Title: VISIT OF NELSON MANDELA TO MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE TO ACCEPT
"FREEDOM AWARD" - 11/20-22/2000

Synopsis: Request to all offices to report any positive information concerning specific threats to captioned visit of Nelson Mandela to Memphis, TN.

Details: On 10/13/2000, Chief Chuck Cook, Memphis Police Department (MPD), Memphis, TN; [redacted] Regional Public Affairs, International Paper (IP), Little Rock, AR; and various MPD personnel met with the writer to discuss the details of, and planned security for, captioned event.

[redacted] advised that IP, a long-time sponsor of the annual National Freedom Award banquet, will be providing a six-man, unarmed escort/security team throughout Mandela's visit to Memphis. He said tentative plans call for Mr. Mandela to fly in from Los Angeles, CA, via a private jet owned by [redacted] and [redacted] renowned Memphis philanthropists. He should arrive at/around 3:00PM on Monday, November 20, 2000, in Memphis, TN, where he will be staying at the Peabody Hotel. He is expected to tour the Civil Rights Museum that evening.

[redacted] said Mr. Mandela was scheduled to speak at the Temple of Deliverance, Memphis, TN, sometime during the afternoon of Tuesday, November 21, 2000, before resting later that day. (A large crowd is anticipated at the public forum.) At 7:00 that evening, Mr. Mandela will accept the "Freedom Award" at the banquet to be held at the Peabody Hotel.

Re: 300A-ME-54720, 10/17/2000

[redacted] advised Mr. Mandela was expected to depart from the Peabody Hotel, and the Memphis area by plane, sometime during the early afternoon of Wednesday, November 22, 2000. [redacted] will be furnishing the writer with additional details of Mandela's itinerary as they become available.

b6

[redacted] also said it is rumored that several African-American dignitaries, including Michael Jordan, may travel to Memphis to witness Mandela's visit.

In view of Mr. Mandela's high profile, the tumultuous events currently transpiring in the Middle East, and the tragic history associated with Martin Luther King, Jr. and the Civil Rights Museum in Memphis, TN, a potential threat exists for discord/violence throughout Mandela's stay in the area. [redacted] advised that media coverage, to this point, has been almost nonexistent. However, that invariably will change as Mandela's visit approaches.

Any positive information should be reported to SA [redacted] [redacted] Memphis Division, at (901) 747-9683.

DOMESTIC ASSESSMENT THREAT RATING CRITERIALOW:Terrorism

No evidence of capability, intent, or credible threats against the principal and/or South African diplomatic facilities in the United States over the past two years.

Demonstrations/Harassment

The principal and/or South African facilities has been targeted with minimal or no significant demonstration and or harassment activity over the last two years.

DOMESTIC ASSESSMENT

The threat level for the visit of former President Nelson Mandela is assessed as LOW. DSS/ITA is currently unaware of any intelligence information to suggest that a current, specific threat exists against the former president in conjunction with his forthcoming visit to the United States.

In past years, South Africa's turbulent political situation generated a substantial amount of anti-South African government activity in the United States. During 1992-1994, DSS/ITA recorded over 14 demonstrations against South African diplomatic facilities or visiting dignitaries. Issues sparking those protests included the country's apartheid policies, the conviction of Winnie Mandela in South Africa, and U.S. visits by Nelson Mandela. In addition to demonstration activity, South African Missions and dignitaries were often the target of harassment incidents and threatening phone calls, from both right and left-wing elements. Moreover, some of these incidents were serious in nature, to include death threats issued against Nelson Mandela, and several incidents of surveillance of Mandela during stopovers in the U.S.

The election of President Mandela in the early 1990's resulted in a considerable lessening of tensions, and anti-South African dissent is virtually non-existent in this country today. DSS/ITA is aware of no/no significant anti-South African incidents in the U.S. over the past three years.

Similarly, since 1994, there have been no significant demonstrations against visiting South African officials and DSS/ITA is not/not aware of any groups that are planning to demonstrate during the principal's visit.

The primary threat to Mr. Mandela emanates from right-wing extremist groups or emotionally disturbed persons present in this country. While we are aware of no information indicating that these elements are planning to target the former president, the possibility should not be ruled out - particularly given Mr. Mandela's role in South Africa's history.

■ The text of Nelson Mandela's speech. A7

The greatest long-term threat to freedom everywhere is the growing divide between the rich and poor, Nelson Mandela told 1,500 people at The Peabody Tuesday night.

The black-tie throng overflowed the hotel's Memphis Ballroom to see the revered freedom fighter receive the National Civil Rights Museum's International Freedom Award.

Mandela, wearing his trademark African shirt, never mentioned Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., but alluded to Memphis's sacred place in the history of civil rights.

"For a South African to be honored here tonight in this place and by this body inspires as it reminds us again of the indivisibility of human freedom," the 82-year-old world hero said. "No flash! No flash!" yelled his entourage to photographers as Mandela slowly walked through the mezzanine to the ballroom.

The plea served as a reminder of Mandela's historic, 27-year imprisonment by the South African government for his fight against apartheid. His eyes have been sensitive to light ever since he was forced to work in glaring-white lime quarries as a prisoner.

Mandela was freed in 1990 and negotiated an end to the oppression of black South Africans by the white minority. He was elected the first black president of South Africa in 1994, served one term and stepped down last year.

He beamed that famous endearing smile, but his speech revealed the fire still inside.

He did not allow the affluent-looking audience to enjoy in complete comfort its meal of stuffed capon and mixed vegetables.

The world produces far in excess of what's required to feed, clothe and shelter the world's population, he said.

"The majority of the world's population languishes in conditions of abject poverty and deprivation. This, in spite of the fact that we have the capacity to take care of all the world's people. This, in spite of the opulence and privilege in which large sectors of the world live."

With the award, Mandela receives a $100,000 honorarium and $100,000 for the Mandela Children's Fund.

Gala tickets were $150 each. Admittance is free to see Mandela at a public forum at 10 a.m. today at Temple of Deliverance Church of God in Christ, 369 G.E. Patterson, but all tickets have been claimed. Doors open at 8:30, and ticket-holders are urged to arrive no later than 9:30. WKNO-TV Channel 10 will air the event live.

Nelson Mandela

Memphis was the last stop of a U.S. tour. He is scheduled to return home this afternoon.

"May this century indeed be the one in which we achieve universal freedom and the universal enjoyment of those rights our glorious charters speak of," he said.

Minutes before the gala started, the hotel's crowded mezzanine vibrated with excitement. Guests glanced in search of Mandela each time the elevator doors opened.

Nike chief executive officer Phil Knight posed for pictures with tall female basketball players. Actors Danny Glover and Morgan Freeman drew fans and reporters.

"I'm sure the buzz has to do with the importance of the individual. He's Mandela," said Freeman, who will co-host today's public forum.

Dr. Benjamin Hooks, the civil rights museum board chairman, said, "I think this is the greatest night we've had."

He told the guests that Mandela "personifies what the board envisioned when they created the Freedom Award some 10 years ago."

Catholic Bishop J. Terry Steib gave the invocation, giving thanks for Mandela's "steadfastness and courage."

Mandela was introduced by a short biographical video shown on large screens. However, the audience could only hear the first five minutes due to a technical glitch.

Beverly Robertson, the civil rights museum's executive director, darted back to the control booth, then stepped into the lobby holding her head in her hands. If she said a prayer, it worked. The video started.

Five men clad in traditional African clothes pounded a beat on drums as they walked through the room. When the drumming stopped, the stage curtain rose to reveal Mandela, standing in a spotlight.

J. R. 'Pitt' Hyde III handed the Freedom Award to Mandela, calling him a "living hero" and the "personification of freedom and all the great things it stands for . . . The Hyde Family Foundation helped underwrite the award.

While expressing gratitude and humility for the honor, Mandela opted to challenge the audience rather than deliver a feel-good speech.

For example, he said the usual connotation of "globalization" means the free movement of goods and money across national boundaries.

"Not often enough do we emphasize the globalization of responsibility . . . Where globalization means, as it so often does, that the rich and powerful now have new means to further enrich and empower themselves at the cost of the poorer and weaker, we have a responsibility to protest in the name of universal freedom.

"Globalization opens up the marvelous opportunities for human beings across the globe to share with one another, and to share with greater equity in the advances of science, technology and industries."

Mandela veered from his prepared text to warn that an "extremely dangerous" tendency in the United Nations is a threat to the long-term peace of the world. He called for abolishing the veto power of UN Security Council members.

Without naming the United States, Mandela said some nations unilaterally decide to bomb "innocent and defenseless citizens" of sovereign nations.

By A. J. Wolfe

The curtain rises on Nelson Mandela Tuesday at The Peabody as he receives the National Civil Rights Museum's highest honor.
