de acum, sau, mă rog, cunosc numai cea ce mă interesează la un anumit moment. Statele Unite sînt de departe, locul cel mai interesant din lume. Singurul comparabil, oarecum prin creativitate fiind, Parisul: nu și prin întindere. Parisul e un loc interesant, dar în rest Europa nu mai are prea multe de spus. Cred.

G.A.: Lumea est-europeană se con-stituie într-o zonă de cultură aparte?

I.P.C.: Din păcate, cred că da. E o mare, tragică pierdere de timp, de oameni, de energii. Un provizorat, cum bine știneai, întins pe 50 de ani care a distrus potențialul unei întregi zone geografice.

O crimă împotriva inteligenței începută înainte de cnii interbelici.

G.A.: Există în acest moment în pu-blicațiile americane de specialitate o discuție despre Mircea Eliade: i se reproșează cu severitate anumite articole scrise în perioada '36-'37 în ziarele din România, i se reproșează anumite tăceri în memorialistica sa, referitoare la acel timp.

I.P.C.: Astăzi totul apare absurd:
o crimă împotriva inteligenței. Dacă nu mai mult. Dar poți să-ți dai se-ma cum pe atunci... cineva... chiar ca Mircea Eliade, putea să cadă în cap-cană. Totul pare că ar avea un anu-mit sens, își crease un limbaj, care dădea impresia că ar comunica stîmeu, resorturile realității într-un mod plauzibil. Cu atît mai mult, cu atît tunci foată lumea repeța aceleși lu-cruri: nu era inovația românilor.

Ideea cu evreii, care e încă în vigoare resortul motivațiilor economice. Jegionare, fusese pregătită de la început în secolului XIX. În Germania, în Franta, în Anglia mai ales. Dar, din la distanță de 50 de ani, chiar făcînd abstracție de război și de holocaust, deși nu se poate face abstracție forta aparținătoare a crimă împotriva inteligenței. Și să-ți spun, mă de parte lutat cu entuziasm venirea lui Hitler la putere. Deci, în '33, Eliade era dent un democrat. El spune că pe la '34 și-a menținut poziția, după ce a început o anumită schimbare, iar în e evident, alungarea.

G.A.: Deci a fost o alungare, dar la un moment dat? Nu a fost o ziție consecvență de la început?

I.P.C.: Nu pare. În cazul lui Eliade pare o alungare. E practic vorba de trei articole în care există nuanțe serioase de xenofobie și sovinișm. De-pre tîm, Eliade și-a afirmat în scris apare ca un antisemit.

G.A.: Prin restul vieții?

I.P.C.: Nu i se poate lua în nume era un antisemit. Dar opera lui, la

 ca Sartre, dar chiar de la cele mai mari ca Heidegger: sărăcia concep-țională, deșeele, tradiția dubioasă, a-cum apar întristătoare. Știu că asta
 o să-i jeneze pe cîțiva dintre prietenii.
 (Ride.) În Germania există un curent anti-Heidegger foarte puternic. A durat un timp pînă am fost convins.

G.A.: Era mai degrabă un scriitor?

Toți sîntem scriitori, iar teoriile științifice sînt acceptate pentru eleganța lor estetică.

G.A.: Pe Năe Ionescu?
 I.P.C.: Da. Năe Ionescu era un spirit foarte versatil. Și fără îndoială nu era un antisemit. Dar opera lui, la distanță de 50-60 de ani îmi apare dezbătută. De o sărăcie fantastică.

G.A.: Acest curent anti-Heidegger este legat de evenimentele biografiei lui Heidegger?

I.P.C.: N-are nici o legătură cu biografia. Dar Heidegger teologizează primar, oarecum primitiv și este un mare manipulator al limbajului. În germană sună extraordinar de simplu — chiar simplist. Complicațiile lui vin dintr-o grămadă de giubuşlucuri stilistice, asonanțe, aliterații, etimologii adevărate sau false, un întreg begaj de tropi, un joc de literat. În-dărătul lui se ascunde o sărăcie concepțională înspăimîntătoare. Niște afirmații apodictice privind originea, des-tinul Occidentului, al umanității în general. E cu atât mai inutil să le formulezi cu cit, din fericire, se do-vedesc mereu false.

I.P.C.: Toți sîntem scriitori, incluzîndu-l și pe Einstein printre noi. Nu există nici o altă disciplină. Și în știință se spune că teoriile nu sînt ac-ceptate pentru adevărul lor, ci pentru strategiile de a le face acceptate, pentru eleganța lor estetică. Dacă demonstrațiile lui Einstein n-ar fi fost elegante estetic, colegii lui matematicieni n-ar fi fost convinși de ele.

G.A.: Aici în Statele Unite se vor-bește destul de mult despre moartea literaturii.

I.P.C.: Ciberneticienii spun că la un moment dat s-ar putea ca limba-jul articulat să dispară de pe glob, înlocuit de un alt sistem de comunicare. Nu știu însă la cîte sute de mil de ani gîndim aici. Depinde foarte mult de dezvoltarea computerilor, care e extraordinară. Chiar și acum, unul dintre lucrurile cele mai intere-sante pe care le fac sînt așa-numitele lumi alternative. Deocamdată sînt cam primitive; dar cînd se vor de-volta, lată cum va fi: lei o înacă, puă niște mînuși și cu ajutorul mîstii și mînușilor ești într-o cu totul altă lume. Evident, programul îți dă lu-mea în care ești. Dar poți să îți ori-unde vrei. Și funcționezi realmente în aceea lume; adică mîinile tale, prin mînuși, sau în mîna obiectele acelei lumi, sînt obiectele, înțelegi?

I.P.C.: Da, era scăpător, intelligent, rapid. Dar poți să te miri de diferența enormă dintre el și Eliade.
 Toată publicistica lui Eliade, tot ce a scris Eliade în perioada aceea este încă interesant. Chiar cînd spune lu-cruri care îl repelă sută-lă suță pe Năe Ionescu. Sau pe Nichifor Crainică. Mie mi se pare că Eliade nu întelegea sau înțelegea cu totul altfel ce spuneau ortodoxii. De fapt, nici să nu ne mirăm, pentru că Eliade avea rădăcinile lui indiene, trebuurile lui ecclitice, importanța sexului și așa mai departe, care nu se conșugă bine cu ortodoxia. Nici chiar a unor libe-rali. Mutatis mutandis, Eliade era ca un fel de reformator. Eliade trăia frazeologia lui Năe Ionescu care sub condeul lui apare scăpătoare, plină de vitalism, de ambiguități, de lucruri

I.P.C.: Sigur, Heidegger aparține unei tradiții care dorea să înțeleagă percepțiile civilizației occidentale.
 Deja însă civilizația occidentală este o totul altfel decît o vede Heidegger în '38-'39. Și ceea ce e acum interesant în ea; lui îi scăpa cu totul:
 ar fi fost pentru el o radicală inautenticitate.

G.A.: Ce este foarte interesant în civilizația occidentală de azi?

I.P.C.: Foarte interesante sînt problemele cognitive dezbătute azi, toate cosmologice. Heidegger pune radicală autenticitate în afara dezbățerilor cosmologice, nu? Or, tocmai așa a devenit azi mai interesant, da-torită ipotezelor științifice, multipli-cărilor. Heidegger aparține unei tra-

G.A.: Unde e lumea aceea?

I.P.C.: Este în computer. Asta pune, evident, și probleme filosofice foarte interesante pentru că în fond

[redacted] spoke with IOAN PETRU CULIANU by telephone one week before CULIANU's death. During this telephone conversation CULIANU indicated to [redacted] that he had changed his locks and bought mace as he had fears for his personal safety.

[redacted] was aware of the fact that approximately one year ago persons unknown entered CULIANU's residence in Chicago and destroyed certain computer records that he maintained there.

On the day of CULIANU's murder, [redacted] office at [redacted] received several calls wanting to know if [redacted] had committed suicide and advising that IOAN CULIANU had been killed.

b6

[REDACTED] feels that [REDACTED] attacking the current Romanian regime much more vehemently than IOAN CULIANU, and therefore he could very well also be a target of individuals seeking to silence opposition to the current Romanian regime.

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] believes that Romania had many intelligence agents here in the United States when the government collapsed and that these intelligence agents were left adrift. He is of the opinion that they are now being pulled back together under [REDACTED] the execution of former leader CEAUSESCU in the recent uprisings in Romania.

b6
b7C

According to [REDACTED] ION ILIESCU is the current President of Romania and he was a member of the communist hierarchy that ruled Romania under CEAUSESCU and is probably not a proponent of democratic reform in Romania and maybe seeking through various organs of the government to suppress opposition to the current regime.

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] stated that the only group he knows of that may have made threats against IOAN CULIANU is a group known as The Sons of Avram Iancu. This is a very right-wing group that is connected to the Old Iron Guard, also known as the Romanian fascists organization whose membership is not known to [REDACTED].

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] stated that rumor among the Romanians living in the United States who are opposed to the current regime has it that [REDACTED] was upset at the murder of IOAN CULIANU and has claimed that a rogue group is responsible for his killing.

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] indicated that he is in contact with several writers who prepare articles, do interviews and publish books in cooperation with Radio Free Europe and its efforts to inform the citizens of Romania as to what is happening in their country and in the outside world.

Professor at U. of C. was slain, police say by Janet Myers and Teresa Wiltz

An autopsy on Wednesday disclosed that a professor at the University of Chicago who this month told a student he had been threatened, was a victim of murder, police said.

"We are treating this death as a homicide," said Cmdr. Fred B. Miller of the Wentworth Area detective division.

Investigators had suspected on Tuesday that the death of Ioan Culiianu, 41, a guest lecturer at the university, could have been a suicide.

As police continued their investigation, about 300 people gathered into Bond Chapel at the campus to pay their respects to Culiianu. Some sat on the floor of the chapel; others peered in from the hallway.

"When one of your closest colleagues dies very tragically in the very building you work in, [you feel] a feeling of dread and the awesomeness of life," said Clark Gilpin, dean of the School of Divinity.

Miller said Culiianu's death was still fraught with unanswered questions. He was shot about 1 p.m. Tuesday in a bathroom in the Divinity School, but there is no known motive, no suspect and no eyewitnesses.

"We have a mystery on our hands," Miller said, "and we're trying to solve it."

An autopsy performed by Medical Examiner Robert Stein answered at least one question. Because of the angle of the bullet and the fact that it entered the back of his head, suicide was ruled out, Miller said.

Because Culiianu was found alone, shot in the head and locked in a public bathroom stall, "there was a possibility of suicide," Miller said. "But we had no gun, and that really mystified us."

Detectives had theorized that one of several people who had been on the scene before police arrived could have pocketed the weapon.

But the autopsy showed the shot was fired by someone who stood above Culiianu and aimed downward, probably shooting over the wall from the next stall. A .25-caliber slug and casing were found.

The killer then escaped, apparently by running out of the bathroom and down a staircase directly across the hall. Several people heard the shot, but weren't sure what it was. A gunshot, Miller said, would be "the last thing in the world" one would expect on the university campus.

Those who heard the shot were in an office about 30 feet down the hall and could not clearly see the bathroom door.

Shortly after the shot was heard, a student found Culiianu dead in the third-floor bathroom, his arm dangling. Police have ruled out robbery as a motive because his wallet, money and other possessions were still on him.

Culiianu was a native of Romania, and students and professors speculated that his killing may have been politically motivated. Miller said police have no indication of that, but are checking his background and talking to those who knew him.

When asked whether the investigation may eventually involve other police agencies such as the FBI or Interpol, he said, "I don't rule out that possibility."

Graduate student Greg Spinner said the professor told him earlier this month that he was getting into "dangerous territory" and that "someone could kill me."

Spinner said Culiianu hinted that the danger had something to do with Romania.

Culiianu was a well-liked professor who taught the history of religion and wrote about such topics as eroticism, mysticism and witchcraft, colleagues and students said.

Some, like Keith Price, speculated the man's weekend conference on the netherworld may have angered someone. "When you delve into the scholarship of witchcraft and the unknown, some people get upset," Price said.

"He was very erudite, but he always had a humorous, ironic sense of the profane," said Floyd Knight, another Culiianu student.

At the end of the chapel service, the listeners silently filed outside into the rain. Some students clung to each other; others walked alone, their faces wet with tears.

An official memorial service will be held June 3 in Rockefeller Chapel, according to university spokesman Jonathan Kleinbard. Funeral services are pending, Kleinbard said.

Several students said they made a special trip to the chapel to try to make sense of their favorite teacher's death.

"I'm speechless," Julia Speller, a former Culiianu student, said. "It's unfair. He was such a special man."

University of Chicago President Hanna H. Gray said earlier, "Professor Culiianu was beloved by his many students and colleagues as a teacher for his contributions to the study of the history of religion, and his loss will be keenly felt."

Culiianu was born in Iasi, Romania in 1950, and left the country in his early 20s. He later received degrees from the Sorbonne in Paris and Catholic University in Milan. In 1975, he did post-doctoral work at the University of Chicago under another Romanian native, Mircea Eliade.

Miller said five detectives are working around the clock to solve the crime.

To who it may concern:

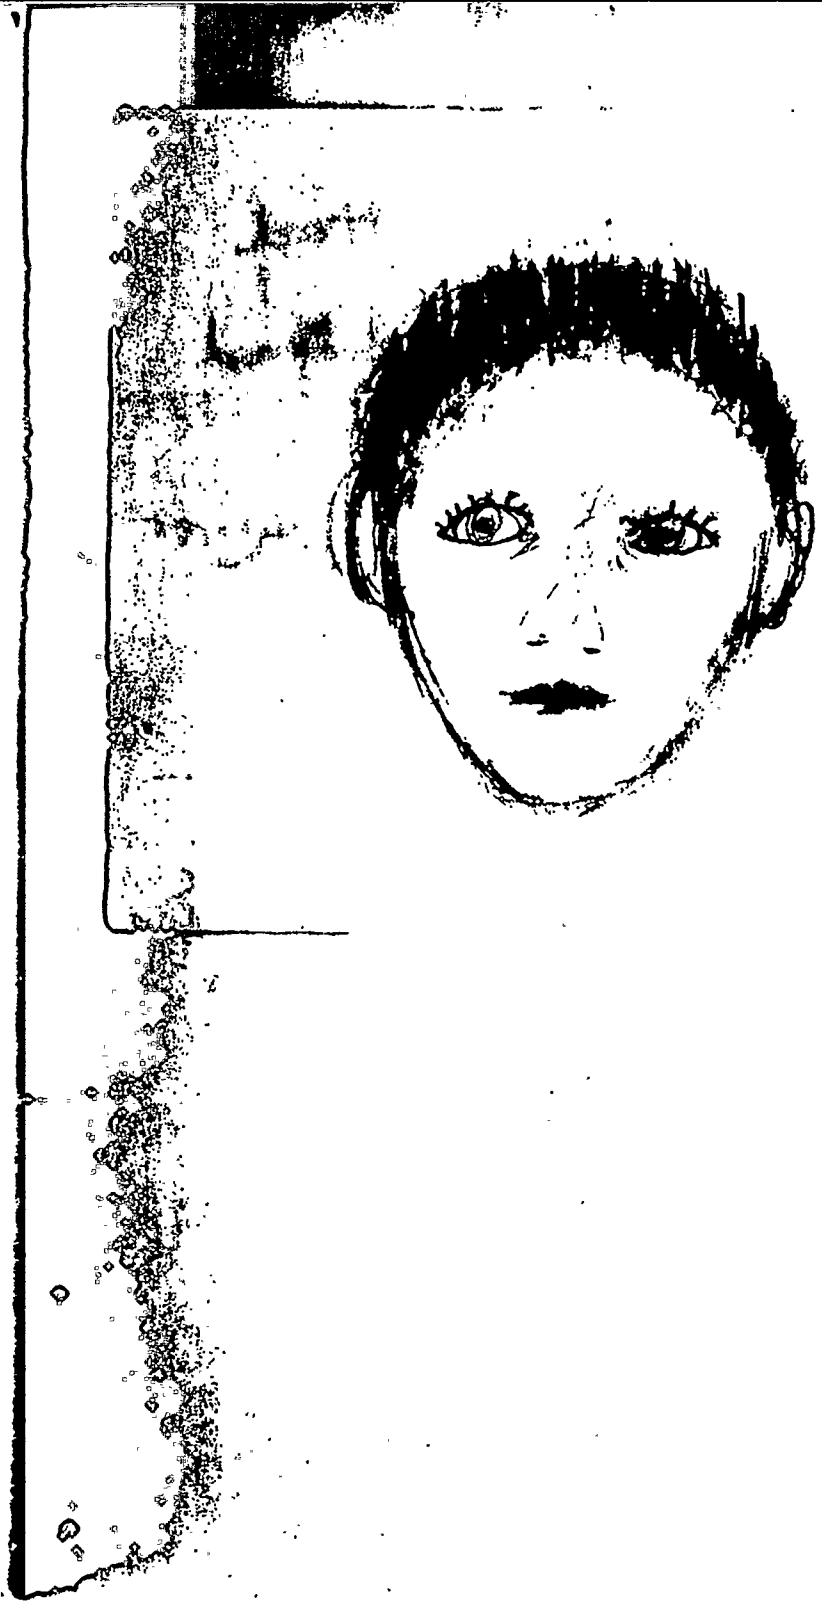

I represent a group of amateur psychics who in doing various experiments have used your unsolved (professor's) murder case as an experiment in psychometry.

Each of us worked independently and held the newspaper article, concentrating on who did it. I'm sorry that I can't tell you that I know we have come up with something that will help you, or that we know that we are accurate, because this is the 1st time we have tried this. However the people in our group are definitely psychic. And I feel certain that our clues are pertinent to the murder.

The murderer: simple drawing by ~~the~~ one student is enclosed. He was described as being a young man (probably a student), with a haircut similar to a long crew (flat on top), thin nose, thin mouth, oval or long eyes with very long eyelashes. Another student saw a young black girl about 20-21ish, round eyes, cute, her nose was not excessively broad, in fact was not prominent; her hair was worn pulled back in what appeared to be a bun and she had, we think (it wasn't written down when the image was received) bangs on her forehead. It was felt that she was a student and she had been an informant in the crime. She informed the killer where to find the professor.

Another student (of psychic abilities) began describing the same man as in the 1st description, I stopped her and showed her the drawing we had already come up with, and she expounded further: his jaw ~~was~~ was a little more square as shown in the drawing but otherwise the features were correct. This man has sandy to medium brown hair (the 1st student said that too + I forgot to include it), he has a baby face but is older than he looks. He is in his late 20's or most likely early 30's. He is short, muscular/stocky but not fat, he looks like a "DP" - peasant stock - definitely not American. In fact he looks Czech - definitely not Rumanian. His eyes are so deepset that his forehead looks protruding. His hair is coarse. He wears a brown ^{suit} jacket and there was the image of him running in and out of shadows (perhaps an ~~illegal~~ illegal alien? or someone who is often on campus but doesn't belong there). The 1st impression was that it was mob related but later there was some homosexual ~~fact~~. She felt that the black girl mentioned was not important and only more or less pointed out where the professor had gone to. But others felt you could get a clue from her. Another felt this man was CIA connected and his identity would be covered up and never disclosed.

on an ever increasing political favor. [REDACTED] personally believes CULIANU's political activities led to his murder, but could not identify any specific individual or organization he suspected. [REDACTED] noted that the political situation in Romania is very complicated and there are several major groups involved with numerous splinter factions within each of these groups.

b7C

By way of background information, [REDACTED] provided the following information. There are four major political groups in Romania which could be vaguely be called the Royalists, the Fascist, the Communists and the Democrats. In addition, there are several factions in each of these groups and these factions exist not only in Romania, but within the world wide Romanian exile community. The activities of all of these political factions have at some point been criticized by CULIANU in his articles and each had reason to desire his elimination. CULIANU was a firm believer in establishing a democratic form of government in Romania, but supported the principle that each of these groups should be allowed to present their case to the people for review and selection. He always attempted to remain fair and to present their case to the people for review and selection. He always attempted to remain fair and to present each factions position in a clear and impartial manner. Recently, CULIANU acted as one of the hosts for the visit of King Michael of Romania to the Chicago area and wrote an article on same. These acts caused many to think CULIANU was supporting the King. CULIANU was no monarchist, but felt the King's position should be known to the people. CULIANU's articles have appeared in numerous newspapers and magazines published in exile and these in turn have been smuggled into Romania where he is also well known.

b6
b7C

Romania does not have an extensive tradition of democracy and the government prior to World War II had been a constitutional monarchy under the rule of the King Michael and a limited number of his political and military bureaucrats. With the growth of the fascist movements in Europe in the 1930's, several fascist organizations came into existence in Romania. The largest of these groups was the IRON GUARD, which became an allie of Hitler, ruled the country under the Nazi occupation. At the end of the war, the country was overrun by the Russian Army and the government taken over by the communists. King Michael fled the country with a large number of monarchists and fascists to avoid arrest and execution. In addition, during the post war period several internal divisions have taken place with the Romanian Communist Party and many have fled the country. As a result of this political upheaval, all four of these factions eventually migrated to the United States or various western Europe countries. These former members of the prewar or occupational governments and their children frequently dream of the day when they can return to Romania in triumph and lead a new government. In this quest, they frequently form secret political groups which attempt to gain support within the exile community and within the country itself for their various positions.

b6

[REDACTED] described CULIANU as a very private person who had a firm belief in democracy. Though CULIANU was prolific in his writing, he seldom spoke of his private life. He was impartial when writing about a political faction and criticized all when he felt their positions to be unjust. CULIANU believed each faction should be able to present its program to the Romanian people and then allow the people to decide for themselves what type of government they wanted. His criticism of the various political factions frequently led some in each group to think he was siding with their enemies. His writings over the years caused CULIANU to develop enemies in each of the political factions.

b7C

[REDACTED] advised that due to the existence of numerous splinter groups it was impossible to identify any specific leader or provide the name or address of an existing organization. Such groups frequently are secret and come into and go out of existence regularly. [REDACTED] noted that in the new Romanian Government, there are numerous people who served in the former Communist Government of Ceausescu including his secret police. The major bonding factions which exist within all the faction is a belief in a strong central government and support for Romanian nationalism. As a result, the factions from time to time support each other on specific positions.

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] last spoke to CULIANU about two weeks before he was murdered. The telephonic conversation was primarily related to a pending publication of a CULIANU article in Meridan Magazine, wherein, he compared the activities in Romania today to that of the Ku Klux Klan in the United States. This article has since been published in the May-June, 1991 issue of Meridan Magazine.

, On 6/19/91, Page 4

b7C

Other topics discussed during this conversation included CULIANU's continued receipt of threatening communication from some unknown individual, cancellation of his planned visit to Romania and an invitation he had received to visit [REDACTED] [REDACTED] is a [REDACTED] immigrant who only recently became politically active and now claims to be associated with or representing various political factions in Romania.

b6
b7C

CULIANU was never specific concerning the nature of the threats he had received, such as what was actually threatened, how they were received, or if written in English or Romanian. [REDACTED] was under the impression that the letters were handwritten since CULIANU on one occasion indicated he thought he had identified the writer by their handwriting. CULIANU never mentioned the individuals name. [REDACTED] noted the CULIANU at first considered the threats to be amusing and laughable, but apparently began to take them seriously recently.

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] advised about two years ago, many individuals active in the Romanian-American Community, received threatening letters from an organization which identified itself as the Sons of Avram Iancu. Iancu was a very nationalistic legendary Romanian medieval historical figure. These letters are known to have been sent to individuals who did not support the Romanian government. [REDACTED] noted that CULIANU threw his letters away and did not take them seriously. CULIANU probably did the same with the recent threatening communications he received. [REDACTED] at the time had been working for [REDACTED] and turned his letter over to the organizations security officer. He later heard an interview of [REDACTED] defector, on VOA, who identified this organization as having been an arm of the Romanian Communist Party.

CULIANU's decision not to attend the June, 1991 American Romanian Academy Conference in Bucharest was the biggest surprise of their conversation. CULIANU had been planning to attend this conference for sometime as he thought it might be his last chance to see his aged mother before she died. This visit would also have been his first to Romania since he fled the country. CULIANU planned to travel to Italy to join [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] and then drive to Romania for the conference. [REDACTED] did not know if this change in plans was related to the recent threats and doubted that he was murdered to prevent him from making his presentation. [REDACTED] noted that the academy was exclusively literary in nature and his address would have been related to CULIANU's study of religion and not political in nature.

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] advised that CULIANU frequently received such threatening or intimidating communications after his articles were published. Similar letters were probably also sent to the articles publishers such as the Foreign Policy Research Institute (FPRI) who frequently finances such publications. [REDACTED] FPRI, 3615 Chesnut Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, may have information on such threatening letters. [REDACTED] indicated that CULIANU had come to the United States as a protege of Professor MIRCEA ELIADE, University of Chicago, and assumed his teaching post when he died. CULIANU apparently remained a close friend of the professor's widow and she may have some information on his threats. Mrs. CHRISTINEL ELIADE currently resides at 5711 South Woodlawn, Chicago, Illinois, (312) 363-8674.

b7C

[REDACTED] described [REDACTED] as being a Romanian exile who resides in the [REDACTED] area and operates a [REDACTED]. Though [REDACTED] had never been politically active during the Ceausescu Regime, he now claims to have great influence and numerous contacts within the various organizations that have come into existence since the revolution. [REDACTED] recalls that [REDACTED] in the past had submitted some articles for publication [REDACTED] but that they had been rejected as merely being a restatement of positions taken by the Communist Ceausescu government. As a result, [REDACTED] suspects [REDACTED] recent democratic political position. Apparently, CULIANU listened to [REDACTED] offer to visit [REDACTED] to find out what he was up to but had no real intention to making the trip.

b7C

[REDACTED] described CULIANU as having similar views to his own of the recent Romanian revolution. Both felt that no real revolution by the people had occurred, but that Ceausescu's overthrow was a coupe by one of the factions of the existing communist government. [REDACTED] cited the fact that most of the present officials served in the old communist government and many were even officers in the Romanian secret police. In addition, very few of the former secret police officials have been arrested and only a small number removed from office. The position of the new government is to continue the long standing communist policy of a strong politically controlled regime which only curtails the more oppressive policies of Ceausescu to give the appearance as being democratic. CULIANU opposed such a policy and his writings could have been considered a threat to the new regime.

In summary, [REDACTED] advised all the various Romanian political factions had reason to want CULIANU eliminated and each had the ability within the exile Romanian community in the United States to carry out the murder. [REDACTED] advised that it was his personal opinion that CULIANU's murder was probably ordered by one of the factions in Romania, but carried out by someone living in the United States or Canada. CULIANU was a perfect target for a political assignation because he was not a United States citizen, had written numerous articles considered offensive to each of the political groups, and his death would in turn curtail such activities in the future. The existing political situation and geographic logistics would probably have precluded the dispatching of an Agent from Romania to commit the murder.

b7C

[REDACTED] was unable to provide any specific individual or organization that he thought committed the murder, but felt his death may have been committed as an example to the whole Romanian American community to curtail its democratic activities. CULIANU murder was definitely cause many in the community to rethink their political positions.

THE SONS OF AVRAM IANCU

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

We, young offsprings of the noble Dacian-Roman root, who live today on the generous land of America,

A. Taking into consideration the savage attacks sponsored by Hungarians against Romanians;

B. Noticing that this campaign -- for whose support not any amount of money is too small -- strikingly resembles the Horthy's Revisionist League's attempt to masque their revanchist desire by launching in Great Romania a struggle to show the world the "lack" of rights of Hungarians in Transylvania;

C. Concerned that under the pretext of common anticommunist warfare, the chauvinist Hungarians try to shamelessly win the Romanians from the Free World over to their side, regardless;

1. Given the imperatives of supporting their nationalist interest they do not scruple to collaborate with the puppet-government in Budapest;

2. In accordance with the absurd desire to restore the borders of the "Great Hungary" they try to superimpose the momentary interests of either of the two superpowers -- the communist Russia and the United States -- or of anyone who would have a benefit, of any kind, on the territory of the ancient Dacia; or they believe any obstacle -- ideological, economic, religious, etc. -- will disappear among the Hungarians and they will be connected by their Magyar ethnic origin and their lust for foreign land;

d. We are troubled by the fact that some Romanians, caught in political games alien to our people, incite the chimera of the "historical conciliation" and accept the false theory of lack of national unites us -- the Romanian soul -- is more important than the discords that the enemies of all kinds cultivate inside us.

-- They should remember the wise, old Romanian proverb, "The wolf changes its hair, but not its bad habit".

-- They should hit the chauvinist Hungarian hydra, whenever and wherever it raises its hideous heads to splash us with its poisonous spit.

And if these efforts do not succeed, the arm of THE SONS OF AVRAM IANCU is ready to hit mercilessly.

So God help us!

APPEAL

to all Romanians in the Free World

THE SONS OF AVRAM IANCU call all Romanian patriots to fight against Hungarian revisionism-chauvinism and demand:

-- Do not be deluded by Hungarian "concern" for the "abused" national rights of Hungarians in Transylvania.

-- To be ready when commanded to use, according to each one's ability and knowledge, the word or the pen in order to state the truth about Romanian Transylvania awfully mutilated by those who make "history."

-- Everyone, according to his (her) power, should reveal the real chauvinistic and revanchist Hungarian intentions to friends and acquaintances, politicians, journalists, artists, teachers, priests, etc. in order to expose the hypocritical Magyar theories and empty words.

-- They should firmly condemn those Romanians who are caught in a position hostile to the Romanian nation under the anticommunist masque cunningly inveigled by Hungarian chauvinists and accept the role of revisionist propaganda.

-- They should raise their children in the Romanian spirit, of love for the nation and the ancient land -- the Great Romania -- to respect the sacrifices of their ancestors and their fight against their suppressors of any nationality and, in true faith and service of God. They should teach them to recognize national enemies, regardless of momentarily confessed intentions. They should speak about the infamies committed by Hungarians in Transylvania against Romanians.

-- All Romanians should unite against the enmity of the Hungarian revisionists, irrespective of their political creed, differences of opinions or personal disagreements. They should understand that what rights for Hungarians from Transylvania, and share the "concern" of the Hungarians from all over the world for their Transylvanian brothers;

E. We are convinced that this policy is dangerous because it aims to weaken the Romanian national conscience, sowing the seeds of dissension among Romanians in order to put them out of action easily and to mutilate the sacred body of the country;

F. We honor the memory of our ancestors, who lived for hundreds of years as the oppressed in their own country and did not sell either their souls or their faith in God, but worked under the whip strokes, under the burden of endless debts and humiliation, and rose in rebellion and maintained the unextinguished torch of their national being for ever, in order for their descendants to be called Romanians.

G. We know the historical facts told by our forefathers. We consider ourselves indebted and strengthened by their wisdom, and we are ready to hit with the hatchet if necessary, as Avram Iancu's men used to do.

WE DECIDED

at the Extraordinary Meeting held in New York, on May 15, 1988, a glorious day in the history of the Romanians, to establish "THE SONS OF AVRAM IANCU", which is going to be the most resolute detachment in the defense of Romanianism against the shameless Hungarian aggression and

WE SWEAR

To defend our Romanian identity and dignity by all means;

To punish the impertinence of those who defied and still defy us, from the height of their dreams as suppressors of the Romanian nation;

In order to wake them up from their lies, our arm will hit those who accept wages to profane their nation, or we will put them to sleep in disgrace for ever.

BLESSING

RECESSIONAL HYMN

O God, our help in ages past

Isaac Watts

O God, our help in ages past, our hope for years to come,
our shelter from the stormy blast, and our eternal home.

Under the shadow of thy throne thy saints have dwelt secure; sufficient is thine arm alone, and our defense is sure.

Before the hills in order stood, or earth received her frame, from everlasting thou art God, to endless years the same.

A thousand ages in thy sight are like an evening gone;
short as the watch that ends the night before the rising sun.

Time, like an ever-rolling stream, bears all our years away;
they fly forgotten as a dream dies at the opening day.

O God, our help in ages past, our hope for years to come,
be thou our guide while life shall last, and our eternal home.

Out of the depths have I called to you, O Lord
 Lord, hear my voice; Let your ears consider well

HYMN

The God of Abraham praise

Thomas Olivers

The God of Abraham praise, who reigns enthroned above;
 Ancient of everlastings days, and God of love;
 the Lord, the great I AM, by earth and heaven confessed:
 we bow and bless the sacred Name for ever blest.

He by himself hath sworn: on his oath depend;
 we shall, on eagle wings up-borne, to heaven ascend:
 we shall behold his face, we shall his power adore, and sing the wonders of his grace for ever-more.

There dwells the Lord, our King, the Lord, our righteousness, triumphet o'er the world and sin, the Prince of Peace;
 on Zion's sacred height his kingdom he maintains,
 and, glorious with his saints in light, for ever reigns.

The God who reigns on high the great arch-angels sing, and "Holy, holy, holy," cry, "Almighty King!
 Who was, and is the same, and ever-more shall be:
 eternal Father, great I Am, we worship thee."

PRAYERS

- Minister: The souls of the righteous are in the hand of God, and no torment shall touch them.
- People: In the eyes of the foolish they seemed to die; and their departure was accounted for their hurt,
- Minister: And their going from us was taken to be their ruin: but they are in peace.
- People: For though in the sight of men they be punished, yet is their hope full of immortality.
- Minister: And having borne a little chastening, they shall receive great good: because God made trial of them, and found them worthy for himself.
- People: As gold in the furnace he proved them, and as a whole burnt offering he accepted them.
- Minister: They that trust in him shall understand truth; and the faithful shall abide with him in love.
- People: Because grace and mercy are to his chosen, and he will graciously visit his holy ones.
- Minister: For in the Lord is their reward, and the care of them is with the most High.
- People: Therefore they shall receive a glorious kingdom, and a crown of beauty from the Lord's own hand.

CATALOGO CONTEMPORANEO

Ioan Paul Couliano

ALL INFORMATION CONTAINED
HEREIN IS UNCLASSIFIED
DATE 10-20-2016 BY J86J43T30 ADG

Nato nel 1950 a Iasi, Ioan P. Couliano si laureò nel 1970 a Bucarest su Marsilio Ficino. Che cosa voglia dire crescere, sopportare la tirannide di un regime nei momenti cruciali dell'adolescenza, riuscire a finire gli studi, non credo di dover illustrare.

Giunse in Italia nel 1972 con una borsa del governo italiano. Egli aveva cominciato a specializzarsi in sanscrito, sulle tracce di Eliade; una volta fuoruscito, si gettò su tutte le possibilità di sussidi, di borse, e riuscì a trovare provvidenze nell'Istituto di storia delle religioni all'università Cattolica di Milano.

Cominciò allora, mentre nel 1975 egli si rilaureava alla Cattolica sulla gnosi, a coglierne il nome sulle riviste di storia delle religioni, in alcune operette collettanee. Seppi che in quello stesso anno aveva visitato Chicago, diventando intimo dell'anziano Eliade, intento allora a redigere la sua Enciclopedia delle religioni.

Couliano si era stabilito in Olanda, all'Università di Groninga, diventando cittadino olandese. Le sue opere si infittirono e cominciai ad ammirarlo, la sua severità inflessibile mi incantava. Avvertivo il suo tono sconvolgente, remoto: come se una gran risata si fosse così bene occultata in lui da affiorare di rado, appena accennata. Era divertito dalla follia del mondo? O era gelidamente indifferente? O il suo era un raccapriccio perfettamente rassegnato?

Credo che l'abbia improntato a fondo l'esperienza del regime. Che sia stato stretto alla gola e costretto a sorridere. E l'impressione gli è rimasta: un'amabilità assiderata e assiderante. Stupisce, sembra, della vita, dello spostarsi di combinazioni. S'interessa ai calcoli con i quali l'uomo si è organizzata l'esistenza: gioca bene ai tarocchi, dipana a modo la geomanzia. Il gioco sempre uguale degli infiniti accidenti è per lui l'unica verità. Ma all'improvviso chi manipola le carte o i segni sulla sabbia è folgorato da un sincrismo. Questa illuminazione può ugualmente irrompere su chi giochi con i fatti della storia.

L'applicazione ai documenti storici è in lui esemplare. Il documento maggiore è l'opera compilata

Manuela Fabbr

I.P. Couliano

fra il 1973 (a Milano) e il 1986 (all'Aja): I miti dei dualismi occidentali. I sistemi gnostici e il mondo moderno (Jaca Book, 1989). Egli non vi cede a Buber e neanche a Jung, si rifiutò di subire Jonas e ancor meno Voegelin. Il suo sorriso semispento regge imperturbato per tutti i secoli dell'era cristiana, fino all'ultima battuta della bibliografia: "Il libro più confuso sull'argomento mi sembra quello di G. Humphries".

Eros e magia nel Rinascimento (Il Saggiatore, 1988) è invece l'esame minuzioso d'un testo di Bruno finora trascurato, da cui emerge una dottrina politica ben più radicale del machiavellismo. Esperienze dell'estasi dall'ellenismo al Medioevo (Laterza, 1986) è una lettura dei testi sul viaggio estatico.

Quando l'Olanda cominciò a liquidare il suo patrimonio universitario, Couliano aveva già un'offerta dell'Università di Chicago, dove si è trasferito. Vi cura anche le carte di Eliade. Con stupore ha visto emergere dei documenti del 1937 che mostrano un'esplosione di furibonda politica in un uomo prima e dopo remoto, sapiente.

La turbolenza della vita non sconvolge Couliano: egli ha saputo annotare questa caduta, l'ha debitamente cintata.

Dovrebbe prossimamente uscire in Italia l'Enciclopedia di Eliade a sua cura.

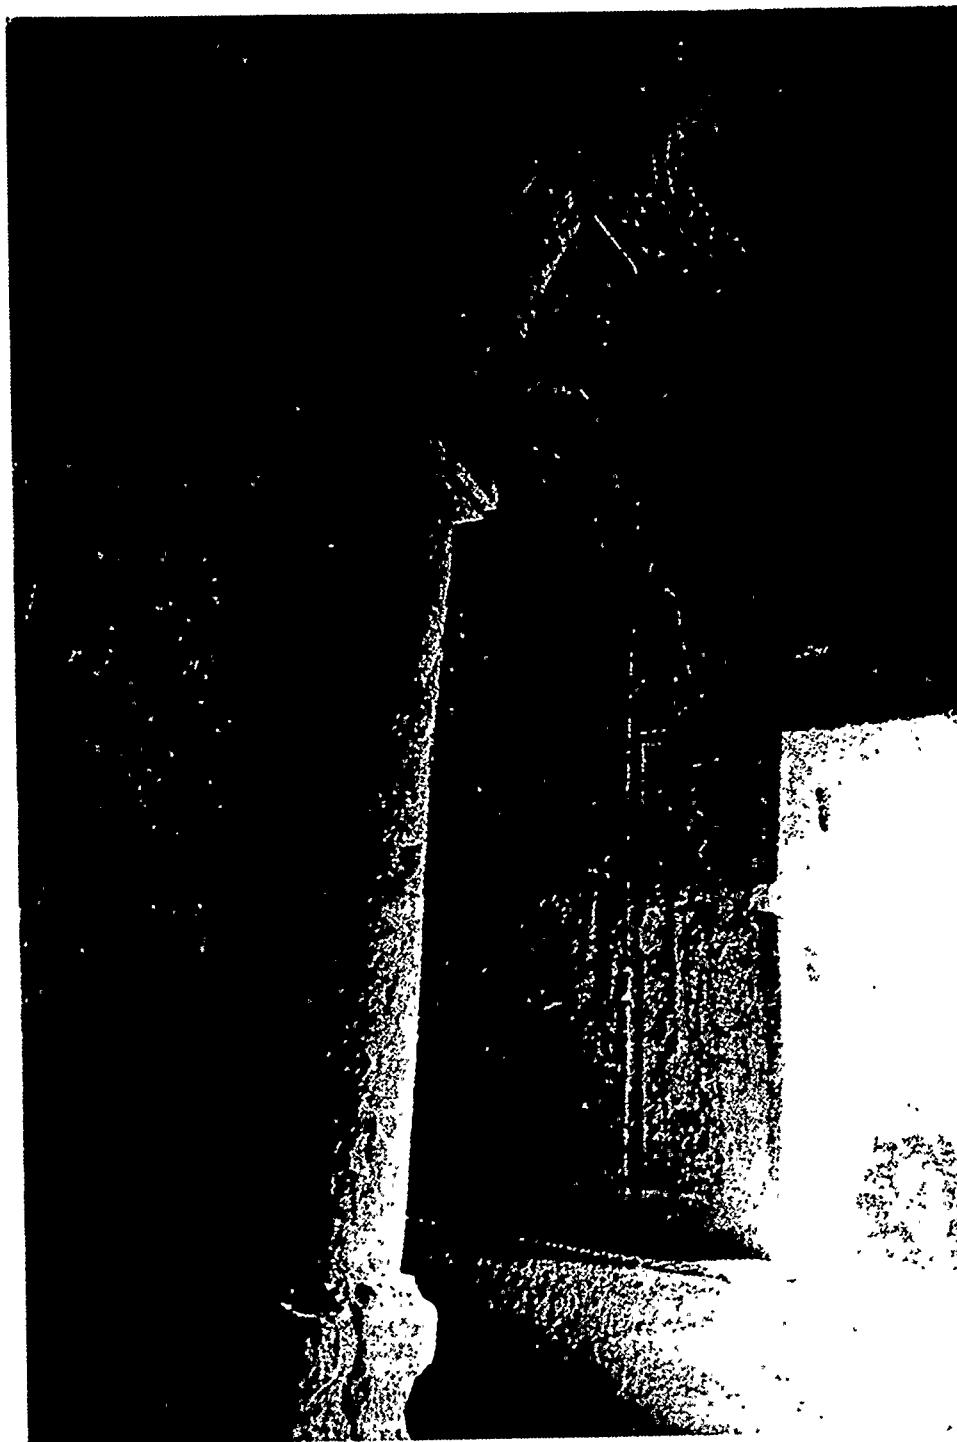

Ma l'incontro di un tono misterioso e di un'opera erudita non è che un aspetto della figura. Couliano è anche un narratore, come lo fu Eliade. È uscita recentemente in Italia La collezione di smeraldi (Jaca Book). Vi splendono momenti di sapienza, come Il corridore tibetano, dove il mistero di una fede esoterica è scrutato fino al suo fondo più remoto e tremendo.

Di recente Couliano ha associato la sua compagna, H.S. Wiesner, un'arabista, alle compilazioni della sua narrativa. Procedono insieme, i due, alternandosi stranamente, a redigere romanzi e racconti. Questo è il primo a uscire in Italia.

Manuela Fabbri

I.P. Couliano con Elémire Zolla

La tortuosità del pensiero di Giovanni di Cappadocia è bene in sintonia con le imprevedibili contorsioni del suolo tuttora visibili nella sua terra nativa, che per secoli ha potuto dar ricetto soltanto a cavernicoli tenebroosi e a neoplatonici. Gli anni in cui visse vanno probabilmente a cadere entro l'arco della lunghissima esistenza goduta dal suo compatriota Apollinare di Laodicea, eresiarca ed ellenista nonché vescovo. Quest'ultimo, prima di venir condannato dal Concilio di Costantinopoli, era riuscito a tradurre le prose evangeliche in dialoghi platonici, i Salmi in esametri omerici e le vite dei Santi in cadenze euripidee: entusiasmo generale.

Giovanni di Cappadocia compare per la prima volta, in compagnia dei Cainiti, nel capitolo trentottesimo di un unico manoscritto del Panarion (o Cassetta di medi- cinali), opera del velenoso Epifanio, vescovo di Salamina, nella cui adamantina ortodossia vibra ancora l'amara soddisfazione di aver trionfato su certe tentatrici giovani e belle che gli avevano mandato contro gli Stratiotici e i Fibioniti.

Quale rapporto ci sia con i Cainiti non è affatto chiaro. Ragion per cui, con una nota insulsa, Karl Holl riesce a giustificare l'omissione del brano su Giovanni dall'edizione critica delle opere di Epifanio. Di Giovanni non si fa parola nell'Anakefalaisios (o Ricapitolazione). Ibn al-Nadīm nel suo Kitāb al-Fihrist lo liquida in fretta accusandolo di traducianesimo e di propagandare la promiscuità sessuale. La sua fonte è chiaramente una cattiva traduzione di Epifanio; non rimanda a nessun testo.

Ecco il brano soppresso di Epifanio, discutibile come tutta la letteratura eresiologicala:

Giovanni, quel pazzo somaro dalle cui viscere gli schi-

“Percepisco d'un tratto tutta la minacciosità di questa notte rumorosa che mi scruta dalla finestra e interrompo queste righe, superflue come ogni altra cosa, eppure parti di un tutto, di cui nulla, neppure la fine della mia esistenza, potrebbe rivelarmi la sequenza segreta”

fosi miasmi dell'empietà si levarono a contaminare le sante grotte di Cappadocia, dimora un tempo dei nostri venerabili e ascetici Padri, sosteneva nella sua demenza che le meditazioni del santo Apostolo Pietro, di Nerone l'Anticristo, di una volgare prostituta e di un ottuso cavernicolo (come lui!) sono identiche fra di loro.

Questo verme nelle carni dell'ortodossia affermava che l'eresia è parte della verità e indistinguibile da essa. A questo egli giungeva pervertendo le parole dell'Apostolo: “È necessario che vi siano degli eretici”. Le dottrine di Platone e di Aristotele non sono dunque superiori alle stoltezze campagnole del bifolco. Le anime nascono solo per pensare e si riproducono unicamente per riprodurre il pensiero, in modo che tutto alla fine sia pensato. Non vi è differenza fra gli esseri umani; essi non sono altro, per breve tempo, che formiche pensanti. I nomi propri dovrebbero essere aboliti e le idee mai preservate, poiché la conservazione è superflua. Questo eretico asseriva che se tutti gli scritti di Aristotele venissero distrutti dal fuoco egli avrebbe potuto, in una sola notte, riscriverli tutti e poi bruciarli di nuovo, insieme agli scritti di mille altri autori, in ragione della loro cosiddetta predittività. E la cosa spaventosa, come non bastasse, è che hanno tutti ragione, l'empio con la sua bestemmia, il monaco con la sua preghiera. Egli affermava di aver costruito una griglia che gli permetteva di predire tutti i possibili pensieri futuri, perché il mondo non è che un pensiero fra gli altri ed è stato creato unicamente per dare agli uomini l'opportunità di pensare. Quando tutti i pensieri saranno stati pensati, il mondo cesserà di esistere.

Il testo prosegue insinuando che fra le nozioni favorite di Giovanni vi era il concetto che il tutto e il nulla coincidono esattamente, dato che qualsiasi idea ha il suo contrario e che la somma totale di tutte le idee e dei loro contrari è zero. Egli usava chiamare “Dio” sia il tutto sia la sua negazione. Di conseguenza, egli poneva sullo stesso piano sia la preoccupazione contadina sull'eventualità di una pioggia prima di sera sia il principio buddista per cui ciascuno dei concetti e delle categorie possibili ha un opposto, e quindi nessuno corrisponde a verità.

Sconosciuto a tutti gli eresiologi prima di Epifanio, il nostro autore dovrebbe essere vissuto intorno alla metà del IV secolo. Eppure Filastrio da Brescia sembrerebbe già citarlo quando attribuisce a un eretico anonimo il concetto che “il naso di Dio non è il naso dell'Egizio, né il naso del Nubiano, né il naso del Trace, né il naso dell'Iperboreo, né la somma complessiva di tutti i nasi, e in effetti neppure un non-naso”.

Quanto alla griglia summenzionata, se ne può trovare una riproduzione poco soddisfacente a pagina 272

del libro Iacula Ecclesiae Christi Catholicae di Benedictus a Benedictis (Venezia, 1608). Questo libro può sembrare fuori posto nella mia biblioteca. L'ho comprato da una libreria antiquaria sulla 57^a Strada, durante un pomeriggio movimentato, per impressionare la mia collega M., essendomi reso conto che il congresso della Società per gli studi preistorici stava volgendo al termine. Da allora non l'ho più vista. Vi si può anche leggere una sinossi biografica di Giovanni che non brilla per concisione e non cita alcuna delle sue fonti.

La griglia in sé non è così palesemente mostruosa come il diagramma degli Ofiti che Origene scopre nel Logos vero di Celso, ma è infinitamente più sconvolgente e vertiginosa. Funziona apparentemente prima appaiando e poi distruggendo i concetti in una successione di scelte. Somiglia un poco a un carciofo le cui foglie si perpetuano all'infinito man mano che si ritraggono verso il centro. Da un altro punto di vista, è come se ciascuna persona fosse una foglia che aggranciandosi a tutte le altre forma la struttura del diagramma. Il centro è inscrutabile; in esso convergono tutti i mondi che furono (o non furono) e tutti quelli che saranno (o non saranno), e il caos equivale all'ordine perfetto. (Questa contrazione dello spazio ricorda la similitudine dell'arcieretico Giovanni di Lugio: Dio è come una tavola imbandita nel mezzo di una stanza, carica di tutte le delizie possibili. Bramosi di degustarle, cerchiamo di avvicinarci, ma a ogni passo ci facciamo più piccoli e siamo ridotti al niente prima di averla raggiunta. Nazario di Concorezzo paragonava Dio a una fune: quando si tenta di afferrarla, svanisce nel nulla.)

Come Jean-Paul Sartre nei suoi saggi demitizzanti, l'autore della Vita fa derivare le teorie di Giovanni da talune circostanze biografiche. D'umile famiglia, egli era stato assunto in qualità di raccoglitore d'uova nella tenuta dell'agoranomos Apostolo Atanaside. Fu il Demonio, non già la Vergine Maria (come sosteneva lui), a mettergli in cuore un'ardentissima sete di sapere. La fulva concubina di Apostolo gli aveva insegnato due lettere dell'alfabeto durante un pomeriggio noioso: di conseguenza, egli scoperse di poter leggere perfettamente il primo libro che gli capitò fra le mani.

Poco interessato alla cultura, l'agoranomos lasciava marcire in un seminterrato certi volumi da lui ereditati. Sotto lo sguardo pudico della notte, con il cuore in gola per la scorrettezza dell'azione, Giovanni usava calarsi furtivamente nel seminterrato attraverso un buco privo di qualsiasi funzione. Tremando d'angoscia (aveva visto il padrone troncargli la mano a un ladro) il raccoglitore d'uova raccattava un libro a caso, usciva per la stessa strada da cui era venuto (eadem via sursum et deorsum, commenta sprezzantemente l'eresiologo adoperando una frase attribuita a Eraclito l'Oscuro) e se ne tornava nel suo alloggio fra gli occasionali gorgoglii delle chioce assopite. Ivi soleva leggere frettolosamente il volume stando attento al sorgere dell'alba. La notte successiva rimetteva a posto il libro vecchio e ne prendeva uno nuovo (mai più di uno, poiché temeva che l'eventuale castigo sarebbe stato in diretta proporzione al numero dei volumi mancanti).

La lettura di ciascuna notte era frutto del caso e di alcune circostanze restrittive: la quantità dei libri, la loro natura, l'ordine in cui erano collocati. Giovanni non faceva distinzione fra libri già letti e libri ancora da leggere. Più volte gli capitava di portar via il medesimo volume e di rileggerlo diligentemente: aveva fatto la scoperta che non si legge mai due volte lo stesso libro. Con le opere più voluminose gli succedeva spesso di leggere prima la terza parte, magari qualche altra parte dopo alcuni mesi, e l'inizio mai: vuoi perché in effetti mancava, vuoi perché non ci inciampava mai. Conosceva a memoria (senza comprenderli) gli ultimi due libri dell'Odissea prima di riuscire a scoprire da dove arrivava Ulisse quando ritornò a Itaca sotto mentite spoglie, e quanto al "Pelide Achille", per lui rimase sempre un illustre sconosciuto. Fra il xxii e il xiv libro dell'Odissea potevano passargli sotto gli occhi un poema astrologico di Arato, una copia incompleta della Geografia di Strabone, le ricette mediche del veterinario Gargilio Marziale, una copia della teoria musicale di Gaudenzio piena di svarioni che nessuno aveva mai notato, parte del libro sull'Asia di Ecateo di Mileto frammischiata in modo inestricabile con alcuni capitoli della Genealogia del medesimo autore, di nuovo le ricette di Gargilio, che questa volta svelarono ulteriori meraviglie, in particolare sulla funzione digestiva delle albicocche, l'audace Apologia di Origene scritta da Panfilo, nascosta sul retro della Cronaca di Eusebio, una lista dei bordelli di Alessandria con nomi e tariffe di 210 prostitute, un lungo poema in esametri sui brutti tiri che ruffiani e squaldrine possono giocare ai forestieri di passaggio, la versione ridotta del canone neotestamentario di Marcione di Sinope, la versione greca del Vecchio Testamento apocriefi inclusi, di cui egli riuscì a leggere la Genesi e parte dell'Esodo, nella speranza di potere un giorno conoscere il resto, le ricette di Gargilio per la terza volta, cosa che gli diede modo di notare che le sapeva quasi a memoria senza capirci niente, i registri contabili della tenuta sotto il proprietario precedente (e qui, se costui non mentiva, saltava fuori che Apostolo era un pessimo amministratore), il Panarete attribuito a Ermete Trismegisto, un trattato sull'arte del respiro scritto da un certo Archigene che era nato ad Apamea di Siria ma esercitava a Roma, un libro bianco, le ricette di Gargilio per la quarta volta, che miracolosamente gli permisero di curare un disturbo allo stomaco con l'aiuto di una composta di mele, di nuovo un libro bianco, in tutto simile al precedente fatta eccezione per una grossa macchia apparentemente prodotta da un tuorlo d'uovo, una refutazione del metodo di Archigene scritta da Galeno, un breve trattato sull'allevamento dei cammelli (per quanto Giovanni non avesse più familiarità con i cammelli che con Ulisse), i consigli di Gargilio per una giornata au-tunnale piovosa qualora insorgessero malinconie e istinti suicidi, e in conclusione il xiv libro dell'Odissea, che Giovanni a tutta prima non riconobbe.

Quando più tardi si fece monaco, il nostro autore deve pure aver ricevuto quella che noi oggi chiameremmo un'educazione regolare; nonostante il carattere fortemente asseverativo, per non dire dogmatico, di quest'ultima (o forse proprio a causa di esso), i difetti acquisiti nella sua giovinezza si sarebbero dimostrati irreversibili. Già nelle sue primissime opere egli tende a trattare le persone come se fossero parti di un libro, e a presupporre che l'ordine in cui si presentano non sia mai quello giusto: in altre parole, non è possibile comprendere quello che viene prima se già non si conosce quello che viene dopo, per quanto in certi casi anche questo non sia di grande aiuto. Il capitolo scritto nella mente dell'Apostolo Pietro (Giovanni adoperava il verbo "scrivere" come se i pensieri umani fossero stampati in eterno su qualche sorta di sostanza; se non mi sbaglio è una speculazione discendente da un principio medico e aristotelico) va messo in rapporto con altri capitoli scritti migliaia di anni prima, o magari dopo, o magari mai; potrebbe anche starsene lì per sempre in solitaria attesa del compagno mancante. Non ha niente a che vedere con Gesù Cristo, suo fratello Giacomo, Gerusalemme, il conflitto con Paolo a cui quest'ultimo allude nella Lettera ai Galati, i pesci o il mare di Tiberiade. Gli altri capitoli dello stesso "libro" (vale a dire gli altri intelletti affaccendati sulla medesima trama) possono essere stati scritti (o non scritti) in qualsivoglia momento dalla ballerina di un bordello di Aleppo, da un teppista con tre file di denti, da un uomo delle caverne.

Dopo aver formulato questi e altri convincimenti in alcuni trattati occasionali che sembrarono ortodossi persino a san Gerolamo, Giovanni finì con l'affermare che i pensieri sconnessi delle varie persone altro non sono che la meditazione ininterrotta di Dio stesso. Negli esseri umani questi frammenti si presentano nella sequenza sbagliata, ma l'unico modo per conoscere Dio (ah, che teoria mostruosa, che teoria abominevole!), sì, proprio l'unico modo, è di rimetterli in ordine uno dopo l'altro, sforzandosi di accostare le idee fra di loro completamente alla cieca e senza indizi, poiché non è possibile penetrare i recessi di una mente che non ti si rivela in alcun modo — per non parlare di quelle menti appartenute a persone scomparse da tempo, o solo ipoteticamente a venire!

Non sembra, a ogni modo, che Giovanni abbia appreso tutto ciò per esperienza mistica, o per un'esperienza qualsivoglia; si limitò ad avanzare quest'assurda tesi secondo la quale i pensieri di tutti gli uomini (i miei, quelli di sant'Agostino, di Einstein, del lattaio) si equivarrebbero qualitativamente e quantitativamente, tutti essendo particelle della riflessione divina disseminate in modo caotico attraverso il mondo, senz'altra regola che l'insondabile volontà divina, che in essi è racchiusa. Naturalmente, prosegue Giovanni, molti pensieri si sovrappongono, altri oltrepassano i confini spaziali e temporali, altri ancora si ripetono in eterno, taluni sono troppo spaventosi per essere formulati più di una volta, taluni capitano solo nei giorni di nebbia, taluni soltanto a cavallo di una giumenta rossiccia. E tuttavia, generalmente parlando, i pensieri umani non sono che frammenti di un rompicapo universale troppo complicato per essere compreso dal singolo, o anche dall'universalità degli esseri umani. Perché soltanto Dio conosce la logica in base alla quale Egli ha deciso di farsi disperdere, la sequenza che improvvisamente si rivelerà finita quando tutti i pensieri verranno recuperati dall'oceano del tempo e combaceranno perfettamente nell'Unico, vero, esplosivo messaggio finale.

Non si sa nulla della morte di Giovanni di Cappadocia, ma nel IV secolo si poteva ancora essere un eretico e riuscire a farla franca. Se non vado errato fu Prisciliano di Avila il primo buon cristiano a essere assassinato da confratelli, nel 380, replicando ancora una volta l'eterno dramma di Gesù-Capro-Espiatorio, e venendo ricordato nei secoli, sempre come Gesù, sotto falso nome per una tomba miracolosa, che divenne il trafficatissimo santuario di Santiago de Compostela. Quest'idea mi è venuta così, all'improvviso, e io non saprò mai cosa l'ha fatta nascere, se un misterioso meccanismo del mio cervello o una cospirazione divina, come suggerisce Giovanni di Cappadocia. Dall'interno della caverna non è possibile vedere altro. Percipisco d'un tratto tutta la minacciosità di questa notte rumorosa che mi scruta dalla finestra e interrompo queste righe, superflue come ogni altra cosa, eppure parti di un tutto di cui nulla, neppure la fine della mia esistenza, potrebbe rivelarmi la sequenza segreta.

ANTI-JUDAISM AND ANTI-HISTORICISM IN ELLADE'S WRITINGS

MIRCEA ELIADE

In religious studies he is best known for his study of archaic and primitive religions, and for his theories in the interpretation of myths, in particular myths of the origin. Although often considered a historian, he advocated an antihistorical approach to the study of religion, based on intuition and imagination, or what he called his "creative hermeneutics". His romantic approach to the study of religion led him to believe that the modern and desacralized society could return to its paradisaical origins and primordial sources from before history, through an escape from modern civilization. By doing so, modern society would be able to rediscover the sacred. History of religions, conceived by him as a saving discipline, was integrated into his broader vision of the New Humanism, the savior of mankind and the world.

Mircea Eliade was born in Romania ~~in 1907~~ and was raised in the atmosphere of Romanian traditionalism. The Romanian traditionalists, philosophers, sociologists, theologians, poets, artists and literary critics, stood in opposition to the rationalist movement influenced by the French Enlightenment. The latter favored the influence of Western -- that is, French -- civilization on Romanian culture, while the former looked for models for the development of Romania in Eastern culture, in the archaic mentality, in the autochthonous ethnic past, and in the primordial world. The debate between these two groups was known as the debate between East and West, Traditionalism and Modernism, and alternatively, between culture and civilization, or matter versus spirit. Culture was identified with a world that was agricultural, archaic, primordial, ^{and} Eastern. Civilization was identified with a society that was modern, desacralized, industrialized, democratic, parliamentary, rational, materialistic, ^{and} positivistic, in a word, the West. The traditionalists believed that the return to the East represented a return to archaic and pure spiritual roots and a rejection of modern Western civilization, desacralized and corrupted by industry, materialism, commerce, politics, and the world of the city.

In Romania, the conflict between culture and civilization was at the core of anti-Semitism, which in the beginning was economic, ethnic, and social rather than religious in nature. The Romanian traditionalists, much like their German and Italian counterparts by whom they were profoundly affected, identified the Jews with rationalism, positivism, Communism, materialism, commerce, democracy, and the economical and political corruption of the city. However, by the 1930s, anti-Semitism of a social, ethnic and economic origin blended with anti-Semitism based on religion and race.

The Romanian traditionalists were convinced of the purity of the Romanian race and of the continuity of the Romanian nation with the spirit of their ancestors, the Dacians and the Thracians, whose religion they claimed, was close to Christianity. Nationalism became equivalent to Orthodox Christianity, and the pure ethnic origins of the Romanians. This equation was reinforced by the mystical theory of "Thracism", as developed by Vasile Pârvan, who maintained that in Romanian lands Christianity was naturally integrated, without conversion, because the religion of the Dacians (the ancient Thracians) was a sort of cosmic Christianity. The belief in the god Zalmoxis implied the idea of monotheism, the immortality of the soul, and the mystique of death and resurrection. Orthodox Christianity advocated by Romanian traditionalists, unlike Western Christianity, was an ahistorical religion. The theories concerning the Dacians and the Thracians also implied the idea of territorial expansion and the dream of Greater Romania (see Eliade, Zalmoxis the Vanishing God). The notion of life after death held a particular fascination for the young people of Romania, convinced as they were of the purity of the Romanian race and the continuity of the Romanian nation through the spirit of their ancestors. Consequently, they regarded Orthodox Christianity, archaic peasant values and nationalism as inseparable. Romania was only for the Romanians, and being Romanian was synonymous of being Orthodox Christian. However, the traditionalists believed that a pure spirituality was preserved not only in Romania's archaic past, but also in the Orient, especially in India, the land of pure Aryans. India and the archaic mentality were exalted not only by German indologists, but also by many Romanian traditionalists whom Eliade admired and whose philosophies he wished to perpetuate.

The interest in peasant mentality and the cult of the ancestors generated an increasing intellectual fascination for race, protohistory, and myths of the origins.

Founded in 1927 by Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, Romania's nationalist, mystico-religious and Fascist movement, the Iron Guard, was rooted in the anti-Semitic student movements lead by Codreanu and others between 1919 and 1927. The major aim of the movement was to eliminate the Jews from Romania. In order to achieve this goal the movement had to fight the political parties, the government and its politicians, and all others who allowed Jewish cultural, political, social and economic life to exist on Romanian land. Born in order to crush the "Jewish hydra" from Romania, the Guardists called for international cooperation, to find a final solution to the Jewish problem. ~~the~~ Codreanu identified Judaism with Communism, materialism, democracy, Freemasonry.

We thought to accomplish: ... our detoxification, namely the elimination of Judaism that was introduced in our thinking through books in schools, literature, professors, through lectures, theater and cinematography. ... In Romania, Fascism could only mean the elimination of the dangers threatening the Romanian people, namely, the removal of the Jewish threat and the opening of a free way to life and glory. ... Judaism has become the master of the world through Masonry, and in Russia through Communism. ... In our country it will have to be eradicated through what it has there: Jews, communists, masons. ... Lately in Germany Hitler won against the Judeo-masonic hydra of the entire world. The German people, with an extraordinary determination and unity, fought and put down the Judaic power. ... we, too, must solve this Jewish problem. 2

The Legion (or the Guard) saw itself as a spiritual movement, but also as a military order, a sort of confraternity and a school of moral Codreanu claimed his movement spiritual and religious, rather than political in the conventional sense. He stated that the Legion "has its foundations rooted in the principle of love".³ Moreover, he called for the creation of a new man, a sort of elite, alone capable of redeeming Romania. The messianic message of the Romanian Iron Guard was not limited however to Romania alone, as they believed they were the saviors of European culture. Their mystical nationalism was to become a universal form of salvation through its Christian message.

In 1931, the year Eliade returned from India, Codreanu registered the Legionary movement for the elections. He won a place in the parliament, where he had the opportunity to make several public proposals against democracy and the Jews. With the 1932 elections he again won a seat in the parliament and once more demanded the expulsion of the Jews. ^{from Romania} As the movement grew stronger, so did its acts of violence and crimes. The movement gained popularity among the young Romanian Christian intellectuals, especially Eliade's circle of orthodoxists - as they called themselves.

Together with his circle of friends ~~and other members of the Legion~~ ~~and~~ ~~now~~ ~~closely~~ ~~connected~~ also with Codreanu, Eliade intensified his own political involvement through propaganda articles in the overall newspapers, lectures and conferences. From 1933 to 1936 Romanian administrative laws were instituted restricting the social, political, cultural, religious and artistic life of the Jews who were considered foreigners on Romanian land. During this time Eliade, who was enjoying the prestige of a popular writer, was actively endorsing and promoting the anti-Semitic laws which were being implemented.

Eliade actually argued that the country can no longer continue to be "colonized" by the Jews, on the contrary, the nation should get rid of them, and proposed to regenerate the nation by a "substantial nourishment", which plainly implied a national purification.

Now, when the great fight is being prepared, to be decided who deserves to survive and who deserves the fate of a slave, our leading elite continues its small businesses. ... we stayed passively and watched how the Jewish element becomes stronger in the cities of Transylvania, how Deva became completely Hungarian, ... how were established colonies of Jewish ploughmen in Maramures, how the forests of Maramures and Bucovina passed in the Jewish and Hungarian hands, etc., etc., From the war on, the Jews had overruled the villages [in an article Eliade claims he did not write, the article reads : "can we be overruled by the Jews?"] of Maramures and Bucovina, and obtained the absolute majority in all the cities of Basarabia....

I know very well that the jews are going to cry out that I am anti-Semitic, and the democrats will complain that I am a hooligan or a fascist...

I do not get angry when i hear the Jews cry, 'anti-Semitism', 'Fascism', 'Hitlerism'! These people who are alive and clairvoyant, they defend their economic and political primacy, which they obtained with so much effort, wasting so much intelligence and spending so many milliards. It would be absurd to expect that the Jews will resigne themselves to be a minority, with some rights and with very many obligations - after they have tasted from the honey of power and conquered so many positions of leadership. The Jews are struggling with all their might to keep for the moment, their positions, while awaiting for a new offensive, and as far as I am concerned, I can only admire their vitality, their tenacity and their genius. ...And if you tell them [the blind pilots who govern the country] that in Maramures, Bucovina and Basarabia is spoken Yiddish, that the Romanian villages are disappearing, that the face of the earth is changing, they think that you are employed by the Germans....And now, when the population is reaped by the malaria, the government spends (in a figure of speech) thousands of millions with medications, forgetting that a nation cannot be regenerated with aspirin, but through a substantial nourishment...

And when they are in a good mood they say that the number of the Jews does not matter, because they are working and intelligent people, and if they become rich, their wealth is in the country...If a nation whose leading class thinks this way, and speaks about the qualities of the foreigners - it does not have much to live.

Another example is Eliade's article on Moses Gaster.

Moses Gaster

In 1936 Eliade published the article "Doctorul Gaster", a sort of an homage to the Jewish scholar Gaster, who was expelled from Romania because of his Zionist ideas. In this article Eliade deplors the fact that three Jewish scholars of international reputation such as Gaster, Saineanu and Tiktin have been expelled from Romania, while numerous Jewish merchants were allowed to settle in Romania. This article allowed Eliade's defenders to claim that Eliade was not an anti-Semite. However, a closer analysis of the special circumstances in which Eliade wrote the article might put this article into another perspective. Dr. Gaster, in spite of his exile, was made an honorary member of the Romanian Academy in 1929. The negotiations for the price of his ancient Romanian manuscripts which he was willing to donate to the Romanian Library for a much lesser price than the British Museum offered him, continued for almost 10 years. During this time, he received numerous letters of praise from Romanian scholars involved in the negotiations, including a praising letter from the anti-Semite Iorga. In 1936, the year when Eliade published his article on Gaster, part of the transaction has been completed, and several manuscripts from Gaster's collection were now part of Romanian patrimony. Eliade's article only celebrated the event. As in Iorga's case, social and economic anti-Semitism was carefully separated from such an important cultural event. As rightly stated by George Calinescu, regarding the Jews, " a lucid mind, which does not make any confusions between the political problems and the ideal world of creativity, cannot deny their contribution". ("Specificul National", Ed. Aesthesis, p. 189). ~~In the same way~~, Eliade did not deny Gaster's contribution, nevertheless he lamented over the great number of Jews who lived in Romania.

to give the full effect

It is significant the fact that Moses Gaster makes his debut in the review of the anti-Semitic Hajdeu. As significant as the fact that the only teaching assistant whom Hajdeu had chosen was Lazar Saineanu, an erudit Jew....But we do not know whether the great anti-Semite really rejoiced from the expulsion of his rival...On the other hand, to mention it only in passage, I do not know if a Jewish banker or land owner has been expelled in the period between 1870-1916. However, three great Jewish scholars have been forced to leave: Gaster, Saineanu and Tiktin. All of them acquired an european renoun. And ~~the~~ ^{with} during the years when we received in the country galician merchants [Jewish merchants from Galicia] we got rid of three capacities of european caliber. ...Today, the collection of manuscripts and old prints [belonging to Gaster] returns to the country...Several things remain however to be done, for the doctor's satisfaction and for our benefit. ...it would be difficult for the doctor to return to us..But we could delegate an intelligent young man ... to gather from him all the informations... ("Doctorul Gaster", Vremea 21 June 1936, p. 9).

Eliade ends the article with a citation from Gaster's letter sent together with the donation of his library to Romania. Such an article did not seem to have released Eliade from the charge of anti-Semitism, since he often argued that there were too many Jews in Romania, thus the true Romanian patriots had to get rid of the other articles such as "Ajutati-l pe Domnul Ludo", "Salomon Reinach", "Vasile Conta" ~~and others~~ ^{ALSO} state anti-Semitic views.

In the article "Vasile Conta" published in 1932, Eliade refers specifically to the Jews. Conta was an atheist and a positivist, qualities Eliade would not appreciate; however, he was in Eliade's words, "a forerunner of anti-Semitism", which Eliade highly praised.

Perhaps also the fact that he [Vasile Conta] was cited as a forerunner of anti-Semitism - constituted a privileged glory around his name. Gh. Pau writes in his Souvenirs that Vasile Conta would not lose his temper in discussions, except when the Jews were concerned. Is it possible then, a greater praise than this for the Romanian philosopher? -- asks Eliade. ("Vasile Conta", Civăntul 1932 22 Aprilie) p. 1

In another article, "Christianity versus Judaism", Eliade continues the polemic on the problem of the slavation of the Jews, " a very delicate and grave problem of the freedom of the divine grace", and he concludes that his questions are simple questions of one who feels guilty about the eleven canon of the Sixth Ecumenical Synod which does not permit the Christian to have relations with the Jews. ("Crestinatatea fata de Judaism" Vremea, 1934 2. 1. 3)

It is In Fragmentarium that Eliade's view on race and pure origins are explicitly stated. According to him, the interest in the archaic mentality generated the fascination for the study of races, myths, and protohistory..

The lack of interest in history is increasing more and more in the twentieth century... From here came the passion of today's elite for protohistory, races, religions, mythologies, symbols. The nineteenth century was the most obscure century that European culture ever knew. ...Tradition is sought not in the Middle Ages but in the origins of the race, in the beginning of nations....The past is not valued because it represents history but because it represents origins. But the protohistory grants us equality with the German is more valuable than deciphering a medieval manuscript. It is not such a great "glory" any more to be a creator of history. It is much more valuable to belong to a race with an established origin. This is the spiritual phenomenon which is shaped in Europe, and I must confess that it fits perfectly the case of Romania. ... our interest in history needs to be corrected by urgently promoting anthropological-geographical studies, prehistory, protohistory and folklore.

Contemporary racism and its biological implications (nudism, blood purity, sport as a means of strength) corresponds to the romantic interest in "primitive people".. who are considered pure people, simple, non-sophisticated and not sickened by civilization. ... The problem and the research of races should be an exercise much loved by critics such as Mihail Sebastian [a Jewish writer]...The study of the races dissociates the mixtures within the same community, tries to establish their physiognomy, their historical centers, the force that constitutes them ...A mind preoccupied with literary criticism should, almost compulsory, be concerned with the problem of races. 11

Eliade's preoccupation with pure races went hand in hand with his interest in Yoga and German indology. During 1934-1937 he traveled several times to Germany where he was also able to up-date his research on Yoga, following the principles of German indology. In the meantime the Iron Guard, in spite of its increased popularity, faced a powerful opposition from King Carol II, who did not wish to compete with Codreanu's movement.

. Ironically, the pro-Nazi dictatorship of King Carol II, whose anti-Semitic legislation restricted Jewish social, cultural, political and religious life, ended up crushing Codreanu's Legion of the Archangel Michael.

Eliade's involvement with the Iron Guard, his support of it through his writings, personal contacts with Codreanu and association with Ionescu, caused him to be arrested in 1938. Sent together with other legionary friends ~~to the legionary camp at Miercurea Ciuc,~~ to the legionary camp at Miercurea Ciuc, Eliade was saved by a series of fortunate circumstances.

However,

with no means of subsistence, the only alternative left for him was to venture outside Romania.

Around 1940, King Carol invited the Iron Guard and other Fascist groups to join his government. Constantin Giurescu, the minister of propaganda who congratulated the King for having accomplished in Romania what the Fuhrer achieved in Germany, arranged for Eliade to be sent abroad.

On March 1940 Eliade left Romania to join the Romanian Legation in London. Although the inclusion of his name among those of the Romanian Legation in London raised the objection of the British Foreign Office because of Eliade's acknowledged Iron Guard activities, Eliade was able, however, to be unofficially attached to the Legation. He was described by Sir G. Thomas, in his letter to Mr. W.G. White, as "a hang-on of the Romanian Legation"¹². It is clear that Eliade was not a Cultural Attache (or Secretary) to the Romanian Legation in London as he stated in interviews, diaries and in his Autobiography.

In Romania, a few months later, in September 1940, General Ion Antonescu, with the backing of the Iron Guard, forced King Carol to abdicate. On September 14, 1940, a National Legionary State was proclaimed, with General Antonescu as head, and Horia Sima (another student of Nae Ionescu and a school teacher) as the commandant of the Legionary movement and Vice-President of the Council of Ministers. With the increasing tension between England and Romania's diplomatic relations (the diplomatic relations between the two countries broke only a few months later), in September, Eliade was evacuated to Oxford, while awaiting a new post. In spite of numerous efforts made on his behalf to be allowed to leave, Eliade was retained in England because of his political activities on behalf of the Iron Guard and also probably of Nazi Germany.

A report on his activities in the UK by British Intelligence, clearly indicates that he was a threat to the security of Great Britain:

Eliade is one of six Romanians who constituted a Black List which we have been endeavouring to complete since the Romanian crisis started. He is an Iron Guardist, and on more than one occasion he has been reported to us as being likely to work for the Germans. ... and we hear that he has threatened those of his colleagues who are either wavering or likely to declare themselves against the new regime.

Eliade is an undesirable person and would do us harm if he were to be let out of the country. It may, however, be more difficult to prevent him going (except by administrative delays) if the Roumanian Legation notify us officially, as they will, that he has been appointed Press Attaché at Lisbon. 13

In the meantime, with the installation of the new regime in Romania, Eliade openly showed his Nazi sympathies, as revealed in this British Intelligence report.

The most Nazi member of the Legation, who is a supporter of the Iron Guard, Monsieur Eliade, has come out in the open and has sent a telegram to Bucharest asking that he be placed in charge of the Press and Propaganda Department of the Legation in place of Monsieur Diamanhescu, whom he denounced in his telegram as Anglophile and anti Iron Guard. Eliade added to his message the Romanian equivalent of "Heil Hitler". He is anxious for the above appointment, as it carries with it diplomatic privileges, including the right to leave the country without an exit permit.14

By then Eliade's efforts in denouncing his colleagues bore fruits, for he was appointed Press and Propaganda Attaché of the new Romanian regime in Lisbon (and not Cultural Secretary as he officially stated). However, in spite of his now diplomatic status in Portugal, Eliade's departure from England proved to be more difficult than his arrival. Again, the British Intelligence states:

We have been obstructing departure of Eliade who is a member of the Iron Guard, but are looking into the possibility of letting him proceed to Lisbon. 15 his later interest, as a historian of religion, in mythology, myths, quest for the origins, archaic and primitive religions and protohistory. It is the fundamental dualism between culture and civilization that forms the basis of the fundamental distinction established by Eliade between traditional religions (primitive and archaic religions) on the one hand, and historical religions (Judaism, Christianity and Islam) on the other. However, the cosmic Orthodox Christianity advocated by Eliade was unlike Western Christianity: an ahistorical religion; it was a brand of Christianity that ignored history.

Eliade endeavored to impose a certain ideology, a certain political attitude which he called "spiritual" and "apolitical" in the conventional way, but which, nevertheless, was able to provide a soteriological solution to socio-economic crisis. After the war, history of religions rather than Orthodox Christianity became for him a universal form of salvation.

For in the end, Eliade was seeking, together with the Legion of the Archangel Michael, not only to find his own salvation, not only to save the Romanian nation, but to save all of Europe through a new Christian reform. This view helps to explain his later theological rather than historical approach to the history of religions.

Eliade's charge of collaboration with the Iron Guard and with Romania's Nazi governments is reinforced by his subsequent silence about his past, his statements and his actions, in a deliberate effort to conceal it in interviews, Autobiography, and official biographies. It is only posthumously that Eliade laments (rather than condoning) the crushing of the Iron Guard, which, according to him was "the only Romanian political movement which took seriously Christianity and the Church"²², still agreeing with Codreanu, who would have claimed that the Iron Guard "did not constitute a political phenomenon but was in essence, ethical and religious".²³

Eliade's unwillingness to take responsibility for his mature actions and statements, to acknowledge publicly the evil he so zealously promoted, and hence to repudiate his past, compromise forever Eliade's scholarly prestige. They leave a disturbing mark on his integrity, and at the same time put his scholarly contribution into a wider perspective: that of European Fascism and conservative ideas. In the end, we must affirm without reservation that history does indeed matter.

Dear [Redacted]

This is not an official letter, and will not go to your record. However, I may take the liberty to circulate it with my area colleagues. It is a comment on your paper [Redacted] which you wrote for my course on the [Redacted]. I graded this paper B-, yet I must confess that I gave you a passing grade only because I appreciated the amount of work you put into it (an amount of work, however, which this time I would not even define as truly impressive).

b6

This is the first paper you ever wrote for one of my courses. Last year you gave a paper presentation in the [Redacted] and I also read (and appreciated) your written Certifying exam in [Redacted]. Yet this time I have been disappointed by your performance. The course on [Redacted] gave you a minimal lead into a form of elementary cognitive comparison, based on some models as those contained in the required bibliography of the course. That bibliography was there to be used, and was even discussed in class (although you may have missed the discussion). Our course was neither about Buber, nor about some vague differences between something and everything else; it was an attempt to display for your use a viable type of methodology. The point about the paper was to show understanding of the method. It is precisely what you did not.

As your adviser, I would strongly urge you to seek for an institution of higher education more suitable to your profile. A colleague of mine suggested The Chicago Theological Seminary. For my part, I would add Harvard Divinity School, where interfaith dialogue is the focus of graduate studies. I share my colleagues' opinion that, no matter how multifaceted and pluralistic the approaches of the HR area in this institution might be, you do not seem to find any of them congenial. At this stage I would not encourage you to seek admission into the HC area either.

I trust that you will find, in a new setting, the appreciation and recognition you certainly deserve. I wish you the best of lucks.

Yours sincerely,

ARMED AND DANGEROUS RE TIGANUL DAN ANDERSEN.

REQUEST OF FBIHQ. FBIHQ IS REQUESTED TO CONDUCT INDICES CHECKS RE TIGANUL DAN ANDERSEN, AKA DAN ANDERSEN, P.O. BOX 1971, LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA 90078.

FOR INFORMATION OF FBIHQ AND RECEIVING OFFICES, ON AUGUST

19, 1991,

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED] TELEPHONE NUMBER [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED] ADVISED THAT HE HAS RECEIVED THREE THREATENING

TELEPHONE CALLS, DURING AUGUST, 1991, FROM AN INDIVIDUAL WHO HAS IDENTIFIED HIMSELF AS "TIGANUL" (ROMANIAN WORD FOR GYPSY)

DAN ANDERSEN. [REDACTED] WAS A CLOSE ASSOCIATE OF THE MURDERED ROMANIAN DISSIDENT IOAN PETRU CULIANU AND UNSUB REFERENCED HIS MURDER IN THREATENING TELEPHONE CALL.

[REDACTED] ADVISED THREATENING TELEPHONE CALLS RECEIVED

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED] A DEMOCRATIC

ORGANIZATION INSIDE ROMANIA, WHICH HAS OPPOSED THE POLICIES OF THE CURRENT ROMANIAN ILIESCU GOVERNMENT. THREATENING CALLS

RECEIVED AFTER

[REDACTED] IN VARIOUS ROMANIAN EXILE PUBLICATIONS.

THREATENING CALLS RECEIVED ON AUGUST 8, 1991, AUGUST 11, 1991, AND AUGUST 18, 1991, WHILE [REDACTED] WAS AWAY FROM HIS RESIDENCE AND BRIEF MESSAGES LEFT ON HIS ANSWERING MACHINE. UNSUB SPOKE IN THE ROMANIAN LANGUAGE AND [REDACTED] HAS ADVISED SOUNDED LIKE HE HAD A GYPSY OR JEWISH ACCENT. UNSUB IDENTIFIED HIMSELF IN THE FIRST CALL AS TIGANUL DAN ANDERSEN AND ATTACKED [REDACTED] VERBALLY FOR HIS INVOLVEMENT WITH CIVIC ALLIANCE USING OBSCENITIES. SECOND CALL RECEIVED ON AUGUST 11, 1991, WAS SIMILAR IN NATURE MAKING REFERENCES TO THE PERSECUTION OF GYPSIES BY CIVIC ALLIANCE. THE THIRD CALL RECEIVED ON AUGUST 19, 1991, CONTAINED THE STATEMENT "IF YOU DON'T GIVE UP YOUR WORK WITH CIVIC ALLIANCE WE WILL KILL YOU. WE ALREADY HAVE A BULLET WITH YOUR NAME ON IT. WE WILL SEND YOU AFTER YOUR FRIEND CULIANU. THIS IS YOUR LAST MESSAGE." [REDACTED] HAS ADVISED CALLER APPARENTLY IS OF THE ERRONEOUS OPINION THAT CIVIC ALLIANCE WAS ANTI-GYPSY AND JEWISH WHEN IN FACT THE ORGANIZATION HAS SUPPORTED THESE MINORITIES AGAINST THE ACTIVITIES OF THE CURRENT GOVERNMENT.

[REDACTED] ADVISED THAT HE RECALLS CULIANU HAVING RECEIVED

b7c

SIMILAR THREATS FROM SOMEONE HE DESCRIBED AS A GYPSY AND HAD ONLY LAUGHED THEM OFF. [REDACTED] NOTED THAT CONTACT WITH [REDACTED] DISSIDENTS DAN COSTESCU AND CORNEL DUNITRESCU, THE PUBLISHERS OF LUMEA LIBERA ROMANFASCA MAGAZINE, P.O. BOX 7640, REGO PARK, NEW YORK 11374, TELEPHONE NUMBER (718) 672-7195, REVEALS THAT THEY HAVE RECEIVED SIMILAR THREATENING LETTERS MAILED VIA THE U.S. MAIL FROM AN INDIVIDUAL WHO HAS IDENTIFIED HIMSELF AS TIGANUL DAN ANDERSEN, P.O. BOX 1971, LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA 90078. THREATENING LETTERS WRITTEN IN ROMANIAN AND STATIONARY CONTAINS ANDERSEN'S RETURN ADDRESS AND PHOTOGRAPH OF A WHITE MALE, APPROXIMATELY LATE THIRTIES OR EARLY FORTIES, WEARING A HEAVY DARK BEARD AND MUSTACHE AND A COWBOY TYPE HAT. [REDACTED] FURNISHED FAXED COPIES OF INSTANT LETTERS AND ADVISED ORIGINAL LETTERS AND ENVELOPES IN THE HANDS OF COSTESCU AND DUNITRESCU. THREATENING LETTERS HAVE REPORTEDLY NOT BEEN REFERRED TO POLICE OR FBI PREVIOUSLY.

b6
b7C

UNIDENTIFIED SOURCE OF [REDACTED] INDICATES ANDERSEN MAY HAVE MADE SIMILAR THREATS TO THE ROMANIAN EMBASSY IN NEW YORK. APPARENTLY ANDERSEN IS HAVING SOME TYPE OF IMMIGRATION PROBLEM AND WAS PROMISED EMBASSY ASSISTANCE IF HE WROTE A LETTER TO THE ROMANIAN PRESS ATTACKING THE ACTIVITIES OF CIVIC ALLIANCE.

b6
b7C

ON AUGUST 19, 1991, FACTS IN THIS MATTER WERE DISCUSSED WITH AUSA [REDACTED] BALTIMORE, MARYLAND, WHO AUTHORIZED FURTHER INVESTIGATION RELATED TO THE THREATENING TELEPHONE CALL MATTER TO IDENTIFY SUBJECT [REDACTED]

o sunt de persoane inscrise in AC. Va pot trimite tabelele cu membri inscrisi in AC din Los Angeles, dar nu dispun de celelalte tabele. Nu sunt autorizat sa va dau aceste numere de telefon, multe dintre ele fiind "unlisted". Sper sa nu-mi produceți neplăceri prin informațiile pe care vi le-am dat. SUCCES in organizarea noilor grupuri de sprijin ale AC din America și Canada. Cotizații nu s-au strâns, deoarece nu am primit o împuternicire în acest sens de la AC din România. Sper ca și această situație să se rezolve în termen scurt. După cum vedeți o parte dintre ei sunt simpatizanți legionari, dar au fost primii care s-au înscris în AC și au dezvoltat aceste filiale în SUA. Înainte de toate sunt buni români. Dacă veți înțelege acest lucru, veți putea avea o fructuoasă colaborare cu ei. Menționez : niciunul nu gtu să fie LEGIONARUL ODIOS descris de cărțile noastre de istorie. O parte dintre ei au doar simpatii pentru doctrina legionară , dar nu sunt LEGIONARI ! Sunt oameni care vor să ajute neamul românesc de a scăpa de sub jugul comunist, exceptând cazul Halmaghi. După informațiile mele sunt în jur de 500 de membri în AC și ar fi păcat să neglijezi această forță. Parese că este cea mai numeroasă organizație din SUA. Nu o neglijați

9 mai 1991

Domnilor Derbedei Dan Costescu si Cornel Dumitrescu,

Va informez ca huliganul roman [redacted] a venit la Los Angeles si m-a injurat la telefon si m-a amenintat cu moartea pentruca am scris o scrisoare impotriva curvei Doina Cornea.

b6
b7c

Am fost informat ca huliganul [redacted] a fost adus de voi cei ce patronati ziarul Lumea Libera si a fost gazduit si plimbat aici pe banii huliganilor neonazisti din banda lui Gheorghe Calciu.

Acesti huligani din banda lui Gh. Calciu, au tinut si tin sub teroare comunitatea romaneasca din Los Angeles.

Derbedei lui Calciu se numeau Uniunea de Credinta si Libertate iar acum s-au autointitulat Alianta Civica.

Domnilor derbedei Dumitrescu si Costescu, voi a-ti inceput actiunea impotriva tiganilor cu 5 ani in urma si continuati si acum.

Persoane demne de incredere m-au informat ca derbedeul Costescu, ar fi intreat pe Ureche Bleaga Mihai I, daca mai intentioneaza sa scoata pe tigani din Romania cum i-a scos si i-a trimis la Bug cind a fost rege si Mihai I Blegul a raspuns afirmativ.

Ce vreti voi dela tigani bai derbedeilor? Credeti ca regele va fi avantajat daca e in conectie cu doua lichele ca voi care a-ti fost membrii ai PCR? Futuva familiile in git de jigodii.

Voi o faceti acum pe legionarii. Ducetiva dracului de hahalere.

b6
b7c

[redacted] a inceput sa atace pe evrei. Vreti sa-l razbunati pe criminalul Bishop Trifa. Mai ciu metilor, stati dracului in banca voastra ca eu va fut membrii familiilor voastre in gura. Voi nu va dati seama ce faceti.

Bai Dumitrescule, de ce nu vrei tu sati dai hoitul tau imputit si plin de grasime la Fabrica de Sapun STELA din Bucuresti, sa-l foloseasca ca materie prima sa faca sapun ca sa se spele tiganii de paduchi?

Si tu mai Costescule, mai suflet inchiriat, de ce te amsteci tu in viata politica a romanilor, mai jigodie? Noi n-am uitat ca ai fost membru al PCR. Futute in gura de dement Costescule.

Te-ai asezat ca un paduche lesinat si te-au fotografiat cu regele si acum il injura toti romanii si il acuza ca vrea sa intre in Romania de brat cu membrii PCR. I-ai stricat regelui relatiile cu romanii.

Voi veti continua actiunea voastra nazist impotriva tiganilor si a evreilor, dar nu uitati ca intr-o zi va veti intilni cu tiganii din grupa lui Dan Tiganul si va veti primi pedeapsa.

De noi nu mai scapati asa usor.

In incheere, incaodata va fut in git pe toti membrii familiilor voastre si astept sa ma criticati in ziarul vostru de sters la cur.

Va fut in gura de ratati. S-o pupati pe [redacted] pe cur.

b6
b7c

Danciu Tiganul Andersen

Catre,

Dan Costescu, Cornel Dumitrescu si [redacted]

b6
b7C

Domnilor derbedei,

Voi aveti prea multi bani si platiti pe nebunul [redacted] ca sa atace pe tiganii din Los Angeles ? Ce vreti voi dela tigani?

b6
b7C

Futuva familiile in git de nazisti. Voi credeti ca nu va intilniti cu tiganii. Bagamiaspula in mamele voastre de derbedei.

Voi nu va dati seama ce faceti mai idiotilor.

Refugiatii romani din Los Angeles traiesc sub teroarea nebunului [redacted] si ciobanului preot [redacted] care credem ca sint platiti de voi.

b6
b7C

Credeti ca nu putem sa ne aparam de voi? Ce ziceti daca va vizitam intr-o noapte pe la orele 2. Vreti sa discutati cu Trifa? Va ajutam sa mergeti la el. Decescrieti impotriva rabinului Moses?

N-aveti treaba ? Voi a-ti trait linistiti pina acum . Situati voastra trebuie sa se schimbe daca nu stati in bancile voastre.

Apare pe ring tiganul Dan Andersen. Dece imi cereti voi bani pentru abonament la ziar? Pentru care ziar? Bagamias pula in gura mamelor voastre de excroci. Vreti bani dela tigani?

Derbedeul Dan Costescu a inceput atacul impotriva tiganilor decind era la Universul, a continuat la Micro Magazin si acum la Lumea Libera. Voi va credeti asa de puternici? Pe mine ma cunoasteti?

Eu sint chirurg amator. Am studiat medicina la facultatea Maidanul. Am operat in Romania multi barbati, la ficat ,la stomac, la rinichi. E cineva dintre voi suferind si are nevoie de tratament medical?

Am venit in America sa muncesc, sa respect legile acestei tari si sa traiesc linistit. Voi vreti sa ma obligati sa revin la obiceiurile vechi sa practic iarasi chirurgia ?

Voi dece nu va apucati de munca mai derbedeilor? Dece provocati oamenii mai lichelelor bagamias pula in neamul mamelor voastre.

Va astept sa va luati de mine, futuva neamul in gura de jigodii.

Eu n-am nevoie de abonament la ziarul vostru pentrucu nu imi place sa-l citesc si daca vreau sa-l citesc merg si il cumpar.

Daca mai trimiteti un ziar pe adresa mea, cu consider provocare si vom discuta in alt mod.

De cind derbedeul [redacted] a scris in articolul lui si numele rabinului Moses, voi nu mai meritati respect. Sinteti nazisti.

b6
b7C

Asta-i tot pentru acum. Nu uitati ca cercul se stringe tot mai mult in jurul vostru. Eu va cer sa scoateti numele lui [redacted] din ziarul vostru daca vreti sa fie liniste.

b6
b7C

Mai Costescule bagamias pula in gitul mamei tale, trebuie sa cazi tu in labele tiganilor sa platesti pentru ce ai scris impotriva noastra. Iti trimit copie sa-ti vezi opera ta din Universul.

Șarlatanul politic [redacted]

b6

Nea Ioane,

Futuți mormântul mății de excroc. Te-ai amestecat și în problemele țiganilor, dar vei fi lichidat de țigani. Dacă nu părăsești România și nu te retragi din orice activitate politică în legătură cu țara noastră, te anunț că ți-ai futut pe maicăta cu pula ta. Noi te lichidăm.

Pe noi ne ai înșelat că tu activezi împotriva comuniștilor și noi te-am crezut. Ai acuzat Guvernul din România cu scopul de a intimida pe Iliescu și pe Roman ca să-ți dea ție Șantierul Navale și Transporturile Maritime. Futuți gîtul mății de bandit, te-am descoperit acum și fți tăicm carotida să vedem cum sare sîngele din tine.

Tu ai plătit să destabilizezi situația în România, ca să-ți pregătești câștig de milioane în viitor.

Te anunț că te lichidăm și ne predăm autorităților române și nu ne interesează ce se întîmplă cu noi mai tîrziu. Oricum, avem de partea noastră milioane de români care ne vor aplauda.

Știm una și bună, că salvăm poporul român de un excroc.

Părăsește România de urgență pînă cînd nu te întîlnești cu oameții mei că ți-ai futut pe mîta în gît.

Îți spun încăodată, te lichidăm și ne predăm. Am jurat.

Noi am crezut în tine ca în Dumnezeu. futuți gura mății de tîlhar.

Țiganul comunist [redacted] a apărut în ziarul tău.

b6
b7C

La început n-am dat importanță. Mai tîrziu ne trezim cu țiganul comunist transformat în om de bine, de tine, nu de Iliescu. L-ai trimis pe țiganul [redacted] la postul de radio Vocea Americii, i sa luat un interviu, l-ai spălat de păcatele comuniste și l-ai făcut apărător al drepturilor țiganilor. I-ai dat și bani comunistului.

Eu am fost informat că acest țigan te-a futut în cur, futuți gura mății de bandit. deci cînd a fost vorba de avantajele tale n-a mai contactat că e comunist. Așa a afirmat și [redacted] dela Vocea Americii, că [redacted] ce caută țiganul comunist la microfonul Vocii Americii.

b6
b7C

[redacted] a spus că și comuniștii sînt buni cîteodată.

Dacă sînt buni și comuniștii, de ce acuzi Guvernul României.

Tu îi acuzi pentru că n-ai loc să furi banii României și să-i exploatezi pe români, futuți groapa mății de trădător.

Din cauza țiganului comunist [redacted] te trimitem la Ceaușescu să-l înveți Democrație, că tu știi cum e democrația dacă ai avantaj.

În timpul cînd țara era condusă de [redacted] țiganul comunist [redacted] ne amenința cu scrisori împreună cu [redacted] prin intermediul Ambasadei Române din Germania comunistă și tu l-ai făcut sfînt acum pentru că a trecut de partea voastră. Acum să te scape țiganul comunist dela moarte, futuți mormântul mamei tale de șarlatan.

Tu poți să te încăpățînezi să nu părăsești România, dar noi te-am anunțat că țiganii vor fi asasinii tăi. Ai pus pe țigani sub controlul comunistului [redacted] și acuzi Guvernul României că persecută pe țigani. Mare bandit ești, futute în gură de excroc.

b6
b7C

Ah! Cîte cușite trebuie să băgăm în tine fute-n gură de excroc.

Să ne ajute dumnezeu să ne întîlnim. I-am promis-o și lui Coposu.

Țiganul Dan Andersen

Costescule,

Pii atent că voi avea ziarul meu. Tu ai să zici că e foaie de casă sau fițuică de buzunar, iar mă voi duce la judecător și îți cer despăgubire 80.000.000 de dolari și trăiesc numai din dobândă vere, și mi fac harem de țigănci. Voi sta ca un pașă și țigăncile vor dansa bete în jurul meu. O să fie prăpădeală mare vere.

Cum te vei lua de ziarul meu, încep să strig după ajutor la Micro Magazin și la Universul, pentru că noi ziaristi trebuie să ne ajutăm și să luptăm împotriva inamicilor noștri.

Dacă te porți frumos și eu te respect vere, pentru că între noi scriitorii trebuie să existe bune relații și respect reciproc, pentru că dacă noi intelectualii ce certăm, ce pretenție să mai avem la analfabeți, la pușcăriași la hoți sau criminali etc. etc..

Aceste două scrisori pe care le trimit [redacted] și lui Ion Rață, fac parte din alt meniu, pentru că acești doi ticăloși bătrâni m-au deranjat. [redacted] mi-a trimis o scrisoare în care mă insultă că sint jidan iar ticăloșul de [redacted] îmi trimite pe țiganul comunist [redacted] să supere tocmai aici în țara mea.

[redacted] e un mare bandit. Eu te-am informat în calitate de viitor coleg de breaslă.

Vere Costescule tu ai dreptul să hotărăști singur dacă vrei să ai pace cu mine sau vrei să așteptăm o zi ca să ne întâlnim și ne măsurăm forțele. Eu sînt mai înalt și mai solid decît [redacted]

Ți-am dat exemplu pe [redacted] pentru că ai stat lîngă el și să poți să faci o comparație. Eu ți-am spus că am fost chirurg în Piața Obor, pe Colentina, pe Calea Moșilor și pe Bulevard.

Ai nevoie de mine te ajut și plec în Europa. Cum vrei tu. Pînă atunci bună pace vere.

CATRE,

DOMNUL CORNEL COPOSU

PRESEDINTELE PARTIDULUI NATIONAL TARANESC

Bulevardul Carol I Nr, 34, BUCURESTI- ROMANIA.

Domnule Cornel Căposu,

In scrisoarea ce mi-ai scris-o mi te-ai adresat pe numele meu evreiesc. Ești antisemit tîlhar bătrîn ce ești. Nu-ți plac evreii.

Măi goim bătrîn și prost, tu ți-ai numit partidul tău să fie și creștin și democrat ca să aduci pe legionari împotriva evreilor.

Măi prostule, tu cînd vei supăra mai mult pe evrei, te luăm de sub plapuma ta plină de pureci și nu va mai afla nimeni, nimic de urma ta. Ce vrei tu dela [redacted] măi derbedeu bătrîn ?

Nu-ți place pentrucă este evreu ? Tu ce dovezi ai că ești mai român decît el măi goim idiot ? Și Iliescu dece nu-ți place ?

Nu știe știe să facă democrație ? Tu știi să faci democrație, mă goimule ? Tu ai făcut tot democrație mă, din 1945 și pînă acum ?

Tu te vezi cît ești de prost mă, dece nu te privești în oglindă ?

Ce latri tu ca un cîine răgușit acolo mă ? Cine ascultă la tine ?

Dacă te unești cu legionarii împotriva evreilor, n-o să-ți fie bine mă, și ai să plîngi mult măi bătrîn prost ce ești ? Stai acolo liniștit și mulțumește lui Dumnezeu pentru ce primești din America.

Dacă mai superi pe [redacted] vei pierde tot și pe tine nu are cine să te apere. Fii atent că ești în mîna noastră.

Îți amintești de prietenii tăi legionarii, cînd au supărat pe evrei că s-a ales praful și pulberea de ei în trei luni ?

Hitler cît a fost de mare și de tare s-a kaput în foarte scurt timp de cînd a călcat pe nervii evreilor.

Comuniștii care păreau de neînvinși și cuprinsese jumătate Europa, cînd au supărat prea mult pe evrei, au început să se topească precum omul de zăpadă cînd se apropie primăvara. Ori probabil că i-ați învins voi cu Alianța Civică ? Alianța Civică tot noi o susținem, dar nu mult.

Revoluția voastră tot voi ați făcut-o măi goim prost ? N-a pregătit-o [redacted] cu doi ani înainte ? Și acum îl mușcati de cur ?

Știați voi ce se va întîmpla măi plugarilor ? Ori a izbucnit spontan așa cum credeți voi ? Cine a furat revoluția mă ? Ați început voi vreo revoluție măi mămăligarilor ? Unde ai fost atunci măi hodorong bătrîn ? Acum ai pretenție să conduci tu țara gata eliberată măi prostule ? Tu să mergi la muncă măi șarlatan bătrîn, să nu vii la pomână. Să ai grijă de legionarii din Alianța Civică să nu depășească limita pentrucă au început deja să ne supere. Fii foarte atent.

Pentru astăzi atît am avut de zis și fereștete să nu te întilnești cu mine. Știi că m-ai amenințat anul trecut. Nu supara pe [redacted]

Cum vei sta liniștit așa îți vei prelungi viața.

 Să ți-o bag pe toată în cur
 Și apoi în gură să ți-o bag
 Cu ea, în gît, șuturi să-ți trag
 Să-ți fac masaj de laringită
 Și preventiv de amigdalită.
 Homosexual timpit
 Dece ești antisemit ?
 Ce, tu n-ai loc de evrei
 Să te fuți în cur cît vrei ?
 În 17 ani de pușcărie
 Numai Dumnezeu te știe
 Cîte pule tu ai supt
 Și cîți în cur te-au futut.
 De vei suge pula mea
 Mintea-ți se va lumina
 Cu cît ai s-o sugi mai des Vei avea mai mult succes .
 Sugînd pulă de iidan
 Il învingi pe [redacted]
 Pe Iliescu îl vei da jos

 În pizda măti să se cace,
 Că era ta s-a dus departe

Petrică și lupul

Guvernul s-a decis să ia singur taurul de coarne, adoplind un program dur de asanare a economiei și de intrare în realitate, care pentru mulți, va fi extrem de durerosă. În ceea ce trebuia făcut mai de mult și în ceea ce era bine să fi fost întreprins de către un guvern de uniune națională s-a angajat actualul executiv. Vom vedea cu ce consecvență se va merge până la capăt pe calea măsurilor preconizate, cu ce efecte pentru reformă și cu ce consecințe pentru soarta guvernului înșuși.

Pterderi — de circa 150 miliarde lei — înregistrate în 1989 și 1990 de întreprinderile nerentabile vor fi preluate, pentru ultima dată, de către stat și sistemul bancar; mai concret, statul va suporta în cea mai mare parte efortul financiar al compensării, lansând un împrumut public pe care se obligă să-l ramburseze treptat în anii ce vin. Odată preluate aceste pierderi, toate întreprinderile pornesc practic de la zero, urmând a depinde exclusiv de fiecare din ele dacă ulterior va mai exista sau nu. În paralel, Banca Națională va pune pe rol un program de creditare care să scoată economia din blocul financiar existent, dar, pentru a se respecta prevederile aranjamentului cu Fondul Monetar Internațional (FMI), creșterea volumului de credite nu va putea depăși 15 la sută. Creditul va fi scump și sever pentru a fi folosit doar de agenții economiei în măsură, prin rentabilitatea activităților depuse, să-l poată restitui. Creșterile de salarii nu vor fi subvenționate de către guvern, ci vor depinde exclusiv de posibilitățile financiare ale fiecărei societăți comerciale, în funcție desigur de rezultatele economice concrete, în cazul regiilor auto-nome — unde guvernul se consideră reprezentant al proprietarului — și va merge până la destituirea consilierilor de administrație care s-au angajat în negocierea de salarii peste posibilitățile financiare reale.

Prețurile interne la energie și combustibili lichizi și gazeși (petrol, gaze naturale) vor fi aliniate la cote mondiale (prin transformarea acestora din urmă în lei la cursul oficial, care va fi devalorizat masiv spre a se aproba de cursul licității valutare). Efectul inflaționist pe care această măsură îl va provoca în întreaga economie va determina o nouă acțiune de negociere a prețurilor între furnizori și consumatori, care va trebui să se încheie până la 30 septembrie. Pentru stimularea exportului principal vor fi decrete de impozit de circulația mărfurilor. Subvenții la unele resurse energetice interne (cărbune) și materii prime (precum minereu de fier) se vor menține. Sustinerea de la buget a prețurilor la unele produse și servicii de consum pentru populație (combustibili, ulei, zahăr, chiri) urmează a se păstra doar până la stabilirea și aplicarea unui sistem de indexare a salariilor la creșterea prețurilor, care să compenseze în parte rata inflației. Paralel cu aplicarea accelerată a acțiunii de privatizare (conform proiectului de lege în domeniu), va fi declanșată procedura de declarare în faliment a întreprinderilor și activităților care se dovedesc a nu avea șanse de reabilitare.

Particularii vor fi autorizați să intre pe piața licității valutare și un nou curs oficial realist va fi adoptat, corespunzător indicatilor oferite de piața valutară și în orice caz mult inferior celui oficial actual (vorbindu-se insistent de 120-125 lei dolarul). Pas decisiv în direcția convertibilității monedei naționale și unic criteriu al evidențierii adevăratei rentabilități economice, noul curs oficial al leului nu a fost încă introdus și nu va fi până când a doua tranșă din creditul acordat de FMI

REPORTAJ PERICULOS

In data de 21 mai ora 13.05, la etajul III, al clădirii Divinity School din cadrul Universității Chicago a fost împușcat mortal profesorul român Ioan Petru Culiănu. Autorul crimei nu a fost prins astăzi. Deoarece pe seama morții profesorului Culiănu s-au făcut mai multe speculații, într-o documentare de 4 zile în Chicago, am încercat o descriere și sintetizare a celor mai importante fapte legate de această crimă.

Cine este profesorul Ioan Petru Culiănu ?

Născut la Iasi, absolvent al Facultății de Filologie din Universitatea București în 1972, a plecat cu o bursă la cursuri de vară în Italia de unde nu s-a mai întors. La 21 de ani, înainte de a părăsi România avea pregătit volumul de navele Arta fugii. Participase la demonstrația studenților din 1968 și se afla urmărit de securitate. A obținut doctoratul la Universitatea din Milano și, mai apoi un al doilea doctorat la Paris. Din 1975 a devenit profesor la Universitatea Gronigen (Olanda). A obținut cetățenie olandeză și a fost căsătorit în această țară. Este și redactor-șef al revistei Inocenta din Olanda. Din 1986, Ioan Petru Culiănu pleacă în Statele Unite și devine „guest lecturer” la University of Chicago. Din 1988, Culiănu devine vizitator profesor la această universitate. Iar din luna iulie 1991 urma să devină angajatul definitiv al Universității, fiind socotit una din marile speranțe în domeniul istoriei religiilor. În Italia, Franța, Olanda, S.U.A., Culiănu a publicat 17 cărți de istoria religiilor și două de proză. Vorbea în mod curent 6 limbi iar la University of Chicago era considerat ca aparținând celebrității scoli de istorie a religiilor, începută de Mircea Eliade.

Locul crimei

Universitatea Chicago se află pe Ellis Avenue. În sudul orasului Chicago. În mijlocul unuia din cele mai proaste cartiere ale orasului de 3 milioane de locuitori. Ellis Avenue în toată lungimea ei este mărginită de facultăți ale universității. Într-una de aproape 20 de străzi și pe o suprafață de sute de hectare. Ca stil Chicago este cel mai apropiat oras de New York. În zona centrală, pe Michigan Avenue, se află cel mai înalt bloc din lume cu 110 etaje (Sears) și alte sute de zărilor noi care te ametește în momentul în care te privești chiar de la bază. Orasul este destul de murdar, de periculos în timpul nopții și este socotit al treilea oras al Americii din punctul de vedere al forței economice. Industria oțelului, a automobilelor, a cărnilor domină încă în Chicago. Aici își află sediul una din cele 5 mari bănci-depozit ale S.U.A. University of Chicago, fondată în 1890 este mândria orasului. O treime din populație este alcătuită din negri.

În campusul Universității, undeva în interior se află Divinity School. Clădirea are 3 etaje, este veche, are o parte din ziduri acoperită cu iederă. Ambele intrări dau în parcul campusului. De la iesirea din clădire, cea mai apropiată stradă se află la minimum 250 de me-tri și accesul spre ea se face prin altă clădire a universității. Se poate ajunge cu mașina până la intrarea în clădire. Clădirea nu are parter în timpul zilei. La subsol se află un club al studenților și un bufet, deschise de dimineață până la ora 16. La parter, o sală de curs, o sală de festivități, câteva birouri și două camere cu materiale. La etajul I se află sălile de cursuri și seminar și cabinetele ale profesorilor. La etajul II s-a petrecut crimă. La etajul III se află birourile ale profesorilor și sălile de seminar.

Etajul II

La etajul doi al clădirii în care se află Divinity School sînt câteva birouri, sălile de seminar și secretariatul. Pe hol, în fața scării principale, se află sălile de seminar. Biroul profesorului Culiănu se află în partea opusă a coridorului. Biroul său de lucru are numărul 304. Camera vecină este veceul în care s-a produs crima. Între usa biroului și usa veceului doar o distanță de 2 metri. Pe latura care închide coridorul se află intrarea în secretariat. Fără în fața cu intrarea în veceul se află usa care duce pe scara de serviciu. În fața usii de la biroul profesorului, de partea opusă a coridorului, se află o cameră, oarbă, destinată uneltelor de pompieri. Distanța maximă între toate cele două usi este de maximum 2,5 metri. Pe usa profesorului Petru Culiănu, scris în engleză „Dumnezeu este pasteurul meu”. Pe un panou de hirtie este agățat seminarul „Noul Testament și literatura creștină timpurie”. În fața usii se afla un cos cu flori din partea studenților. Biroul era închis pentru cercetări. Veceul în care s-a produs crima este alcătuit din cinci boxe separate între ele de pereți de lemn înalți doar de 1,8 metri. Crima s-a petrecut în cea de-a doua cabină dinspre ream. Geamul veceului dă spre parcul principal din interiorul universității și se află la 15 metri înălțime. Criminalul n-ar fi putut, pleca de aici nici dacă ar fi fost zburător. Urcându-se pe una din scările din cabină I sau 3, autorul crimei a putut să se aplece peste veretele despărțitor, să întindă bratul și să apese pe trăgaciul pistolului de la o distanță de 20 de centimetri, sau chiar mai mică. După ce a părăsit cabina și mai apoi veceul, autorul crimei a traversat culoarul de 2-2,5 metri și a intrat pe usa care dă pe scara de serviciu, pe care a coborât și a lesit fie în holul principal și mai apoi pe alee, fie în spațiile clădirii și de acolo tot pe alee, de la celebrul incendiu din America, toate clădirile din S.U.A. au obligatoriu două iesiri.

Ce s-a petrecut în 21 mai ?

Ioan Culiănu

foșt întov cel care l-au întâmpinat în Chicago. Era un anticomunist, dar după ce îl cunoaște pe rege devine un monarhist convins. În ziua de 13 aprilie, și organizația regelui o primire la Divinity School, la care participă, decanul, sefa cadrelor Mircea Eliade și alte persoane. Seara, la Drake Hotel din Chicago are loc un banchet. Regele se întâlnește cu guvernatorul statului Illinois și o vizitează pe doamna Eliade, soția lui Mircea Eliade. În 17-18 mai, la Divinity School a avut loc un seminar de istoria religiilor cu participare internațională, organizat și condus de Petru Culiănu, considerat mai apoi de Chironișle, publicista Universității Chicago, drept un mare succes. În 21 mai era Constantin și Elena, zua mamei sale. Era o zi mai puțin acționantă. La ora 13, etajele facultăților erau aproape goale. La această oră se aflau mai multe persoane în secretariatul, situat la 2 metri de veceul în care s-a produs crima. Studenții se aflau la parter, în sala de festivități și la demisol. În bar și în club. Femelele din secretariatul facultății au auzit o împușcătură, dar, după cum au declarat mai târziu polițist, au crezut că s-a spart sau a fost trântit un obiect. Fret de 2 minute nimeni nu a leștit din secretariat spre a verifica ce s-a întâmplat. Un student a intrat în toaletă, a văzut singele scurs din cabina numărul 2 și a anunțat secretariatul. Secretarele au venit și au văzut cadavrul, au plecat speriate și au anunțat poliția. S-au adunat studenții și cadrele didactice, inclusiv pompierul. În primul moment toată lumea a crezut că este vorba de o sinucidere. Era prima crimă din istoria Universității Chicago și din Divinity School. Când a sosit poliția, studenții curioși și pompierul au sters posibilele urme ale autorului crimei. Nimeni nu a încercat să privească pe fereastră. În fața clădirii se afla o bară, nimeni nu a privit pe scara de serviciu sau la iesirea din spațiile clădirii spre a vedea cine iese. Criminalului i-au fost necesare doar 20 de secunde pentru a alunge pe alee, printre alții trecători și numai 10 secunde pentru a alunge printre studenții de la parter. În prima fază, chiar și poliția a crezut că este vorba de o sinucidere. Ceva mai târziu, când au observat că nu pot descoperi arma crimei, au abandonat versiunea sinuciderii. Ulterior, poliția a solicitat scrierilor unui agent F.B.I., cunoscutor al limbii române.

Ioan Petru Culiănu locuia într-o garsonieră confortabilă într-un bloc modern aflat într-un mic parc pe strada 46, vis-à-vis de Muzeul de Știință și Tehnologie. Nu avea mașină de câteva luni. Și-o vinduse. Fiecare drumul pînă la universitate ne ios. Traversa parcul, trecea pe sub linia de metrou și mergea pe strada 47 prin cartierul de negri pînă întra în campusul universitar. De ce nu a fost pusă la cale crima pe acest traseu ? În cartierul de negri, de la 1 Ianuarie pînă în 10 iunie, ziua când am ajuns la poliție, au fost omorîți 66 de persoane. Multe crime aveau autori neidentificați pînă în acel moment. De ce nu a fost împușcat profesorul Culiănu pe drumul său de acasă, prin parculeț, prin cartierul de negri și mai apoi în campusul universitar unde rămînea pînă țirziu ?

În locuința sa, Petru Culiănu avea câteva lucruri de valoare. Tablouri evaluate la sime frumoase, o cruce pietruită pe lemn adusă de la Ierusalim, un computer pe care își scria și își dezoția textele, o bibliotecă, un fax cu answerback machine și o mașină românească înbrăcată în stil hărnesc. La intrarea în apartament avea două sisteme de alarmă iar în hol păzea un portar negru de 1,00 metri. Cele două sisteme de alarmă au apărut în ultima vreme, după ce cu un an înainte îi fusese spart apartamentul din Woodlawn Avenue și îi fusese furat o multime de dischete pe care se aflau studiile sale. De altfel, cu puțin timp înainte crimei, Ioan Petru Culiănu schimbuse și inculcarea biroului său de

ZVONURI SUB LUPĂ

Falimente profitabile

Chiar și în absența legii falimentului dispariția unor firme pare a fi un lucru firesc. Dacă tot ne-am obișnuit noi, bucurărienii, cu înduioșătoarele grații de pe la tot felul de dughone, păzindu-și cu strâncenie sucurele și berea fără termen de garanție și certificate de calitate, de ce nu ne-am zice în barbă, cînd trecem, pe lângă fostul „aprozar” devenit boultique și transformat mai apoi într-o misterioasă cameră gonflă, că o firese să se întimplă și așa. Lipsa de experiență, nepricoperea sau ghinionul i-au obligat pe întreprinzătorii să tragă oblonaclo. Pare simplu, nu-i așa ? Ei bine, gurile rele spun că nu-i tocmal așa. Că tocmal absența legislației, că tocmal tocmal din care nu-și revino fucă de la nașterea garda financiară nu favorizant — și favorizează — niște falimente, soldate, paradoxal sau nu, cu îmbogățirea unora. Ei și nu pus banul de o parte și știindu-și nu chiar așa de sigur (și nici chiar așa de curăț) ai zis mergei, bonjour, good bye. Și-au tras parțile lăsându-și pe fraieri să capete experiența muncii la patron și a economiei de piață. Prezent de multe munci, guvernul a ales un principiu pedagogic, dar, neavînd timp de substituții: a aruncat capitul în apă pentru „a învîșa să însoale. O astfel de pedagogie o profitabilă: fript cu corbă privatizării, românii va visa laurlul (sau numai boreanul gol de lauri) al protecției sugerato de vremurile cînd averea era a întregului popor. Pentru că, dacă, pînă la urmă, statul va avea grijă să mai recupereze ceva din posibilită fraudă fiscală, individual va rămîne doar cu gustul amar al încrețurii de a vedea cum se muncesc și se trăiește și, în alte legi economice. În haosul bmo organizat posibilitățile fructuoase pentru un faliment programat par a fi un lțeru logic, dar, în același hnos, posibilitatea menșinării unor societăți care produc doar pagubă este un lucru mai puțin logic. În acest caz nu mai primează un principiu pedagogic ci unul politic. Guvernul nostru nu-și amintea de a menșina în viață, pînă în pînci, într-o organizare pe care o admira stulerind a, pagubă, formele fără fond. Impozant spații comerciale de o îndecentă goli-cuno, legi care funcționează în virtutea fostelor (?) structuri socialiste, un impresionant număr de partido politice de care nu-și mai amintesc nici membrii lor fondatori, ministere — cu tot aparatul funcționare — care nu au obiectul muncii, pripădenii de ziaru cu lțerjo confidențiale care nici nu-și pan problema zilei de mîine, regii autonome și holding-uri care nu acceptat „să se revizuiască totul, dar să nu se schimb nimic”. Toate acestea produc pagube. Ele sînt suportate de la buget. Dar bugetul o alcătuit pe baza taxelor contribuabililor. Din puntea colășcantului, cum s-ar zice, are colășcantul vreun interes să pună umărul în sprijinul unor cosmellei gata-gata să cadă ? Nu. Știe colășcantul, că, totuși, susțino așa ceva ? Nu. El mai prinde cîte un zvon din zbor, dar pe care, nu are cum să-l verifice. Noi nu știm, de ce plătim taxe, nu știm ce se face cu acești bani. Așa am fost obișnuiți. Însă acum semne că nici nu vrem să ne dezobșnuim. Pe vremea aceea, cînd erai amendat că îi-ai închis balconul atențind la superba estică a dormitoarelor nongt-re comune, am văzut mulți oameni pe la tribunalele care întrobanu : „nu știți unde trebuit să plătesc amenda de 3 000 lei ca să-mi închid balconul ?” Vom întroba în curînd: nu știți la ce partid trebuit să plătesc coliza la-și la care ziaro trebuit să mă abonoz pentru că vreau și eu un bilet în mare ?

CRIMĂ ÎN DISPUTĂ POLITICĂ

la nr. 304. Din când în când, Ioan Petru Culiuanu locuia în această garsonieră cu logodnica sa de 24 de ani, Hillary Wiesner, fostă studentă a lui Ioan Culiuanu, plecată la Boston pentru continuarea studiilor. În cursul acestei veri, profesorul de 41 de ani urma să se căsătorească legal cu fosta sa studentă de 24 de ani. După unu din părinți, Hillary Wiesner era evreică. În diverse cercuri s-a discutat despre trecerea profesorului de la ortodoxie la iudaism. În ziua crimei, logodnica sa se afla la Boston. Contul în bancă și asigurarea pe viață a profesorului Ioan Petru Culiuanu erau și pe numele logodnicei sale, fapt neobișnuit la americani înainte de căsătoria legală.

Ce spun profesorii ?

Am stat de vorbă cu Frank Reynolds, profesor la Divinity School, un om în vîrstă, mare admirator al operei lui Mircea Eliade și un apropiat al profesorului Culiuanu. Profesorul Reynolds a fost cel care ne-a spus că Petru Culiuanu era socotit deja o autoritate în materie și era o mare speranță a universității în domeniul religiilor. „Era un gentleman, pedant, politicos, amabil, plin de cordialitate. N-ar fi supărat pe nimeni. Când cineva afirma lucruri stupide îl pune la punct cu sarcasm. La capitolul ironie era necruțător. Ca om de știință era o adevărată enciclopedie. Fiecare parle din echipa de bază a facultății. Toți ne așteptam la lucruri spectaculoase în următorii ani.”

L-am întrebat pe profesorul Reynolds dacă știe de un conflict al lui Ioan Petru Culiuanu cu studenții. Mi-a răspuns „în afara unor conflicte obișnuite, nu am auzit de o înfruntare sau de o dispută mai tensionată”. Profesorul Reynolds mi-a arătat corectura ultimei din cele 4 cărți a lui Culiuanu afișată sub tipar. Cartea se numește Out of this World (În afara acestei lumi), cu o prefață de Lawrence E. Sullivan, directorul centrului de studii religioase a Universității Harvard. Am stat de vorbă și cu Awendolyn Barnes, secretara lui Culiuanu, o negresă între două vîrste, extrem de îndurerată de dispariția profesorului. „Nu aveam de ce să-l omor. Era cel mai mare gentleman dintre umaniștii Universității Chicago”. Am încercat să aflu dacă profesorul dădea semne de nervozitate în perioada premergătoare crimei. Nici unul. L-am întrebat pe celelalte secretare dacă au observat un suspect, o prezență mai insistență din afară în acea perioadă. Mi s-a spus un nu categoric. Am încercat să obțin o întâlnire cu șefa catedrei Mircea Eliade, doamna Wendy Doniger, cea care a vorbit și la serviciul divin ținut de sfârșitul profesorului Culiuanu. Nu am reușit în ziua respectivă și în ziua următoare, plecând din oraș. Studenții au fost extrem de amabili, afectați de pierderea profesorului și nu au adăugat nimic celor spuse de profesorul Reynolds. Mi s-a nscuns un lucru. Că a existat un conflict între Petru Culiuanu și un student grec. Existase o presiune a studenților pentru excluderea acestui student grec de la cursuri, pornind de la comportamentul său bizar și deranjant. El a fost primit doar în asistențele profesorului. Grecul continuând să deranjeze a fost în cele din urmă exclus de profesorul Culiuanu de la cursuri. Trebuie spus că University of Chicago aniversase o sută de ani și această crimă în perimetrul ei a deranjat multă lume. Poliția a verificat și această pistă și studentul grec a fost scos din cauză.

Ce spune poliția ?

La 4-5 kilometri de universitate, pe Wentworth Street se află sediul departamentului poliției din Chicago. Am spus la intrare că trebuie să ajung la șeful poliției. Mi s-a spus etajul și camera. Fără nici o legătură am ajuns la etajul doi al clădirii, pînă în dreptul unei teșghele dincolo de care nu se putea trece. Dincolo de ea țoșgăiau poliștii cu pistoale și cătușe pe un șold și cu aparate de emisie recepție pe celălalt. Comandantul lipsea. În locul lui am stat de vorbă cu echipa de detectivi care investighează: moartea profesorului Culiuanu, celălalt formal din Ellyn E. Weiss și Robert A. McGuire de la sectorul 1, crime prin violență. Cei doi poliști au susținut că unele crime au fost șterse de martorii precipitați. Nu au putut fi identificate amprenta. Nu au fost găsiți suspecți prin prajmă. Nu au fost găsite arme. Toate datele indică ori un mare profesionist, ori un naiv. Au cercetat toate pistele dar nu au nici un indiciu. S-au interesat de legăturile sale cu comunitatea românească din Chicago. Nici un indiciu de conflict. I-am întrebat dacă știu că printre emigranții români s-au strecurat și oameni ai securității. Au spus că știu asta dar nu au reușit să identifice nici un colaborator. Pentru a investiga mai complex comunitatea românească și pentru alte motive, a fost chemat la Chicago și un detectiv al FBI vorbitor de limba română: Cel doi ofițeri nu au vrut să-mi comunice numele detectivului FBI și nici un detaliu despre investigațiile acestuia. Ea fel că doi poliști mi-au spus că nu au găsit nici un indiciu că în această crimă ar fi implicată membrul al gărzii de fier. Pe hol, la plecare, am întrebat-o pe Ellyn E. Weiss care este părerea ei despre postulul autor al crimei. Numai și numai cu enunțurile de părere care nu are absolut nici o importanță a precizat ea autorul crimei ar putea fi cineva din interiorul Universității.

Ce spun prietenii ?

Mircea Sabău, radiolog la University of Chicago a spus, „L-am cunoscut pe Culiuanu încă de cînd a venit în Chicago. Scrisese și o carte în italiană despre Mircea Eliade. Era un mare admirator al profesorului și după moartea lui Eliade a devenit un apropiat al doamnei Eliade. Este stupid să se spună că românii din Chicago ar avea vreo legătură cu moartea lui Culiuanu. S-a vorbit și despre implicarea legionarilor. Este altă gogoriță. Legionarii sînt oameni trecuți de 70 de ani. Ei nu mai au o ideologie proprie mișcărilor de nădădă, sînt doar anticomuniști și naționaliști. Și nu mai au nici forță. Eu cred că povestea cu legionarii e doar o falsă pistă bună de exploatat doar de securitate. Cît privește convertirea lui Culiuanu la iudaism nu știu de unde s-a născut și asta. Eu cred că Petru Culiuanu nu era un credincios în adevăratul sens al cuvîntului. Toate religiile erau pentru el un subiect de glădire, de cercetare, dar în esență era un sceptic și le privea pe toate cu detașare.”

Ce spun legionarii ?

Am stat de vorbă cu mai mulți legionari bătrîni din Chicago. Prefer să nu le dau numele. Unul dintre ei, Eugen Vălsan mi-a permis să-i dau numele și mi-a spus: „Culiuanu a ajuns la Chicago grație lui Mircea Eliade iar Mircea Eliade a fost legionar, deși nu a făcut politică legionară. Eu am fost cu Eliade în același lagăr. După aceea, el n-a mai făcut politică legionară, dar în esență lui a rămas ce a fost. Luat de aici, grosso-modo, Culiuanu fiind aproape de lumea lui Eliade, aparținea și el familiei noastre. Faptul că voia să se căsătorească în curînd cu o evreică era treaba lui. Nu eram fericiți de asta dar nici nu ne preocupam. Este o altă supozitie absurdă. De fapt, nu se caută dect un motiv ca să fim implicați. Ultima dată m-am întâlnit cu Culiuanu la biserică, de Paști. Eram în raporturi mai mult decît cordiale. Toți legionarii, alții erau mai sîni m-au sunat să aște vestii și cîni îndurerată. Noi respingem în mod categoric orice acuzație legată de implicarea noastră în moartea acestui savant român.”

Ce spun rudele ?

Doamna Tereza Petrescu, soția disidentului Dan Petrescu, fost ministru secretar de stat la Ministerul Culturii pentru o scurtă perioadă după căderea lui Ceaușescu, este și sora profesorului Ioan Petru Culiuanu. Am fixat o întâlnire la domiciliul lui Ioan Petru Culiuanu. Nu ajunsese la ora fixată. Am stat pe bancă în fața blocului. Am observat că sînt supravegheat de două persoane. Am plecat, să dau un telefon pentru a afla ce s-a întimplat cu întîrzieră doamnei Tereza Petrescu. Am mers pe jos pînă la Muzeul de Știință și Tehnologie. Am fost urmărit pînă acolo și înapoi. Am așteptat sub privirile celor doi. Am plecat să dau încă un telefon. Am fost urmărit pînă la jumătatea drumului spre muzeu. Apoi mașina a dispărut. La muzeu, am întâlnit-o pe doamna Petrescu, cu care am revenit la blocul din strada 47 și am urcat în garsoniera profesorului. Lucrurile cele mai importante, inclusiv unele tablouri erau împachetate și aveau pe ele eticheta logodnicei, grăbită să-și însușească lucrurile mai valoroase din apropierea fostului ei profesor și logodnic. Doamna Tereza Petrescu venise din Franța pentru formalitățile legate de înmormîntarea fratelui ei. Din Franța a avut mai multe convorbiri telefonice cu fratele ei în perioada premergătoare crimei. Încă de la sfîrșitul studiilor, spunea Tereza Petrescu, Ioan Petru Culiuanu se știa urmărit. Îar în ultima vreme fusese amenințat de mai multe ori. Telefonio, prin scrisori, prin mesaje”. Din februarie 1990, Petru Culiuanu a început să scrie articole critice la adresa noii puteri din România. Cele mai multe au apărut în săptămînalul american de limbă română Lumea Liberă de la New York. Dar toate amenințările nu reușeau să-l înfricoșeze. Le trata cu dispreț și ironie. „Eu cred că extrem de implicată în această crimă este o arpa de dreapta a securității care a înmormîntat o serie de simboluri legionare. Precizez că nu cred că legionarii au vreun amestec, ei sînt oameni de 80 de ani, gata să mediteze asupra destinului românesc, cîini de noștie dar incapabili de violență”. De remarcare că asasinarea profesorului Culiuanu are loc la exact 90 de ani de la moartea lui Nicolae Jorga. În plus, profesorul Culiuanu a fost omorât de către un român, Drăgan, înmormîntat în Canada. tot cu un pistol de mare calibru. Am mai aflat că în timpul vizitei regelui au fost reținuți doi americani de origine română. Doamna Tereza Petrescu este convinsă că această crimă este opera securității. „Eu îl acuz direct de această crimă în care presupun că au făcut cîștar o alianță. Toate firele și mai ales amenințările conduc la o facțiune de dreapta a securității”.

Ce spune securitatea ?

L-am contactat pe fostul important ofițer de securitate Josiu Turcu, fugit în prima parte a anului 1989 în SUA. În punctul său de vedere, „După cum știți, în zilele în istoria acestui serviciu nu s-a practicat lichidarea unui om de talia lui Culiuanu. El nu îndeplinea criteriile pentru a fi o țintă. Nu poate fi vorba nici de un om din comunitatea românească, să-i zicem colaborator al securității. În primul rînd că și serviciile străine și alții folosesc pentru o asemenea operațiune un om din afară și pun la cale părăsirea locului și a țării în cea mai mare viteză. Dar pentru securitate deși au existat colaboratori și în Chicago, românii nu erau o problemă. La New York și în Canada, da. Acolo li înțau teribil pe Ceaușescu. Mai mult, nu cred că este opera securității pentru că puține servicii secrete au îndrăznit să pună la cale asemenea operațiuni pe teritoriul SUA. Cine avea interesul să o facă ? Ar fi fost o enormă gafă politică. Nu uitați că la București conducerea aparatului, specialiștii au rămas aceeași. Securitatea este înaltă și cel de la vîrf sînt oameni bine pregătiti și nu-i cred în stare de asemenea prostie. După părerea mea nu există nici 25% posibilitatea ca prin logica sa sistemul securității să pună la cale această crimă. Ar trebui săutut în relațiile cu studenții, în grupul celor care ar fi avut interesul ca profesorul să nu se căsătorească cu o evreică”.

Ce au scris ziarele ?

Tereza Will, ziarista la Chicago Tribune a scris mai multe articole despre această crimă. Unul dintre ele conținea opinia unor disidenți români aflați în SUA. Dorin Tudoran și Liviu Ciocâncol susțin ideea că o implicare a securității în această crimă este mai mult decît posibilă. Chicago Sun Times publică sub semnătura lui Jim Casey (reporterul general acreditat pe lângă cartierul general a poliției) și Phillip O'Connor un articol detaliat legat de împrejurarea morții lui Culiuanu. Același Jim Casey revine cu un alt articol și menționează amenințările primite de Culiuanu în perioada pre și post Ceaușescu. La fel, Chicago Sun Times publică în articolele sale cîteva opinii extrem de elogioase ale profesorilor și studenților lui Culiuanu despre personalitatea, savantului radiolog. Într-un articol nepublicat încă, radiologul Mircea Sabău, pe lângă faptul că subliniază dimensiunile personalității lui Culiuanu și ale operei sale, precizează amănunțit că înainte de 4 zile de a fi ucis, Ioan Petru Culiuanu își anunșase prima sa vizită în România după 20 de ani.

Ipoteze

1. — Un conflict cu un student sau altcineva din interiorul universității.
2. — Un conflict cu o grupare naționalistă care vedea în viitoarea căsătorie cu o evreică un fapt reprobabil.
3. — Alte persoane interesate să împiedice această căsătorie și eventual să încaseze polita de asigurare.
4. — Serviciile secrete române iritate de criticile violente la adresa securității, a președintelui Ion Iliescu, a Frontului Salvării Naționale.

Observație

Indiferent cine a comis această crimă abominabilă, păgubitoare pentru cultura română și universală, nu putea să riște executarea operațiunii într-un loc uitaț de îngust, neciretat de publicul din afară (devenit imediat bătuțor la ochi). Cu înfinit de mici procente de risc, erima ar fi putut fi comisă în jurul blocului, la întorcerea de la facultate, sau în timp ce Ioan Petru Culiuanu traversa cartierul de negri spre casă sau spre Universitatea Chicago. Crima a fost comisă de un adevărat profesionist sau de un mare naiv. Dar orice profesionist ar fi ales varianta executat pe traseu și ar fi respins-o pe cea din clădirea universității unde, în 999 de cazuri din 1000, la auzul împușcăturii, una din secretare ar fi leșit pe hol și i-ar fi surprins pe criminalul țînd din toaletă. Pînă la descoperirea criminalului, amenințările și condițiile speciale ale locului crimei rămîn chestiunile cele mai elare.

[redacted]
[redacted] furnished the following information concerning three harassing and/or threatening telephone messages left on his home answering machine during August, 1991 by an individual who identified himself as TIGANUL DAN ANDERSEN.

The Civic Alliance Party is one of the major political organizations in Romania which has opposed the policies of the current President Iliescu. [redacted]
[redacted]

[redacted] As a result, [redacted] have come to the forefront of organizations in opposition to the present government in Romania. In May, 1991 IOAN PETRU CULIANU, a close associate of [redacted] was shot and killed on the campus of the University of Chicago and his unsolved murder is believed by many in the Romanian-American community to have been a political assassination due to his opposition to the Romanian government.

At approximately 3:56 pm, August 8, 1991, while [redacted] was away from his residence he received a brief message left on his telephone answering service from someone speaking in Romania. [redacted] noted that the name TIGANUL in Romanian means "Gypsy" and the caller spoke Romanian with an accent that could be Gypsy or Jewish. In this first call the person confined his conversation to criticism of [redacted] involvement with Civic Alliance and the utterance of numerous obscenities. A second similar telephone call was received at approximately 11:45 am, August 11, 1991, wherein the caller again voiced criticism of [redacted] activities with Civic Alliance and numerous obscenities. A third telephone message was received at approximately 10:25 am, August 18, 1991, wherein the caller stated, "If you don't give up your work with Civic Alliance, we will kill you. We already have a bullet with your name on it. We will send you after your friend CULIANU. This is your last message." These phrases were intermingled with numerous obscenities.

[REDACTED] advised that the unknown caller has the erroneous opinion that Civic Alliance is anti-Gypsy and Jewish, when in fact the organization has constantly supported minorities in their struggle against the current Romanian government.

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] noted that CULIANU has received similar telephone threats from some unknown individual claiming to be Gypsy shortly before his murder and had laughed them off. As a result, [REDACTED] made inquiries among his associates in the Romanian-American publication field in an attempt to further identify TIGANUL DAN ANDERSEN.

[REDACTED] advised that he has learned that DAN COSTESCU and CORNELL DUNITRESCU, publishers of Lumea Libera Romaneasca magazine, P.O. Box 7640, Rego Park, New York 11374, (718) 672-7195 have received several threatening letters through the mail from an individual who has identified himself as TIGANUL DAN ANDERSEN, P.O. Box 1971, Los Angeles, California 90078. The threatening letters are typewritten in Romanian on stationary being ANDERSEN's letterhead with the indicated return address and a photograph of a white male, approximately in his late 30's or early 40's, wearing a heavy dark beard and mustache while wearing a cowboy hat. In these letters, ANDERSEN expresses his opposition to their publication support Civic Alliance and claims that that organization is fascist.

b7C

[REDACTED] further advised that he has been told by a confidential source that ANDERSEN may have made a similar threat to someone at the Romanian Embassy in New York related to some type of immigration problem. Apparently ANDERSEN was promised the assistance of the embassy related to his problem if he wrote a letter to the Romanian Press attacking the activities of Civic Alliance. [REDACTED] has been told of such a letter to the press has been published in Romania and feels that the threatening letters and telephone calls may relate to some type of planned attack on the organization by a hostile political faction or the current Romanian government itself.

advised that in view of the fact that his associate, IOAN PETRU CULIANU, received similar telephone threats shortly before he was murdered, he considers the threats from TIGANUL DAN ANDERSEN to be serious in nature. As a result, was reporting the threats to the FBI for appropriate investigation.

I read your newspaper number 143, and I conclude , fuck your families in the neck, vagabonds. Take it in your penis, the whole Jewish nation. You are scared, you fucked up prostitutes, you bandits. You are no longer Legionnaires now. And so the hunting of Nazi's is starting. What are we going to do about the article written by these nuts. You are responsible because you asked, that's all... However many times you mentioned the Jews you can fuck yourselves in your own necks. You're scared and can fuck your own necks. One of these days you will see

Because of this bomb GHEORGHE CALCIU and a crazy ... problem. You won't escape punishment.

DAN THE GYPSY

MR. COSTESCU

Read above. The gypsy has an office in America. Fuck your mother, you Nazi. You don't have the courage to criticize us. You lost your voice, fuck your brains and your mother, you piece of shit.

Fuck your mother, asshole. I heard that you are angry with the gypsies because a gypsy butt-fucked you and he greased his penis by mistake with REVULSIN(not able to translate) and when he put it in your ass you felt hot at first and then cold , and you're unhappy with the gypsies because they're not educated. Put your penis in your mother's mind, let's fuck her in the neck , that prostitute.

The same thing was done by the gypsies to GHEORGHE CALCIU when he was in jail, they butt-fucked him and used REVULSIN. And Father CALCIU is also angry at the gypsies the way you are.

I read in your paper that GHEORGHE CALCIU is saying prayers in New York for erecting penises. Put your penis in the necks of your passive homosexuals. When you're not butt-fucked you become angry and critical of the gypsies. Eat the scum off our balls.

Let's criticize your ass. Find courage in some cow shit, and put our penises in your writer's brain.

Let's say put your penis in your prostitute mother's mouth.

Because of you , the King has lost respect because he had a picture taken with TINA, putting my penis in your mother's lungs, asshole.

You have [redacted] vagina on your table , progress and luck this summer.

b6
b7C

Fuck your mouth, you stupid COSTESCU. I want to hear you squeal (very serious threat - as cutting a pig's throat will make him squeal).

Get some balls to say something about the gypsies. Let's put my penis in your family. Fuck your mouth, asshole.

I am waiting for your criticism. You don't have the guts, you're an idiot, fuck your neck.

GYPSY DAN ANDERSEN

TO THE BUMS DAN COSTESCU and CORNEL DUMITRESCU

I'm informing you that the Romanian hooligan [redacted] arrived in Los Angeles and swore at me on the phone and he threatened me with death because I wrote a letter about that prostitute DOINA CORNEA.

b6
b7C

I was advised that the hooligan [redacted] was brought by your patrons of LUMEA LIBERA (FREE WORLD publication) and was accommodated and accompanied here hosted by the Neo-Nazi hooligans of GHEORGHE CALCIU.

b6
b7C

Those hooligans of GHEORGHE CALCIU's band held in the past and still hold, the Romanian community of Los Angeles in terror.

CALCIU's assholes used to call themselves "Beliefs and Liberty" and now call themselves the CIVIC ALLIANCE group.

The assholes DUMITRESCU and COSTESCU, you began this action against the gypsies five years ago and now continue.

Reliable persons informed me that the asshole COSTESCU asked the floppy ear of MIHAI I (the king) if he intends to remove the gypsies from Romania in the same way in which he sent them to Bug (located in the Ukraine) when he was King and the King says yes.

What do you want from the gypsies, you assholes? Do you believe that the King would be an advantage if he's connected with two assholes like you, members of the Communist Party of Romania? Fuck your families in the neck, you jackass.

Now you claim you are Legionnaires. Go to hell, you assholes.

Your [redacted] started to attack the Jews. You want revenge for BISHOP TRIFA.

b6
b7C

Your aggressors stay in hell on your side because I'll fuck your family in the mouth. You don't know what you're doing.

DUMITRESCU, why don't you give your fat stinking body to the soap factory STELA in Bucharest, so it can be used in a soap making process to clean the crabs from the gypsies.

And you COSTESCU, rented soul, why are you involved in the political life of Romanians, you jackass? We don't forget you were a member of the Communist Party. Fuck your mouth crazy COSTESCU.

You laid down like a crazy crab and get your picture taken with the King and now all the Romanians curse him and accuse him of wanting to enter Romania with old members of the Communist Party. You ruined the relations of the King and the Romanians.

If you continue Nazi actions against gypsies and Jews, don't forget one day you will meet DAN THE GYPSY and you will receive your punishment.

You won't escape from us very easily.

In conclusion, again I fuck your necks and the members of your families and am waiting to be criticized in your paper, to be used as toilet paper.

Fuck your mouth you worthless idiot. Kiss [redacted] ass.

b6

b6

MR. ASSHOLES,

Do you have so much money that you pay the crazy [redacted] to attack the gypsies of Los Angeles? What do you want of the gypsies?

b6
b7C

Fuck you Nazi family necks. You think that you won't meet with the gypsies. Put your penis in your mother, you jackasses.

You don't know what you're doing. You're idiots.

The Romanian refugees of Los Angeles live under the terror of the crazyman [redacted] and that shepherd priest [redacted] who we think are paid by you.

b6
b7C

Do you think we can't protect ourselves from you. What would you think if we would drop in at 2:00 a.m. Do you want to talk to TRIFA? (TRIFA is dead). We'll help you get to him. Why are you writing against Rabbi MOSES?

Don't you have anything to do? You lived quietly until now. Your situation must be changed if you don't stay in your places.

The gypsy DAN ANDERSEN appears in the ring. Why are you asking me for money for the subscription for the paper? For what newspaper? I put my penis in the mouth of your mother, you crooks. You want money from gypsies? Asshole DAN COSTESCU began the attack against the gypsies when he was at UNIVERSUL (Romanian newspaper), continued at MICRO MAGAZINE and now at FREE WORLD.

Do you think you're that powerful? Do you know me?

I am an amateur surgeon. I studied medicine on the streets. In Romania, I operated on men, their livers, stomachs, kidneys. Is there one of you suffering in need of medical treatment?

I came to America to work, to respect the laws of this country and to live quietly. Are you expecting me to return to my old practise of surgery?

Why don't you start working, you assholes. Why are you provoking the people, you jackasses. I put my penis in your mother's family.

I am waiting for you to take from me, fucking in the mouth your families, you assholes.

I don't need your subscription to your paper because I don't like to read it and if I want to read it I'll go buy it.

If you send that paper to me at my address again, I'll consider this a provocation and we'll discuss it another way.

Since the asshole [redacted] wrote in his article the name RABBI MOSES, you don't deserve any more respect. You are Nazi's.

b6
b7C

This is all for now. Don't forget that the circle gets smaller around you. I ask you to withdraw [redacted] name from your paper if you want silence.

b6
b7C

You COSTESCU, put my penis in your mother's neck, you must fall in the gypsie's hands to pay for what you wrote against us! I'll send you a copy to let you see your work at UNIVERSUL.

TO POLITICAL IDIOT [REDACTED]

IOAN (degrading salutation)

Fuck your mother's grave, you crook. You are getting mixed up in gypsie's problems and you will be killed by the gypsies. If you don't leave Romania and don't retract from political activity in connection with our country, I will announce that you fucked your mother. We are going to kill you.

You tricked us into thinking you are against the Communists and we believed you. You accused the Romanian government, specifically ILIESCU and ROMAN, to give you the naval bases and maritime transport. Fuck your mother, you crook, I found you out now and will cut your coratid artery to see how the blood squirts out.

You paid to destabilize the situation in Romania, to prepare your million dollars of profit in the future.

We are announcing that we will kill you and give ourselves up to the Romanian authorities and we aren't interested in what happens to us later. Anyway, we have the millions of Romanians on our side that will applaud our actions.

We know one, and a good one, to save the Romanian people from a crook,

Leave Romania right away, before you meet with my people because you and your mother will be fucked.

I'll say it again, we'll kill you and give ourselves up. We are under oath.

We believed in you as we did in God, fuck your mother, crook.

The gypsy Communist [REDACTED] appeared in your paper. In the beginning we didn't pay attention. Later, when we woke up with the ~~gypsy~~ Communist transformed into a good guy, of you, not of ILIESCU. You sent the gypsy [REDACTED] to the radio "VOICE OF AMERICA", they interviewed him, you washed him of Communist sin and made him the defender of the gypsie's rights. You gave money to the Communist.

b6
b7c

I was told that this gypsy butt-fucked you, fucked your mother, you crook, so when there was word of your advantage, you didn't count on him being a Communist. This was confirmed by [REDACTED] from VOICE OF AMERICA. When I asked him what is a Communist gypsy doing at the microphone of the VOICE OF AMERICA, [REDACTED] said even the Communists can be good sometime.

b6
b7c

If the Communists are good, why do you accuse the Romanian government?

You accuse them because you don't have room to steal Romanian money, and to exploit Romanians, fuck your mother's grave, traitor.

Because of the gypsy Communist [redacted] we are sending you to [redacted] to teach him democracy, because you know how democracy is when you have the advantage.

b6
b7C

In the times that the country was headed by [redacted] the gypsy Communist [redacted] was threatening us with letters together with [redacted] through the Romanian Embassy in Communist Germany and now you sanctify him because he's on your side. Now get your Communist gypsy to help you escape death, fuck your mother's grave, you idiot.

b6
b7C

You can take a stand and not leave Romania but we have broadcast that the gypsies will kill you. You put that gypsy under the control of the Communist [redacted] and accuse the Romanian government that the gypsies persecute you. You are a big crook, fuck you asshole.

b6
b7C

Oh! How many knives should stab you, fuck you, you crook.

God help that we meet. I promised this to COPOSU (Chief of National Peasant Party).

GYPSY DAN ANDERSEN

COSTESCU

Be carefull, I am going to have my own paper. You will say that it's just a junk paper, but I will take it to the judge, to ask you for damages of $80,000,000 dollars and I'm going to lkive on the interest. I'll have a harem of gypsy women. I will sit like a sheik and my gypsy women will dance drunk around me. It will be quite a spectacle cousin.

As soon as you attack my paper I will ask for help from MICRO MAGAZINE and UNIVERSUL because we journalists have to help each other to fight our enemies together.

If you are nice I will respect you, cousin, because between us writers there should be good relations and reciprocal respect, because if we intellectuals fight, what can we expect from the illiterates, convicts, thieves and criminals.

Those two letters which I sent to CAPOSU and [redacted] are part of another menu, because those two old crooks disturbed me. [redacted] sent me an insulting letter insinuating I am a Jew and [redacted] sent me the Communist [redacted] to harrass me here in my country.

b6
b7C

[redacted] is a big crook. I am informing you of this in my position of your future colleage.

b6
b7C

Cousin COSTESCU, you have the right to decide yourself if we will have peace together or you want me to wait until we meet and challenge each other. I am taller and stronger than [redacted]

b6
b7C

I use the example of [redacted] because I sit next to him and for you to be able to make a comparison. I told you I was a surgeon in Obor, in Colentina and Mosilor Street and on the

b6

Boulevard.

You need me to help you to go to Europe. How do you want this. Until then, peace cousin.

MR. CORNEL CAPOSU (degrading salutation)

In the letter you sent me you wrote and addressed it to my Jewish name. You are anti-semitic, old thief. You don't like Jews.

My old idiot, you named your party to be Christian and democratic to bring together the Legionnaires against the Jews.

You stupid one, when you anger the Jews, we will take you from your blanket filled with crabs and no one will know anything about you. What do you want from [redacted] ny old asshole?

b6
b7c

Don't you like him because he's a Jew? What proof do you have that you're more Romanian than him? you old idiot. And why don't you like ILIESCU?

Doesn't he know how to make a democracy? Do you know, idiot, how to make a democracy? Did you make a democracy from 1945 until now?

Do you see how stupid you are? look in the mirror.

Why do you bark like a dog? Who would listen to you.

If you are united with the Legionnaires against the Jews, it won't go well for you and you will cry a lot, you stupid old man. Stay there, remain quiet and thank God for what you are receiving from America.

If you anger [redacted] anymore, you will lose all and you won't have anyone to protect you. Be careful, you are in our hands.

b6
b7c

Remember your Legionnaire friends, when they make the Jews unhappy, they will turn to ashes in three months.

HITLER, as powerful as he was, was finished in a very short period of time from the time he stepped on Jewish nerves.

The Communists which were looking invincible and captured half of Europe. When they angered the Jews they started to melt like the snowman when spring arrives. Or maybe you will overpower them with the CIVIC ALLIANCE. The CIVIC ALLIANCE is protected by us, but not much.

Your revolution was started by you, stupid? Weren't they prepared two years ahead by [redacted] And now you bite his ass?

b6
b7C

Do you know what's going to happen, peasants? Or do you believe it spontaneous. Who stole the revolution? Did you start the revolution, you corn meal eaters? Where were you then, you old rogue? Now do you have the guts to lead the liberated country, you stupid idiot. You should go to work, you old crook, and not take anything for granted. Be careful the Legionnaires of the CIVIC ALLIANCE do not exceed the limit because they have already started to bother us. Pay close attention.

This is all I have to say for today and be careful not to run in to me. You know you threatened me last year. Don't anger [redacted].

If you stay quiet, you'll live longer.

The Romanian newspaper article dated July 15, 1991 was not translated. As per referenced Fd-302 number 6. it is an extract from EXPRESS newspaper, containing an article by CORNEL NISTORESCU regarding the murder of IOAN CULIANU. CORNEL NISTORESCU visited Chicago in June 1991 and published his interviews with University of Chicago personnel, Chicago Police Department, CULIANU's sister, and former Securitate official LIVIU TURCU, who defected to the United States in 1989. NISTORESCU reported that TURCU apparently gave Securitate involvement less than a 25% possibility. NISTORESCU concluded the crime was either committed by a real professional or by someone naive; and that any professional would have elected to kill CULIANU outside the University instead of inside of CULIANU's office building.

ANDERSEN stated he has done nothing with criminal intent. He noted that what he has done has been politically motivated. ANDERSEN also noted that if he had the intent to commit a crime, it would be foolish of him to provide his name. He further noted he has been talking to Romanian people about Romanian life and is not threatening Americans. ANDERSEN was advised that it is a violation of Federal law to send threatening letters or to make threatening telephone calls to anyone, not just Americans.

ANDERSEN was asked if he had ever been arrested by police in San Diego, California. He stated he had not. When asked about records that indicate he was booked and released by the San Diego Police Department on February 23, 1984, for making an annoying phone call, ANDERSEN then recalled he had been questioned by police in San Diego. ANDERSEN noted he arrived in the United States in 1983 and was working part-time in San Diego as a Romanian mechanic. He noted he was not paid for his work and called his boss to get the money he felt was owed to him. He also noted the situation was resolved.

ANDERSEN was asked when he last had contact with [REDACTED]. He stated he called [REDACTED] in the night approximately one week ago. ANDERSEN also stated he would never call [REDACTED] again.

b6
b7C

ANDERSEN advised he was very sorry for making the telephone calls and writing the letters. He also advised he would make no more threatening telephone calls, nor would he write any more threatening letters.

For information of the Chicago Division, on 9/17/91,

Supposition in the Toronto area Romanian community at the time indicated that DRAGAN may have secretly obtained financing for his magazine from members of the fascist Iron Guard organization. In the latest issue of "Agora" magazine, _____ expressed his unhappiness with the pace of the investigation of the murder of CULIANU by the Chicago Police Department and the FBI. It is the opinion of _____ that the reason for the murder was to silence the Romanian emigre community in the U.S. The Romanian community is active in New York City, Chicago, and Southern California, primarily the Los Angeles area. CHEMARE

- catre toti romanii din lumea libera -

FIII LUI AVRAM IANCU cheama pe toti patriotii romani la lupta impotriva revizionism-sovinismului unguresc si le cer:

- Sa nu se lase inselati de "grija" ungureasca pentru drepturile nationale "incalcate" ale maghiarilor din Transilvania.

- Sa-si foloseasca, fiecare dupa capacitatea si stiinta sa, cuvantul sau pana, pentru a afirma adevarul despre Transilvania romaneasca, groaznic mutilat de cei ce fac "istorie" la ordin.

- Fiecare, dupa putere, sa desvaluie in fata prietenilor si cunostintelor : politicieni, jurnalisti, oameni de arta, profesori, preoti etc. , adevaratele intentii, sovine si revansarde, ale unguurilor, pentru ca, prin puterea cuvantului de a se raspandi, sa se demaste pretutindeni teoriile maghiare si frazeologia lor ipocrita.

- Sa condamne cu hotarare pe acei romani care accepta rolul de unelte ale propagandei revizioniste unguresti, lasandu-se atrasi pe o pozitie potrivnica neamului romanesc, sub masca anticomunismului abil speculat de soviniștii unguuri.

- Sa-si creasca copiii in spirit romanesc, cu dragoste de neam si glia strabuna - ROMANIA MARE -, in respect fata de sacrificiile inaintasilor si lupta lor contra inrobitorilor de orice natie, in dreapta credinta si slujire a lui Dumnezeu. Sa-i invete sa recunoasca dusmanii dintotdeauna ai Tarii, indiferent de intentiile marturisite de acestia pe moment. Sa povesteasca despre blestematiile comise de unguuri in Transilvania contra romanilor, despre Abrud si Rosia, despre Moisei, Ip si Traznea.

- In fata dusmaniei revizionistilor unguuri, toti romanii sa se uneasca, indiferent de crez politic, deosebiri de pareri sau neintelegeri personale, sa priceapa ca ceea ce ne uneste - sufletul romanesc - este mai presus de dezbinarile pe care dusmanii de toate culorile le-au cultivat intotdeauna in noi.

- Sa-si aminteasca stravechiul si inteleptul proverb romanesc, care se potriveste atat de bine soviniilor unguri: "Lupul paru-si schimba, dar naravul, ba!"

- Sa loveasca hidra ungureasca sovina, ori de cate ori si oriunde aceasta isi va ridica hidoasele capete si va voi sa ne improaste cu saliva-i otravita.

Iar daca toate astea nu-s de-ajuns, bratul FIIILOR LUI AVRAM IANCU sta gata sa loveasca fara crutare.

Asa sa ne ajute Dumnezeu !

APPEAL

to all Romanians in the Free World

THE SONS OF AVRAM IANCU call all Romanian patriots to fight against Hungarian revisionism-chauvinism and demand:

-- Do not be deluded by Hungarian "concern" for the "abused" national rights of Hungarians in Transylvania.

-- To be ready when commanded to use, according to each one's ability and knowledge, the word or the pen in order to state the truth about Romanian Transylvania awfully mutilated by those who make "history."

-- Everyone, according to his (her) power, should reveal the real chauvinistic and revanchist Hungarian intentions to friends and acquaintances, politicians, journalists, artists, teachers, priests, etc. in order to expose the hypocritical Magyar theories and empty words.

-- They should firmly condemn those Romanians who are caught in a position hostile to the Romanian nation under the anticommunist masque cunningly inveigled by Hungarian chauvinists and accept the role of revisionist propaganda.

-- They should raise their children in the Romanian spirit, of love for the nation and the ancient land -- the Great Romania -- to respect the sacrifices of their ancestors and their fight against their suppressors of any nationality and, in true faith and service of God. They should teach them to recognize national enemies, regardless of momentarily confessed intentions. They should speak about the infamies committed by Hungarians in Transylvania against Romanians.

-- All Romanians should unite against the enmity of the Hungarian revisionists, irrespective of their political creed, differences of opinions or personal disagreements. They should understand that what unites us -- the Romanian soul -- is more important than the discords that the enemies of all kinds cultivate inside us.

-- They should remember the wise, old Romanian proverb, "The wolf changes its hair, but not its bad habit".

-- They should hit the chauvinist Hungarian hydra, whenever and wherever it raises its hideous heads to splash us with its poisonous spit.

And if these efforts do not succeed, the arm of THE SONS OF AVRAM IANCU is ready to hit mercilessly.

So God help us!

COMUNICAT

Noi, tinere vlastare, crescute din nobila radacina daco-romana si traind astazi pe primitorul pamant al Americii,

A. Avand in vedere deslantuirea salbatica a atacurilor unguresti, indreptate impotriva romanilor;

B. Observand ca aceasta campanie - pentru sustinerea carora nici o suma nu e prea mare - seamana isbitor cu cea declansata pe vremea Romaniei Mari, cand Liga Revisionista a lui Horthy se straduia sa prezinte in fata lumii "lipsa" de drepturi a ungarilor din Transilvania, pentru a da o aparenta de "legitimitate" dorintei lor de revansa;

C. Preocupati de faptul ca revisionistii sovini unguri incearca astazi, cu obrasnicie, sa atraga romanii din lumea libera pe pozitia lor, sub pretextul unei lupte anticomuniste comune, desi:

1. Fata de imperativele sustinerii intereselor lor nationaliste nu se dau in latiri de la colaborarea cu guvernul marioneta de la Budaposta;

2. Conform nazuintelor absurde de refacere a granitelor "Ungariei Mari" cauta sa se suprapuna intereselor de moment ale oricareia dintre cele doua mari puteri - Rusia comunista sau U.S.A. - sau ale oricui ar avea un interes, de orice natura, in spatiul stravechii Dacii, disparand intre unguri orice bariera - ideologica, economica, religioasa, etc. - si legandu-i doar originea etnica maghiara si dorul de pamant strain;

D. Constatand cu ingrijorare ca unii romani, prinsii in jocuri politice straine neamului nostru, agita himera "concilierii istorice" si accepta teza mincinoasa a lipsei de drepturi nationale a ungarilor din Transilvania, impartasind "grija" ungarilor de pretutindeni pentru fratii lor ardeleni - adica exact ce doresc urmasii profilor deposedati de domeniile muncite de rascalatii lui Horea;

E. Convinsi ca aceasta politica este periculoasa pentru ca ^{are} drept scop tocirea constiintei nationale romanesti, semanarea discordiei intre romani, in vederea scoaterii lor facile din lupta si ciuntirea trupului sfant al tarii;

F. Intru cinstirea memoriei strabunilor nostri, care au trait sute de ani ca desmosteniti in propria tara, dar nu si-au vandut sufletul si nici credinta in Dumnezeu, muncind sub loviturile de bici, sub povara datoriilor fara sfarsit si a injosirii, dar ridicandu-se mereu la lupta si pastrand vesnic nestinsa faclia fiintei lor nationale, pentru ca stranepotii lor sa se mai numeasca romani;

G. Convinsi ca romanii din lumea intreaga nu au cum sa nu simta ura - uneori abil mascata - cu care asupritorii unguri i-au privit intotdeauna, exprimata mai bine decat oricine de insusi poetul national maghiar, Petöffi Sandor, in versurile scrise la 1848:

" Tu sarb, tu croat, tu neamt, slovac, valahime,
De ce muscati toti din ungur,
Care v-a aparat de turci si de tatar?

Sus, deci, popor maghiar, impotriva turmei ticaloase,
Care-ti ataca bunul si viata,

Sus, la rasboi urias si sfant.

Sus, la judecata din urma, sus!

Pe vremuri ne luptem cu lei,

sau de randurile cu care Kossuth a facut sa sangereze inima lui Balcescu:

" Libertatea voastra este spanzuratoarea, drepturile voastre de egalitate, inseamna ca popoarele care impart teritoriile cu ungurii, vor trebui sa fie absorbite de elementul maghiar. "

H. Cunoscatori ai faptelor de istorie pe care ni le-au impartasit batranii nostri, la a caror intelepciune socotim ca suntem datori a adauga taria bratelor noastre tinere, la nevoie fiind gata sa lovim cu barda, asa cum, impinsi la marginea existentei, batjocoriti in tara lor, au stiut s-o faca motii lui Avram Iancu :

AM HOTARAT

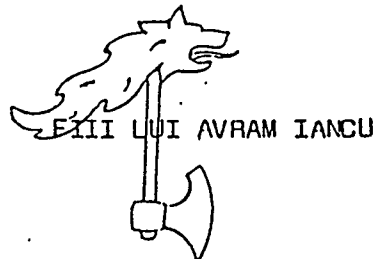

in Adunarea Extraordinara tinuta la New York la 15 Mai 1988, zi glorioasa in istoria romanilor, infiintarea organizatiei "FIII LUI AVRAM IANCU", ce va fi cel mai hotarat detasament de aparare a romanismului, in fata agresivitatii destrabalate unguresti si

J U R A M :

Sa ne aparam cu toate mijloacele identitatea si demnitatea romaneasca ;

Sa pedepsim impertinenta celor care ne-au sfidat si ne sfideaza, inca, de la inaltimea visurilor lor de asupritori ai natiei romane ;

Bratul nostru sa loveasca si pe vandutii acestora - romanii care-si batjocoresc neamul - pentru a-i trezi din minciuna pe care o inghit contra leafe, sau a-i adormi pe veci, in rusine.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

We, young offsprings of the noble Dacian-Roman root, who live today on the generous land of America,

A. Taking into consideration the savage attacks sponsored by Hungarians against Romanians;

B. Noticing that this campaign -- for whose support not any amount of money is too small -- strikingly resembles the Horthy's Revisionist League's attempt to masquerade their revanchist desire by launching in Great Romania a struggle to show the world the "lack" of rights of Hungarians in Transylvania;

C. Concerned that under the pretext of common anticommunist warfare, the chauvinist Hungarians try to shamelessly win the Romanians from the Free World over to their side, regardless;

1. Given the imperatives of supporting their nationalist interest they do not scruple to collaborate with the puppet-government in Budapest;

2. In accordance with the absurd desire to restore the borders of the "Great Hungary" they try to superimpose the momentary interests of either of the two superpowers -- the communist Russia and the United States -- or of anyone who would have a benefit, of any kind, on the territory of the ancient Dacia; or they believe any obstacle -- ideological, economic, religious, etc. -- will disappear among the Hungarians and they will be connected by their Magyar ethnic origin and their lust for foreign land;

d. We are troubled by the fact that some Romanians, caught in political games alien to our people, incite the chimera of the "historical conciliation" and accept the false theory of lack of national rights for Hungarians from Transylvania, and share the "concern" of the Hungarians from all over the world for their Transylvanian brothers;

E. We are convinced that this policy is dangerous because it aims to weaken the Romanian national conscience, sowing the seeds of dissension among Romanians in order to put them out of action easily and to mutilate the sacred body of the country;

F. We honor the memory of our ancestors, who lived for hundreds of years as the oppressed in their own country and did not sell either their souls or their faith in God, but worked under the whip strokes, under the burden of endless debts and humiliation, and rose in rebellion and maintained the unextinguished torch of their national being for ever, in order for their descendants to be called Romanians.

G. We know the historical facts told by our forefathers. We consider ourselves indebted and strengthened by their wisdom, and we are ready to hit with the hatchet if necessary, as Avram Iancu's men used to do.

WE DECIDED

at the Extraordinary Meeting held in New York, on May 15, 1988, a glorious day in the history of the Romanians, to establish "THE SONS OF AVRAM IANCU", which is going to be the most resolute detachment in the defense of Romanianism against the shameless Hungarian aggression and

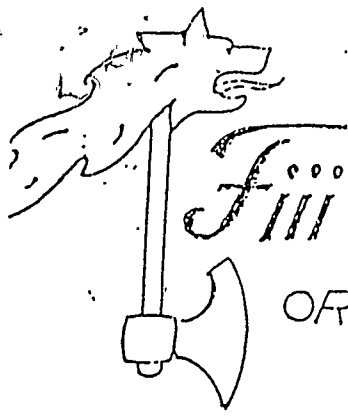

WE SWEAR

To defend our Romanian identity and dignity by all means;

To punish the impertinence of those who defied and still defy us, from the height of their dreams as suppressors of the Romanian nation;

In order to wake them up from their lies, our arm will hit those who accept wages to profane their nation, or we will put them to sleep in disgrace for ever.

Domnule Berindei

Ne pare rau pentru dumneata, dar vedem ca nu te astamperi.

Te-ai vandut ungurilor, ti-ai vandut sufletul, ti-ai otravit semanta Romaneasca binecuvantata pe care, pe nedrept o porti, amestecand-o cu sange de ungur.

In nerusinarea dumitale, ti-ai botezat bastardul cu un nume drag noua, romanilor, Vlad.

Atunci, HOTARASTE !

ORI pazeste-ti-l clipa de clipa, in casa sau in plimbarile lui, ORI renunta la lucrarea nemernica prin care te-ai pus in solda revizionismului unghuresc ce atenteaza la scumpa noastra Transilvania - ca cel mai spurcat tradator al neamului Romanesc.

Iti place sa spui ca nu ai plecat din Romania ca sa ramai Roman.

Fii atunci Francez, Turc, Ungur sau Tigan, fii orice vrei, dar potoleste-te cat se mai poate !

Daca nu de grija propriei vietii, draga Mihaly, macar de a iubitei tale Katalin si a corciturii pe care o legeni.

Monsieur Berindei,

Nous le regrettons beaucoup pour toi, mais nous constatons que tu ne te calmes pas. Tu t'es vendu aux Hongrois, tu as vendu ton âme, tu as empoisonné la semence roumaine bénie, que tu portes injustement, en la mêlant au sang du Hongrois.

Dans ton impudence, tu as baptisé ton bâtard d'un nom qui nous est cher, à nous les Roumains, Vlad.

Tu l'aimes!

Alors, décide!

Soit tu veilles sur lui à chaque instant, à la ^{m)}aison et pendant ses promenades, soit tu renonces au sale boulot que tu fais en te mettant à la solde du révisionisme hongrois qui attende à notre chère Transylvanie - comme le traître le plus immonde de la "roumanité".

Tu te plais à dire que tu n'as pas quitté la Roumanie pour rester Roumain.

Sois alors Français, Turc, Hongrois ou Tzigane, sois ce que tu veux, mais calme-toi - pour autant que c'est encore possible!

Si ce n'est parce que tu tiens à ta propre vie, cher Mihaly* alors que ce soit au moins pour ta chère Katalin et pour le corniaud que tu berces.

three (3) threatening letters via US Mail and numerous threatening phone calls from DAN ANDERSON. The caller, who identified himself as ANDERSON, told COSTESCU that he (ANDERSON) was the author of the aforementioned letters and he was doing this because he was upset about some recently published material in COSTESCU's magazine. COSTESCU reports no incidents of actual harm or property damage to him or his publication.

As all NY leads have been investigated, this matter is RUCd.

Dear [redacted]

[redacted] in [redacted] a tragic situation for me. I was in [redacted] for two and a half months and I came back to [redacted] where [redacted]

I would like to ask you if the investigation regarding the crime of May 21 has been solved. Do you still investigate this case?

In [redacted] we were followed, but nothing worse. I preferred not to write you from [redacted] because usually mail is opened.

I spoke to you about [redacted] at [redacted]. He is another Romanian noted for his political activities and known for his work in [redacted]. In September he received telephonic death threats and requested police protection and two that threatened him were furious. They were Romanian. It was interesting to note the threats used the same working as to [redacted] and said that there were bullets that had his name on them. Additionally, they said that they would be taking him to meet CULIANU. Is there a connection between these and the assassin [redacted]? Were they in Chicago in May 21,22, 1991? Do they belong to the Right Wing connected with the Facist Iron Guard?

On 9/11/91, ANDERSEN was interviewed by Bureau agents and admitted having made harassing telephone calls to [redacted] and writing similar letters to DAN COSTESCU and CORNEL DUNITRESCU in New York, New York, but personally did not consider such to be threatening in nature. ANDERSEN advised he was very anti-communist and from time to time makes such calls or writes letters to publications which he considers to support their cause. ANDERSEN expressed remorse over the calls and letters, stated he had no intentions of acting upon such threats, and would immediately cease all such threatening calls and letter writing in the future.

HERE, SECRET POLICE AGENTS AND THE FORMER COMMUNISTS. THE FIRST ONE I EXECUTED IS NAMED CULIANU. HIS REAL NAME IS CULA, WHO CALLED HIMSELF PROFESSOR AND IS HIDING BEHIND THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO'S PROFESSORS, THINKING HE CAN LOSE ME BECAUSE I DON'T LIVE IN CHICAGO.

NOW I LISTEN TO YOU. YOU DON'T EVEN SPEAK CORRECT
ROMANIAN. YOU PRONOUNCE CONVENIENT CORRECTLY.

I DON'T EVEN WANT TO TALK ANYMORE OF THE CHARACTERISTIC WAY YOU PRONOUNCE WORDS LIKE THE COMMUNISTS.

MY AGENTS ARE GOING TO START TO GIVE YOU A HARD TIME, FROM THE DAY YOU WERE BORN YO TODAY. IF YOU HAVE BEFORE, OR STILL HAVE TODAY, A LITTLE CONNECTION WITH THE COMMUNISTS, THE CRIMINALS OF THE ROMANIAN NATION, YOU ALSO WILL BE EXECUTED LIKE A DOG IN THE SAME WAY THE OTHER ONES WERE EXECUTED. THIS WILL HAPPEN WHEN YOU DON'T EXPECT, WHEN YOU DON'T THINK IT'S POSSIBLE.

THE ROMANIAN NATION HAS TO GET AWAY, ONCE AND FOREVER FROM THOSE CRIMINALS. FROM ME AND MY PEOPLE YOU WILL NEVER ESCAPE, EVEN IF YOU HIDE IN THE MOUTH OF A SNAKE.

P.S. WHAT DO YOU THINK ASSHOLE, DO YOU HAVE THE COURAGE TO READ THIS LETTER IN FRONT OF THE MICROPHONE? THIS WAY YOUR EVENTUAL LISTENERS WILL FIND OUT WHAT AN UGLY PERSON YOU'VE BEEN. YOU ARE EITHER A COURAGEOUS COMMUNIST OR A TRAITOR LIKE THE OTHER ONES.

[redacted] in [redacted] a tragic situation for me. I was in [redacted] for two and a half months and I came back to [redacted] where [redacted]

I would like to ask you if the investigation regarding the crime of May 21 has been solved. Do you still investigate this case?

In [redacted] we were followed, but nothing worse. I preferred not to write you from [redacted] because usually mail is opened.

b7C

I spoke to you about [redacted] at [redacted]. He is another Romanian noted for his political activities and known for his work in [redacted]. In September he received telephonic death threats and requested police protection and two that threatened him were furious. They were Romanian. It was interesting to note the threats used the same wording as to my brother and said that there were bullets that had his name on them. Additionally, they said that they would be taking him to meet CULIANU. Is there a connection between these and the assassin [redacted]? Were they in Chicago in May 21, 22, 1991? Do they belong to the Right Wing connected with the Facist Iron Guard? Is there also a connection to the Romanian Securitate?

b6
b7C

If you think it would help I can provide a list of Iron Guard members in the United States and Canada that would apply.

I heard that an Italian magazine wrote that [redacted] was a member of a religious cult. I couldn't confirm it. Do you know anything about this? Please respond.

b6

I would be happy to hear you are still working on this investigation and need to know you will not rest until the killer [redacted] is found.

Re Chicago airtel to the Director, 10/24/91.

Enclosed for Chicago are major case prints of DAN ANDERSEN.

Referenced Chicago airtel requested Los Angeles to obtain fingerprints and palm prints of DAN ANDERSEN, 1833 N. Normandie Avenue, Los Angeles, California, telephone number (213) 668-1160.

On 11/6/91, DAN ANDERSEN voluntarily appeared at the Los Angeles FBI Office to be fingerprinted. ANDERSEN stated that he wished it to be perfectly clear that he has no knowledge of the murder of IOAN CULIANU other than what he read in the newspapers and heard people talking about. ANDERSEN stated that there is a possibility that he may soon be moving to another apartment, but will maintain P.O. Box 1971, Los Angeles, California 90078, and can always be reached at that address.

There being no further investigation remaining in Los Angeles, this matter is considered RUC'd.
