The December 1, 1947, issue of the "Daily Worker" publicized a letter by the Arts, Sciences and Professions Council of the Progressive Citizens of America denouncing the purge and black-list of writers, directors and producers "who deny the Un-American Committee's right to inquire into the political opinions of private citizens" This article listed the signers to this letter and the name of Leonard Bernstein was included therein.

(100-338892-Sub.A)

In addition to his above-stated activity in the Progressive Citizens of America, Bernstein was also associated with the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, one of the organizations which amalgamated to form the Progressive Citizens of America. The House Committee on Un-American Activities reported that in October, 1945, the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions gave a testimonial dinner to Jo Davidson and that guests of honor at the dinner "included such outstanding Communist fellow travelers as the following" and the name of Leonard Bernstein was then set forth among others.

Among those listed by him was Leonard Bernstein. (X) (u)
(62-52493-39)

A Navy communication dated March 25, 1948, stated that an informant associated with Local 802 of the AFM advised that Leonard Bernstein was left wing in his thinking and possibly sympathetic to the Communist line. It was further stated that Bernstein was a co-sponsor of a Hans Eisler concert at Town Hall, February 28, 1948, in New York City.
(100-120818-2543)

Leonard Bernstein was listed as one of the sponsors of the "Voice of Freedom Committee" on that organization's letterhead in 1947. Among other sponsors well known for their Communist connections were Paul Draper, Langston Hughes, Paul Robeson, Donald Ogden Stewart and Ella Winter. This Committee received considerable favorable publicity in the "Daily Worker" during 1947. The California Joint Fact-Finding Committee has stated that some of the sponsors of the Voice of Freedom Committee "... have lengthy records of Communist-front affiliations...."

One Leonard Bernstein, possibly identical with the subject of this memorandum, was reported to have been one of the leaders of the John Reed Society, an organization at Harvard University. It has been reported that this organization was a Communistic group which had been outlawed by university officials. According to a letter stated to have been drawn up by the John Reed Society when it made an attempt several years ago to become recognized by Harvard University, it was a "non-partisan organization for the study of revolutionary thought and history--it is not affiliated with any political organization or tendencies, whatever. Its purpose is to afford an opportunity to examine the fundamental tenets of Marxism and other revolutionary theories; to afford a forum for the dispassionate destruction of contemporary problems confronting the left-wing movement and to encourage the organization and study of proletarian and revolutionary culture. John Reed, Harvard 1910, was one of the world's best known Communists--as war correspondent in Russia he joined with Leon Trotsky--fighting during the Bolshevik Revolution in Russia; was killed in action. The Russians buried him in Kremlin." [REDACTED]

Mr. Ralph Roach received a call from David Niles who had apparently called your office in connection with the summary on Leonard Bernstein, which summary had been submitted to Niles at his request. He stated he wanted to talk either to the Director or Mr. Roach to get some views. He stated he was afraid there would be a lot of criticism if the President did not attend the concert in New York.

I went over this matter with Mr. Roach and instructed him to see Mr. Niles as per his request, but instructed him to make no commitment at all, to advise Mr. Niles that all the Bureau had done was to furnish available information, that the Bureau had not conducted any investigation of Bernstein and was not in a position to recommend what action the President should take in this matter.

Peter Brown called at my office on the night of March 15 and had in his possession a memorandum which the Bureau had furnished David K. Niles concerning Leonard Bernstein. Mr. Brown stated that Peyton Ford had asked him to see some of his contacts in the Bureau to obtain the Bureau's views with reference to Bernstein, it being recalled that he is to play at a concert at the Waldorf Astoria, to which the President has been invited.

I advised Peter Brown that the Bureau could not make any recommendation or express any views on the matter at all, that Mr. Niles had been so advised that the Bureau merely furnished a summary of information available from its files for the guidance of the White House in determining what amounts to a policy question.

Pursuant to instructions, Mr. Roach called on Mr. David K. Niles of the White House this morning in compliance with his request to discuss the Bureau letter we prepared on Bernstein. Mr. Niles informed Mr. Roach that he was greatly disturbed by the fact that Bernstein was undoubtedly mixed up in a lot of Communist and Liberal Movements, but on the other hand was a renown musician and someone that the White House could not push off at the forthcoming musical reception to be given by the President of Israel and President Truman. He desired to know if you or Mr. Roach would give him an opinion as to what action the White House should take concerning Bernstein and his presence at the musical reception. He stated that a "stinging" letter of protest had been received from the publication "Counterattack" and he was fearful that other complications would arise if Bernstein were permitted to appear on the program.

After listening to Mr. Niles very patiently for some time, Mr. Roach informed him that the Director could not, under the circumstances, make a recommendation one way or another, that we merely supplied to him (Niles) at his request such data as appeared in our files. Further that the Bureau had not conducted an investigation of Bernstein and certainly could not be called upon for a recommendation of any sort in this case.

It was suggested to Mr. Niles that he may desire to take into consideration any other information that he may have received in arriving at a decision, that such a decision was totally within the province of the White House. Mr. Niles inquired whether to the Bureau's knowledge Bernstein had ever criticized the President or any other Government official. In this regard, Mr. Roach referred him to paragraphs in the memorandum submitted by the Bureau wherein Bernstein had signed a letter of protest to the President and the Attorney General.

After considering this for a while, Mr. Niles stated he believed it would be necessary to ask the Committee handling the affair to ask that Bernstein be replaced, but that before doing so, he intended to discuss the matter with the Attorney General or Peyton Ford, as well as with Mr. Clark Clifford (Special Counsel to the President).

Mr. Niles thanked Mr. Roach for calling and stated he understood the Bureau's position quite clearly but did desire to talk to you or Mr. Roach before considering the matter further.

Reference is made to conversations between Miss Jervis and officers of the Department concerning the possible use of Leonard Bernstein's services in connection with the Embassy's music program.

Information now available to the Department indicates that Mr. Bernstein has for many years been affiliated with a variety of Communist inspired activities and organizations. It is stated that some of the organizations which he has sponsored and to which he has lent his name are definitely considered dangerous because of their close control by the Communist element.

The Embassy is advised to be particularly cautious in its contact with Mr. Bernstein and under all circumstances to sponsor his performances or use his services in connection with the Embassy's program.

BACKGROUND

Leonard Bernstein, the conductor, composer and pianist, was born August 25, 1918 in Lawrence, Massachusetts. In 1944 he resided at the Carnegie Hall Apartments, 113 West 57th Street, New York City, and was employed by the Philharmonic Symphony Society, Carnegie Hall, 113 West 57th Street, New York City.

Bernstein's parents were Samuel Joseph Bernstein and Jennie Bernstein, nee Resnick. As a child he did not show any musical inclination until he was ten years old at which time he was given instruction on the piano. Later he attended the Boston Latin School and following that, he was enrolled at Harvard University. While at Harvard, Bernstein determined to become a pianist and he studied piano with Heinrich Gebhard and composition with Walter Piston and Edward Burlingame Hill.

Following his graduation from Harvard in 1939, Bernstein was urged by his friends to become a musical conductor. In furtherance of this, Bernstein spent two years in graduate study at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, studying under Fritz Reiner and receiving piano instruction under Madam Isabella Vengerova and orchestration under Randall Thompson. During the summers he worked under Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and also at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Massachusetts. In September 1942, after a session spent in teaching and composing, for the Boston Institute of Modern Art, Bernstein was appointed assistant conductor under Koussevitzky.

In 1943, Bernstein appeared in New York as a pianist and conductor during one of the concerts of the Museum of Modern Art. In the summer of 1943, Bernstein was scheduled for induction into the Army but was refused because of asthma due to an allergy to dust. Following his rejection by the Army, he was offered the post of Assistant Conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra. In this position he received outstanding notice in November 1943 when, without advance notice, Bernstein was required to substitute for the guest conductor of the Philharmonic Sunday concert, Bruno Walter, when Walter was suddenly stricken with illness. The newspaper critics commended Bernstein for the manner in which he handled this concert without preparation.

Bernstein's success as a conductor has overshadowed his career as an instrumentalist. Bernstein, himself, favors his career as a pianist and he is particularly fond of "Boogie Woogie." During World War II, he gave three piano concerts at Ft. Dix, New Jersey.

Bernstein is described as of average height - 5'8" tall, and weighs 145 pounds. He has wavy brown hair which dips over his right eye and a medium dark complexion. Bernstein devotes his spare time to writing, poetry, reading, swimming, and horseback riding.

The "Daily Worker" for November 11, 1945, page 14, reported the names of individuals scheduled to participate in the First Conference on American-Soviet Cultural Co-operation. This conference was presented by the committees of the Arts, of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship. It was reported that the conference was to be held on November 18, 1945, at 29 West 39 Street, New York City. The name of Leonard Bernstein appeared as a participant in the Music Panel of the conference.

The "People's Daily World" for November 23, 1945, reported that the Emergency Committee on KFI had expanded and become a part of the National Committee for Radio Freedom. It was indicated that this latter named organization was under the leadership of Leonard Bernstein of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Society. During January, 1946, the Emergency Committee on KFI published a pamphlet entitled, "The People of the United States Against Radio Station KFI and the Cartelization of the Air". This pamphlet identified Leonard Bernstein as a sponsor of the National Committee for Radio Freedom, and announced the purpose of the Emergency Committee on KFI as an organization formed to protest the dismissal of six radio commentators by Station KFI. (The third report of the Joint Fact-Finding Committee to the 57th California Legislature, states on page 130 that the six radio commentators discharged by Station KFI had broadcasted news with a pro-Soviet and pro-Communist slant.)

The article said that Bernstein is an accomplished conductor of symphony music and also an accomplished advocate of Communist causes. It was pointed out that Bernstein was a sponsor of the Waldorf "Peace" Conference held in New York City in March, 1950 to boost Stalin's major propaganda line. The article said that Bernstein also cabled greetings to Dmitri Shostakovich, a Russian composer, before Shostakovich left Russia to attend a conference in New York and the fact that Shostakovich had debased his talent by producing musical paeans to Stalin's "accomplishments" did not deter Bernstein.
