' Sobell Assembly at Carnegie Hall

AUTHOR-CRITIC WALDO Frank and Sen. William Langer (R-N. D.) will speak on the Sobell case at the "Assembly For Justice" at New York's Carnegie Hall, Sept. 29.

The rally, called by the Natl. Committee to Secure Justice for Morton Sobell, will spark a campaign to win a new trial for the fellow victim of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg now serving a 30-year sentence in Alcarraz.

Attorney John F. Pinerty will also speak. Member of the executive board of the ACLU and a veteran civil liberties champion who figured in the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti, Finerty also served as co-counsel with Emanuel Bloch in latter stages of the Rosenberg

Certainly this book should give impetus to a re-evaluation of the spy cases. . . It traces each case, points out the fantastic inconsistencies, outright contradictions, and dubious conclusions surrounding the proceedings. . . . Considering the very careful documentation, Reuben's book sheds what can be a new and revealing light on a subject whose depths have been kept in shadow."

JOHN WEXLEY'S BOOK

'Judgment of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg' moves reviewers to question the trial

UARDIAN READERS will be interested in the general press comment. of John Wexley's book The Judgment of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg. The N. Y. Post, in a review Aug. 21 by Nancy F. Wechsler, charged Wexley with being blased and not presenting the material fairly. However, the reviewer commented:

"To the extent that Wexley does gucceed in casting doubt on certain aspects of the government's case and on the fairness of the trial, it is not because his politics or his method commend themselves to the reader's sympathy, but because in spite of them there are grounds for concern whether full justice was done."

The Post reviewer also commented:

"Whether Sobell should have been convicted on the meagre record against him, whether Greenglass's elaimed reproduction of a cross-section of the atomic bomb was sufficiently credible to support the convictions or the sentences, whether the subject of Communist affiliation was introduced in a way calculated to prejudice the defendants, whether the tactics of the prosecution or the demeanor of the judge impaired the fairness of the proceedings, whether the defendants were convicted and sentenced on a record which might lot have produced the same results in calmer times—all these are real issues which call for honest appraisal."

'AN AWFUL DOUBT": In the Indianapolis News July 23, Herbert Kenny Jr. commented:

"One doesn't feel completely 'safe' with Wexley as a guide through the labyrinth of the Rosenberg case. And yet, he raises an awful doubt that perhaps justice wasn't done, that a political frameup was successfully pulled off."

Carey McWilliams, in a review titled "An American Tragedy" in the Aug. 27 Nation, wrote:

"Recognition that the handling of the Rosenberg-Sobell case, from its inception to the unseeming hasts with which the final motious were disposed of, did not measure up to the standards of American justice will come slowly, painfully, one phase at a time, as the nightmare of fearand suspicion out of which it emerged is finally dispelled."

The Cleveland Call and Post, Regro newspaper, on July 2 said:

"Some day, when the Rosenberg case has taken its place in history with the Dreyfus case in France, and the Scottsboro and similar cases here, copies of Wexley's remarkable work: will be very difficult to obtain."

In the August Library Journal, a review by George Adelman, assistant at the Boston Public Library, said:

"Wexley emphasizes the point of view of many here and abroad, anti-Communist as well as Communist that the Rosenbergs were victims of a national state of hysteria." Och 3, 1955 her son Mark, 6, has appealed to have her husband Morton transferred from grim Alcatrax, where he is forbidden to see his children, to a regular Federal prison. Sobell was a fellow victim of the Rosenberg prosecution and has defended his innocence throughout. He has served five years of a 30-year sentence, three of those years in Alcatrax. The Classification Board of Alcatrax meets Nov. 25 in San Frangissoo. Helen Sobell's plea can be supported by letters addressed promptito Classification Board, Alcatrax Prison San Francisco, Calif.

CONDON

Then there was the usual Question Time covering such matters as the trees in royal parks, the appropriate spot for a statue of suffragette Mrs. Pankhurst, the number of British soldiers occupying graves in Kenya, and the relations between Church and State. And then the man with the conscience had ten minutes to lay his burden on the conscience of the House—and even the ranks of Tory could scarce forebear to cheer as he placed his Death Penalty Abolition Bill on the elerk's jesk.

SYDNEY SILVERMAN

They listened and applauded

WHO THE MAN IS: The honorable members cheered—or remained allent if they did not—because they knew that the British people's humanitarian feelings are deeply and broadly stirred just now about capital punishment; and also because many who abhor Silverman's left-Labour politics respect him for the long, courageous battle he has waged on it. Yet it was an eyeopening scene for one fresh from America, thinking of Silverman not as the skilled lawyer-parliamentarian representing the working-class constituency of Nelson and Colne, but as the MP who when others were glient agreed to speak in defense of the Rosenbergs in America and was denied a visa by the State Dept.

Here he was, standing before the Mother of Parliaments on the issue to which no newspaper just now dares deny front-page space, as spokeman for 12 MP's sponsoring the bill including two Tories, two Liberals, and former Labour Home Secy. Chuter Ede. One of the Tories, who later dashed out from a Northern Ireland MP's committee meeting for a two-minute hellowith me in the lobby, was Belfast's H. Montgomery Hyde. He was the man who last summer asked in the House what Her Majesty intended to do about my imprisonment in New York.

JUDGES AND RISHOPS: All who were present in the packed House felt that a strange angel known as Mercy hovered over this place, where so many blood-spotted decisions are made on the destinies of millions around the world. The angel had hovered there before: investigating commissions had been appointed and first readings of bills to suspend capital punishment had been passed; but always some dark, secret, noisome influence in the Home Office," as Silverman told the

Housef had prevented anything from being done. (To me afterwards, over a cup of tea, he named as chief foes of all genal reform for 150 years "the judges and the bishops—everything has been passed in the teeth of their opposition.")

Will something be done this time? That the gentlemen sprawling on the front government benches don't want to stop legal killing, and will use every device to retain it, is very clear—for they have rejected even the reforms in the capital punishment law which a commission recommended two years ago. That they are seriously worried about the force of public opinion was even clearer from their failure to put up anyone to pooh-pooh Silverman's plea, as they were entitled and expected to do.

They will rely on stalling to do the job, but Silverman will be worrying at them like a terrier with a rat as long as his passport to Westminster remains valid.

AMAZING SUCCESS; Meanwhile the snowballing demand for abolition is one of those phenomens which, from time to time on some unexpected front, provide a key to the often baffling operation of British public opinion. The impression is that the British people, thwarted on many more pressing issue, such as German rearmament, are wrapping up all their spirit of protest in this one which they have faith that they can win.

Everyone has been amazed by the success of the Campaign for the Abolition of Capital Punishment which, launched by publisher Victor Gollancz three months ago, has already received over 10,000 inquiries from sympathizers. Its first call, this month, drew an audience of 7,000 and a collection of $3,000 at a meeting in Westminster's Central Hall and an overflow at Church House. The country is being flooded with Gollancz's pamphlet The Reart of the Matter, pointing out that "you cannot preserve civilization by an act that esssentially negates it," and with Campaign leaflets outlining the history of capital punishment and listing 15 countries in "Western" Europe and Asia which have abolished it. (Even West Germany did away with it six years ago; in Holland there has been no execution for 95 years.)

SOBELL BALLY: A few hours after Silverman presented his bill, over 200 Londoners gathered in a small Bloomsbury hall—a good audience, as I estimate the difficulties involved, and representing many progressives and trade union organizations. Their purpose: to honor the memory of our era's most famous victims of legal murder—Ethel and Julius Rosenberg—by launching a drive to free Morton Sobell.

To your editor-in-exile it was a moving occasion, to be speaking for the first time before a group of those dishards for justice who fought for the Rosenbergs in far-off countries. The Sobell campaign got off the ground with a fat collection including $50 for sit copies of John Wexley's book on the Rosenberg case, and a panel of leading British progressives outlined aspects of the Bobell case. Queen's Counsel D. N. Pritt, who got out of a sickbed to come, withly and witheringly described details of the legal frame-up. Prof. J. D. Bernal tied up the recent world conference of atomic scientists in Geneva with the Rosenberg-Sobell case to show how it had been exposed as a hoax from the scientific viewpoint.

JUST A LITTLE MORE: Monical Whately, Catholic journalist and lecturer, drew the inevitable gasps of incredulity in telling of the continuing witch-hunt as she saw it on a recent visit to the U.S. Chairman Stanley Evans, vicar of Dalston, hammered away on the point that the campaign for the Rosenbergs had almost won out—"just a little more would have done it." Chiding progressives here and elsewhere for not getting steam up for Sobell sooner, he said that if they had, Washington might have been compelled to review the case right after the Geneva conference.

In the context of Silverman's renewed crusade to abolish capital punishment here, the meeting re-evoked even more than it would otherwise have done the extraordinary emotion that people felt about the whole Rosenberg-Sobell horror. The standing endorsement of a cable to Eisenhower, asking Sobell's immediate removal fromAlcatraz and a new trial indicated that something the U.S. Embassy will be hearing about for a long time has been started.

For a young American 6,000 miles: away in a prison cell, and for his wife and children, it may be Nov. 15 was a big day too.

A darling dinner

AS IT MUST TO ALL MORTALS, the time may come for us when we will take our birthdays in stride. But right now, in our young estate, we count our anniversaries gladly: love the birthday parties you grownups give for us and cherish the gifts we receive; and hope our behavior may continue to warrant such thoughtfulness and affection.

And precisely because we have this youthful sext for celebrations, we are not above stretching our anniversary time over a considerable period—for as long, in fact, as it takes for all our parties to take place—say, until mid-January, at least. There are plenty of them scheduled, too. If you haven't been bid to one in your part of town, better drop us a line and find out what's cooking.

OUR NEW YORK PARTY was a truly delightful affair at the Hotel New Yorker Nov. 17. As in other years, Dr. Du Bois presided—and we are sure W. E. B.'s pertly pertinent remarks about the economics of truth-telling had a great deal to do with the unusually high-level generosity which prevailed. (Remind us to tell you what he said in detail, when there's more space.)

Reading from your left, the dias was a heart-warming alary of the unbowed: Carl Braden, fighting a sedition conviction in Kentucky for helping a Louisville Negro family purchase a house on the other side of the tracks; Dorothy Parker, whose matchless wit has never failed a good cause; philosopher Barrows. Dunham, who has just won a court fight for the right to tell a Congressional committee to mind its business; author—Harvey O'Connor and humanist Corliss Lamont, both in the process of winning the same kind of fights; editor Eugene Moy of the China Daily News, facing fail for love of his native land; Elliot Sullivan, a winner of that memorable bout this summer between the New York show folk and the Walter Committee; Choon Cha Kwak, who with her husband, Chungsoon, faces deportation to Syngman Rhee's hands for opposing his treason to Korea.

And (after time for a breath) Mrs. Helen Sobell, leader of the struggle for her husband's freedom and vindication for the Rosenbergs' name; Pablo Garcia, Harvard-trained Puerto Rican patriot and spokesman for his country's Smith Act victims; attorney Blanch Freedman, of counsel in the Belfrage Case and a foreignt fighter for the rights of foreign-born; and two valiant friends of the GUARDIAN from Brooklyn, Clifford T. McAvoy and Lionel Stander.

Now let's see—did we akip anybody? Ah, yes; Cedric Belfrage! Hale, hearty and personable (if not in person actually) in a huge color photograph projected above the dais as his voice came in tape-recorded and brimming over with wit and good sense.

Rubin timed his announcement with an attack in the Miami press on a campaign in Dade County for support of efforts to obtain a new trial and removal from Alcatraz for Morton Solell, scientist convicted with the Rosenbergs for conspiracy to commit espionage. A meeting at a private home for Mrs. Helen Sobell was visited by a corps of reporters and photographers who subjected Mrs. Sobell to a grilling and attempted to take pictures of guests.

Later a mailing asked local laryers and others for funds for Sobell' appeal. Rubin termed the Schell campaign and a tour of Florida citles by Garl Braden of the Louisville, Ky, Wade case, "collecting money for un-American causes."

Morton Sobell and the FBI

APR 1 0 1955

Pollowing is the full text of a letter written b Lond Bertrand Russell, noted British philosopher, the Manchester Guardian on the case of Morton Sobell M WRITING to enlist your support in the case of Morton Sobell, an innocent man condemned as a result of political hysteria to 30 years in gaol and at present incarcerated in Alcatraz, the worst prison in the United States. He was sentenced as an accomplice of the Rosenbergs in espionage. I am ... ashamed to say that at the time of the Rosenbergs' trial I did not look into the evidence. I have now done so. I am almost certain that the Rosenbergs were innocent and quite certain that the evidence against them would not have been considered adequate if prejudice had not been involved. But the Rosenbergs are dead and nothing can be done for them now except to hold up their official murderers to obloquy. Sobell, however, is alive and it is not too late for the United States Government to make some reparation to him.

The facts in his case are briefly as follows: He had a friend named Elitcher, who had been his best man. Elitcher had stated on oath that he had never the head a communist. The FBI discovered that in making this statement he had committed perjury. They let him know that he could escape punishmentif he would denounce other people as accomplices in treasonable activities. He decided to save his own skin by denouncing his best friend, Sobell. While negotiations in this sense were going on between him and the FBI Sobell and his wife and their two small children went to Mexico. Sobell toyed with the idea of not returning to the United States, but rejected it. His decision to return became known to the FBI, which had determined to present him as a fugitive from justice. In order to be still able to present him in this light, they hired thugs, whe beat him into unconsciousness, hustled him and his wife and their two children into fast cars, and drove them without stopping from Mexico City to the United States frontier. There they were handed over to an immigration officer, who falsely stamped their card of entry with the words "Deported from Mexico" although the Mexican Government had not been privy to the kidnapping and had expressed no intention of deporting them.

When Sobell was brought to trial these facts were not mentioned as his counsel considered that any criticism of the FBI, however justified, would only increase the severity of his sentence, his condemnation being regarded by his counsel as certain in spite of lack of evidence. The judge instructed the jury that they could not find Sobell guilty unless they believed Elitcher. Elitcher, because he was useful in this trial, has never been indicted for his acknowledged perjury and in spite of his being known to be a perjurer, every word that he said against Sobell was believed.

People express scepticism when it is said that most Germans did not know of Nazi atrocities, but I am sure that the immense majority of Americans are quite ignorant of the atrocities committed by the FBI. They do not know of the standard technique of these defenders of what, with cynical effrontery, they still call "The Free World." The technique is one with which we have been made familiar in other police States such as Nazi Germany and Stalin's Russia. The police find a man whom they can prove to be guilty of some offense and they promise him immunity if he will manufacture evidence against people who could not otherwise be indicted. Perjury is especially useful as a lever because many people who have been Communist in their student days rashly hope that this can be concealed and swear that they never were Communists. After a sufficient number of secret interviews the FBI descends upon innocent people with a posse of terrified perjurors and in the general hysteria every word uttered by the perjurors is accepted as gospel truth.

I do not suppose for a moment that President Eisenhower is aware of this well-established technique. If he knew of it, he would not only feel the revulsion which all decent people must feel, but would realise that every such case which becomes known outside the United States turns hundreds of thousands of people, if not into Communists, at least towards neutralism and away from the policy of NATO. For this large reason of public policy, as well as from motives of humanity and justice, it is to be hoped that something will be done to curb the FBL. A beginning might be made by the release of Morton Sobell or, at least, by ordering a new trial of his case.

New Sobell brief charges frame-up. new tria

By Elmer Bendiner

ROM MARCH 6 to March 29, 1951. Morton Sobell stood trial along with Julius and Ethel Rosenberg for conspiring to transmit defense data to the Soviet Union. The case against Morton Sobell rested on only two factors: the testimony of an admitted perjurer, Max Elitcher, who had an axe to grind in co-operating with the government; and seeming evidence that Sobell had "fled" with his family to Mexico to avoid arrest.

Last week Sobell's attorneys produced evidence to blow the "flight" story skyhigh and to support st charge of a gigantic frame-up conspiracy knowingly perpetrated by the FBI, Roy Cohn (one of the prosecutors before he became Sen. Mc Carthy's counsel), Irving Saypol (another prosecuting attorney and now a judge) the U.S. Embassy in Mexico, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service and the Mexican secret police.

The story of kidnaping, assault and Traudulent documentation is crucial because the factor of Sobell's alleged flight was by far the most telling blow against him. Judge Irving R. Kaufman in his charge said the jurors could conclude that flight was "legitimate ground for an inference of a guilty mind."

NEW EVIDENCE: On April 5, 1951, the Rosenbergs were sentenced to death and Morton Sobell to 30 years' imprisonment. He was held in Atlanta Penitentiary un-$11 Nov. 26, 1952, and since then has been in the grim, maximum-security prison of Alcatraz. The fresh evidence, never before revealed, is contained in a brief filed last week in Federal District Court in New Yerk by attorneys Donner, Kinoy and Perlin of New York and Benjamin Dre of San Prancisco. The brief asks fre dom for Morton Bobell at once. trial.

It charges Sobell was convicted on "false and perjurious testimony and evidence . . . false representations . . . and suppressed evidence."

The prosecution contended that Sobell and his family had gone to Mexico without a visa, under false names and were deported from Mexico by Mexican authorities. The government produced an alleged record from the Immigration and Naturalization Service with Sobell's signature and stamped across it the words: "Deported from Mexico." The government also brought an immigration inspectors stationed at Larech, Texas, to confirm the document. Both Sypol and Cohn re (Continued or Page 1)

THE DOCUMENTS: Filed with the new Sobell brief are records of the Mexican Dept. of Immigration showing that Morton Sobell and family arrived in Mexico by sir under their own names, bearing tourist card No. 70538.

Also produced is the American Airlines manifest showing Bobell's name and list-

An appeal

AN APPEAL to President Eisenhower to grant Morton Sobell executive pardon or commutation or to ask the Attorney General to consent to a new trial was made last week in a letter signed by 62 prominent Americans, Included were: commentator Elmer Davis, authors Lewis Mumford and Waldo Frank, Nobel Prize scientists Dr. Harold Urey and Dr. Linus Pauling; clergymen Dr. Roland Bainton of the Yale Divinity School, Rev. John Paul Jones of Brooklyn, Dr. Paul L. Leh-mann of Princeton Theological Semmary.

· Also signing were: Dorothy Day, edltor of the Catholic Worker; Minor Alexander of the American Friends Service Committee; Rev. Reginald H. Bass of the Community Church, Brooklyn: Rev. William Baird, Essex Community Church, Chicago; Rabbi Julian Feibelman, Temple Sinai, New Orleans; Prof. Malcolm Sharp, University of Chicago Law School; Judge Patrick O'Brien, Detroit; Prof. Gardner Murphy, Menninger Poundation, Topeks, Kan.

ing his family. Sobell had also registered his camera equipment with U.S. customs : officials at Dallas to avoid paying duties on a return trip he plainly expected to make. Regulations require that passengers flying from Dallas to Mexico City show their tourist cards before boarding the plane, so the Sobells must have been traveling with identification.

Sobell, who, the prosecution said, had used a dozen aliases to cover his tracks in Mexico, also carried his birth certificate, his Social Security card, membership card in a scientific organization, and diver's license. To top it off this alleged fugitive registered himself and his family in his own name at the places they stayed.

THE PDEPORTATION": Still, there was the UB. Immigration Dept.'s record with the damning stamp: "Deported from Mexico." But records of the Mexican Dept. of Immigration show that Sobell was not deported. Although Mexican law is strict on the procedure to be followed, the notations to be made in any deportation case, there are no records of Sobell's deportation in Mexico City and none in Nuevo Laredo, the border town where Sobell was taken, allegedly by Mexican immigration officials.

According to the brief, when the chief of immigration at Nuevo Laredo was informed of Sobell's seizure, he complained to his chief in Mexico City that secret service agents had evaded the Dept, of Immigration in forcibly rushing Sobell to the U.S. on Aug. 18, 1950.

The Mexican authorities inglitted an investigation and in September 1901, fold the Nuevo Laredo official that, steps had been taken to prevent such stolations of Mexican law in the future. Supplied of Stone EIDNAPED: Far from being an orderly deportation of a fugitive, this them is the story, told in the brief, of how Morton Sobell was brought back from Mexica;

The Sobelis left for a pleasure trip to Mexico on June 22, 1950. They had all the customary tourist documents, all made out in their own names.

On Aug. 16 the family went on a picnic. In the evening they returned to their apartment in Mexico City, were finishing supper when three Mexicans entered. They were civilian clothes and identified themselves as officers of the Secret Police of the Federal District. They referred to Sopell as "Johnny Jones," insisted he was wanted for robbing a bank in Acapulco.

The Sobelis offered identification documents which were confiscated. Sobeli fasisted on calling the U.S. Embassy. He was refused. More police arrived. Sobell was knocked unconscious, taken to a car and driven to Secret Police headquarters. When he demanded to know the charges he was beaten again.

Later in the night his wife and their two children were brought to police head-quarters. At 4 a.m. on Aug. 17, 1950, Sobell was taken in one car, his family in another, both guarded. Periodically the cars would stop and a guard would report by telephone. At about 3 a.m. Aug. 18 they arrived in Nuevo Laredo and stopped several blocks from the bridge leading over the border to the U.S. They waited while the guard telephoned. Then, before they reached the American side of the bridge, an FBI agent entered the car and ordered the driver to go at once to the U.S. immigration office in Laredo, Tex.

THE LIE: There Bobell was ordered to sign certain papers and was placed in custody of an FBI agent. The Mexican Secret Police turned over to the FBI the documents they had confiscated from Bobell.

Before the well-planned assault on the Sobell apartment, agents had questioned neighbors, telling them they were acting for the U.S. government, that the Sobells were wanted for a variety of crimes including kidnaping. The Sobells' house-keeper was questioned repeatedly, her belongings searched and some of them confiscated. She was informed the U.S. Embassy was holding some of the seized property. The Embassy also figured as the scene of questioning in connection with the abduction.

The prosecutors Roy Cohn and Irving Saypol, the brief says, both must have known the full story of the kidnaping. One month after Sobell's illegal seizure in Mexico both went to Mexico City and interviewed persons connected with the event. During the trial Saypol indicated he knew the full details when he declared that Mrs. Sobell had been present from the time of the arrest to the moment Sobell was turned over to the FSI. Yet both prosecutors repeatedly stressed the point that Sobell had been deported from Mexico, caught in flight under suspicious circumstances. They offered as evidence the card stamped "Deported From Mexico," knowing it to be apurious, the brief charges.

MODERN DREYFUS CASE: It is charged they suppressed the evidence in possession of the government: for example, the toursist card which would have proved that the Sobells traveled legally and openly.

The Sobell attorneys contend that none of this could be proved at the trial because it took painstaking investigation. Sobell was confronted by what seemed incontrovertible evidence with no way to counter it since the government had confiscated his proofs.

Government attorneys said they would a file a prompt answer to the brief. They must now defend themselves against a documented charge of planned assault fraud and frame-up. More than that the whole case against the Rosenbergs threatens to crumble if the Sobell defense charges hold.

Even before the brief was filed Sidney Silverman, member of the British Parliament, joined in the mounting discussion on the case in the Manchester Guardisn. He wrote:

"One day, I am confident, the United States will be as ashamed of these trials! [Rosenberg-Sobell] as they already are of the Sacco and Vanzetti affair and as Prance is of the Dreyfus case."

MOTHER PLEADS FOR HER SON

Britain hears about Sobell

By Cedric Belfrage

Bocial Democrats imprisoned for their beliefs behind the Iron Curtain" brought up by Labour Party leaders at the fameus dinner for Bulganin and Khrushchev has caused many in Britain to wonder when political leaders will protest against Washington's imprisonment of Americans for their beliefs. In the British press the blackout on this American persecution continues: a week after the opening of the latest Smith Act trial in New York, not a line about it had appeared here.

On one sector there has been a breakthrough: the case of Morton Sobell, serving a 30-year term in Alcatraz as a "spy." A lively correspondence in the Manchester Guardian about the case and its implications, following a letter from philosopher Bertrand Russell (GUARDIAN, 4/9), has drawn attention sharply to "free world" hypocrisy about freedom and justice in socialist countries. The break-through is the result of a gallant, 8,000-mile pilgrimage by a 61year-old woman from the Bronx, Mrs.
Rose Sobell, who has just returned to the U. B.

SHE TOLD HER STORY: Reaching Britain in Yebruary, Morton Sobell's mother—then a complete stranger to the outside world—had formidable obstacles to surmount from the outset. On the ship the British immigration officer told her she could not land but, after action by Londoners to whom she radioed for help, she received a three-week permit. In that short time Mrs. Sobell met and fold her son's story to:

THE BUSSELL BUCKUS: The effect of Mrs. Sobell's honest and courageous personality on Britons concerned about "free world" justice was indicated by Bertrand Russell's action following her visit to him. He told her he was not prepared to do anything until he read all the material she brought. The John Wexley book (published here this month but so far unreviewed) and Prof. Harold Urey's statement convinced him.

His Guardian letter elicited some indignant counter-blasts from pro- Washingtonians, including outright lies such as "the FBI has no power to ar-i rest." Russell blasted back, suggesting that defenders of Washington justice should first discover the facts before sounding off. He received many letters asking further information which he has forwarded—with a donation for further spreading of the facts—to the new committee.

In Paris, where Mrs. Bobell spent two weeks after a visit to Rome, a public meeting in defense of Bobell was held April 23; in London a meeting is set for June 19, Rosenberg commemoration day. Mrs. Sobell, who did not know anyone in the three European capitals when she arrived, laft with many warm friends of her son's cause to which she devoted every moment of her pligrimage. As the first American directly connected with a cold-war persecution case to slip through the Cadillac Curtain on such a mission in several years, she has some an outstanding job

THAT SENATE HEARING

Wexley notes new holes in Gold-Greenglass tales

against Julius and Ethel Rosenberg or against Morton Sobell have been allowed to talk they have dug fresh holes in their previous testimony and whittled away at the underpinnings of the entire case.

John Wexley explored many of those holes in his book The Judgment of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg (Cameron & Kahn, 1955). After the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee recently brought the key government witnesses, Harry Gold and David Greenglass, out of the silence of Lewisburg Penitentiary for a three-hour hearing, the GUARDIAN talked with author Wexley to see what new gaps Gold and Greenglass had opened up in their swn testimony.

It was still too early to match all aspects of the twisted Gold-Greenglass story with earlier tellings of it, but on first reading of the hearing transcript Wexley noted that Gold had this time undermined one of the few items of documentary, corproborative evidence offered by the government.

THAT HOTEL BOOM: In the Rosenberg trial Gold told how he had gone to Santa Pe to pick up data for the spy ring from Klaus Fuchs, then to Albuquerque, to sather more from David Greenglass, He testified (Court record pp. 798-848) that he arrived at Albuquerque in the evening

Sobell rally May 15

MRS. ROSE SOBELL, mother of Morton Sobell, returned from Europe last week and will speak at the rally for her son's freedom scheduled for Tucsday evening, May 15, at New York's Carnegis Hall, Mrs. Sobell toured England, France and Italy to win support for her son. Earl Bertrand Russell in England and Pablo Picasso in France were among those who answered her appeal.

The rally, which will present new evidence to establish Sobell's innocence, will also hear Judge Patrick H. O'Brien, former Michigan attorney general, law professor Stephen Love and John Wexley, author of The Judgment of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg.

of June 2, 1945, went to the Greenglass' home, learned they were out, found "a room in the hallway of a rooming house" in downtown Albuquerque and spent the night there.

The next morning, according to his sourt testimony, he registered at the Hotel Hilton under his own name. He had to see the Greenglasses early that morning, eatch a train shortly after noon that day in order to make the rendezvous he testified he did make in New York with his alleged Russian master-spy, Yakovley.

Wexley asked: Why did Gold bother to register in a hotel where he could not have planned to stay? Why did this "spy" who boasts of his ingenuity, register in his own name? (A photostat of the hotel registration was produced as evidence. The defense did not insist on seeing the original.) His registering could have served no purpose except as documentation in a story otherwise almost bare of it.

STORY OF A MAP: When he appeared before the subcommittee last month, Goldwas saked to tell his story again "in detail." He said he welcomed the opportunity, complaining that in court he felt inhibited: "You can't elaborate, You must be precise."

He told the Santa Fe-Albuquerque episode again. He went over his stay in the rooming house, his visits to Greenglass, confirmed that he traveled by train all the way from Albuquerque, but this time completely omitted any mention of the Hillon Hotel and the registration which had been the only item to substantials his story.

The meeting with Fuchs also developed variations since Gold testified in court.

in Sonta Fe. (He found his away about town from the map so as to avoid siking strangers and so risk leaving traces behind him.)

Before the subcommittee Gold used the PBI edition of his story but gave his rendezvous point as the Alameda St. Bridge instead of the one on Castillo St. Wexley pointed out that a man who knew a town yery well might mistake one bridge for

HARRY GOLD

As he appeared at the Eastland Committee hearing.

He then said that in New York, along with his spy-ring introductions, he had been given a map of Santa Fe. a city completely unfamiliar to him, and that on the map was marked the rendezvous point where he was to meet Fuchs: the Castillo St. bridge.

THE HOOVER VERSION: In another version of the story by J. Edgar Hoover, published in the Beaders Digest as "from the secret files of the FBI," Gold is said to have obtained the map at a museum another. But for Gold, the careful apy, who says he knew nothing of Santa Pe beyond his crucial rendezvous there, such a slip is very curious.

Greenglass, whose testimony helped send his sister Ethel Rosenberg to the also-trio chair, edited his original testimony to deepen the picture of Julius Rosenberg as a conspirator.

GREENGLASS' STORY: In court Greenglass had said that Julius Rosenberg came to him in February, 1950, after Fuchs was arrested, and warned Greengh to consider leaving the country. Before the Sengte committee Greenglass said Rosquberg came to him in October, 1949, four months before Fuchs was arrested, told Greenglass that he knew—in some secret fashion—that Scotland Yard was talking to Fuchs and then advised Greenglass to skip.

The close prison association of Gold and Greenglass had worked a certain change in the young auto mechanic who had testified in court in almost inartioulate phrases. Greenglass seemed to have. taken on the high-blown mannerisms of Gold. Committee members incredulously, asked him to repeat when he called himself a "tyro" in the spy business, testified, of matters "within my ken" and spoke of Rosenberg as "my mentor." He also acquired Gold's Illusions of grandeur. Greenglass, who flunked the only science courses he ever took at high school, solemnly testified that Julius Rosenberg once reprimended him because he had not joined the Federation of Atomic Scientiats.

REWARD OR GESTURE? Gold and Greenglass have both been returned to Lewisburg where they cannot in public trip over their words. Their performance, which had apparently been meant to allay mounting doubts about the government's case, seemed to have failed in that objective. But columnist Leonard Lyons in the N.Y. Post (5/7) reported that Judge McGranery, who sentenced Gold to 30 years imprisonment, will ask that his sentence be commuted to time already served. That could be a reward or it could be a gesture. Many of those who followed the case from the beginning think it unlikely that the government. would risk leaving its prize witnesses free to talk.

Last week the N. Y. Herald Tribune (5/4) in its series based on Robert J. Donovan's book Eisenhower—the Inside. Story, told again of the world-wide protest that flooded the President's mail clamoring for clemency. Recalling the sve of the execution, Donovan wrote:

"It had been a terrible 48 hours for him, the President told the Cabinet on the morning of June 19. He never remembered a time in his life when he felt more in need of help from some one much more powerful than he."

BUT THEY DIED: The President had said he would reopen the case if any of his cabinet felt he should. None did. The President said repeatedly he had "made a careful examination" of the case. The Rosenbergs went to their death. Now the case's flaws have become more obvious to any examination. The protest has found other voices, such as Earl Bertrand Russell's in England. The Rosenberg sentence is past revision, but Morton Sobell is still alive and in Alcatraz.

Last week lawyers were preparing to move for a new trial for Sobell with fresh evidence of his innocence.

Sobell's attorneys—Donner, Kinoy and Ferlin of New York and Benjamin Dreyfus of San Francisco—have filed a brief containing new syldence to show that Sobell had been convicted on perjurious evidence. The retrial motion came before Judge Sylvester J. Ryan. Such motions are usually referred to the original trial judge, but when the Sobell attorneys asked Judge Ryan to hear the arguments, he agreed unless Judge Kaufman indicated a preference to hear it himself.

HOVERNMENT REPLIES: At a confermes with attorneys for both Sobell and the government, Judge Kaufman said he saw no ground to disqualify himself, although the Sobell attorneys recalled the damning comments he had made at the time of sentencing. Judge Kaufman said He felt obliged to consider the new motion and tentatively set May 22, for the hearing.

The government filed its answer to the Sobell brief for a new trial. Next week's GUARDIAN will carry an analysis of that answer.

U. S. reply to Sobell brief admits some defense charges

THE GOVERNMENT last week admitted that some of the evidence used against Morton Sobell was false and that other evidence, possibly favorable to Sobell, was in government hands but not produced at his trial.

Sobell was tried with Julius and Ethel Rosenberg for conspiring to transmit defense data to the Soviet Union. Federal District Judge Irving R. Kaufman, who sentenced the Rosenbergs to death and Sobell to 30 years' imprisonment, was to hear arguments for a retrial for Sobell on May 31, almost three years after the Rosenbergs had been executed.

Bobell's attorneys, in asking for a new trial, presented fresh evidence to show that the government had deceived the jury by declaring that Sobell was deported from Mexico where he had allegedly fled to escape arrest. They offered evidence showing that the Mexican Immigration authorities had not acted against Sobell: that he had traveled with a tourist card and vaccination certificate made out in his own name; that the government prosecutors, Roy Cohn and Irving Saypol, had these documents in their possession when they told the jury Bobell had no visa and was following a sinister "pattern of flight."

A DICTIONARY DEFINITION: In an answering brief, U.S. Attorney Paul Williams admitted that the words "Deported from Mexico," written by a U.S. immigration inspector across a document concerning Sobell's forcible return to the U.S., should have read: "Elected."

Bobell's own brief cited Mexican records to show that Sobell had been "kidnapped" by the Mexican Security police with the active collaboration of the FBI, the U.S. Embassy in Mexico City and the U.S. Immigration Dept. In answering the charge, the government made no effort to refute the Sobell evidence, admitted that the Mexican Immigration authorities had no hand in Sobell's arrest but said that he was "deported" in the sense of the word as defined by Punk and Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary:

"To carry off or away, transport, especially to take or send away forcibly, as to a pegal colony; banish, as, the misoners

were deported by boa

That definition might fit such a kidnapping described in the Sibbell brief, but differs drastically with the common understanding of the word. Sobell attorneys have charged that Sobell was not given the chance to return voluntarily to the U.S. and in that way the prosecutor could describe him as in flight and Judge Kaufman could then remind the jurors that flight was "legitimate ground for an inference of a guilty mind."

THE ELITCHER TESTIMONY: The government's answer to the charge of "suppressing" the tourist card and vaccination certificate, made out legally in Sobell's name, is that the Sobell defense had not asked that such documents be produced at the trial.

Three-quarters of the prosecution's brief consists of summarizing the testimony of Max Elitcher, the only significant witness against Bobell, and an admitted perjurer, and describing Sobell's inquiries about leaving Mexico.

Whatever the merits of the government's case on those grounds, they seemed to have little to do with the retrial motion. Technically that motion does not cover the whole ground of the guilt or innocence of the accused which is a matter for the trial itself, but only whether the proceedings were tainted by false or suppressed evidence. On that point the government seemed to be conceding, though belittling its importance.

TREATY VIOLATION CHARGED: A second brief was filed for Sobell last week, this time charging that the court had no jurisdiction over the case at all, since Sobell had been selzed in violation of a treaty with Mexico, without the knowledge or consent of the Mexican government.

The proceedings which, if necessary, can be appealed all the way to the Supreme Court, were taken by attorneys Donner, Kinoy and Perlin of New York, and Benjamin Dreyfus of San Francisco,

Last week it was announced that. Thomas McBride, chancellor of the Phild adelphia bar and a leading criminal lawyer, had joined the case. He was expected to participate in the May 31 hearing.

FROM CEDRIC BELFRAGE'S NEW BOOK

My Sister, My Brother

The excerpts which follow are from Chapter 19 of Cedric Belfrage's fortheoming new book, The Case of the Prightened Giant. The book will be published in London and here in November. During his stay in West St. Jail prior to his deportation last August 15, Belfrage occupied the cell which had been Julius Rosenberg's while he was awaiting transfer to the Sing Sing deathhouse in 1951. Here Belfrage tells of this, and of his impressions of the couple in whose behalf the GUARDIAN initiated the worldwide campaign for elemency and justice.

UNE 19, especially as I passed through the receiving room and looked at the two men in my old cell—his old cell, where he thought constantly of her—was a day of much reflection on the intertwinings of human destiny.

It was the day on which Ethel and Julius were put to death, just two years before. I never knew them, and I loved them, but not enough. I do not know how much I have of consolation in the fact that the GUARDIAN took up the fight for justice and mercy for them, when all America retreated in abject terror from its conscience as from a red-hot stove. But I think it was above all because we moved for Ethel and Julius after they were convicted of "atom-spying" that the priesthood of the anti-communist mystery moved against me, imprisoning me the first time up to only a few days before they were killed. What consolation there is, I take from that. . . .

Ethel and Julius—and their defender Manny Bloch—were of the human fibre that makes the word "Jew" a beautiful one as the name "mountain of roses" is M. Y Prational Succession of the Succession of t eautiful Air we learned gradually, for when Manny came as a stranger to ask our poor little sheet to raise the cry for our poor little sheet to raise the er ustice since no one else would even asten to him. Ethel and Julius were alleady in the death-house; none of us had ever set eyes upon them, and none of us ever would. We came to know them through Manny, who always dropped by to tell about his weekly Sing Sing visits; and through their prison letters, which Manmy first brought to my desk as they wrote them on the now-familiar prison stationery, and which later became a book cherished by good folk in many lands ...

THOUGHT of what the Catholic schoolteacher Jacques Madaule wrote in France—long after the GUARDIAN had asked: "Is this the Dreyfus Case of cold-war America?" and after the French people, recognising that it was, had risen in vain protest:

"One can say without fear of error that if Ethel and Julius had not been Jews they would not have been convicted—and perhaps not even tried."

I shought of July 6 in the year 1851 of ulius in his cell, after eating the special Independence Day portion of ice oream, re-reading the Declaration of independence in the Times which always devotes a page to a facsimile of it on that day.

He takes his pen from the locker and scribbles a note to Ethel in her cell a hundred yards away: "It is interesting to read these words in this setting. ..."

Then, beneath the signatures of the $6 congressional delegates of 1776, he writes: "Juliuk Rosenberg." He tears out the page and fistens it up on the cell wall.

When I thought of them as parents, I saw the haunted faces of the "apples of the eyes" of Ethel and Julius, Michael, and Robbie, arriving at the Christman party given them by the GUARDIAN staff in 1951. Michael at seven, already old far beyond his years; Robbie, at four, a little boy lost, frightened to go near other children, only looking about him for his mother, running to bury himself for fleeting consolation in the lap of Jo or any Woman who looked kind and acted tenderly. And I lived again through the ghastly Dilgrimages which I made with the boys in Manny Bloch's car to Bing Bing. stopping to buy them hot dogs along the highway, waiting outside the jail while they spent their hour with the doomed ones and Ethel sang them somes that recalled bedtimes when they were a famfly. I saw the boys emerging, each holding one of Manny's hands, to be surrounded by photographers and reporters coaxing or threatening them for a "story" until Robbie would cry and Michael would stick out his tongue. I saw them again in their first foster-home in New Jersey: wept for them again as the radio, on that bloody night in June of 1953, intersupled its jazz and pepsi-cols advertising to tell us and them that "three jolts" had killed their father and a "puff of smoke". came from the leather mask over their mother's face before she died. The pioture changed to the children scampering in wild happiness from room to room of Blanch's and Gloria's law office in Pubfusry of 1954, where dozens of we calebrated the defeat of the government's efforts to seize the orphans so that the memory of their parents might be expunged or, if possible, made hateful.

And pictures of what I did not see but had to imagine: Ethel and Julius with the obliders in the prison, "playing with them," as Manny descritheir own living room"; Julius holding , Robbie on his knee telling a story about the boat they saw through the barred Robbie on his knee telling a story ab window, coming up the Hudson in a cloud: of seagulis; Ethel giving them the only present she had, a collection of insects cought in the exercise yard; both of them dry-eyed, holding back their sobs until they were alone again in their cells. To Manny after one of these visits Ethel wrote: "Make no mistake about it: this mother's heart is being methodically and mercilessly broken and the pain is simply not to be imagined . . . I am one vast vessel of pain-it feels as though every last inch of me beats with hurt. . . .

OF JULIUS as a human being—for I thought especially of him, sharing a tiny fragment of his experience there Where began his journey to the cross-I recalled especially from the letters his excited description of the orange tree. One of the men in the death-house had planted an orange pip in a crack in the concrete of the exercise yard. Walting for death, Julius and all the others found delight in watering and tending it as it grew inch by inch, finally producing faintly scented flowers and even small oranges. When I mentioned this in a conversation with Mr. Smith, a decent and popular West St. hack [guard] approaching retirement age who had many recollections of Julius, he commented dryly: "That sounds just like him."

Mr. Smith felt more deeply about Julius than it would have been prudent for him to express. He recalled that Julius was always good-natured, considerate and painstaking in whatever he did in West St., and marvellously cheerful considering the nature of his sentence because he was always convinced that justice would prevail. As his letters show, he did not abandon his faith in American justice until nearly the end—and his faith in the people, never. One of the jobs he did in West St. was panelling the walls of the visiting room where I talked with Jo through the glass every Saturday.

When I thought of Ethel and Julius as "communists"—the label that had to be pinned to them, although nothing as to their affiliation was ever established at the trial—one reflection was sutomatic: that if indeed they were members of it, then the American Communist Party was thereby ennobled. If they were, they took their place with many communist men and women to whom humanity was in debt, who in my time had shown the greatest love, that they laid down their greatest love, that they laid down their important to me was that they were my sizer and my brother in my own progressive family which was broader than

Parties.

It was as "communists" that they were sentenced by the court and by the gress to strike fear into all who were disposed to protest the abuses and usurpations of despots masquerading as democrats; and in the hope that under this ultimate terror they would weaken, recant and betray. And this it was that stood out plain for us all on the GUARDIAN, in that summer of '51 when even we, not yet fully comprehending how far the new despots would go in the cold war on their own people, had been half convinced by press and government smoke that there must be some fire in the case. When we read the trial record which had been so wildly distorted, we knew that at best guilt had not been proven, at worst-and most probably—the whole case was a trumped-up hoex.

SO THE LONG FIGHT began: a good fight against odds that were overpowering, in which a multitude all over America joined, but only the poor and obscure, for the terror frightened into silence virtually all of America's respectable, its high and mighty, its saints, its intellectuals. From thousands of nobodies, after we had set the record reasonably straight, flowed dollar bills in response to an appeal for a Rosenberg defense committee; so that at a time when our struggling enterprise was threatened with extinction for lack of money to pay printing bills, in a corner of the office a table was piled a foot high . with money to save Ethel and Julius. Denounced everywhere as a communist plot the campaign for justice developed steedily yet with sickening slowness as Manny saw appeal after appeal fail in the courts and the executioner's hand nearing the switch.

The fight goes on

Then the last frightful days of hopes raised a little and smashed, of the Supraised a little and smashed, of the Supraise Court refusing to the end to review the case, of anti-semites yelling obtained in the case, of anti-semites yelling obtained in the white House; of demonstrations all over the world, of pleas for meroy even from the Pope of Rome which were bottled up by the witch-hunters already dining on Ethel's and Julius's blood. And the evening itself, on which my GUARD. IAN colleagues and I sat around the radio in the office, trying, to project our thoughts across the void to the room up the Hudson with the chair in it.

West St. for me, and her verses spoke with the same marvellous freshness as when she sent them long ago to the GUARDIAN from the death-house.

Their song was interrupted, but their Gethaemane and crucifixion had put into millions of hearts a new certainty that it would be sung to the triumphant end. Ethel and Julius had put a new fear into the hearts of the despots, a healthy fear of the incorruptibility that may reside in ordinary men and women. The silence on the wire connecting the Justice Dopartment with the Sing Sing death-house had spoken eloquently. It said that the plan to turn America into a nation of stoolpigeous had failed.

An interview with

Bertrand Russell

By Cedric Belfrage

TROM HIS QUIET GARDEN villa in the London sugurb of Richmond, Bertrand Russell looks back on a life which has never been dull, and still, in his $4th year, does not threaten to become so. Among the ruddi-faced, snowy-haired philosopher's souvenirs are going to jail for his peace activities in World War I, scendalizing the respectable with his free-wheeling coeducational school between wars, and succeeding to an earldom in 1931. He has traveled everywhere in search of truth, interested himself in everything, said just what he thought to everyone, publicly confessed his error whenever he found anything he said or didn't say to have been wrong. The world has come to recognize him as one who has generally been right.

Last March he started another tumult by expressing in the Manchester Guardian shame at not having koked into the Rosenberg case "at the time"; "almost certainty" that the Rosenbergs were innocent; and a plea—with pungent references to the background of FBI "atrocities"—for a new trial of the Rosenbergs' alleged fellow-conspirator Morton Sobell who is in Alcatras for 30 years. The indignant ensuing correspondence defending the Dept. of Justice and the FBI, topped off by a final and even deadlier volley from Russel, has now died down.

17th CENTUEY LIBERAL: Last week I called on him to convey something of what his action has meant to progressive Americans. On the table beside the Hospitable tea-tray in his study—which had an electric fire burning and the window wide open to the early summer scents from the garden—were copies of Max Lowenthal's book on the FBI ("I'm just reading it"), William A. Reuben's Atom Spy Hoax ("I'm just going to read it") and John Wexley's Judgment of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg which convinced him and inspired his letter. It was in this room last winter that he received Mrs. Rose Bobell, who persuaded him to read the facts and judge from them whether justice had been done to her son.

"I am going into all this," Russell said, lighting his pipe, "because I am an old-fashioned liberal—you might say in the 17th century sense, in that I have always had a great fear of the police and feel they are the same danger now that kings were then. Lowenthal's bolk is very instructive. I have been reading about the roun ding-up in New York streets in 1918 of men who were supposed to be draft-evaders—almost none of them were, but there seems to have been hardly a bleat of pry test.

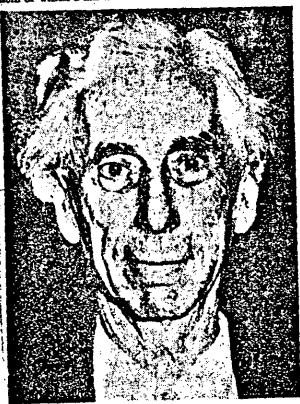

DRYADFUL LAYSES: "I recall the time when I was at the University of California at Los Angeles in 1939 and they quite suddenly found that one of the lecturers, a man of experience and standing who had defended migratory workers' right to organize, was incompetent. The others didn't protest, and I have never seen anything to equal the terror in the common room when Sproul, the head of the university, marched in to lecture the staff. The university was completely controlled by the banker Giannini-everyone did what this Italian fascist told them to. Then in 1940 when I was barred from an appointment at New York City College-on the ground that I was 'aphrodisiac' among other dreadful lapses, though obviously they didn't know what that meant-not one New Dealer except Mrs. Roosevelt supported me. I can't agree with you that in America there has ever been the same degree of personal liberty that we have here. It doesn't exist for the average man.

At all times I have been rather astonished by then hel of protest against injustice.

"Now the way the FBI is behaving is quite extraordinary. Apparently they can find people to testify to absolutely anything. Yet when I meet Americans, if I say anything at all against the FBI it's as if I'd talked against the Holy Ghost. How can you? This is holy!
I am astounded by the letters I have been getting from Americans, abusing me and exalting the police, most of all the one from the Committee for Cultural Freedom of which I am a member. Is it for cultural freedom

BERTRAND RUSSELL
A lack of protest astonishes kim or isn't it? What has happened to my old friend Sidney Hook? On the other hand I've had many letters from Americans who say: I'm delighted you say these things, I wish I dared."

A CHILLED ALLIANCE: I asked Russell what he thought about the unilateral release of political prisoners and cutting of armed forces by the Russians and their allied countries. He said it was "very embarrassing to the Americans who don't want to do either." I asked: "To you think the time may be at hand when the world will see America as the country with the only gemaining iron curtain?"

"Indeed it's very likely," he said. "You know, all of Western Europe is very much chilled, in the whole conception of alliance with America, by the fact that there has beemed to be less and less difference between America and Russia. We must stand in with America but we don't like it. I am very anxious for good relations, but all these injustices make it harder."

Bow, can relations with America be improved?"

"Well, we can't do it until there is greater liberalism in the American administration—that's the only thing that will do it. And so there has to be more frankness about what is going on there. Of course every government commits misdeeds and feels it must conceal them. We certainly should not be self-rightcons in view of our own failures in Cyprus and so on. Governments often manage to keep their misdeeds fairly dark at home but abroad they can't. So if they can't keep them dark the only thing is to mend their ways.

BASES OUT OF DATE: "The same is true for in British who commit our sins a long way off, although we're not so had at home. Of course we shall end by being turned out of Cyprus—what we're doing there is absolutely futile. The whole idea that it's important-to have bases is out of date. They are only of use if there's to be a big war, but even then, if we want a big war to destroy practically everybody, we can do it all from Greenland which is not far from Moscow. But people agree there isn't going to be a big war: the chances are at least four to one against it, although the risk is still there."

What did he think about the events in the U.S.S.R. since Stalin's death?

I am convinced the Communists really do want to liberalize their regimes. Would I be mistaken in attributing this to the fact that they have really got good hydrogen bombs and so are no longer frightened? But it is quite genuine. They have let out thousands of political prisoners although for years they have been saying there weren't any. What has particularly impressed me is Hungary tearing down the barbed wire along the frontier—because it is an actual physical act. Also I am glad that the genes are now able to behave as they like, not just as Stalin told them.

"I have always said that Stalin was the successor of Ivan the Terrible. I think his influence was completely bad. I was in Russia only once, in 1820, and wrote a little book about it I thought it was horrible—an absolute nightmare—and have had the same view since, although it is getting better now: not what I should like at all, but better. But in any case we've got to co-operate with them whether we like it or not.

AN APOLOGY TO MAKE: I asked him if his views of Western policy toward Russia hadn't changed in recent years. This was his answer:

"The worst thing I ever said—and I am sorry I did—was soon after the last war at the time America produced the Baruch plan for atomic control. I said we must urge the Russians to come in and that If they wouldn't, we should threaten them; and I thought they would yield. I wanted to see atomic power internationalized and thought the Baruch plan a good one.

I think I said that, and I'm sorry. The moment Russia had atomic power the situation was changed. I thought it was quite possible to persuade Russia to come into the Baruch plan. It wasn't that I wanted a war, or to reform the Russian regime—they have the right to whatever regime they like—but to preserve the peace of the world.

"Within the next five to ten years," said the philosopher with the unclosable mind and the habit of courage, "It is possible that hostility will grow enformously less. It is less already. It rests largely with America." I left him with his books on the American political police and the fruits of their work, promising to lend him my copy of that great contemporary classic, Harvey Matusow's False Witness.

A letter from Helen

Dear Editors and Staff:

For many of us the month of June is a time of remembering. We remember not only the horror of the deaths of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, but we remember the truth and the beauty of their inmocence and their courage. We remember the warm humanity of the millions who protested their death, and the sharp clean anger of those who fought for their lives. The GUARDIAN was the first to break through the circle of fire that was drawn around the Rosenbergs and my husband, Morton Sobell. In this time of remembering I want to tell you of the GUARDIAN of my gratitude, my admiration, and my thankfulness to you. Undaunted by your own problems of survival, and in today's world they are many, you have not hesitated to help by bringing

REPORT TO READERS

LIVE YEARS AGO this week, the GUARDIAN was able to announce in joyful headlines: "Victory! & of the Trenton 6 free!" Three years earlier these six young Negro men had been in death cells, convicted of a murder they could not have committed. The trial recked of frameup and false confessions extracted from drugged and tortured men. Unimpeachable witnesses placing each of them far from the scene of the crime were ignored.

That was in the summer of 1948—the trial was going on during the founding convention of the Progressive Party in nearby Philadelphia. Some of us attending that convention learned of the case there, but at that time we had not yet managed to get the GUAR-DIAN into publication.

When we did-in October, 1948—the Trenton Case became our first great campaign. "Is there a Northern Scottsboro Case in Trenton. N.J.?", our Oct. 25 headline asked. Our subsequent stories turning up the sordid facts of the frameup reached far shores, even though the GUARDIAN was only weeks old at the time and reaching only a handful of readers. Protests came from London, Pari and finally forced attention to the case here. The Civil Rights Cor cress, although heavily burdened with the first Poley Square Smit act cases, pitched in on behalf of the Six. Paul Robeson went the Trenton and sang at a mass meeting to rally support for their appeal, At the GUARDIAN's request, attorney O. John Rogge entered the

In June, 1949, the N.J. Supreme Court reversed the convictions and ordered a new trial. That trial ended in June, 1951, as the headline above reported, in freedom for four of the men and a jury recommendation of "mercy" for two in what was later disclosed as a jury-room deal. One of the two, Collis English, died in prison; the other, Ralph Cooper, was eventually freed.

BUT EVEN AS the Trenton Six were vindicated, a new and deeply disturbing case brought requests from GUARDIAN readers, proposing the same sort of inquiry we had undertaken in the Trenton Case. Attorney Emanuel H. Bloch came to our office with the trial record of the convictions of Ethel and Julius Rosenberg and Morton Sobell; asked us to read the material and decide whether this case merited a GUARDIAN campaign.

The rest is well-known history—a tragic, ennobling, universal effort to save the lives of the man and woman executed three years ago this week-on June 19, 1953-while a world bowed its head in grief and shame. Yet out of this immense struggle there has continued a world determination to vindicate the Rosenbergs and to free

Morton Sobell from a 30-year sentence in Alcatraz.

HIS ISSUE of the GUARDIAN contains much material of great value to those carrying on the effort to secure justice for Sobell and expose the frameup methods which brought about the Rosenberg-Sobell indictments and convictions.

We are most fortunate to be able to excerpt a chapter from Cedric Belfrage's forthcoming book, The Case of the Frightened Glant, giving his recollections of those unforgettable months. Also for this issue Belfrage has interviewed Lord Bertrand Russell, Britain's foremost mathematician, who has recently taken the lead in England for justice for Morton Sobell. Our "Spectator" this week is Albert Malts. writing on "the book" (John Wexley's The Judgment of Julius & Ethel Rosenberg) which has done so much to focus world opinion anew on the Rosenberg-Sobell tragedy.

We most earnestly hope you will put this week's GUARDIAN to use among your friends to win new and needed support for bringing Sodell's case to the Supreme Court if necessary, on the basis of new and indisputable syidence of falsification and perjury against him. THE QUARDIA

These are the reasons why an Elmer Davis, a Bertrand Russell, a reviewer for the Cathelle Werker, a writer of invitory novels, a scholar in a political science quarterly, have now apoken up for Sobell's innocence.

A MORAL ORGATION, it is at 30 thousand new copies of the Werley book were but to work, public opinion on behalf of Sobell would begin to swell. Wherever you know an honest, thinking man or woman—and they are all abound us—this book will convince. But it has to be put into their hands.

Prison life is a said distortion of living for anyone; for an incount man it is inspeakably cruel. For over 2,000 days and nights should has suffered this. He is doomed to suffer thousands upon thousands more unless world public opinion, supporting the magnificent efforts of his attorneys, free him. ROM HIS QUIET GARDEN villa in the London suburb of Richmond, Bertrand Russell looks back on a life which has never been dull, and still, in his $4th year, does not threaten to become so. Among the ruddy-faced, snowy-haired philosopher's souvenirs are going to Jail for his peace activities in World War I, scandalizing the respectable with his free-wheeling coeducational school between wars, and succeeding to an eardom in 1931. He has traveled everywhere in search of truth, interested himself in everything, said just what he thought to everyone, publicly confessed his error whenever he found anything he said or didn't say
to have been wrong. The world has come to recognize him as one who has generally been right.

Last March he started another tumult by expressing in the Manchester Guardian shame at not having looked into the Rosenberg case "at the time"; "almost certainty" that the Rosenbergs were innocent; and a plea—with pungent references to the background of PBI "atrocities"—for a new trial of the Rosenbergs alleged fellow-conspirator Morton Bobell who is in Alacatraz for 30 years. The indignant ensuing correspondence defending the Dept. of Justice and the FBI, topped off by a final and even deadlier volley from Russell, has now died down.

A 17th CENTURY LIBERAL: Last week I called on him to convey something of what his action has meant to progressive Americans. On the table beside the hospitable tea-tray in his study—which had an electric fire burning and the window wide open to the early summer scents from the garden—were copies of Max Lowenthal's book on the FBI ("I'm just reading it"), William A. Reuben's Atom fipy Hoax ("I'm just going to read it") and John Wexley's Judgment of Julius and Ethel Eosenberg which convinced him and inspired his letter. It was in this room last winter that he received Mrs. Rose Sobell, who persuaded him to read the facts and judge from them whether justice had been done to her son.

"I am going into all this," Russell said, lighting his say in the 17th century sense, in that I have always had a great fear of the police and feel they are the same danger now that kings were then. Lowenthal's book is very instructive. I have been reading about the rounding-up in New York streets in 1918 of men who were supposed to be draft-evaders—almost none of them were, but there seems to have been hardly a bleat of protest.

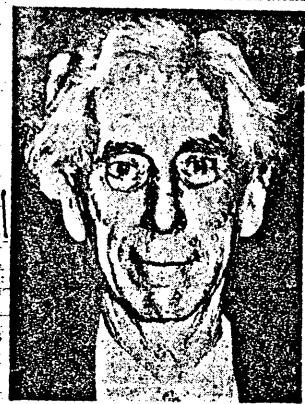

DREADFUL LAPSES: "I recall the time when I was at . the University of California at Los Angeles in 1939 and they quite suddenly found that one of the lecturers, a man of experience and standing who had defended migratory workers' right to organize, was incompetent, The others didn't protest, and I have never seen any. thins to equal the terror in the common room when Sproul, the head of the university, marched in to lecture the staff. The university was completely controlled by the banker Giannini-everyone did what this Italian fascist told them to. Then in 1940 when I was barred from an appointment at New York City College—on the ground that I was 'sphrodislac' among other dreadful lapses, though obviously they didn't know what the meant-not one New Dealer except Mrs. Roosevelt sup ported me. I can't agree with you that in America ther has ever been the same degree of personal liberty that

At all times I have been rather astonished by their lack of protest against injustice.

"Now the way the FBI is behaving is quite extraordinary. Apparently they can find people to testify to absolutely anything. Yet when I meet Americans, if I say anything at all against the FBI it's as if I'd talked against the Holy Ghost. How can you? This is holy! I am astounded by the letters I have been getting from Americans, abusing me and exalting the police, most of all the one from the Committee for Cultural Preetion of which I am a member. Is it for cultural freedom or ian't it? What has happened to my old friend Sidney Hook? On the other hand I've had many letters from Americans who say: I'm delighted you say these things, I wish I dared."

A lack of protest astonishes him

A CHILLED ALLIANCE: I asked Russell what he thought about the unilateral release of political prisoners and cutting of armed forces by the Russians and their allied countries. He said it was "very embarrassing to the Americans who don't want to do either." I asked: "Do you think the time may be at hand when the world will see America as the country with the only semaining iron curtain?"

"Indeed it's very likely," he said. "You know, all of Western Europe is very much chilled, in the whole conception of alliance with America, by the fact that there has seemed to be less and less difference between America and Russia. We must stand in with America but we don't like it. I am very anxious for good relations, but all these injustices make it harder."

"How can relations with America be improved?"

Well, we can't do it until there is greater intermed in the American administration—that's the only thing that will do it. And so there has to be more frankness about what is going on there. Of course every government commits misdeeds and feels it must conceal them. We certainly should not be self-righteous in view of our own failures in Cyprus and so on. Governments often manage to keep their misdeeds fairly dark at home but abroad they can't. So if they can't keep them dark the only thing is to mend their ways.

BASES OUT OF DATE: "The same is true for us British who commit our sins a long way off, although we're not so bad at home. Of course we shall end by being turned out of Cyprus—what we're doing there is absolutely futile. The whole idea that it's important to have bases is out of date. They are only of use if there's to be a big war, but even then, if we want a big war to destroy practically everybody, we can do it all from Greenland which is not far from Moscow. But people' agree there isn't going to be a big war: the chances are at least four to one against it, although the risk is still there."

still there."

What did he think about the events in the USSR since Stalin's death?

"I am convinced the Communists really downant to liberalize their regimes. Would I be mistaken in attributing this to the fact that they have really got good hydrogen bombs and so are no longer frightened? But it is quite genuine. They have let out thousands of political prisoners although for years they have been saying there weren't any. What has particularly impressed me is Hungary tearing down the barbed wire along the frontier—because it is an actual physical act. Also I am glad that the genes are now able to behave as they like, not just as Stalin told them.

I have always said that Stalin was the successor of Ivan the Terrible. I think his influence was completely bad. I was in Russia only once, in 1920, and wrote a little book about it. I thought it was horrible—an absolute nightmare—and have had the same view-since, although it is getting better now: not what I should like at all, but better. But in any case we've got to co-operate with them whether we like it or not.

AN APOLOGY TO MAKE: I asked him if his views of Western policy toward Russia hadn't changed in recent years. This was his answer:

"The worst thing I ever said—and I am sorry I did—was soon after the last war at the time America produced the Baruch plan for atomic control. I said we must urge the Russians to come in and that, if they wouldn't, we should threaten them; and I thought they would yield. I wanted to see atomic power internationalized and thought the Baruch plan a good one. "I think I said that," and I'm sorry. The moment

"I think I said that, and I'm sorry. The moment Russis had atomic power the fituation was changed. I thought it was tuite possible to persuade Russia to come into the Barich plan. It wasn't that I wanted a war, or to reform the Russian regime—they have the right to whatever regime they like—but to preserve the peace of the world.

Within the next five to ten years," said the philosopher with the unclosable mind and the habit of courage, "it is possible that hostility will grow enormously less. It is less stready. It rests largely with American Jeff him with his books on the American political police and the fiftits of their work, promising to lend him my copy of that great contemporary classic. thapter 19 of Cedric Bellrage's fortaoming new book, The Case of the Prightened Giant. The book will be published in London and here in November. During his stay in West St. Jail prior to his deportation last August 15, Bellrage occupied the cell which had been Julius Rosenberg's while he was awaiting transfer to the Sing Sing deathhouse in 1851. Here Belfrage tells of this, and of his impressions of the couple in whose behalf the GUARDIAN initiated the worldwide campaign for elemency and justice.

the receiving room and looked at the two men in my old cell—his old cell, where he thought constantly of her—was a day of much reflection on the intertwinings of human destiny.

It was the day on which Ethel and Julius were put to death, just two years before. I never knew them, and Lloved them, but not enough. I do not know how much I have of consolation in the fact that the GUARDIAN took up the fight for justice and mercy for them, when all: America retreated in abject terror from its conscience as from a red-hot stove. But I think it was above all because we moved for Ethel and Julius after they were convicted of "atom-spying" that the priesthood of the anti-communist mystery moved against me, imprisoning me the first time up to only a few days before they were killed. What consolation there is I take from that. . . .

Ethel and Julius—and their defender Manny Bloch—were of the human fibre that makes the word "Jew" a beautiful one, as the name "mountain of roses," is belutiful. This we learned stadually, for when Manny came as a stranger to tak our poor little sheet to raise the cry for DATED G/18/66

instice since no one else would even lisen to him. Ethel and Julius were already in the death-house; none of us had eyer at eyes upon them, and none of us ever would. We came to know them through Manny, who always dropped by to tell about his weekly Sing Sing visits; and through their prison letters, which Manny first brought to my desk as they wrote them on the now-familiar prison stationery, and which later became a book cherished by good folk in many lands...

THOUGHT of what the Catholic achoolicacher Jacques Madaule wrote in France—long after the GUARDIAN had asked: "Is this the Dreyfus Case of cold-war America?" and after the French people, recognising that it was, had risen in vain protest:

One can say without fear of erfor that if Ethel and Julius had not been Jows they would not have been convicted—and perhaps not even tried."

I thought of July 4 in the year 186; of Julius in his cell, after eating the special independence Day portion of the tream, re-reading the Declaration of Independence in the Times which always devotes a page to a facsimile of it, on that day.

He takes his pen from the locker and scribbles a note to Ethel in her cell a hundred yards away: "It is interesting to read these words in this setting. ..."

Then, beneath the signatures of the $6, congressional delegates of 1776, he writes: "Julius Rosenberg." He tears out the page and fastens it up on the cell wall.

When I thought of them as lovers, I thought of Ethel's letter sent from her cell to his: "I arise each morning with the thought of you warm and unspeakably sweet within me and each night give myself into your keeping once more; and all day my heart sings its refrain, I am loved, I am loved. . . . "

When I thought of them as parents, I saw the haunted faces of the "apples of the eyes" of Ethel and Julius; -Michael and Robbie, arriving at the Christmas party given them by the GUARDIAN staff. in 1951. Michael at seven, already old far beyond his years; Robbie, at four, a: little boy lost, frightened to go near other. children, only looking about him for his mother, running to bury himself for flecting consolation in the lap of Jo or any woman who looked kind and acted tender ly. And I lived again through the ghasti pligrimages which I made with the boy in Manny Bloch's car to Sing Sing stopping to buy them hot dogs along th highway, waiting outside the fail while hey spent their hour with the doomed ones and Ethel sang them songs that recalled bedtimes when they were a famtly. I saw the boys emerging, each holding one of Manny's hands, to be surrounded by photographers and reporters coaxing or threatening them for a "story" until Robbie would cry and Michael would stick out his tongue. I saw them again in their first foster-home in New Jersey; wept for them again as the radio, on that bloody night in June of 1953, interrupted its jazz and pepsi-cola advertising to tell us and them that "three joits" had killed their father and a "puff of smoke" came from the leather mask over their mother's face before she died. The picture changed to the children scampering in wild happiness from room to room of Blanch's and Gloria's law office in February of 1954, where dozens of us cold ebrated the defeat of the government's efforts to seize the orphans so that ithe merbory of their parents might be expunged or, if possible, made hateful, it?

And pictures of what I did not see but had to imagine; Ethel and Julius with the children in the prison, "playing with them," as Manny described it, "as if ther own living room"; Julius holding Robbie on his knee telling a story about the boat they saw through the barred window, coming up the Hudson in a cloud of seaguils; Ethel giving them the only. present she had, a collection of insects caught in the exercise yard; both of them dry-eyed, holding back their sobs until they were alone again in their cells. To Manny after one of these visits Ethel Wrote: "Make no mistake about it: this mother's heart is being methodically and mercilessly broken and the pain is simply not to be imagined . . . It am one vast vessel of pain-it feels as though every last inch of me beats with hurt. . . .

P JULIUS as a human being-for I thought especially of him, sharing a tiny fragment of his experience there Where began his journey to the cross-I recalled especially from the letters his excited description of the grange tree. One of the men in the death-house had planted an orange pip in a crack in the concrete of the exercise yard. Waiting for death, Julius and all the others found delight in watering and tending it as it grew inch by inch, finally producing faintly scented flowers and even small oranges. When I mentioned this in a conversation with Mr. Smith, a decent and popular West St. hack (guard) approaching retirement age who had many recollections of Julius, he commented dryly: "That sounds just like him."

Mr. Smith felt more deeply about Julius than it would have been prudent for him to express. He recalled that Julius was always good-natured, considerate and painstaking in whatever he did in West St., and marvellously cheerful considering the nature of his sentence because he was always convinced that justice would prevail. As his letters show, he did not abandon his faith in American justice until nearly the end—and his faith in the people, never. One of the jobs he did in West St. was panelling the walls of the visiting room where I talked with Jothrough the glass every Saturday.

When I thought of Ethel and Julius as "communists"—the tabel that had to be pinned to them, although nothing as to their affiliation was ever established at the trial-one reflection was automatic: that if indeed they were members of it. then the American Communist Party was thereby ennobled. If they were, they took their place with many communist men and women to whom humanity was in debt, who in my time had shown the speatest love, that they laid down that ves for their friends. But all that way important to me was that they were m ster and my brother to my own progress tre family which was broader

Parties.

It was as "communists" that they we sentenced by the court and by the preto strike fear into all who were dispos to protest the abuses and naurpations despots masquerading as democrats; and in, the hope that under this ultimate terror they would weaken, recant, and betray. And this it was that stood out plain for us all on the GUARDHAN, in that summer of 51 when even we, not yet fully comprehending how far the new. despots would go in the cold war on their own people, had been half convinced by press and government smoke that there must be some fire in the case. When we read the trial record which had been so wildly distorted, we knew that at best guilt had not been proven, at worst-and most probably—the whole case was a trumped-up hoax.

O THE LONG FIGHT began: a good fight against odds that were overpowering, in which a multitude all over America joined, but only the poor, and obscure, for the terror frightened into silence virtually all of America's respectable, its high and mighty, its saints, its intellectuals. From thousands of nobodies, after we had set the record reasonstraight, flowed dollar bills in response to an appeal for a Rosenberg defende committee; so that at "a time when our struggling enterprise threatened with extinction for lack of money to pay printing bills, in a corner of the office a table was piled a foot high with money to save Bthel and Julius. Denounced everywhere as a communist plot, the campaign for justice developed steadily yet with sickening slowness as Manny saw appeal after appeal fall in the courts and, the executioner's hand hearing the switch.

Then the last frightful days of hopes raised a little and smashed, of the Bupreme Court refusing to the end to review the case, of anti-semites yelling obscenities at the pickets keeping vigil around the White House; of demonstrations all over the world, of pleas for merry even from the Pope of Rome which were bettled up by the witch-hunters already diping on Ethel's and Julius's blood. And the evening itself, on which my GUARD-LAM colleagues and I sat around the radio in the office, trying to project our thoughts across the void to the room implies Hudson with the chair in it.

West St. for me, and her verses apoke with the same marvellous freshness as when she sent them long ago to the GUARDIAN from the death-house.

Their song was interrupted, but their Gethsemane and crucifixion had put into millions of hearts a new certainty that it would be sung to the triumphant end. Ethel and Julius had put a new fear into the hearts of the despots, a healthy fear of the incorruptibility that may reside in ordinary men and women. The silence on the wire connecting the Justice Department with the Sing Sing deathbouse had spoken eloquently. It said that the plan to turn America into a nation of stoolpigeons had failed.

The sollowing letter appeared in the N. Y. Times on June 15. The author, Jean-Full Sartre, dramatist, essayist and leading exponent of existentialism, is the editor of the French magazine Les Temps Moderne.

LEARN that the American courts are soon to rule on an appeal for parole by Morton Sobell, now in Alcatraz under a thirty-year sentence passed in May, 1951, for having been an accomplice of the Rosenbergs in a "conspiracy to commit espionage." Last May 8 Sobell also asked for a new trial.

I am neither an American nor a jurist. Were I either, it would still not be proper for me to attempt to influence the decision of Judge Kaufman, who must rule on these appeals as it was his duty, five years ago, to preside over the first Rosenberg-Sobell trial.

But there is nothing in law or in international custom to prevent my communicating with you and informing you of a conviction shared by many Frenchmen and Europeans—and I am told by many Americans—that Sobell is innocent and that it would be a grave injustice to have him continue to be penaized for a crime which he did not commit and for which proof has never been submitted.

OPINION IN EUROPE: As you know, the Rosenberg case stirred up considerable feeling in Europe, where opinion for the last three years has been almost unanimous in regarding as unlikely that the Rosenbergs and Bobell committed the crime of which they were accused. It seems impossible to us that a small group, whatever their opinions and intentions, could have been able to "deliver to Russia the secret of the atomic bomb" and to "change the course of history to the detriment of their coursery."

It is our opinion that there is no atomic secret, that science develops everywhere in the same rhythm and that production of bombs is a matter of industrial potential. The most recent developments of Soviet science and technique serve only to reinforce that conviction. As an example I cite the fine article by the director of atomic researth in the U. S. S. R., Kourtchatov, published several weeks ago in Fravda, and which has caused some stir in Western scientific circles.

Proof which was recently assembled precisely confirms this view. In view of the arguments and the documents that have been offered, it does not seem to me arguable, at least in the case of Morton Sobell, that the prosecution has had recourse, in order to force a conviction, to false evidence and false testimony and has violated not only American law, but international law as well.

PRESUMPTION OF GUILT: Was it not asserted that Morton Sobell and his family had sone to Mexico without visas, and had been expelled? Was not this statement, in the absence of corroboration from a single witness produced against Sobell, a presumption of guilt of the first order? Was there not formal proof that Sobell had requested and obtained a Mexican visa and that it had been confiscated on Mexican territory by the American police, in violation of a series of agreements and international treaties between the United States and Mexico? Was there not proof that the prosecution was entirely aware of these irregularities—that major pieces of revidence were deliberately kept from the court and caused Talse statements to be made by witnesses deposing under outh?

It is always difficult—and we French have learned this by experience—to obtain a new trial when the prestige of a mation is involved. But I know that you agree with me in thinking that when instice is at stake, considerations of prestige must not prevail. I do not want to believe that the United States could persist in error and dishonor when on the other side of what is happily less trials more dangerous-and a good deal more painful for their national adfesteem.

Sobell new trial plea denied; ruling will be appealed

BUDGE IRVING R. KAUFMAN last week denied Morton Sobell's ples for a hearing on the question of a new trial. Sobell is now in Alcatraz serving a 20-year term to which Judge Kaufman sentenced him at the same time he condemned Ethel and Julius Rosenberg to die for allegedly conspiring to transmit defense data to the Soviet Union.

In bitter, seathing terms that went far beyond the legal issues, the judge's ruling assailed Sobell, his lawyers and those who have rallied to his support.

Declaring the petition for a hearing centirely devoid of merit." Judge Kaufman said his ruling was designed "to lay to rest with finality baseless contentions and accusations which have been repeated not primarily to aid the petitioner but rather to embarrass and injure our courts and our country."

He attacked "extra-judicial utterances and actions ... designed to influence judicial determination in a way that is alien to our judicial process—and in some instances they constituted a subtle attack upon it."

EAWYERS LECTURED: Concerning Sobell, himself, the judge showed a withening personal hostility which many observers thought almost unprecedented in a judicial decision. The Judge said:

a judicial decision. The subject and in the prisoner... He is smart, shrewd and resourceful... Thus he knows how to make charges so wild... as to induce a concern for their refutation that otherwise he would not command... It is obvious that he believes in the broadside attack, painting with broad stroke and recklessly maligning all who participated in the process of bringing him to justice."

He lectured Sobell's lawyers for spending "an inordinate amount of time, money, affort and ingenuity . . . on petitioner's behalf. If Sobell were an unlettered prisoner, friendless and without funds attempting to cry out 'unfair,' his lengthy and utterly meritiess petition might not be such a gross misuse of the judicial process."

Though Bobell's brief asked only for a rehearing on a charge of knowingly perjured evidence, it did not argue the question of Bobell's innocence. (That legally can only be done in the course of a new trial.) Yet Judge Kaufman went far affeld from the matter before him to say that even if all of Bobell's contentions were true "it would not follow that he is innocent." In a footnote the Judge said: (

"Although the question of a petitioner's guilt or innocence is almost never material in a motion (like Sobell's) . . I feel constrained to make this point clear in light of the publicity which has been attendant upon the case over the years."

DATED THE PORTHE DATED THE PORTHER PORTER NEW ARDEN DE N. Y. DIVISI

SEARCHED III SERIALIZED VICE F 2-2 JUL 2 1 FBI - NEW THE "DEPORTATION": Sobell in his wife had sought to demonstrate that the prosecution had knowingly used false estimony to the effect that Sobell had been "deported" from Mexico when in fact he had been kidnaped with the conbivance of the FBI, the U.S. Embassy in Mexico City and the U.S. Immigration Service. The brief charged also that the prosecution had knowingly suppressed the evidence that Sobell traveled under a Mexican tourist card made out properly in his own name and carried other documents in proper legal order.

The points were crucial because much of the case rested on the evidence that Sobell and his family were in flight.

Sobell to appeal

Sobell contends that though he had toyed with the idea of going to Europe, and in making inquiries had used a pseudonym, he had given up the idea. His lawyers contend that the illegal kidnaping from Mexico did not give him a chance to return voluntarily. Sobell further charged that the case had not been properly before the original trial court because he was alexed in violation of a treaty with Mexico.

"TWICE-TOLD TALE": The Judge in his ruling said that the prosecution had not , lied when it said that Sobell had no visa because what he held was a tourist card.

He said the word "deported" was used loosely by the prosecution and might over the manner in which Sobell was sized though admittedly there was no legal deportation.

Other questions, he said, had been raised earlier though in other forms. The question of jurisdiction in the light of the treaty with Mexico the Judge dismissed as "a twice-told tale in new semantic guise." Actually the point of the court's jurisdiction over Sobell personally had been raised but not the legal question of the court's jurisdiction over the case it-sail.

udge Kaufman's decision surprised few observers who watched him during the brief oral arguments on the appeal for a hearing. He repeatedly interrupted Sobell's attorney Marshall Perlin to defend the conduct of the trial point by point, to defend the prosecution rather than to hear both sides with judicial impartiality.

Over the courtroom hung the shadow of the dead Rosenbergs. It was plain that to admit the possibility of Sobell's innocence would also weaken the case against the Rosenbergs and admit the possibility of fatal judicial miscarriage. One observer commented that Judge Kaufman was a prisoner of the Rosenberg-Sobell case.

THE FIGHT GOES ON: The press generally acclaimed the Judge as it did when he sentenced the Rosenbergs to die. The Newark Star-Ledger editorial was typical: "We, along with Judge Kaufman, hope this shuts up the Sobells for a while."

That hope was quickly shattered as Sobell's attorneys—Frank Donner, Ar hur Kinoy and Benjamin Draytus, in addition to Perlin—prepared to take the riling to the Circuit Court of Appeals. Mrs. Helen Sobell, wife of the prisoner, said:

Helen Bobell, wife of the prisoner, said:

We will continue our sattempts to secure justice and a full and fair hearing as provided for by our courts by appealing this decision to the highest courts of our land if need be. Certainly evil men may not be permitted to use their high office to convict and keep imprisoned innocent people. In August, 1950, my husband declared his innocence. He, has maintained his innocence through six full years of imprisonment. We have the facts now to prove his innocence. We must be heard.

THE JULY 2 ISSUE of I. F. Stone's Weekly contains an article entitled "Time for New Tactics on Rosenberg-Sobell, Too" which compels this reply.

It is an inexcusable effort to involve these who fought to the point of tears and collapse for the Rosenbergs' lives with the editor's current personal campign of taunting the Communist Parties of the world for their tactics during the Stalin years.

Thus "the Rosenberg cult" conducted its "agitation" in "so shrill, hysterical and mendacious a way as to offend many who might have been won over by sober presentation."

DATED 7/23/50
WORWARDED BY N.Y. DIVISION

HE RECORD SHOULD SHOW that during the campaign that I. F. Stone now decries, one of his contributions to "calm consideration" and "ober presentation" was a column in the Daily Compass of Oct. 15, 1952, in which he recommended 30 years' imprisonment for the Rosenbergs, after saying: "I have never been persuaded that the case was a frame-up." This judgment was not based on analysis of the evidence, for Stone conceded after the Rosenbergs had been executed that he had never read the trial record. Thus his conviction of their guilt was a matter of personal divination.

It was the NATIONAL GUARDIAN which opened up the campaign in behalf of the Rosenbergs, not because of a Communist decision to conduct such a campaign, but precisely because not the Communist Party, nor the Daily Compass, for which I. F. Stone then wrote, nor any other agency or individual except the stricken couple's lawyers and family, had taken steps toward examination of the trial record, public weighing of the evidence or rooting out the perjuries, criminal mistepresentations and uneven-handed justice by which their convictions and unprecedented sentences were obtained.

To state now, as Stone does, that "the Rosenbergs were treated a good deal more fairly here than Slansky and other Jewish victims of Stalin justice" is demogagic word-slinging at the meanest level. To calumniate the world outcry in behalf of the Rosenbergs, yet lament the lack of such in behalf of Slansky and victims of possible injustice elsewhere, does indeed call for political psychiatry.

ON THE SOBELL campaign, Stone says that the "letter of Bertrand Russell's... with its comparison of Nazi and FBI 'atrocities' is in the strident and hysterical tradition of the Rosenberg campaign. Jean-Paul Sartre's... was not much better." In the current motion for a new trial, now going up to a higher court on appeal from trial Judge Kaufman's first-round denial, "false hopes were stimulated, false impressions given..." Stone finds himself "afraid that Judge Kaufman has the better of the argument."

In that argument Sobell's attorneys asked only for a new trial which can be held in an atmosphere less charged with the passions which surely Stone must recognize made justice unlikely if not impossible. Most people, it seems, would applaud such an objective and cheer every move in that direction. If Stone or others wish to play the lawyer, though, there are solid points of law to consider. For example, the Sobell brief demonstrates something that could not have been presented during the original trial: a governmental intent to offer evidence it knew to be false.

The government and Judge Kaufman now admit that Sobeli was kidnaped from Mexico and that the jury was told that he was "deported." Yet Judge Kaufman has ruled—and Stone apparently concurs—that the meaning of "deported" can be stretched to include a kidnaping, and therefore the jury was not misled.

SOBELL'S CASE does not hang on even that legal point. But in American law it is enough to find one point on which the jury could be wrongly informed to warrant a new trial. At that new trial the guilt or innocence of Sobell could be properly argued.

Stone concedes that in the Rosenberg case "the discovery of the console table [which the GUARD-IAN discovered, by the way] merited a new trial." Indeed, in a new trial the true origin and physical details of the table would have demonstrated a skein of perjury and misrepresentation which was among the most damaging and false evidence against the Rosenbergs.

Yet the evidence of willful misrepresentation in the Sobell case is insufficient, says Stone, to warrant a new trial and the Sobell defense will have to do better if it is to free him.

Painful as it is to write this editorial, we think it necessary to offset possible disaffection and discouragement among people who find themselves the target in a blind and spleenful buckahot "reappraisal."

WE RECOMMEND in the Sobell matter that you string along with Elmer Davis, Waldo Frank, Dr. Harold C. Urey and 58 others who recently wrote in a letter to President Eisenhower.

"We do not press upon you, Mr. President, the question of Morton Sobell's innocence or guilt—; for we ourselves are not of one mind on that issue. Our faith in our democratic system of justice assures us that the truth will ultimately be established.

"We believe it is vital that our nation safeguard its security, but it is important that we do not permit this concern to lead us astray from our traditions of justice and humanity. In this light we further believe that Morton Sobell's continued imprisonment does not serve our nation's interest or security.

Therefore, most respectfully and earnestly, Mr. President, we look to you to exercise your executive authority either by asking the Attorney General to consent to a new trial for Morton Bobell or by the granting of Executive Pardon or Commutation. We take the liberty of urging your personal attention to this matter.

If you concur, won't you let President Eisenhower know your feelings?

Prof. Sharp's book on the Rosenbergs

By John T. McManus COLM P. SHARP, professor of law at the Univ. of Chicago and haps familiar to many millions of mature Americans as a frequent participent in the old Univ. of Chicago Round Table radio discussions, stated publicly in May, 1953, that he thought Ethel and Julius Rosenberg were entitled to a new trial. Among the considerations leading to this conviction was the GUARDIAN's discovery and presentation in April, 1953. of the console table which figured so heavily in the Rosenbergs' conviction although it was never produced at their trial in 1951.

At the invitation of the late Emanuel H. Bloch, Prof. Sharp joined the defense in the last three weeks before the Rosenbergs were executed in June, 1953. During that period of tragic culmination of the worldwide efforts for reconsideration, clemency or reprieve, Prof. Sharp "worked closely with counsel for the Rosenbergs, along with other volunteers, devoted people, ready to work all night at humble jobs of typing and other routine duties. As a result of this close association," he writes in his book Was dustice Dene ". " I gradually reversed some of my parlier opinions of the case.

ENCISIVE PROBING: The Sharp book is not, however, a memoir of that brief association, except in parts of two of its 17 chepters. Rather it is a scholarly and incisive examination of the trial record, of the conduct of judge and prosecution and the testimony and behavior of the alleged accomplices on whose word the Rosenbergs were put to death and scientist Morton Sobell sent to Alcatrax to serve a 30-year sentence,

In this respect Prof. Sharp's book most closely resembles Earl Jowitt's book. The Strange Case of Alger Hiss, and perhaps should, as Prof. Sharp himself concedes after 100 pages of legal dissection, be read with the trial record in hand. Whether or not this is possible for every potential reader c? the book, it seems that, at the very least, those now working for justice for Morton Sobell should see to it that Prof. Sharp's arguments be considered by every lawyer and legal expert likely to add a voice to the Sobell appeal. For, as Prof. Sharp says in his preface: "The most serious remediable result of the case today is the imprisonment of Morton Sobell in Alestras und $ 30-year sentence."

Prof. Sharp wrote his book in the fall of 1953, while Bloch was still alive, Buring that period he accepted with Bloch, authors Shirley Graham and Yuri Buhl and GUARDIAN Editor James Aronson, trusteeship of the fund raised by Bloch and others for the orphaned Bosenberg sons. It was still unpublished when William A. Reuben's The Atoms Spy Hoax and John Wexley's The Jadgment of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg appeared in early 1955.

A "LOST STORY": Prof. Sharp reviewed both books for the Monthly Review in Dec., 1955, recommended both, but "on the information available to me" decided to stick to the theories developed in his own book.

This may be both a strength and a weakness in ultimate consideration of the Sharp thesis. By setting aside the independent findings of Reuben and Wexley, Prof. Sharp avoids countenancing the possibilities of outright perjury and frameup (although he concedes that gaps in the testimony indicate a "lost story" somewhere). This circumspection may win readers not ready to accept the bitter conclusion that their government would indulge in frameup, but it amounts to doing things the hard way in the face of the strongest sort of evidence leading to the frameup conclusion.

The Rosenberg defense at the trial accepied the government charge that as espidnage arrangement existed in 1944-45 between David Greenglass, Rosenberg's brother-in-law; Harry Gold, a self-styled spy courier; and Anatol Yakoviev, a Soviet diplomat who returned to his country in 1946. The defense contention was that Greenglass and his wife made the Rosenbergs scapegoats to save themselves then accused by Harry Gold. Gold was supposed to have been named as the spurier by Klaus Fuchs, German-born scomic scientist who in 1950 sonfessed in England to espionage.

THE DISCREPANCIES: But Reuben showed by the prosecution's own statements that Gold was arrested prior to any alleged identification by Fuchs; and both Reuben and Wexley brought to light the fact that Fuchs could not describe Gold, nor identify him when confronted with photographs. Purthermory, Fuchs' official indictment, while measurements are several alleged rendezvous with any souriers, did not include Santa Fe, shere he is alleged to have met Gold.

Further, both Reuben and Wexley demonstrated that Gold's alleged meeting with the Greenglasses in Albuquerque sould not have taken place in the manner testified to. Their respective stories were garbled and at wide variance.

WHAT BLOCH SAID: This material and much more, all leading to the ponviction that the Gold-Greenglass story was completely rigged, cannot be completely laid saide without refutation. Even Bloch himself, although he defended the case on the thesis Sharp still accepts, recognized the implications of the new findings and said to Wexley after the execution:

MALCOLM P. SHARP The record was clear

"How could I dream that officials in the Dept. of Justice would lend themselves to the perpetuation of a complete hoar concected by this weird character, Gold?

"I suppose that was my biggest mistake—having those illusions, underestimating the cynicism and power for evil in high places."

Perhaps as an attorney and "officer of the court," Sharp, like Bloch, cannot permit himself to countenance the possibility of known and induced perjury and frameup, even though his own analysis of the testimony leads directly to this and no other plausible answer.

THE CONCLUSIONS: However, although restricting itself to the trial record, Was Justice Done? arrives at the most important conclusions: (1) that Federal court proceedings warrant an overhauling, and pecially with respect to the weight given accomplice testimony: (2) that Morton Sobell should be removed from Alcatran and given a new trial, if not freed.

These viewpoints, so ably argued, should cause a long-delayed reappraisal in the legal profession—if not more wide-ly—of the probity of the Rosenberg-Bobell proceedings.

Was Justice Done? has an introduction by Nobel Prize scientist Harold C. Urer, who also is convinced of the innocence of Sobell and the Rosenbergs. Like Sharp, Urey clings to the original contention of a spy arrangement including Gold, the Greenglasses and Yakovlev. But he deal monstrates by argument and diagram that the Rosenbergs could have played no necessary part in such an arrangement and were indeed innocent scapes soats, enabling the real participants to go free or get off with lighter sentences.

valuable appendix: an appendix contains two memorands from the files of Greenglass attorney O. John Rosge, in which David Greenglass makes statements at variance with his trial testiments; an interrogation of Greenglass in 1953 by Sen. McCarthy and Roy Cohn at Lewisburg Penitentiary. In which Greenglass attempts to link Rosenberg with espionage activities at Fort Monmouth (and which Prof. Sharp sees as further evidence of Greenglass' unreliability as a witness); and Sharp's own review of the Reuben and Wexley books.

Was Justice Done? has a chronology of the case at the start, but no index. This lack makes it difficult to use the bool for reference unless one digests it most more oughly. The discussion of the cousole table, for example, covers some 23 pages in two widely separated chapters, surely for most lay readers the most convincing portions of the book. Ready access to Prof. Sharp's various lines of inquiry is unfortunately not provided by the table of constents. Neverthèless those who have followed the Rosenberg case closely will find Prof. Sharp's work a masterly analysis of injustice at work.

Truth in the Rosenberg-Sobell Case still stands on the scaffold. Wrong taunts the truth-tellers from the forums of Congressional committees and the newspaper columns of lickspittle gossip-mongers.

Yet Lowell, who wrote his lines not in despair but to encourage the fight against slavery, reminded his comrades in that struggle:

WE CHOOSE NOT to waste our space reprinting the calumnies of the Walter Committee's purported report on the Rosenberg-Sobell clemency campaign. We deem it a duty, however, to remind this historic campaign; and it is an ironic tribute to your efforts that a Congressional Committee should still be trying, three years after their deaths, to convince the public of their suilt.

Truth in the Rosenberg-Sobell Case is indeed still on the scaffold, but continues to speak forth, reaching encircling thousands with the sure evidence that those who fought originally for their lives and freedom were right; that wrong in this case will be toppied from its throne as surely as it has been in the bygone cases of Sacco, and Vanzetti, Mooney and Billings, Haywood, Pettibone and Moyel, the Haymarket victims and many others sacrificed in the historylorg struggle in this nation between truth and falsehood, freedom, and repression.

SUGGEST to you who began and now carry on this ennobling struggle, that you challenge the Walter Committee's "report" in whatever newspaper in your community carried stories on it, you have redoubtable allies—Prof. Malcolm Sharp with his irrefutable legal demolition of the case in Was Justice Done?; the John Wekley and William A. Reuben conclusions of outright frameup which must surely have precipitated the current flurry of attacks on the Rosenberg-Sobell adherents; and the host of public figures who have expressed doubt or outright disbellef of the guilt of the Rosenbergs and now call for the freeing of Sobell.

The appearance of the Walter Committee attack has been timed to coincide with the hearing of Sobell's appeal this fall by the Circuit Court of Appeals. It is a palpable attempt from a Congressional level to influence if not dictate the course of justice; and to discourage and disperse the forces gathering the money and public support needed for the appeal.

Only a rededication by those against whom the attack is aimed tan prevent it succeeding. We urge (1) that you reply with vigor to the attack in your community press; and (2) that you pitch in with might and main to help carry the Sobell appeal to the limit.

DO YOU DESPAIR of winning court decisions? Better not! As this is written Federal Judge Westover in Los Angeles has just thrown out the government's denaturalization case against Rose Chernin Kusnitz, executive director of the L. A. Committee for Protection of Foreign Born—a decision hailed as the most far-reaching since the Supreme Court upheld the right to citizenship of the Communist 'eader William Schneiderman in 1943.

The Sobell Case can be won, too, but not by sitting it out.

New Sobell appeal Dec. 3

olipping prom thi

DATED 1/26/00 DIVIS

OUR YEARS AGO on Thanksgiving Day Morion Sobell was transferred to Alcatraz prison in San Francisco Bay from the Pederal detention prison in New York. There, 3,000 miles from his family and from attorneys seeking a new trial for him, his government plans to make him serve out a 30-year sentence for conspiracy to commit espiopage with Julius and Ethel Rosenberg during the war years.

- The immediate offense which placed him among the nation's worst criminals in the nation's most damnable prison, was insisting on his innocence of the charge and refusing to testify against the Rosenbergs. The Rosenbergs were then appealing their conviction and death sentence which was carried out June 19, 1953.

As in the Rosenberg case, the Supreme Court refused to review Sobell's conviction; but in 1955 new evidence appeared to prove that the government had kidnapped Sobeli from Mexico to try him and that it had knowingly used perjured testimony against him, Mosions for a new trial were filed early this year and were rejected without full . hearing by Pederal Judge Irving Kaufman, who sentenced both the Rosenbergs and Sobell and in whose court the perjuries are stated to have occurred.

A NEW APPEAL: On Dec. 3. attorneys for Sobell will file an appeal with the U.S. Circuit Court from Judge Kaufman's decision, contesting that the new evidence warranted a full hearing, which Kaulman denied.

This Thanksgiving Day in upwards of 1,000 localities throughout the U.S., groups of Americans dedicated their holiday gatherings to the support of Morton Sobell's petition for a new trial. Also in support were leading citizens such as Elimer Davis, Prof. Linus Pauling, Sen. William Langer, scientist Harold Urey, Walter Millis, Warren K. Billings, found innocent after serving 23 years in prison on the Tom Mooney labor frameup; Dr. Roland H. Bainton of Yale Divinity School, and hundreds of writers, lawyers, scientists, clergymen and others not convinced of his

Morton Sobell's hopes, and his gratitude to those on the outside seeking justice for him, are expressed in the following letter, written to his wife Helen as this Thanksgiving anniversary of his transfer to Alcairaz approached:

I've ben imprisoned now for over s years. A year at the Tombs, a couple of months to Atlanta, over a year at the Detention Rouse in N. Y. and on Thanksgiving eve I will have been here, 4 jears exactly—on this island. Each of these periods is a separate chapter of my prison life which has its counter-part in the full world—in your struggle for my vindication ...

It's odd but I never felt out of place in any of the prisons. Always the other inmates showed me the greatest consideration as if leaning over backward because I was a "square John". For my part, I don't think I would ever have developed a sensitivity or understanding of others such as I acquired during the past years if I had not been imprisoned. The necessity would never have made itself as urgently felt. Of those on the outside I have only your letters to tell me, thus they are almost like a mystic body to me. I know they are there. I know their selflessness and determination but I do not really know them and consequently feel at a loss. But I know that that will all be respedied in the end-soon.

I well recall how on previous occasions, when we began pressing some new action, my hopes soured up like a sailplane caught in an updraft-only to plummet to earth. But when we began working on this petition the thought of freedom -regained never entered my mind except through conscious effort. And then it was the problems associated with one's freedom-life's real problems, not the fanciful ones of the opium smoker—that filled my head.

It's not very frequently that one can make such a complete break with the past and now, as in my youth, the romantic idea of how to serve "man" best occurs. I think I'll make a strenuous effort to somehow enter the field of medical electronics—even only as an avocation. And yet another problem. How can I repay all those who have tolled so tirelessly on my behalf? One can't just forget it.

I guess it's natural each time to feel more optimistic than ever before but I think sound reasons exist for my; present mood. First, the intrinsic power of the present petition is of a much higher order than of anything that has preceded it and second, the stternal situation has changed for the better. Thus it is that four Thanksgivings later I feel most thankful for soon, soon it will all be over-soon.

unequivocal." Morton had written to me about the brief that was going to the Appeals Court, "so that they will not be able to glide out, or around or under." And as the boat taking me to Alcatrax swung around to the island the day before the fifth Thanksgiving which Morton was to spend there, I thought of his words. Morton is like that. A scientist, clean and sharp and unequivocal, and he that is good and promising in my country I can still fight for, and I want to," he has told me many times.

The window seemed smaller than ever. the telephone more static-ridden, yet we didn't care about that. For a few brief minutes we could talk to each other. Mort told me about his conference with the attorneys the previous week. Marshall Perlin had made the trip all the way across the country to go over the final revisions on the brief and with him for the discussion had come Benjamin Dreyfus who is our attorney in San Pranciaco. "It's a good brief, Helen," Morton had told me. "It's good in itself and it shows the fraud and the perjury so well that it must bring up the question of how dirty the rest of the trial was."

WITH YOUR HELP: I told Morton in that visit and the next two on Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 of the Thanksgiving dinner which Warren Billings had asked me to attend at his home. Warren and Josephine were there with all of their friends and neighbors and the first toast was to the "freedom of Morton Bobell much, much sooner than I received my own with Tom Mooney." In that living room in San Mateo we all shared our Thanksgiving dinner with Morton, and added words and thought and money to the fight for Morton's kind of America.

In San Francisco, too, and in Los Angeles, we had many gatherings. I told Morton of each one of them, and of our friends who work day and night because they don't want a single minute more to DATES be added to the six and a half years FORMA Morton has already spent in prison.

I asked Morton, who has always given so much to his work as a scientist, how his work of folding sheets in the laundry was going, and he said to me, "If I thought I was going to be here much longer it would bother me, but you know, I expect to be in New York for the hearing in Pebruary."

With your help he can be, and he will be.

new trial urged

in defense brief

ATTORNEYS FOR Morton Sobell, now in Alcatraz serving a 30-year sentence for alleged complicity with Julius and Ethel Rosenberg in an atomic espionage conspiracy, asked the U. S. Court of Appeals Dec. 12 to direct his acquittal or grant him a hearing for a new trial. The brief asked the Court in any case to reverse the ruling of Federal Judge Irving R. Kaufman last June denying Sobell a hearing on new evidence believed to warrant a new trial.

Sobell's appeal, presented on two motions argued in a brief totalling 180 printed pages, sets forth new evidence to prove that Sobell was not deported but kidnapped from Mexico in 1950 to stand trial with the Rosenbergs; that the prosecution falsely and knowingly represented to the Court and jury that he had been legally deported; that Bobell's removal from Mexico was in violation of the U. S. extradition treaty with Mexico and therefore grounds for vacating his conviction; and that Sobell himself had no way of being suspicious of, much less proving, these illegalities until years after his conviction.

The new appeal also reinforces arguments presented in Sobell's first appeal—which was denied with Judge Frank dissenting and refused review by the supreme Court—that his conviction resulted from the dublous testimony of Max Elitcher, an admitted perjurer and, if believed, a co-conspirator who was testifying with obvious intent and motive." The remainder of the case against Sobell, the brief argues, "was limited to an attempt to establish his guilty consciousness by proving he had fied to Mexico."

THE RIDNAPPING: The Sobell family had gone on vacation to Mexico and had booked return passage when their apartment was entered by English-speaking men who identified themselves as Mexico D. F. policemen. Charging him with suspicion of being "Johnny Jones" wanted for bank robbery, they beat him unconscious and eventually delivered him to U. S. border authorities at Laredo, Tex. The Unanifest recording Sobell's return to the U. S. via Laredo was marked "Deported from Mexico" by an Immigration impostor at the scene.

MORTON BOBELL Make it clean and sharp,

The appeal establishes that the prosecution had been notified by the Mexican government long before the Sobelitial that it did not "consent to or participate in" Sobell's removal. It points out further that an FBI agent named Lewis who was present when the Mexican consulate notified Laredo officials that Sobell had not been deported, sat at the counsel table throughout the trial while prosecutors Irving Saypol (now a N. Y. State Supreme Court Judge) and Roy Cohn assured judge and jury that Bobell had been legally deported.

PRECEDENTS: In rejecting Sobell's petition for a hearing on the new evidence last June, Judge Kaufman ignored all the new evidence presented and based his opinion on the belief planted at the original trial that Sobell had been excluded by the Mexican government. The extradition treaty between the U. S. and. Mexico requires that requests go through diplomatic channels and limits the alleged offenses for which extradition will be granted.

According to two Supreme Court decisions cited by the Sobell attorneys, the entire proceeding against Sobell must be quashed if he was removed without due extradition procedure or in violation of the treaty in any manner. One decision affirming this vacated the conviction of a fugitive extradited for one offense and treed for another not covered by the treaty involved. Another, the confiscation of a British merchant ship, the Mazel Tov, captured as a rum-runner, was reversed in a decision rendered by Judge Brandeis because the ship was captured in violation of a technical provision in a treaty between the U.S. and Britain.

Kaufman in rejecting the Maxel Tov precedent, relied on a 70-year old case in which the Court affirmed the conviction of a man brought back from Peru allegedly in violation of the extradition treaty. The Sobell appeal shows Kaufman's citation in error in several respects, the principal one being that a de facto government composed of Chilean armed forces occupied Peru at the time, and consented to the removal.

POISONED RESERVOIR': In pressing for a hearing on the new evidence, if not an outright directed acquittal, the new appeal cites with vigor the request of the U.S. Solicitor-General this Pall to the Supreme Court to return the appeal of the Pittspurgh Smith Act victims to the lower courts because of doubts concerning the veracity of Joseph Mazzei, chief government witness against two of the defendants. In this instance the Supreme Court went beyond the government's request and vacated the original convictions with the statement by Chief Justice Warren that the prosecution had "poisoned the water in this reservoir, and the reservoir cannot be cleaned without first draining it of all impurity. . . ."

In the event of a decision granting a hearing, the appeal requests the Court to mandate Sobell's presence at the proceeding. Several precedents are cited, with the reminder to the Court that "appellant is presently incarcerated in Alcatrax Penitentiary, thousands of miles from the site of the hearing.... The time, expense and difficulty involved in communication with or journeys to appellant to prepare for the hearing would be so burdensoms as to deprive him and his counsel of the essential consultation required."

The Sobell appeal was filed by attorners. Frank Donner, Arthur Kinoy and Marshall Perlin of New York; Benjamin Dreyfus of San Francisco and Luis Sanchez Ponton, professor of law at the University of Mexico, and former Minister of Education. The government has 20 days in which to file its answer. Sobell is entitled to submit a reply brief to the government's answer before argument is leard. The date for argument, probably before a three-judge Appeals Colirt panel has not been set but will probably be in late January or February.

THE ILLEGAL SEIZURE

Suppression of evidence cited

Excerpts from the Sobell defense brief summing up the charge that Sobell was ellegally seized in Mexico and unlawfully bried:

The present motion and supporting

1. The prosecution knowingly, wilfully, and intentionally introduced false and perjured evidence to establish that appellant was deported by the Government of Mexico. The prosecution knew that appellant was not deported or otherwise ousted by the Government of Mexico or its agencies. The prosecution knew that appellant was removed without the knowledge or consent of the Mexican Government. It was the prosecution itself which had planned, directed and participated in the illegal seizure and abduction of appellant, using the services of its agents in the United States and Mexico.

The prosecution and the witness Huggins [U. S. Immigration inspector at Laredo who wrote "Deported from Mexseo" on Sobell's manifest] long prior to the trial were informed by the Government of Mexico that it did not consent to or participate in appellant's removal.
They had been advised by the Mexican authorities that appellant's seizure and isoduction were unlawful and constituted a flolation of Mexican sovereignty. Nevertheicss, the prosecution used Government Exitor 25A [a photostatic copy of the Sobell manifest] and Huggins' intentionally false and misleading testimony to prove that appellant's removal was effectuated by the Government of Mexico by means of a legal deportation.

2. The prosecution knowingly, wilfully and intentionally suppressed evidence which would have impeached this false testimony and would have disclosed its knowledge of the falsity of the evidence. It suppressed the fact that appellant was abducted by its agents without the knowledge or consent of the Mexican Government. Finally, it suppressed the fact that Huggins had been advised long prior to the trial that the notation "Deported from Mexico" on Government Exhibit 25A was false. The prosecution was impelled to suppress this evidence in order to enjoy the fruits of its illegal action, which otherwise would have been inadmissible.

3. Further, the prosecution, seeking tel. Y. preclude a judicial inquiry into the facts made false representations to the triable Tellicourt. In opposition to the motion in article to the trial, in 1951, charging filegal removal from Mexico] the prosecution false-ly represented that appellant was deported by the Mexican authorities. It attacked the truthfulness of appellant's affidavit in support of the motion in arrest of judgment which might have opened Pandora's box and led to the disclosure of the prosecution's illegal activities.

In its brief to this Court, the prosecution perpetuated the fraud of lawful deportation. It continued to suppress the fact and indeed denied that it was a party to appellant's illegal seisure. National June

Mexican lawyers raise grave questions on legality of Sobell's seizure

THE NOVEMBER, 1956, issue of La Semana, a leading Mexican magazine, reports a belief among Mexican legal authorities that the laws and sovereignty of Mexico were blatantly violated by the seizure of Morton Sobell and his family on Mexican soil in August, 1950. The article is headlined: "The Dignity of Mexico Demands Review of the Sobell Case."

Bobell, serving 30 years in Alcatraz on a charge of conspiracy to commit espienage, is appealing to the U.S. Court of Appeals in his effort to prove his innocence and establish that his trial was fraudulent.

His appeal charges that the prosecutors, without knowledge or participation of Mexican authorities, kidnapped him and his family while they were vacationing in Mexico City. Then, Sobell asserts, the prosecutors deceived the courts with per-jipred testimony by claiming he had been lawfully deported by the Mexican authorities. Furthermore, Sobell's appeal argues, his illegal seizure violated a U. S. Mexican treaty, and therefore the U. S. courts lacked the sovereign power to try him.

violations completely deprive the court which tried Sobeli of its competence and nullify the sentence against him."

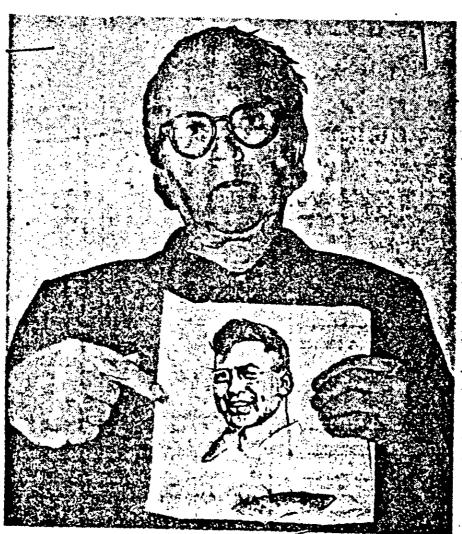

The magazine reported discussion of the case at a recent meeting of the Acalemy of Penal Sciences, where it was stated that Mexico must see that the "guarantees contained in our Constitution for citizens and foreigners and the regulations of extradition treaties in force must be respected; for otherwise Mexican dignity is compromised by the interference of foreign authorities."

The magazine said questions which "greatly interest Mexico" include:

 "How could Morton Sobell have been dragged from his home in Mexico City without the order of competent authority acting upon constitutional laws?

"How could be cross our frontier, passing by Mexican Immigration authorities, when he had been deprived, as it has been shown, of his papers of identity by his selzers?

e "What validity has the judgment against him from the moment that his delivery to the court was made in violation of civil rights, of the internal laws of Mexico and above all, of the Extradition Treaty in force between Mexico and the United States?"

What war? NEW YORK, N.Y.

Ben Pulbright speaks of Secy. Dulies as believing "there is a real jikelihood that American boys will be required to fight in the Middle Rast." He warms of the seriousness of "our present circumstances." Ben. Pulbright is a conservative Southerner and not a sensation-seeker. When he warms of the seriousness of our situation he must have in mind the danger of war. This fcar is confirmed by articles in U. S. News and World Report (1/18 and 1/25) stating "More war is a certainty" and asking: "Do the people of America really understand or weigh seriously the whole world situation, with its many potentialities for the sudden outbreak of war?"

den outbreak of war?"
On Jan. 25 Jack and Myra Boble were arrested in New York on suspicion of conspiracy to spy for the Boviet Union. These arrests occur, after an alleged ten years of surveillance, as the U.S. Court of Appeals prepares to hear in February the appeal of Morton Bobell for a new trial on the spy charges for which he was convicted with the Rosenbergs and is now serving a 30-year sentence in Alcatraz prison.

Are the new "spy" arrests timed to create a state of hysteria such as prevailed during the prosecutions of the Rosenbergs and Sobell in 1950-53—a state of hysteria deliberately created to cover up our unwarranted and costly Korean War of 1950-53?

What war is in the offing now? The American people can prevent a new war from breaking out. One of the means to do so is to demand a new trial for Morton Sobell, to demand his feedom from Alcatraz. Hysteria cannot prevail in the face of a fearless regard for truth.

REPORT TO READERS

Where we stand

night. The center of interest was 14-year-old Vickie, who had just won the American Legion's Americanism essay contest as her 16-year old brother David had two years ago. Vickie's feat made news because her parents are Communists: Saul Wellman is appealing a Smith Act conviction for conspiracy to teach and advocate violent overthrow of the U.S. government; Mrs. Wellman is facing deportation.

The television interviewers marveled that such fine young Americans could develop under the parenthood of two such subversive individuals. More peneirating interviewers might have questioned whether the parents of two such outstanding young Americans could indeed be subversive, after all; whether they perhaps were, on the contrary, more exemplary Americans than many other U.S. parents.

PROM OUR PIRST STICK OF TYPE back in 1948, the GUARDIAN has fought those who term good Americans subversive, who catesorise all good impulses, movements for justice, racial equality, peace and human betterment as un-American activities. We have, indeed, engaged in those activities since our first issue.

We supported Henry Wallace for President in 1948 and fought for the survival of the Progressive Party. We initiated the fight for the lives of the Trenton Six, and saw their death sentences reversed and their innocence established. From the outset we have attacked the Smith Act as unconstitutional, have defended every victim of it and have helped raise funds for their defenses and families. From its first shot we opposed the Korean War, a point of view now shared by the vast majority of all Americans. We invited a hue and cry from the Hearst and Scripps-Howard press for forcing to publication the names of U.S. prisoners of war in Korea. We forced to world attention the frameup of the Rosenbergs and Sobell. We have joined every good fight for human rights, racial equality and full status for all minorities. We have particularly concerned ourscives with the treatment of foreign-born in America, doing everything we could to bring about revision of the Walter-McCarran Act.

AcCarthy, McCarran, Veide, Parnell Thomas, Brownell, East-land, Walter—the whole kit and kaboodle of them—it has been our journalistic pleasure to harpoon, lampoon, expose and decry for their offenses in behalf of political indecency in America.

for this "subversive" activity. We lost our editor by departation of this "subversive" activity. We lost our editor by departation of the same combined assault by Velde, McCarthy and the Walter-Mo- darran Dept. of Immigration. Others of us have been hauled up for inquisition, but without any dampening effect on our editorial policies or our eagerness to join any good fight and to invite you to join with us.

This month, at long last, our name was added to the "subversive" list of the House Un-American Activities Committee. This is a compliation of 733 organizations and activities blacklisted by any legislative or other witch-hunt body, state or federal. It puts us in the good company of The Committee for the Recall of Councilman McClanahan, the various Committees to Repeal the Smith Act, McCarran and Walter-McCarran Acts and, indeed, the Progressive Party itself which moribund, is thus forewarned not to attempt to rise again. (The Committee did not specify whether it was blacklisting the Progressive Party of Theodore Roosevelt, Robert LaFollette or Henry Wallace).

Paper is not to be altered by official or unofficial attack; hence the purpose must be to intimidate you, the readers, who have carried on the fights and campaigns for decency and justice-which the Walter Committee views as subversive.

The men and women who carried the Rosenberg campaign for clemency to world-wide proportions can and would do it again, should the occasion arise. The core of opposition to Rep. Walter's iniquitous immigration law includes the GUARDIAN readership. The will to peace of the American people has been stimulated and strengthened to a shouting majority by the unswerving devotion and activity of progressive America.

The accomplishment of peace, full human rights and political decency demands a strong, united, growing organization of the citisenty; the purposes of war, corruption, racism and repression require the festivation of citizen opposition.

We stand where we have always stood, list or no list. We urse you to stand firm where you have always stood. Then, as Sam Small used to say, "Let battle commence!"

that reads: "Warren K. Billings, Watchmaker."

You enter a silent little one-room world, like a stage set in gray. A showcase displays some inexpensive Swiss watches, gilt tie clasps from New York and ladies' earrings. Behind it sits a silent man at a bench. He is Areased in a surgeon's white coat and is intently studying a sick watch through the loupe fastened to his hornrim glasses.

You rudely interrupt concentration, but he arcets you with an untroubled grin of welcome. This is Warren Billings, who spent 24 years, three months and 25 days in Polsom Prison. He was the fellow-martyr of Tom Mooney in one of the world's most infamous instances of the capitalist frameup of labor leaders. He had been 23, Tom's young lieutenant in organizing this city's street car workers.

Billings now is short and solid, with a ruddy, goodnatured face and twinkling blue eyes. He looks like your hard-working favorite uncle, or like the average rank--and-liker of Western labor.

Prison is hell, he answered my first quest on the circulity, "but if you've always liked people and got along with it "you'm along in retien 'oo. Though my first six years were really tough. They kept me in solitary all the time: no visits except my lawyer once in three months; no letters, except from my mother. You see, they wanted to break me, get me to turn against Tom Mooney. They put stoolies in the next cell, told me every kind of lie, trying to make me believe Mooney and the others had abandoned me.

"Once Fickeri himself, the District Attorney, called on me. His case was falling apart, and he tried to scare me into being his stoolie. He much resembled Joe Mc-Carthy. He shook his hammy fist under my nose and screamed he'd have me hung if I didn't give him what he wanted. Confess to a lie and go free! Stick by the truth and hangi

"They did the same thing to the Rosenbergs. They did it to Morton Sobell. There is the same pattern in all these frameups. That's why I am so concerned with the Sobell case and doing all I can to help."

"HE CHEERFUL WATCHMAKER in the white cost then reminisced and related many fascinating episodes of his prison Calvary of 24 years, three months and 25 days. (This exact figure is one that he repeated several times. Like your favorite uncle, Billings tries to be exact and truthful in every fact. He doesn't wantanyone to think he is bragging, or that he spent a minute more in darkest Folsom than "24 years, three months and 25 days.")

Folsom, next to Alcatraz, is one of free America's toughest "maximum security" prisons, Billings entered It only two years after public exposure had abolished such medieval tortures as the "water cure," the "hooks," the "strait-jacket." But the cells still had solid steel walls of half-inch boiler plate, with a two-by-six-inch wicket through which the brutal guards stared and aneered.

Billings feels strongly about prison reform. They are class institutions, built only to subdue and punish the poor and hard-working. Billings had written and spoken on the theme. He feels that organized labor has not yet realized that prison reform is one of its special tasks, a duty it owes the American worker.

Some enterprising publisher could get a fine book from Billings on prison life. I can't begin to repeat the many fascinating stories he spun as customers came and went through the little shop.

"Just the same, I fooled them," he grinned, "I kept studying in the prison; I didn't let them break me. I was always reading books, magazines, scientific papers. I studied history, astronomy, mathematics, law, psychology-spid even socialism. I even found some fine professors in jail; an old Oxford professor taught me the King's English while we labored on the stone pile "Where did you learn your watch making?

"The same way—the hard way, in prison. dollar watch broke down. I flattened an old nail and made a little screwdriver and fixed the watch. A priconer saw me and asked me to fix his watch. Then another and another. I learned as I went along, I discovered the principle that only dirt and friction could stop a watch. So I made tools and hid them under an old Saturday Evening Post. I would have got a month in the hole on bread and water if caught. Finally the authorities legalized my watch repairing.

"And when I came out of jail I started spinning like a top. I was suffering from the usual abook, a sick feeling like dying. Where did I belong? I had no plans, no routine, no hope for tomorrow. But the watchmaking saved me. Now I have remade my life. All sorts of people drop in on me; most of my customers know about the case. Sometimes an old prison friend will drop in, like that old burgiar you just saw. He looked like a businessman, didn't he? He's a swell guy, none better." At "What is your philosophy now?"

The same as when I was a boy and was framed for life because I helped organize an A.F. of L. union. It is the philosophy of Eugene Victor Debs. We must fight to free every prisoner and make this a better world. Socialism—that's the password to the future."

BILLINGS GIVES QUITE A FEW DAYS out of his livelihood to travel to New York, Los Angeles and other cities speaking for Sobell's freedom. He is chairman of the local committee, is also an official of his trade union, Local 101 of the Watchmaker's Union, A.P. of L. He is delegate to the central labor council in San Mateo County. One of the issues he specially fights for :. is Negro integration. Billings grew up alongside a Negro family when he was one of nine hungry kids of a poor widow in Brooklyn. The Negro women cared for him and his little brothers and sisters while the mother was out working. So he feels very simply that they are his own flesh and blood and he has always battled for them in and out of his trade union. Seconda Canal

After serving 24 years, three months and 25 days of his life in a prison, he remains a rank-and-filer who goes on working, fighting and hoping. No purple writing, no Dostoyevskian despairs, no American intellectual litters! On his banner is still written the simple device, "Freedom!" ## Mexican lawyer barred in Sobell case

DR. LUIS BANCHEZ PONTON, law professor at the University of Mexico, former diplomat and one-time Minister of Education in Mexico, was refused entry to the U.S. last week after he told U.S. Embassy officials that he planned to participate in the appeal of Morton Bobell.

Sobell, now serving a 30-year sentence in Alcatrar as a fellow-defendant in the trial of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, is asking a Federal Court of Appeals in New York to free him, order a new trial or at least hold a hearing on new evidence uncovered by his defense attorneys. A Federal District Court has turned down those demands. Much of the evidence concerns the seizure of Morton Sobell in Mexico which the defense holds was contrary to Mexican law and in violation of U.S.-Mexican treaty rights.

Dr. Ponton participated in filing Sobell's appeal with the District Court and was expected to be on hand for consultation and possible participation in the Appellate Court proceedings set for Feb. 4. U.S. Embassy officials in Mexico City assured him his visu would be ready in time, asked him to pick it up. When he came to the Embassy, officials there asked him apecifically what he proposed to do in the U.S. Told that he was part of the Sobell defense they announced that there would be a considerable delay in granting the visa.

Marshall Perlin asked that the hearing be postponed and urged the U.S. Attorney's office to facilitate Dr. Ponton's entry into the country. Mrs. Morton Sobell sent telegrams to President Eisenboyer, Secy. of State Dulles and Atty. Ohn. Brownell asking their help in bringing Dr. Ponton to New York.

The court recessed the hearing until ARGUMENT before the Court of Appeals in New York on Morton Sobell's motion for a new trial or a hearing en new evidence was postponed Feb. 8 until Mar. 4. The move came after U.S. sonsular officials in Mexico denied a leading Mexican lawyer entry into the U.S. to participate in the argument except under surveillance. The lawyer, Dr. Luis Sancher Ponton—a former diplomat, enciting Mexican minister of education and now law professor at the University of Mexico—refused to enter the country under surveillance after conferring with Mexican government officials.

Dr. Ponton's original request for a visa to participate in the Sobell hearing scheduled for Feb. 4 was met with the answer that there would be "considerable delay." His protest and those of his U.S. legal colleagues in the Sobell motion resuited in a decision to offer him a risa for the duration of the argument, or three days, whichever was longer, on condition that he would submit to constant surveillance by Immigration officials during his entire stay. Dr. Ponton's participation in presenting the Sobell motion was occasioned by evidence in the motion that Sobell was kidnapped from Mexico contrary to Mexican law and its extradition treaty with the U.S.

Sobell is now serving a 30-year sentence in Alcatrax as a fellow-defendant in the trial of Julius and Ethel Rosenbert in 1951 for alleged conspiracy to commit espionage.

Inhuman conspirators NEW YORK, N. Y.

Taking the perjury guilt of Elitcher and the uranium theti of David Greenglass as a base or: foundation and using the normal requential contacts of the latter: two with Rosenberg and Bobell' as building material and in turn the evidence permissible in a federal court under legal conspiracy as the cementing substance, a prosecution structure was carefully planned by the Dept. of Justice and erected under the watchful eyes of the superintendent of operations, the honorable judge. And a good and faithful superintendent he was, watching the rickety structure with trained eyes, using his judicial power to add a prop here, fill up a crack there, but always saving it from very imminent colla pse.

I advise trying an examination of the evidence and the conduct of the prosecution and judge with a viewpoint as outlined, and not a single puzzling circumstance or inexplicable affirmation or denial will appear. The resulting picture is stereotyped and unimaginative to be sure, but clear and complete.

Rorca at that moment (and for the present) was a flop. They were not only being kicked out of one of the back doors of their own "colonial" mansion, but dispossess proceedings and final foreclosure were staring them in the face Some little explanation had to be found, and weak and viconvincing as it seems, this emic opera version of atomic exchionage was the best they could concoct.

Having read the Wexley book and Prof. Sharp's analysis pondering the heartbreaking strivings of the Bobell Committee. I cannot help but wonder, now as I have many times before, whether anything short of the complete exposure of the true; nature of this frame-up, calling a spade a spade and identifying the grave-diggers, will salvage anything from this Judicial wreck To my mind it is mere fanciful wishing if in the struggle to clear the name of the Rosenbergs and obtain the freedom of Sobell, there is any anticipation of leniency, contriteness or repseve as long as these missnthrepic and inhuman conspirators can remain beneath their sangtimenious mask, undiscredited and even respected

By John T. McManus

A THREE-MAN BENCH of the U.S. Court of Appeals headed by Harold R. Medins on Mar. 5 heard one of Mexico's jeading lawyers accuse the U.S. government of seixing Morton Sobell in Mexico in 1950 in violation of the Extradition Treaty of 1899 to try him with Ethel and Julius Rosenberg for conspiracy to commit espionage.

Dr. Luis Banchez Ponto.i, Professor of Law at the University of Mexico, was formerly Minister of Education and has held several ambassadorial posts. He foined with counsel for Bobell in submitting the current appeal against a ruling by Judge Irving Kaufman last June denying a motion for a new trial. U.S. Embassy officials in Mexico first delayed granting Dr. Ponton a vica to come here, then agreed only to admit him for a period of days under full-time surveillance of the Dept. of Immigration. Protests on both sides of the border forced withdrawal of these restrictions.

Dr. Ponton, a dignified, strong-visaged man in his sixties, delivered his argument before Judges Medina. Galston and Waterman in English from a prepared text. The appeal brief, which was filed Dec. 12, was argued further by attorneys Marshall Perlin and Arthur Kinoy of New York.

BEYOND THE PALE: The Sobell appeal (GUARDIAN 12/34/56) asks for a directed acquittal or a new trial on grounds that Sobell was illegally removed from Mexico, that the prosecution knowingly introduced false and perjured evidence that he had been legally deported and suppressed evidence which would have proved that he was kidnaped. The appeal also challenges precedents used by Judge Kaufman, who presided at the trial where the perjured testiminy was used, in denying Sobell a new trial despite the new evidence.

Dr. Penton's argument pointed out that the only legal way Sobell could have been removed from Mexico was under the Treaty of Extradition and that exhaustive search through Mexican government records failed to disclese any request for extradition. The only documents on the case in Mexico, he said, "disclose that neither the Dept. of the Interior nor the Ministry of Foreign Relations, nor any competent agency, had any knowledge concerning the detention and transfer of the accused to the border, except when the Immigration Official of Nuevo Laredo and the Mexican Consul at Laredo, Tex., notified these Ministries after reading of its occurrence in the public press."

The Bobell "arrest", he declared, "had all the features of a seizure carried out beyond the pale of all laws which govern our country" by U.S. police authorities who "seem to have forgotten that Mexico is a sovereign country, independent, with its own laws as advanced as those of any other country."

FALSE NOTATION: In the motion for new trial presented to Judge Raufman last June the Sobell defense introduced new evidence to show that long in advance of the Sobell trial Mexican authorities had denied any part in Sobell's removal from Mexico (by English-speakremoval from Mexico (by English-speaking men who identified themselves as Mexico D.F. policemen searching for a bank robber named Johnny Jones). A U.S. border official nevertheless wrote

"Deported from Mexico" on Sobell's manifest, although he and the prosecution knew this to be false. The original motion and the appeal both argue that Sobell's illegal removal by legal precedent invalidates any subsequent proceeding against him.

Dr. Ponton associated himself fully with all the contentions of the Sobell appeal, although his argument largely went to that portion dealing with the circumstances of Sobell's removal from Mexico.

"I did not agree to serve." he told the U.S. Court, "until I served at a personal conviction of the justice of this case and the interest my country has in defending its prestige and covereignty."

Excerpts from Dr. Ponton's argument follow:

46 A ORTON SOBELL was not expelled or deported by the Government of Mexico.

"His return to this country was not due to a spontaneous action of the Government of Mexico, and hence the arrest and removal of Morton Sobell to the sommon border of the two countries occurred for no other reason than the interest which the United States Government had in having this performed, and it was the United States Government that set in motion and organized the method whereby Sobell was removed for the purpose of delivering him to the legal authorities to stand trial for a crime with which, until that time, he had not been charged.

"Thus, in view of the fact that the interest in Sobell's apprehension existed only on this side of the border, there was not, nor could there have been, any other legal grounds save those stemming from the Treaty of Extradition which is, in fact, the only law pertinent to this case.

"As has already been argued before this Court, the Treaty in question is not only a commitment entered into between the Governments of the United States and Mexico, but it also carries the weight of Constitutional Law in both countries, in keeping with the juridical system known as 'Incorporation' of international agreements into the law of the land.

"It is for this reason that we can unhesitatingly affirm that the provisions of the Treaty not having been followed, not only has there been in this case lack of respect for international agreements, but also suppression of personal rights which are enjoyed by any stranger in a country, as well as by the person accused in his country of origin when he is found on foreign soil.

"Lastly, all of these facts have led the defense to the conclusion that since there has been in this case a violation of the provisions of the Treaty of Extradition, the Courts of this country are without

"If we are to accept as genuine couthe ideas expounded here by the prosecution, all means, lawful or contrary the law, are admissible when dealing with a fugitive. It is good and proper and lega to which him out of his home in the middle of the night. legal grounds advanced, the representatives of the United States Government advance the thesis that Morton Sobell had fled to Mexico to foil justice because he knew himself to have committed a crime and that under such conditions it was admissible to pursue him, arrest him, regardless of the means adopted to bring about such an arrest, and to bring him to justice. Thus, these representatives claim that it was right and proper to treat him as a 'fugitive'.

"There are words which appear to have

"The representative of the Government of the United States hints in his rejoider to the appeal lodged by the defense that very likely the Government of Mexico, and specifically through the members of the secret police of Mexico, have cooperated for the apprehension and transfer of Sobell through what might be a sort of international courtesy or because of a sense of concern for the security of the nations of this hemisphere.

"Of this, there is not a shred of evidence. In my position, not being associated in any way as an official representative, but merely in my capacity as Mexican attorney whose services have been solicited in defense of a man whom we consider to have been unjustly condemned. I want to declare here that if

"Without respect for the obligations, freely accepted by the nations, the order on which is based the peace and tranquility of the world would be destroyed in a way that, as in primitive times, only brute force would rule."

Righting the record

**HAT GIMLET-EYED defender of national security, Rep. Francis E. Walter (D-Pa.), head of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, warms that "the Communist apparatus" has begun a nationwide campaign on behalf of Morton Sobell "coincident with the opening of an espionage trial against Jack and Myra Soble and Jacob Albam of New York."

One wonders where to start picking the Congressman apart on this announcement. Morton Sobell is the man this paper has been going to bat for since 1951, when he was sentenced to 30 years in prison for alleged conspiracy to commit espionage. He was convicted with the Rosenbergs and sent to Alcatrax while they were in the Sing Sing death house.

There is most certainly a nationwide campaign in progress in his behalf. In fact, President Eisenhower has on his desk a letter initiated by commentator Elmer Davis and others (all of whom are going to be surprised to find themselves described as a Communist apparatus) asking freedom or a new trial for Sobell. This letter first went to the President almost a year ago.

BY NOW SOME 150 additional petitioners have signed it—among them the Chicago rabbi who delivered the invocation at the Democratic Convention last summer; the Protestant chaplain of Alestraz penitentiary, where Schell has been imprisoned since 1952; and former Gov. Olson of California who freed Tom Mooney and Warren Bellings.

As far as Jack and Myra Boble and Jacob Albam are concerned, a lot of people have written and called this newspaper with the suspicion that the new "Soble" case was deliberately launched by the Dept. of Justice at this time (after being kept on ice for ten years according to the FBI) for whatever effect it might have in surrounding with confusion the appeal of Morton Bobell which was argued this past week before the Circuit Court of Appeals in New York (see P. 1).

Space will not permit us to print the entire list of people who have publicly signed the Elmer Davis letter to the President in behalf of Morton Sobell. A preponderance of the signers are elergymen from all corners of the country. The Chicago rabbi mentioned above is Jacob J. Weinstein of KAM Temple. The Alcatraz chaplain is the Rev. Peter McCormick of San Francisco. Nobel Prize Winners Emily Green Balch, Harold C. Urey and Linus Pauling are signers. So are Rabbi Arthur J. Lelyveld of N.Y., former director of the Hillel Foundation; Rabbi Emanuel Backman of New York, past-president of the N.Y. Board of Rabbis; Dean Paul Roberts of the Episcopal Cathedral of Denver; Rev. Daniel Lyman Ridout, administrative secretary of the Methodist Church in the Baltimore Area.

Detroiters (and many others, we expect) will recognize the significance of the name of the Rev. Henry Hitt Crane among the signers, Another, author Waldo Frank, is known the world around. Practically everybody knows Bob Kenny, former attorney general of California; John P. Finerty, counsel in the Sacco-Vanzetti and Mooney-Billings cases and associated with Emanuel Bloch in the last months of the Rosenberg case; Lewis Mumford, frequent New Yorker magazine writer; historian William Appleman Williams of Oregon; and detens of other signers.

YOU CAN GET THE PULL LIST (and Congressman Walter is right in one respect: it is growing) by writing to the Sobell Committee, 40 Broadway, New York 3, N.Y. We urge you to do so, and then see if there are not one or more prominent citizens in your community who would join with these signers in their appeal to President Eisenhower for justice for Morion Sobell. —THE GUARDIAN

A NEW BOOK

By CEDRIC BELFRAGE

THE 236 PAGES of our Editor-in-Exüe's warm recollections of the America of the GUARD-IAN's years are crammed with memories that are yours, too, and you will rejoice to relive them with him. In his chapter on the Rosenberg-Sobell Case, "My Sister, My Brother,"—perhaps the book's most moving—he writes thus about the two martyrs:

"When I thought of Ethel and Julius as 'communists'—the label that had to be pinned to them, although nothing as to their affiliation was ever established at the trial—one reflection was automatic: that if indeed they were members of it, then the American Communist Party was thereby ennobled. If they were, they took their place with many other communist men and women to whom humanity was in debt, who in my time had shown the greatest love, that they had laid down their lives for their friends. But all that was important to me was that they were my sister and my brother in my own progressive family which was broader than parties."

On MARCH 11, 1957, Helen and Morton Sobell celebrated the 12th anniversary of their wedding. They were at the time 3,000 miles apart: she was in New York City and he was on a small craggy island in San Francisco Bay. This enforced separation, however, was not new to them. During their married life, they have spent more years apart than together. Almost seven years have elapsed since Morton was kidnaped in Mexico City by hired agents of the PBI and sentenced to pay 30 years of his life for refusing to sell his soul for 30 pieces of ailver.

For 90 minutes, once each month. Helen is permitted to visit her husband at Alcatraz. Watched by a prison guard, she sits in a bare room that has bars on three sides. The fourth side consists of a steel wall in which there are small windows covered with thick panes of glass, Helen looks at Morton through one of these windows while they talk together on telephones. Sometimes, when the light is especially poor, she has difficulty in seeing his features clearly.

A TRANSFORMATION: It is costly to travel back and forth across the continent, and Helen usually times her trips to include two visits to Alcatraz—one at the end of one month and one at the beginning of the next. Her most recent visit was on March 2. I spent the morning with her before she went to the prison.

I could not but marvel, when I saw Helen now, at the transformation in her since I first knew her. The tense and painfully shy young woman, whose voice was often barely more than a whisper, now personifies confidence and tenacity. Her dark handsome eyes are buoyant. She is no figurehead in the movement to free her hasband, but a true leader.

MORTON SOBELL

This day she had good news to share. The Washington Day dinner and public meeting in Los Angeles were very successful. More than 100 prominent persons had just signed a letter to President Elacohower urging him to pardon Sobell, commute his sentence, or request the Attorney General to consent to a new trial. The State Dept. had been forced to back down on its refusal to permit the distinguished Mexican attorney and statesman. Dr. Luis Sanchez Ponton, to enter the U.S. to join the Sobell defense,

THE EFLLHOLE: There has been much comment over the years about the appailing conditions at Alcatraz, which sen. Langer calls "the worst helliple of them all." It is difficult for those who have not endured it to understand what life is like on The Rock, but this story helps:

Receitly a prisoner escaped. He was found shortly afterwards on the island.

in a cave by the water's edge. He could not swim. He had known, in other words, that he had no chance of getting off the island. But he could stand the prison no longer. He had to flee, if only for 100 yard. . . .

The "maximum security" for the sotalled incorrigible criminals at Alcatrax has one simple aim: destruction of the human spirit. The prison is a monstrous cage for converting men into stolid animals. The separation of the prison from the mainland has a symbolic significance. The prisoners are shut off from all possible contact with the outside world, just as they are denied the most commonplace privileges of othe? penitentiaries.

THE ONLY WAY: How has the gentle scholar and scientist, Morton Sobell, stood up under all of this? "He has not only continued to function." says Helen with pride, "but to grow and add to his enrichment. He finds something meaningful in everything around him. And, you know, he never gets out of touch with the world." She adds, with a smile: "There's a saying that the only way for the rich to stay rich is to get richer. Well, for Morton, the only way to stay strong is to get stronger.."

What do this husband and wife talk about during their 90 minutes together? They talk about casual, tender, and beautiful things. Before her last visit, Helen sent Morton the program of a musicale by the San Francisco Sobell Committee. "You wait for that Dvorak trio," he tells her when he sees her. "You'll love it. It's a wonderful thing. !."

He has recently finished reading Erich Promm's book, The Art of Loving, Together, they discuss the author's concept of how a mother's love of her children differs from a father's...

A LESSON LEARNED: "Speaking of love," says Morton, "I've been thinking about the precept, Love thy neighbor as thyself.' You know, that really means much more than that you should just love your neighbor. When you stop to think about it, you realize it also means that you must respect yourself."

And they talk about their children, about their son, Marc, who will be eight in June, and Helen's daughter. Bidney, who at 17 is approaching womanhood...

They talk about the correspondence course Morion is taking in transistors the intercession of the noted physicist. Dr. Harold Urey, was required before Morion was allowed to receive two monthly solds Helen for having told his attorney about his having gotten a mark of 100 on his mid-term exam. You make it sound as if it were a major accomplishment. The exam was really very easy.

A. NEW , SENSITIVITY: Then Morton

says: "Well, our visit is almost over, and of course that's always sad." He has no watch, and Helen asks:

He has no watch, and Helen asks:
"How do you know it's almost over?"
"I can hear the bus coming."

"You can? I don't hear anything."
"Oh, you develop all sorts of sensitivities here," Morton says. "For Example:
The electric power is turned off every night at nine, you know, and all the lights so out in the cells. Sometimes you can't remember whether or not your light, was on when the power went off. If it was, and you leave it that way, you'll be awakened by its glaring in your face early in the morning when the power goes on again. Well, I've gotten so I can tell in the dark, just by the feel of pulling the cord, whether the connection is on er off?

And then, once again, as so often, they say good-bye through the telephone, looking at each other through the little window.

Mexico denies it deported Sobell

THE MEXICAN DEPT. of Migration has declared there is no record that it ordered the expulsion of Morton Sobell from Mexico. A letter to this effect from the Migration Dept. was filed April 10 with the U.S. Court of Appeals by attorneys for Morton Sobell to prove its charge that the prosecution lied when it claimed Mexico had deported Sobell.

The new evidence, in addition to previous documentation refuting the prosecution, was cited as further reason for a hearing. The Appeals Court is now considering such an appeal by Bobell.

Sobell, who maintains his innocence, is imprisoned in Alcatras on a 20-year sentence for conspiracy to commit espionage. He charges that the prosecution illegally kidnapped him from Mexico, and then, to make him appear a fugitive, said he had been deported.

THE FILES SEARCHED: The new letter went to a Mexican attorney March 3 "by consent of the head of the department" from Migration Inspector Jose Inc. Perez. It said:

"I wish to advise you that in the files pertaining to Morton Sobell, United States Citizen, there is no record to the effect that this Department has ordered his expulsion from the country." DUTTING TECH TE

THE ROSENBERGS

WE GET A KICK (and a profit) out of selling a bike or a TV set or an air conditioner. Our pleasure comes from supplying a device our technology has produced to make living a little easier or happier. In our customers minds we are always associated with the little luxuries of life.

That's why we have continued to like our work—even after two decades. But nothing pleases us more or draws us closer to our customers than selling a good book.

As we have said in previous ads, appliances are our business; selling books is our pleasure. We don't sell books often. When we do, it is because we have read something exciting and want to share that enjoyment with you.

We just read an anthology of poems about Ethel and Julius Rosenberg by some of our finest poets. It is a book we think you ought to have to read, re-read and pass on to your children when they are old enough to understand what happened.

It is called simply, THE ROSENBERGS and is available only in a limited edition. It was compiled by Martha Millet.

An example of the content is the poem reprinted below by Alfred Kreymborg, former President of the Poetry Society of America.

THAT AFTERNOON

By Alfred Kreymborg

On the way to the newsstand that afternoon I found four small boys on my stoop.

They looked so forlorn I had to stop,—
"What's the matter?"

"We lost our ball," said one.
The second: "It went through that open window."
The third: "The lady slammed the window, Kept the ball." And the fourth:
"Would you buy us a new one, mister?"
"What does it cost?"
"Only a quarter," the quartet samp
And four pairs of eyes sought mine.

The lad I was in memory said "All right,"
They followed ms to the stationery store.
There my eyes were stopped by the plaring line:

Appeals Court turns down Sobell plea for new trial

THE CASE of Morton Sobell, convicted with Ethel and Julius Rosenberg in 1951 for conspiracy to commit espionage and now serving a 30-year sentence in Alcatraz, is headed for the Supreme Court for a third time. The court will be asked to review the denial May 14 by a Court of Appeals bench headed by Judge Harold Medina of motions the effect of which would be to free Sobell or grant him a new trial. The defense had charged the use of perjuries and false representations by the prosecution in the original trial before Judge Irving R. Kaufman.

Kaufman denied the motions last June. He said the contentions of the appeal had already been dealt with on a motion to arrest judgment argued immediately after the Rosenberg-Sobell trial in 1951. Since the 1951 proceeding the Bobell defense has uncovered a wealth of material proving the assertions made at that time -that Sobell had been illegally seized in Mexico and delivered to U.S. authorities at Laredo, Tex., where his papers were incorrectly stamped "Deported" by an immigration official. The prosecution used these papers and testimony of the immigration official at the trial to convince the jury that Sobell had been legally deported by the government of Mexico. The delense contended that the prosecution had used this evidence knowing it to be false; and in a separate motion argued that Sobell was entitled to his freedom because he had been abducted by the Dept. of Justice in violation of the extradition treaty between Mexico and the U.S.

EVIDENCE BRUSHED OFF: These points were argued Mar. 5 before Medina and Judges Galston and Waterman by attorneys Marshall Perlin of New York and Dr. Louis Sanchez Ponton of Mexico.

The Medina decision brushed aside the new evidence and affirmed Raufman's judgment that the contentions had been disposed of in the 1951 proceeding. In disposing of the contention that the extradition treaty had been violated, Medina ruled that the treaty with Mexico does not prohibit "... abduction by one party of criminals found in the territory of the other."

Later the opinion says on the same point:

"... it can hardly be maintained, still assuming the truth of the appellant's charges, that the unlawful and unauthorized acts of the Mexican police acting in behalf of subordinate agents of the executive branch of the United States government wers ... acts of the United States."

NEVER BEFORE COURT: The Supreme Court has twice before refused to review Sobell's conviction when it was appealed with the Rosenberg case in 1952-53. The legal points in the current motions have not been before the Supreme Court before

Meanwhile world-famous cellist Pablo Cazals has joined the list of prominent individuals appealing to President Elsenhower for freedom or a new trial for Sobell. The appeal was originated by sommentator Elmer Davis, atom selentist Harold Urey and others last year. Notables joining earlier this year included the Protestant chaplain of Alcatriz, former Gov. Olson of California, and leading churchmen, writers and educators. More than 200 persons have signed the appeal, including most recently editor I. F. Stone, author Harvey O'Connor and Profs. Robert Reid Newell and Sumner M. Kalman of Stanford Univ. medical school.

FIGHT GOES ON: Mrs. Helen Sobell called Medina's decision "an immoral and lilegal one" and announced that it would be appealed to the Supreme Court.

"We do not pretend that this denial of due process is easy for us to endure," she said. "However, seven years of imprisonment have not crushed Morton's will to live or his belief in his vindication, nor will this.

"We can and must have the justice to which we are entitled; we will continue to fight for it with the continued susport of those old and new friends who know what this case means to America." DATED J 27 /5

Sobell boat ride to Bear Mountain

A DAY devoted to Morton Sobell, and in tribute to the Rosenbergs, is set for Sunday, May 26, with families throughout the New York area gathering on a boat ride to Bear Mountain.

The Bobell Committee has charted a modern, 3,000-passenger steamer for the trip up the Hudson.

The boat ride will feature folk music, square dancing, special games for children and a showing of the new Sobeli film strip, "Was Justice Done?" At Bear Mountain there will be swimming and picnicking.

The steamer leaves Battery Park Landing at 10 a.m. on Bunday, and will stop for additional passengers at the 134th St. Pier on the Hudson River. The steamer will be back in New York by 9 p.m.

Tickets, which are $2.50 for adults (round-trip) and $1 for children, may be obtained from the Bobell Committee, $40 Broadway, N.Y.C. Algonquin 4-

A new anthology of poems on the Kosenbergs

A LIMITED EDITION of The Rosenbergs: Poems of the United States is now available for $3 at Sierra Press, P.O. Box 96, Long Island City 4, N.Y.

The work contains poems by George Abbe, W.E.B. Du Bois, Mike Gold. Aaron Kramer, Alfred Kreymborg, Walter Lowenfels, A.B. Magil. Eve Merriam. Yuri Suhl, Dora Teitelboim and many others, including Helen Sobell, whose husband Morton was convicted with the Rosenbergs and for whom a nationwide movement is seeking freedom or a new trial. The poems were collected and the volume edited by Martha Millet. A foreword quotes from Longfellow's The New England Tragedies the words of Giles Corey spurning the "Confess and live" proposal of the Salem witchhunters:

... if a word could save me, and that word Were not the Truth; nay, if it did but swerve A hair's-breath from the Truth, I would not say it!

The Sobell decision

BRODKLYN, N. Y.
Circuit Court Judge Medinas decision denying Sobell's appeal for a hearing is both immoral and filegal. It strikes with equal force against Sobell, his family and friends, and at the constitutional safeguards of all Americans.

mericans.

The decision seems predicated upon contempt for the people, apparently based upon the conviction that Americans can't or don't read English. Else, why the distortions which any simple reading of the tribl transcript would readily disclose? At any rate, leading Freschmen and Britons and Israelist and Italians do read English, and this decision cannot help but degrade us in the eyes of the world.

Judge Medina Telles heavily of Judge Kaufman's denial. However, he carefully avoids the contradictions between Kaufman's decision in June, 1956, and the Circuit Court's present due. In his denial, Judge Kaufman stated: "The Government has never contended that Sobell has legally deported

But the Circuit Court found otherwise, and U. S. Attorner Paul Williams, replying to Judg Mediria's own query, at the hearing March 5, 1957, stated: "The Covernment now maintains, and has always maintained, that Sobell was legally deported."

If the Government's doubletalk about deportation could be misunderstood by presiding Judge Kaufman himself, and if it confounded three distinguished Circuit Court judges, isn't it possible that one lone juror might also have misunderstood? Doesn't this necessitate a hearing. in accordance with Bobell's motion?

Judge Medina's decision states that many witnesses testified at the trial that when Bobell left the U.S. for Mexico, it was flight with the intention of not returning. This is completely false. Not one witness said anything of the sort. Let Medina search the trial record from beginning to end. Then, let him produce such testimony, or let him apologize to Sobell and to the public and take such steps as are required to give Sobell his day in court.

The Supreme Court will undoubtedly reverse this shameful decision, but this means more months of misery, more terror, more heartache. Also, it will require more effort and support (financial and otherwise) from the public, to bring the case hefore the Supreme Court and to suarantee that justice is dane.

If We Die

You shall know, my sons, shall know why we leave the song unsung, the book unread, the work undone, to rest beneath the sod.

Mourn no more, my sons, no more why the lies and smears were framed, the tears we shed, the hurt we bore to all shall be proclaimed.

Earth shall smile, my sons, shall smile and green above our resting place, the killing end, the world rejoice in brotherhood and peace.

Work and build, my sons, and build a monument to love and joy; to human worth, to faith we kept for you, my sons, for you.

100-1071-6 1-10051 117-10117 1351 Four y ago his week, a vindictive government to the lives of two young American parents on charges of conspiracy to commit espionage, despite worldwide appears for clemency. Convicted with them and sentenced to an eternity in Alcatraz prison was a young scientist, Morton Sobelt, whose fight for justice goes on today. For humane people all over the world the continuing effort for freedom or a new trial for Sobell embodies an unyielding determinention also to clear the Rosenbergs' name.

Author of the famed amicus curiae brief signed by thousands in 1952-53 in behalf of the Rosenbergs to the Supreme Court—and author since of a similar brief for Sobell—venerable attorney Dr. Royal Wilbur France has just written an autobiography, My Native Grounds, in which separate chapters are devoted to the Rosenberg and Sobell cases. (My Native Grounds is the Liberty Book Club selection for July. Members may obtain the book for $2.37; others from Cameron Associates, 100 W. 23 St., N.Y.C., for $4.75.)

The following article on the Sobell case by Dr. France is a condensation of Chapter 25 of My Native Grounds.

By Royal W. France

HE LIVES of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were snuffed out legally in that late afternoon of June 19, 1953, but the case was far from over. That night, throughout America and throughout the world, thoughtful people were saddened, and frightened, for in the death of the Rosenbergs the hysteria that had hold of America reached its height. It had happened! That was the unalterable truth of the matter, but the other and greater truth might still have its day. All the parties to the Rosenberg trial were not snulled out with them, and there was one especially on whom hope was now placed for the establishment of the Rosenbergs' innocence and his own.

He was Morton Sobell, the young man whose fortunes had become inextricably tied with theirs. With them he had stood accused. He now languishes in Alcatras, the Federal prison reserved for the most dangerous prisoners, under a thirty-year sentence.

If the case against the Rosenbergs was flimsy, as many who examined it believed, the one against Sobell was as thin as a slice of boarding house beef. The hopeful fact was that he was still alive. and that if reconsideration could be won for his case not only might vindication follow for him but light might at the same time be thrown on the Rosenberg case. Both sides to the debate about the guilt or innocence of the Rosenbergs were aware of the importance of the Sobell case to the whole, which accounted both for the difficulty of getting the case brought to public attention again and for the seal with which consideration of the case, and a rehearing, were sought by many prominent persons—and not only establish Morton Sobell's innocence, though heaven and hell had to be aroused to do it, was his wife, young Helen Sobell. In the history of this period, the devotion and untiring labor of the wives of some of the victims of the cold war hysteria will stand out as a tribute to the character of the imprisoned men. Their women gave all they had to get them freed, and Morton Sobell's wife way, and is, among the bravest of that brave band.

I met her when she came to ask me to present an amicus brief to the Supreme Court on behalf of her husband. She is an alert, dark-haired woman with keen, intelligent eyes. Her youth is the most impressive thing about her. She looks like what she was: the attractive wife of a young professional man. One can wonder at the turn of circumstances that brought her out of that role and made her into a person who had to be listened to because she believed so manifold that not only justice and her husband's honor were involved but the honor of her country as wall

THE ONLY EVIDENCE directly sonnecting Sobell with espionage had come from a witness named Max Elitcher, a former contege mase in accent and Rosenberg. There was no evidence whatscever of any complicity in atomic espiemage, and the very fact of his faving been trad with the Rosenbergs who were so charged was prejudicial.

Elitcher had admitted having been a Communist. He had denied that affiliation under oath when seeking a government job, and on the stand when he was being cross-examined he admitted that he was frightened on that account and hoped for elemency as a result of testifying for the government.

Of his testimony, on which the conviction of Sobell rested, Professor Sharp has this to say in Was Justice Done?:

"He told a tale which does not follow my ideas of effective espionage at all. Does a spy discuss his activities with all his old college chums without finding out where their loyalties lie, and does he keep it up for years without accurring any information? How stupid do we assume these people to be?"...

Prom my own study of the Sobell case I was convinced that he could not have been convicted on the testimony of this one man, a man who had the most compelling motive to commit perjury, except for one circumstance. That circumstance was Sobell's alleged "flight to Mexico."...

It is a fact that Sobell and his wife went to Mexico in 1950. The case for the prosecution was that Sobell, realizing the threat to the Rosenbergs and himself following the apprehension of Harry Gold as a member of a "spy ring," fled upon learning of Gold's arrest. The Sobells' claim, on the contrary, is that the Mexican vacation had been planned for a long time and that their departure was not flight. By their own admission they did toy with the idea of staying in Mexico. Many other Americans, believing that fascism here was imminent, had done just that, and many are still there, it might be added. The Bobells, according to their story, rejected the idea of staying and were planning to return home. He was seized and brought to the border before he could put the plan to return into action.

AT THE TRIAL the PBI was determined to present Sobell as a fugitive. Mistakenly, I think, he did not take the stand at the trial, and as a result the circumstances of his setzure were not brought out, when they not only might have laid the charge but might have had far-resching effect. Those circumstances are set forth in an affidavit submitted by the defendant on a motion for a new trial . . .

That request for a new trial, made in 1856, was brought before the same judge who had conducted the first trial. In my opinion that judge, Irving Kaufman, was too involved emotionally to be able to judge that request objectively. He should have referred it to some other judge. Instead, he contemptuously dismissed the motion, and included in his opinion derogatory remarks about Sobell's lawyers, He stated that the motion for a new trial was wholly without merit and castigated the lawyers who had made it for trying to obstruct justice and put our sountry in a bad light. Again it was illustrated that judges are human. Judge Kaufman dares not admit, even to himself, that injustice may have been done in the Rosenberg and Sobell cases, nor is he the first judge in history who has so sought to close the record.

A STORY TOLD TO ME by Harold Phillips, one of Bobell's attorneys at the first trial, throws light on Judge Kaufman's state of mind at the time of the convictions, as well as it tells something of the jury's thinking. The lawyers were sitting with him, waiting for the werdict, while the jury was out. A message came from the jury wasking if they had a right to ask for elemency. Judge Kaufman sent back a curt reply to the effect that he would not be bound by any such recommendation. He turned to Phillips and asked, "Do you know for whom I think they wish to ask for elemency?"

"The woman?" Phillips saked.

"No. Bobell," the judge replied. His idea of justice for Bobell was thirty years in Alcairax.

But justice has a way of finding its own

REPORT TO READERS

day to remember

HE WARREN SUPREME COURT, with two new members sometimes not sitting and one chronic dissenter, nevertheless has vociferously offered the traditional concept of civil liberty in America a new, fighting chance.

◆ The Court's next-to-last decision day of the present term-June 17, 1957 must have immediate and decisive impact on (1) the conduct of Congressional investigations; (2) the trials of all Smith Act victims now in prospect or under appeal throughout the nation; and (3) the powers of Pederal agencies over the careers of sovernment employes in application of loyalty-security programs.

· Earlier in the present term, the Warren Court began the dismantling of the iniquitous Walter-McCarran immigration law; and literally pulled the rug out from under the PBI, Immigration Dept. and the Dept. of Justice generally in the use of paid witnesses and illegal evidence. The Court also wiped out ancient "sedition" laws (practically, "Little Smith Acts") in 27 states, as having been superseded by the Smith Act. And while it has not set saids its 1931 decision affirming the constitutionality of the Smith Act, at has a limited application of it that there remains little besis for

HY W Y DIVISION

• Furthermore, in the Grunewald case—involving not a "leftwing" case but an iricome tax fraud—the Court affirmed the Fifth Amendment in ringing terms as a right which no court has the power to misconstrue—a ruling which may have effect in the Sobell appeal for a new trial as well as in countless other instances throughout the nation.

T IS HEART-BREAKING therefore, in the light of these massive changes in the highest court's view toward repression in America, that the same day's newspapers should have also reposted the suicide of a young and brilliant scientist facing inquisition before the House Committee on Un-American Activities in its second visit to San Francisco in a year; and the callous comment of the Committee counsel, Frank Tavenner, that the dead man—cancer research scientist William K. Sherwood of Pacific Grove—might have taken with him in death information "that would have been significant to the security of this country."

The dead man left a statement which he had prepared to deliver before the Committee that "the Committee's trail is strewn with blasted lives and the wreckage of youthful careers." In his death note he said: "I would love to spend the next few years in laboratories, and I would hate to spend them in jail." So, at 41, a young man who believed he had found a link between cancer, schizophrenia and some kinds of heart disease, drank a lethal does of chemicals and died four hours later.

IT IS OUTRAGEOUS, further, that in this same week of political liberation, a Grand Jury in New York should be undertaking again to question Edward Pitzgerald, who served a prison term for preferring his right to use the Pifth Amendment than to accept "immunity" from mythical prosecution.

AS A STARTER, in giving popular force to the Supreme Court's best season in 20 years, the House Un-American Committee ought to be run out of town everywhere it ventures on its current "tour"; a freedom campaign should start for "Red" Hupman; the Sobell case, all foreign-born persecutions and Smith and Taft-Hartley cases supported to the fuliest; and finally, and at least, the good people of this country should get their heads together before this summer is spent, on ways and means to make the most of the Supreme Court gift of a new fighting chance for civil liberties in America.
