TINY STAR AIDED BY COURT

Shirley Temple's Contract With Business Aide Revised to Her Advantage by Judge

Shirley Temple, 6-year-old picture actress, went before Superior Judge McComb yesterday to acquire a new business manager, but she should have hired the judge.

Before he was through he had saved her 5 per cent commission on her salary, had eliminated a provision giving the business manager the right to handle her bank account, and had insisted on clarification of another paragraph dealing with indefinite continuation of the manager's contract.

The contract was with Bern Bernard and it called for payment to him of 10 per cent of all she may receive under a new contract, or of any increase over her present salary of $150 a week in her present contract.

Martin Gang, attorney for Shirley and her mother, Mrs. Gertrude Temple, explained that since the little star has commenced to "click in a big way," she is entitled to a better contract than she has at present and that she needs a manager to negotiate it for her.

Judge McComb said he would not approve of 10 per cent and cut it to a 5 per cent commission. He also took exception to the other provisions and insisted on their being changed. Attorney Gang said he would present the revised contract for approval today and the case was taken under submission.

Father Seeks More Pay for Shirley Temple

Little Shirley Temple, child star of films, played in her backyard at Santa Monica yesterday unmindful of a fight going on for a larger pay check for her screen efforts. Reliable reports were that her father, George F. Temple, branch bank manager, asked an increase to $2500 weekly before his daughter would be allowed to work again.

Executives at Shirley Temple, the Fox studio, which has a contract on her services, countered with an offer of $1000. At the studio the next step in the negotiations are uncertain, while Temple said he will see his attorney before going ahead.

Shirley, 3 years of age, became a star almost overnight after her discovery while working in two-reelers. She was signed at $150 a week.

Shirley Temple Pay Scale Set

Stardom with a reputed salary of $1000 a week for Shirley Temple, 5 years of age, was the compromise reached yesterday between her parents and officials of the Fox Studio.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Temple had asked $2500 weekly instead of the studio's $1000 offer. The Temple's, however, agreed to $1000 when it was stipulated Mrs. Temple is to receive $100 a week to remain on the set while Shirley works.

The contract is for seven years with yearly options providing increases. Attorney Loyd Wright represented the Temples.

On a five weeks' vacation Shirley leaves today with her mother for Northern California points. Her father is a branch bank manager.

Sued by Agents

~~OCT 23 1933~~
Shirley Temple, 6-year-old film star, and her parents, George and Gertrude Temple, yesterday were named defendants in a suit filed in the Superior Court by Elinor O'Reilly and Gene Mann, theatrical agents.

It is asserted the plaintiffs obtained for the juvenile star a five-year contract with Fox Films on October 26, 1933, and that their agreement permitted the plaintiffs to arrange personal appearances for Shirley, which she failed to carry out in New York City last June, at $7500 a week.

Quarrel Over Shirley Temple Contract Ended

Settlement out of court of the dispute between Elinor O'Reilly and Gene Mann, theatrical agents, and George and Gertrude Temple, parents of Shirley Temple, diminutive screen actress, was reported yesterday when the agents' suit for construction of their contract to manage the little actress was called for trial before Superior Judge McComb. The agents contended they had a five-year contract to manage Shirley's affairs.

The terms of the settlement were not announced.

Shirley Temple Dolls Lead to Court Action

NEW YORK, Oct. 11. (AP)—An application for nominal guardianship for Shirley Temple, child film star, was filed today in Queens Supreme Court by Sidney Rosenau of New York.

Rosenau's application was explained as a preliminary step in filing a suit against a company which is said to be manufacturing Shirley Temple dolls, "assertedly infringing on an exclusive contract between Shirley, her parents and a Long Island doll manufacturer.

The decision on the guardianship petition was postponed to early next week. Rosenau would participate in the suit as the child's agent.

*Studios Careful About Revealing Pay, Lest
Other Children, Parents, and Adult Players Also, Get "Ideas"*

NOV 17 1935 BY ALMA WHITAKER

Clever babies are climbing up into the big money. More smart lambskins are being paid higher salaries than ever before in pictures. A little Shirley Temple or Freddie Bartholomew in the family is as valuable as a flowing oil well, or a nice productive gold mine.

The studios are wary about revealing the salaries paid to these youngsters, because, ahem, comparisons are odious, and parents and guardians get ideas in their heads. To say nothing of adult players who get resentive by the comparison, too. Nevertheless it is known that while a new "adjustment" was recorded for Shirley Temple in August, 1934, by which she was to receive $1500 a week, with mamma receiving $150 a week to take care of her, there has recently been a new boost, which with her commercial tie-ups, puts Shirley in the $5000-a-week class. The actual salary from Twentieth Century-Fox is around $2500 a week, and the Shirley Temple dolls and dresses on the market bring in an additional $2500 a week at least.

This is higher than Jackie Cooper ever received at the height of his glory, which was $1200 a week. This boy has lately signed a new contract with M.-G.-M. by which he accepts a mere $1100 a week for a spell, with, however, a rising scale to reach $1500 a week, next year.

Little 10-year-old Freddie Bartholomew's first contract, for "David Copperfield," was for thirty pounds a week, i.e. around $130, but his marked success in that picture soon boosted that. The next recorded raise was to $250 a week, with $150 a week for Aunt Mylicent as his guardian, and now, with "Little Lord Fauntleroy" coming up, it has been boosted to $1000 a week on a forty-week contract.

MICKEY ROONEY

Mickey Rooney, who is also to be in that picture, is now 15 years old. Although he played Puck in Warner Brothers' "Midsummer Night's Dream" he was only loaned to that studio by M.-G.-M. His contract with M.-G.-M. began at $150 a week for twenty weeks, then rose to $200 a week for twenty more weeks, and he now receives $400 a week on a yearly basis whether he is working or not.

Sybil Jason, the little 7-year-old at Warners, began with an optional contract at $100 a week for six months. The option has now been taken up and Sybil receives $230 a week on a new long contract.

PAID BY PICTURE

Young Jackie Scarl, age 14, is paid by the picture. He first received $2000 a picture from Fox, and has nine other options in the contract by which he receives $2500 each for three pictures, $3000 each for three more, and is to receive $3500 each for the last three.

At Fox, too, is young Jane Withers, 9 years of age. Jane is receiving $150 a week, but because of her work in "Gentle Julia," just concluded, a handsome boost is under discussion.

Paramount has several bright babes on its list. David Hicif, age 7, receives $175 a week on a regular contract, and his 4-year-old sister Betty gets $75. They will star in "Timothy's Quest" as brother and sister. Then there's Billy Lee, 5 years old, who has a contract for $85 a week when he's working, and $35 a week when he's not. Baby Le Roy's contract still goes marching on—that youngster has been a wage-earner for nigh three years and he's only 3 now! This little like started at $20 a week all the time and $50 a week for ten weeks of work. This has risen to $50 a week now, and $35 a week even when he isn't appearing in a picture. Virginia Weidlen, age 8, started at $50 a week a year ago, rose to $60 a week for the second six months and is now to receive $75 a week.

Farm Boy Accused of Threat Letter Demanding $25,000 From Child Screen Star's Father

Threats against the life of Shirley Temple, juvenile screen actress, by a 16-year-old Nebraska farm boy demanding $25,000 in an extortion note, were revealed last night by Department of Justice agents following arrest of the youth in Grant, Neb.

Sheriff H. Bechtel, who arrested ~~Shirley Temple~~ Powell, said the boy sent a letter May 9 to George F. Temple, the child actress' father, reading:

"Unless $25,000 is dropped from an airplane near Grant, Neb., on May 15, the life of Shirley Temple will be endangered."

U. S. Atty. Hall said a complaint against young Powell was filed in United States District Court at North Platte, Neb.

ARRAIGNMENT TODAY

The boy will be arraigned at 9 a.m. today.

The child actress was in Eureka last night with her parents on a vacation trip. Her father commented evasively on the plot.

"We want to be by ourselves and hope to spend our time fishing," Temple said. He explained that they will leave tomorrow for Southern Oregon, to rest at a location 150 miles from a railroad and seventy-five miles from the nearest telegraph station.

R. A. Alt, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Omaha, said Powell confessed writing the extortion letter. Alt dispatched agents to take Powell to North Platte for arraignment before United States Commissioner A. F. Stroitz.

Federal agents used a technical laboratory in identifying the writer. The letter paper was traced through manufacturers to various stores in Grant and Madrid, Neb.

NO MONEY PAID

The child's father, a branch bank manager, paid no money. The letter was not noticed in the fan mail until May 18.

Sheriff Bechtel said the boy was found working in a field in a farm rented by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Powell, a mile south of Grant.

He quoted the youth as saying he was "sorry." He accompanied the officers without protest.

YOUTH FREE UNDER BOND IN SHIRLEY TEMPLE PLOT

GRANT (Neb.) Aug. 1. (AP)—Sterling W. Powell, 16 years of age, who admitted writing a letter threatening the life of Shirley Temple, child film star, unless her father paid him $25,000, was free under $1000 bond tonight to await action of a Federal grand jury.

Powell, a voracious reader of film and detective magazines and a motion-picture fan, pleaded guilty to an extortion charge before United States Commissioner Streitz at North Platte today and was bound over to the next term of Federal district court which begins June 8, 1937.

Sheriff Betchel of Perkins county, Powell's home, signed the $1000 bond and brought the boy back here.

He said Powell had told him "he never meant to go through with it" and did not go to the specified place to look for the money.

The letter, written last May to Shirley's father, George F. Temple, ordered him to drop $25,000 "from an airplane near Grant, on May 15" or "the life of Shirley Temple will be endangered."

Temple, at Eureka, Cal., told authorities the letter was not noted until May 18, three days after the dead line. The Temples did not take the matter seriously and Shirley was not told of it. Temple called it "a silly action by some youngster."

Powell's arrest yesterday was announced by J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who said the youth was traced through scientific paper tests of the stationery used. The department learned the paper was sold at Grant and Madrid, Neb., neighbor towns in this West Nebraska county. Hoover did not disclose how Powell was singled out. He was plowing in a field near his home when officers seized him.

GOT IDEA FROM FILM

Betchel said Powell told him he got the idea for the note after seeing a motion picture with a kidnaping plot. Carl F. Powell, his father, said the boy would go to the picture "every night if we would let him," and that he seldom missed a picture in Grant.

Powell also said his son "read all the time and read everything he could get his hands on, especially detective and film magazines."

Write-in Vote for Judgeship Cast for Shirley Temple

Shirley Temple, motion-picture actress, has arrived at the place on the list of celebrities where she receives write-in votes at elections.

This is indicated in the official canvass of ballots of the recent primary election being made by the Board of Supervisors, for on one is the name of the child star, written in for the nomination of judge of the Superior Court.

The usual number of others appear on ballots, among them Mary Pickford, Tom Mix and Mae West. Votes for judge were also written in for Tom Mooney, Joe Bloo, John Doe, David Lamson, Clara Phillips, Irvin Cobb, Herbert Hoover, Jr., Erwin P. Werner and Rev. R. P. Shuler.

Aimee Semple McPherson was given several votes for District Attorney. Also Rhea Crawford Splivalo. Representative Scott and Supervisor Jessup also got write-in votes for District Attorney.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE EXTORTION THREAT TRAPS DIXIE YOUTH

Illustration on Page 22, Part I

A $25,000 extortion threat aimed at Shirley Temple, child film actress, was frustrated by Federal officers yesterday with the arrest of a 16-year-old unemployed youth in Atlanta, Ga.

Giving his name as Frank Edward Stephens, the youth admitted having posted a letter last August 1 to "Mrs. Shirley Temple" demanding that she "get the money if you want to keep Shirley."

INTERCEPTED BY STUDIO

The letter evidently intended for the girl's mother, Mrs. George F. Temple, never reached her. It was intercepted in Shirley's fan mail by studio employees and given to John Hanson, chief of the Bureau of Investigation here.

Like a letter received last May from a Nebraska farmboy of the same age as Stephens, the missive was sent to J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal bureau, and agents went to work.

ADMITS WRITING IT

Taken into custody in an Atlanta restaurant, Stephens brushed his sleek black hair nervously and quickly admitted he scrawled the letter with his left hand. The message requested that the money be mailed to a Curtis Palmer in care of an Atlanta grocery.

"I figured the Temples would pay off quicker than anybody else," the youth told officers.

A few days ago the lad telephoned the grocery store and inquired about "a package I am expecting from Hollywood." That call put Federal men on his trail.

Shirley Temple One of
Defendants in $500,000
Action by ex-Trainer

Over the small head of Shirley Temple yesterday broke a $500,000 storm when suit for that amount was filed against her in Superior Court by Jack Hays, who described himself as her discoverer and trainer.

The 8-year-old screen celebrity was named defendant in the action along with her parents, George F. Temple and Mrs. Gertrude Temple, and her employers, the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation.

Also included as defendants are the California Bank and the California Trust Company, which are said to hold large amounts of money, securities and real estate titles in trust for the child film star.

CONTRACT CITED

Hays said in his complaint that he signed a contract with the little girl on January 23, 1932, whereby he agreed to train her for theatrical work and motion pictures in exchange for her services for two years with the right of an option for an additional two years, during which time he would pay her $50 a week when she was actually working.

The contract, according to the complaint, was approved in Superior Court on October 7, 1932 and thereafter, Hays declared, he engaged tutors and directors for Shirley and gave her his services to the end that she was taught drama, voice, cinema technique and English, Spanish and French.

IN ONE-REEL FILMS

During this time she appeared in six one-reel pictures and received all his attentions when she was not actually engaged in work, Hays added.

It was entirely through his efforts, Hays continued, that Shirley became a $5,000,000 personality and was recognized as such throughout the world.

Nevertheless, he said, Miss Temple's parents on October 1, 1933, declined to accept any further services from him and thereafter signed a contract with the film studio, where she had originally been placed only through his own efforts and strictly on a "loan" basis.

From the time she entered the employ of Twentieth Century-Fox until the present time, Hays asserted, the little girl has earned, first, $150 a week, and then $1000 a week. In addition, Hays said, she has been paid in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 from other sources for the use of her name for advertising purposes.

FAMILY SILENT

Besides the damages for asserted breach of contract, Hays demands an accounting and a percentage of her earnings, appointment of a receiver of her property pending the outcome of the litigation and an injunction to restrain all the defendants from disposing of any of the property during this time.

Members of the Temple family declined comment when advised.

Hays Seeks to Nullify Temple Contract Sale for $25 at Auction

Sold for $25
One four-year contract calling for the exclusive professional services of Shirley Temple, child film actress:

Jack Hays, who is suing Shirley, her parents and others for $500,000, yesterday disclosed that it was that sale which removed him from control of the "little girl's" film destinies.

BOUGHT BY FATHER

Examination of Federal court records shows that on October 3, 1933, Hays was in voluntary bankruptcy and that the contract was put up for sale as an asset.

It was bought on that date for $25. The purchaser was George Temple, Shirley's father.

Hays, seeking to set the sale aside, yesterday filed an action in United States District Court declaring that the contract was for personal service and could not be disposed of at such a sale as an ordinary asset.

DESCRIBES CONTRACT

He set forth that he had taken over direction of Miss Temple, had her taught the essentials of acting and in return was granted the contract, beginning January 2, 1932, to run for the next four years.

On October 3, 1933, when the contract was sold for $25, Shirley was a $1,000,000 property, he set forth in the action prepared by Attorneys William C. Ring and M. G. Gallaher.

ASKS ACCOUNTING

Since that, profiting from his instructions, she has developed into a $5,000,000 property, the attorneys set forth, and has become the most valuable child screen personality yet known.

To recompense him for his services, Hays asked that he be granted the $500,000, legal interest and an accounting of her earnings.

ASKS RECEIVER

He also asked that a receiver be appointed to take charge of her affairs pending outcome of his action.

A copy of the contract, attached to the filing, shows Hays was to pay the child actress a minimum salary for making one-reel pictures for him.

In addition, if he contracted her out to other studios he was to pay her 50 per cent of the proceeds, leaving the other 50 per cent for himself.

DUPLICATES SUIT

In yesterday's action, which duplicated in large part a filing in Superior Court on Wednesday, Hays named as defendants Miss Temple, her parents, Fox Film Corporation, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, California Bank, California Trust Company and Harry Ashton, the trustee in bankruptcy who conducted the contract sale.

Judge Takes Motion to Drop $500,000 Hays
Case Under Submission

United States District Judge Hollzer yesterday had under submission a motion to dismiss the $500,000 suit brought against Shirley Temple, child film star, and others, by Jack Hays, agent and producer, in which the latter asserted his contract with the little actress was sold to her father for $25 while Hays was in bankruptcy.

HEARS ARGUMENTS

Judge Hollzer took his decision on the motion under advisement at the conclusion of arguments by attorneys for Hays and those representing Shirley, her parents, George F. and Gertrude Temple, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and Harry Ashton, the trustee in bankruptcy who conducted the sale.

Shortly after Hays filed his petition in bankruptcy in 1933, the contract between himself and Shirley, then practically an unknown, was put up for sale and was purchased by Temple.

SIMILAR SUIT FILED

In seeking to have the sale set aside, Hays contends the contract was for personal services and could not be disposed of as if it were an ordinary asset.

A similar suit was filed in Superior Court by Hays shortly before he commenced the Federal court action.

Film Box Office Survey Puts Shirley Temple in Lead

NEW YORK, Jan. 6. (Exclu- sive)—Shirley Temple, child mo- tion-picture actress, was the larg- est box-office attraction last year, according to a survey announced today by the Motion Picture Herald, trade journal. It was her second consecutive year as the leader.

Robert Taylor, feminine heart- throb, who was eighty-third in 1935, pulled up to number four position. Clark Gable was in second place, succeeding the late Will Rogers.

The ten leaders were: Shirley, Gable, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers as a team, Taylor, Joe E. Brown, Dick Powell, Joan Craw- ford, Claudette Colbert, Jeanette MacDonald and Gary Cooper.

Trainer, for $500,000
Loses on Demurrers

Shirley Temple, recently rated the nation's foremost theater box-office attraction, again came out ahead yesterday when United States District Judge Hollzer dismissed the $500,000 suit brought against her, her parents and others by Jack Hayes, who said he was her discoverer and trainer.

Judge Hollzer's decision sustained arguments of the defendant's attorneys, who maintained among other things that the court is without jurisdiction and that the complaint did not set forth a cause of action.

TRAINING PROVIDED

The contract between the child star and Hayes was executed in January, 1932, to run for four years. Its terms provided that Hayes would train the child and would share in the proceeds from her work.

In October of the year following, the contract was sold to Shirley's father, George Temple, for $25, by a trustee in bankruptcy, Hayes having been adjudicated a bankrupt.

ACCOUNTING ASKED

Some weeks ago Hayes brought suit in Federal court seeking to set aside the sale of the contract and asking for $500,000, interest, and accounting of Shirley's earnings.

Hayes has a similar $500,000 contract suit pending in Superior Court.

OIL NEWS

BY HOWARD KEGLEY

When the Fox motion-picture interests moved to the area between West Los Angeles and Beverly Hills they bought a large block of acreage on which the old Associated Oil Company had a number of oil wells in the Fox Hills Field.

Two of the wells were on film company holdings, so Fox got the royalty. When sound pictures came in the crews made so much noise in pulling the sucker rods to clean out the wells that the studio officials used to howl loudly about noise ruining pictures.

Recently the studio needed room to build bigger stage facilities, so it prevailed upon Tide Water Associated to abandon West Coast No. 1 and No. 2, in which the film company owned the royalty, and now it is out of the oil business.

SHIRLEY BUYS IN

The other day Shirley Temple and King Vidor, as principals in the Temple Investment Company, bought through Reed & Wright, a block of the old Fox Hills field, controlled by Tide Water Associated, and in doing so came into possession of the royalty from one well.

Beverly Hills high school has for some time enjoyed the royalty income from Rodeo No. 106, another of the Fox Hills oil wells, being situated on a parcel of land where the well had been drilled years ago.

Parents Must Answer
Demand for $500,000

Shirley Temple, child film star, yesterday was eliminated as a defendant in a $500,000 suit brought by Jack Hays, film representative, when Superior Judge Kenny so ruled during the course of legal technicalities preliminary to trial.

The little actress was named along with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Temple, by Hays, who asserted he is entitled to one-half her earnings during a two-year period ending January, 1934, by virtue of an asserted contract with the father and mother. The latter must remain defendants and were given ten days to answer.

MAN SEIZED FOR SAYING HE'S SHIRLEY TEMPLE'S FATHER

Albert L. Miller, 36-year-old painter, walked into the District Attorney's bureau of investigation yesterday and announced he wants to be recognized as Shirley Temple's father.

"Who wouldn't," remarked Capt. Jess Winn.

"She was taken away from me nine years ago in Oklahoma and I want her back," persisted Miller, a slight, nervous man.

"EASY," SAYS HE

"But Shirley is only 8 years of age," explained Capt. Winn, motioning to two of his investigators. "How do you explain that?"

"Oh, that's easy," was the reply. "She's really 9, but people just think she is 8. Understand?"

"I see," mused Capt. Winn.

"She even looks like me. Notice her nose is like mine," the caller went on, pulling a photograph of the child actress from his pocket. "Even her hands are the same shape as mine."

HELD FOR OBSERVATION

"I tell you I want her to come live with me again," repeated Miller.

"All right," agreed the officer.

Albert L. Miller

"You go with these two men and they will put you in touch with someone who can help you."

"Thank you," responded Miller, who resides at 5516 Pacific avenue, Huntington Park, as he was led off to Central Jail for psychopathic observation.

Staking his five bodyguards at the door of the small bungalow, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Department of Justice's Bureau of Investigation, opened the door and entered.

He carried no machine gun.

He wasn't even frowning an F.B.I. frown.

For Hoover, who has caught any number of desperadoes, was interviewing a very small chief in her own right—Shirley Temple. The meeting took place in the tiny star's dressing room at the Twentieth Century-Fox studios.

In a ten-minute chat Miss Temple told Hoover that he really ought to have brought her a tommy gun, that he must wear the gold badge of the "Shirley Temple Police" and that he must sign her autograph book.

Hoover, in return, told Miss Temple that he would send her a machine gun from Washington, that he liked dogs and that she is the "sweetheart of the G-Men."

That's what he wrote in the autograph book.

for $500,000 1-18-38

Shirley Temple, child screen star, tossed her famous curly locked head with glee yesterday when word came that a $500,000 lawsuit against her had been denied.

The Appellate Court sustained Superior Judge Kenny in denying $500,000 damages to Jack Hays, agent and producer, who contended he discovered the child actress.

Hays's suit was directed against Shirley, her parents, George and Gertrude Temple, and the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation.

The plaintiff charged that the child star has earned more than $1,000,000 since he assertedly discovered her in 1932.

Shirley Temple Wins Libel Suit

Child Star Awarded
$10,000 for Article
in British Magazine

LONDON, March 22. (U.P.)—A libel suit brought on behalf of Shirley Temple, American child actress, against the now defunct magazine 'Night and Day', was settled in the King's bench division of the English high court today with a $10,000 award for Shirley, $5000 for the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation of America, and $2500 for the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Company of England.

CRITICISED ACTING

The suit concerned an article criticising the child's acting in a recent picture.

Sir Patrick Hastings, attorney for the plaintiff, said that "It was one of the most horrible libels one can well imagine which this heastly publication has written, and it is right to say that every respectable news distributor in London refused to be a party to selling it.

"MONEY NO OBJECT"

"Money is no object in this case. The child has a very large income and the film companies are wealthy concerns. The money will be disposed of in a charitable way."

SHIRLEY TEMPLE FILM DIALOGUE ON CANDY BAR BRINGS SUIT

Reference to a candy bar which figures in Shirley Temple's latest picture yesterday became the basis of a suit for $500,000 damages filed in the New York Supreme Court against the producers by the National Confectioners' Association.

The legal action resulted from a sequence in the picture, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," during which the script assertedly implies that the candy bar is not decent to eat. A chicken leg is substituted pictorially.

COMPLAINT IN SUIT

The association complains in the suit that the scene from the picture presents a false impression of their product in that it libels a bar of candy and holds up the candy profession to ridicule and shame. The action further seeks to restrain the defendant, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, from showing the picture without deletion of the scene in question.

The confectioners, claiming a membership of 325 candy-makers and merchants, say they suffer because other children view the child actress as "a model and eschew everything not considered good for her."

A spokesman for the child and the film company said:

"So—they filed it, did they? You know what it is, don't you—a publicity stunt!

SEQUENCE ATTACKED

"No, the company will have nothing to say about the matter of deleting the scene from the film, the suit itself, nor anything else until they are served with formal notification that the suit has been filed. That goes for Shirley, too, and also her parents."

The sequence that brings Shirley into the tangle of legal actions has to do with her arrival, as Rebecca, at Sunnybrook Farm in company with her stepfather.

Child and parent are greeted by Aunt Miranda who immediately asks if Shirley has had anything to eat.

"Oh, yes, I have," Shirley answers. "Uncle Henry bought me a candy bar."

"A candy bar!" cries the aunt. "Take the child to the kitchen and give her something decent to eat!" The chicken leg is then provided.

SHIRLEY CHATS WITH PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, June 24. (AP) Shirley Temple and President Roosevelt talked about lamb chops today while Secretary Morgenthau cooled his heels in an anteroom.

The child actress, accompanied by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Temple, called at the White House for a chat with the Chief Executive.

As they came out, someone remarked that the visit had delayed Morgenthau's appointment.

"But what we were talking about," Shirley said, "was important."

The lamb chops, it turned out, were some Shirley had for luncheon earlier this week.

Appellate Justices
Reserve Decision on Viewing Picture

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 20. (AP)—Three black-robed justices pondered lengthily today whether to see little Shirley Temple in the film, "Stowaway." Decision finally was reserved.

The problem arose when attorneys for Joan Storm Dezen-dorf offered a private showing of the film in carrying forward their contention that 20th Century-Fox had infringed on her copyright of the play, "Dancing Destiny," which assertedly was submitted to and rejected by the film company in 1935.

The justices—of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals—decided to hear arguments first and then determine whether to see the picture.

The case is on appeal from Federal Court in Los Angeles, where the film company was upheld.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE DESIGNATED ROSE PARADE GRAND MARSHAL

For the first time since its inception 50 years ago, a child will be the grand marshal in the annual Tournament of Roses New Year's Day Parade.

The honor will go to Shirley Temple, 9-year-old screen actress, who will ride in an elaborate flower bedecked conveyance leading a procession of 60 or more floats entered by various communities and organizations of California.

The distinction of heading the golden jubilee parade was conferred on the young actress by Previously such figures as Governor James V. Allred of Texas, Maj. Gen. Charles S. Farnsworth, Admiral William S. Sims, Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz, Mary Pickford, Harold Lloyd and Leo Carrillo have led the procession.

Efforts are being made to make the 1939 spectacle the most elaborate in history as it marks the 50th birthday of the world famous midwinter floral display.

Shirley Temple was born in Santa Monica and has been in motion pictures five years.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE EXTORTION PLOT CONFESSED BY YOUTH

PORTLAND (Or.) Nov. 26. (P) Hinton C. Hardison, 22, C.C.C. enrollee near Galice, Or., was arrested by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents today on a charge of attempting to extort $10,000 from Shirley Temple, juvenile film star.

J. D. Swenson, agent in charge of the Portland district F.B.I. office, announced the arrest and said Hardison had admitted mailing the alleged extortion note on Nov. 17. Swenson said Hardison threatened death for the film player if the money was not paid.

Hardison formerly lived at Albany, Ga., Swenson said. He was taken to Medford for arraignment before the United States Commissioner and later removed to Portland.

Carl Donaugh, United States District Attorney, said a formal complaint charging the youth with use of the mails in an attempt to extort money had been prepared. Donaugh said he would ask $50,000 bail.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE SUIT FILED BY PRODUCER, DISMISSED (E)

Shirley Temple, child film star, wasn't there yesterday, but she was the most important person involved in the legal setup which took place in the court of Superior Judge Joseph W. Vickers.

a 50 per cent interest in the child's earnings, estimated at upward of $500,000.

Indirectly the little actress was a victor after Judge Vickers ruled that a suit for an accounting brought against her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Temple, over her earnings since she became a motion-picture actress should be dismissed.

The suit was brought by Jack Hays, film producer who contended he discovered the child's acting ability in 1933 in Los Angeles while he was promoting a juvenile production.

Ring said the statute under which a case could arbitrarily be dismissed by the court if it was not brought to trial within two years would be the subject of an appeal immediately by him.

In his complaint Hays claimed

Asserting that the child's parents repudiated a contract with him and signed a new one with a motion-picture studio, Jack Hays, dramatics teacher, yesterday filed a new suit in Superior Court for $700,000 against the parents of Shirley Temple.

BREACH CHARGED

Charging breach of contract, Hays in his latest suit sets forth: "On Jan. 23, 1932, at the request of Shirley's parents, he made a contract with them giving him exclusive rights to her services."

In September, 1933, Hays asserts, the parents, Gertrude and G. F. Temple, repudiated this contract, which had been approved in court, and signed a new contract with 20th Century-Fox Studios.

He adds that because of his services for the child, Shirley Temple became the best paid child actress in the world, her services valued in excess of $5,000,000.

$700,000 LOSS

Therefore, considering radio, screen and advertising revenue, he estimates his loss at $700,000.

Shirley Aids Chest Drive

Child Star Becomes Honorary Chairman of Charity Campaign

Shirley Temple yesterday stepped into a real life role of civic leader as she accepted the honorary chairmanship of the 16th annual Community Chest appeal which has for its goal the raising of $3,221,720 for 88 member agencies' support during 1940.

While her mother, Mrs. George Temple, and her schoolteacher listened approvingly, the child actress had her first campaign conference with Dr. A. H. Giannini, general chairman of the appeal, intent on his recital of the needs of the Chest agencies, particularly those pertaining to child-health and family welfare.

SUGGESTS SLOGAN

"We will raise it," was Shirley's suggested slogan for the more than 18,000 volunteer workers being recruited for the campaign which begins officially on Oct. 26 and extends through November.

"As parents, Mr. Temple and myself feel that Shirley, like all other children of school age, should enlist in the Community Chest campaign," Mrs. Temple told Dr. Giannini. "If, through her chairmanship, she can inspire and encourage support from others, she will have gained by an example of good citizenship."

WILL WORK IN DRIVE

At 20th Century-Fox Studio, where Shirley is working, it was said that the star would finish her current picture in time to participate actively in the fund-raising appeal, especially among school children.

Public school division of the Chest campaign will reach more than 350,000 children and nearly 11,000 teachers, with Supt. Kersey as chairman, Dr. Giannini said. Teachers and pupils now are engaged in a publicity campaign, including poster and cartoon contests, use of motion pictures of various phases of welfare activity, and public speakers which will be climaxed by the fund appeal in schools from Nov. 6 to 17.

PLANS ANNOUNCED

First divisions of the appeal to take the field will be establishments which cover solicitation of approximately 200,000 employed persons at their respective places of employment, with Porter Bruck as chairman, and advance gifts and special prospects under leadership of Arch W. Anderson.

Other divisions will follow in close order, said Dr. Giannini, and the first report meeting of the campaign will be held during the second week of November.

NOV 29 1932

That was decided yesterday when the District Court of Appeals denied a motion of the parents of the child actress, Gertrude and George Temple, to dismiss, once and for all, the latest of a succession of suits filed against them by Jack Hays, producer, who claimed he discovered and trained her and deserved $500,000 for his labor.

DISMISSAL OPPOSED

The decision, rendered by Justices John York, William C. Doran and Thomas P. White of Division 1 of the Appellate Court, was made shortly after William C. Ring and M. G. Gallagher, attorneys for Hays, filed an affidavit asking that the Temple's dismissal motion be denied.

SUITS DROPPED

Shirley Out of Pictures

Parents Obtain Release of Child Star, 11, for Sake of Her Future

BY ELZA SCHALLERT

Mrs. George Temple, mother of Shirley Temple, yesterday obtained the release of her 11-year-old daughter from the 20th-Century Fox Film Corp.

Golden-haired Shirley may not be seen on the screen again. Her return to the films will be contingent on the judgment of her father and mother, and their determination of what is best for the child's future.

SETTLEMENT FRIENDLY

Discontinuance of Shirley Temple's contract was arranged in New York between William Goetz, vice-president of 20th-Century Fox, and Frank Orsatti as representative of the Temples.

The settlement was described as amicable and an amount paid by Mr. and Mrs. Temple for obtaining Shirley's freedom was determined to the satisfaction of all parties.

During the life of her contract, it is understood Shirley brought in $20,000,000 to the company through her numerous pictures.

TOPS FOR FOUR YEARS

For four years she was rated the top box office star of the movies, and even during the last poll of exhibitors she was shown ranking fifth. She is the first star to sustain such a record for so long a time, her closest competitor being Clark Gable.

On receiving the news of the closing of the contract, Mrs. Temple in an exclusive interview with this writer said:

"Every decision that Mr. Temple and I make regarding Shirley must take into account not only her present welfare but the future. Above everything else, we have to consider the effect that events in her career have upon her mind and character.

HAPPY NORMAL CHILD

"So far, Shirley has been a happy, normal child who has been given every opportunity and advantage in her work and studio environment. Everything has been in her favor because of her box-office popularity.

"She has been able to maintain that position consistently over a period of years. The studio now feels there has been a change—that Shirley is not now the No. 1 star of the screen. Technically that may be true, but personally we feel that it is not a question of Shirley's personal appeal but rather a matter of stories.

STORIES UNSATISFACTORY

"Admittedly greater discernment is required in the selection of material for Shirley today than when she was just a cute little girl with dimples and twinkling feet. We feel that 20th Century-Fox has made an effort toward finding proper and suitable material, but that the results have not been satisfactory to suit the new growing-up phase in Shirley's life.

"If we could look ahead with some assurance that stories provided for Shirley would insure her progress, that she would be as happy in the future in her work as she has been and is now, we would be pleased to continue the relations with 20th Century-Fox.

PARENTS UNCERTAIN

"However, both Mr. Temple and I feel a little uncertain about that future and consequently we will take no chances, because above everything else we do not want to risk the disturbing of the joy that Shirley has had so far as a result of her studio experience.

"There is also another side to this whole issue and in the end it supersedes any other consideration. And that is, that Shirley now takes part in life with other girls and boys of her own age, in school and during recreation hours, so that she will not develop an isolated viewpoint, which often brings on an unhappy outlook on life.

NEEDS PLAYMATES

"I don't want Shirley ever to say to me: 'Mother, why couldn't I have gone to school just like any other girl?'

"Shirley's education has been complete, even perhaps more thorough than most children's because of the individual attention that she has had from the teachers provided by the Board of Education, but she has lacked the full companionship that most children get during their school years through association with numerous other youngsters of their own age.

WANTS NORMAL LIFE

"I do not think it wise for her to be deprived of the normal, natural benefits that may be derived from mingling and competing with a large number of other children.

"We feel that she may be able to gain more from these associations if she leaves the screen for a time, because she will not then be spotlighted in the eyes and minds of those about her.

MAY RESUME CAREER

"This does not mean that if an opportunity comes along that will spell advancement for Shirley in a professional way we will ignore it, because we are constantly aware of Shirley's abiding love for her work.

"Incidentally, she has never regarded it as work. It has always been play.

"That spark was born in her and it is our duty to see that it is nurtured, not crowded or stifled."

Shirley Temple to Receive Film Bonuses of $300,000

Termination of Shirley Temple's contract with 20th Century-Fox Film Corp., which was effected Saturday night by Mr. and Mrs. George Temple, through their agent, Frank Orsatti, in New York, will include the payment this week to Shirley of bonuses totaling $300,000.

This is in the nature of a trust fund for the young star, and represents extra money that she has earned with her pictures, it is understood, during the past five years.

The money actually will be given to Shirley with the final signing of the papers. Schenck also said that the settlement of the contract was amicable and that the young star's association with the company will not end until the release of her recently completed musical film, "Young People," has been accomplished.

Settlement Terminates Suit Against Shirley Temple

Following settlement out of court on unannounced terms Jack Hays, drama teacher and screen producer, yesterday dismissed his $700,000 damage suit against Shirley Temple, young film actress.

Attorney William C. Ring, representing Hays, and who filed the action against Shirley's parents, Mrs. Gertrude and G. F. Temple, admitted there had been a settlement but declined to state how much money was involved. This is the third court action taken by Hays against the Temples.

In the one dismissed yesterday, which clears the court slate of legal difficulties between the parties involved, Hays sought $700,000 on the ground that Mr. and Mrs. Temple entered into an agreement with him in 1932 giving him exclusive right to Shirley's services for two years.

A year later, he asserted, in violation of their contract, Shirley was signed by a Hollywood studio and that thereafter her screen value reached $5,000,000 and more.

One of the other two actions was filed in the Federal court asking $500,000 damages, but this, too, was dismissed by Hays as was a second, instituted in the State courts.

F.B.I. Now Booked in Psychopathic Ward

Charles Manheim, 35, has been held secretly by police since last week on charges of posing as the father of Shirley Temple. The Times learned last night. Manheim was arrested Wednesday night by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation after a secret investigation. He was taken into custody outside a Hollywood broadcasting studio where Miss Temple appeared on a program.

NO THREAT MADE

When Federal agents found that Manheim had not threatened Miss Temple or attempted to obtain money from either her or her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Temple, by the use of the mails, the defendant was turned over to Los Angeles police.

Police questioned Manheim for a day and a night and then booked him in the psychopathic ward at the General Hospital for a hearing on his sanity.

Manheim has been under the observation of several psychiatrists and will appear tomorrow at 9 a.m. for a hearing before Superior Judge Dudley Valentine.

SOUGHT CONTACT

It was learned that several times before Manheim attempted to contact Miss Temple. At first he was considered the usual annoyance but recently, it was said, his attempts to see the young star became more persistent.

Recently calls have been received at the film studio where she works and at the Temple home. The calls were deemed to be veiled threats and Miss Temple was put under the watchful eye of several bodyguards.

It was shortly after this that the F.B.I. was called into the case.

POSED AS GARDENER

Attention to the suspect first came some months ago when he assertedly posed as a gardener and tried to see Miss Temple at her home. He was intercepted by servants and ushered from the residence grounds.

It was later, police said, that he tried to see her at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio and where he telephoned her.

Shirley Temple Married in Glamorous Ceremony

BY EDWIN SCHALLEBT

A glamorous night wedding—one of the biggest nuptial super-productions ever seen in Hollywood—last night signalized the arrival of Shirley Temple at the matrimonial state.

So enormous a crowd gathered in the street to catch a glimpse of the star and her bridegroom, Sgt. John Agar Jr., at Wilshire Methodist Church that traffic congestion delayed the arrival of the bride's brother, George Temple Jr., and such guests as David Seiznick, Shirley's producer, and Gov. and Mrs. Warren past the appointed time for the ceremony to start. More than 12,000 persons gathered in the street, police estimated.

Traffic at Standstill

Later, a veritable stampede followed when the newly wed Sgt. and Mrs. Agar appeared to have their photographs taken in front of the church. Military and civil police were called on to hold back the surging public while traffic was practically at a standstill in the vicinity of Plymouth and Wilshire Blvds.

Another crowd gathered on Rockingham Road, Brentwood, where a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Temple.

The church ceremony was scheduled to start at 8:30 p.m., but at the appointed time someone noticed that Seiznick and George Temple Jr. had not arrived and the organist nervously stalled with appropriate music until the producer came in—out of breath. A few minutes later George Temple Jr. entered the church. Gov. and Mrs. Warren came in a side door only a few seconds before the start of the ceremony.

Seven Bridesmaids

Shortly afterward the seven bridesmaids proceeded down the aisle, followed by Miss Temple on the arm of her father, who gave the bride away.

As Dr. Willsie Martin, pastor of the church, performed the marriage ceremony, both bride and bridegroom enunciated the responses so that practically every one of the guests in the church could hear. Both seemed very controlled for the occasion and on completion of the marriage rite, the sergeant kissed the new Mrs. Agar as if he really meant it.

Notable at the ceremony was the absence of motion picture stars in any number. Many of the guests were personal friends of the bride and bridegroom. Among the Hollywood figures present was Shirley's neighbor, ZaSu Pitts, at whose home the one-time child star met her fiancé about two years ago.

Decorations throughout the church matched the flowers carried by the bride and her attendants, which were in the main pink and red roses. Miss Temple's wedding dress was of white satin, with a fitted bodice, short sleeves and "little infant" skirt held out at the side by panniers. She wore satin gloves of wrist length and a headdress in the form of a small crown of corded satin, from which fell a silk knit veil.

The bridegroom, best man and the ushers were mostly in uniform. The bridesmaids were attired in gowns of a new color, called "Temple blue," and of shepherdess design. Mrs. George Temple, mother of the bride, wore a dress of slate-gray crepe.

Gov. Warren Attends

Bridesmaids were Joyce Agar, Katharine Ferguson, Phoebe Hearst, Mary Lou Isleib, Betty Jean Lail, Nancy Majors and Constance Webb. The ushers included James Agar, Thomas Gallagher, Ernest Groff, John Herford, John McNeill, George Temple, Jr., and Sgt. Frank Walters. Mrs. Temple was matron of honor.

About 700 guests, including Gov. and Mrs. Warren, attended the reception at the Temple home where the receiving line was so long that it took two hours for some to reach the smiling bride and bridegroom.

Elaborate wedding presents were viewed in the building which the bride, as a child star, used as a playhouse and which will be transformed into a French provincial home to be used as the Agars' residence.

The reception in the garden had a bright moon overhead. There were roses everywhere.

The bridegroom still has a week of his furlough left, he disclosed as he started on a motor trip with Shirley to an undisclosed destination.

Long after the reception was under way, the crowds still gathered in Rockingham Road.

But the huge crowd in the street at the church was the one which really paid tribute to Shirley's fame.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE,
NOW 19, BECOMES
MOTHER OF GIRL

Shirley Temple, since Sept. 19, 1915, Mrs. John Agar, yesterday gave birth to a 7-pound 6-ounce daughter at Santa Monica Hospital, their first child.

The 19-year-old former child film star was resting well, said her physician, Dr. William C. Bradbury. Agar, 26, said the infant will be named Linda Susan.

Shirley was born in the same hospital 20 years ago next April 23.

The Agars reside in what was once Shirley's doll house on the Brentwood estate of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Temple. The play building was enlarged for the bridal couple.

Fame, Friends Ruin Shirley's Love Life

By FLORABEL MUIR

I wasn't surprised when Shirley Temple called me yesterday to announce that she and John Agar had called it a day and she was filing her divorce suit, charging cruelty.

For months there has been talk around Hollywood that the Agars were near the breaking point. There was other talk, too, of both John and Shirley having interests elsewhere, but this was awfully hard to believe.

I made several bets that Shirley was a level headed kid who would hold her marriage craft to the course with steady hands, no matter into what storms it ran.

I lost the bets. The storms grew too large for even Shirley's level head to handle.

As her ship floundered and wallowed in a sea of misunderstanding, another bark drifted across its course with two other confused young people in it.

They were Johnny Johnston and his wife, Kathryn Grayson, singing star of

MGM. OCT 1 1949

In the mixup that followed, one or the other of the ships was bound to be sunk.

Two Different People

How does a little girl who earned a lot more than a million dollars by the time she was six years old grow up to be a happy, healthy normal young lady?

A long time ago, Shirley, who was 21 years old on April 23, found out she had to be two different persons in order to find any happiness.

To the world that went wild over her big hazel eyes, her dimpled smile and her burnished gold curls she was a fairy princess; but to herself and her close pals she was "Butch."

She was "Butch" to Jack Agar, the sergeant in the air force whom she met at March field and who wooed and won her for his bride before she was 18.

Mr. Shirley Temple

I attended their wedding, which was everything a fairy princess should have.

And I wondered as I watched John cutting the cake, with the slim, beautiful Shirley by his side, if the lad had any idea he was marrying an American institution instead of a girl who was going to be known to the world as Mrs. John Agar.

He had never seen Shirley on the screen before he married her.

She had been away from pictures for quite a while attending school and to the boy who fell in love with her she was just a pretty, laughing kid who loved to dance, drink pop and eat hamburgers like other lively youngsters in her class at Westlake school for girls.

Theirs was a war romance, and time was too short for him to think much about the fact that Shirley was big business and high among the 10 most popular American personalities before she could write her name.

When he came back from the war it didn't take him long to realize that he was Mr. Shirley Temple.

This probably amused him for a while, but a disproportionate relationship like that between man and wife ultimately erodes a feller's ego.

It Needed a Giant

It takes a giant of a man to rise above a situation such as confronted young Agar when he decided to cast his lot as a screen actor after he had shed his air force uniform.

Unfortunately for Agar, he was not fashioned in such heroic mold.

"I'm going to get a press agent," he was overheard to remark one night at Cleo's.

"I'm tired of being known as Mr. Shirley Temple."

He must have felt that Shirley was never quite entirely his.

When they were out together

she was always listening to some columnist or fan writer passing by instead of to him.

Wooing the press box became as automatic for her as breathing.

She'd been doing it since she first tripped out on the stage at the Meglin Kiddie school.

Always on Parade

She has been on parade ever since she can remember and of course her husband was in the parade too, but people quite often forgot he was there.

Recently Agar has acted as if he felt that Shirley forgot he was there, too. NOT 14 1937

If he'll study up on English history he'll realize what a guy named Prince Albert had to take when he married Queen Victoria.

Shirley no doubt was pretty shocked when she first learned that Jack was getting an ego buildup from a beautiful girl who lives entirely away from the entertainment world.

Jack could strut and preen his feathers, as any male must do, while with this girl, without the fear of some photographer shoving him out of the way so Shirley's lovely face would be in full view for the camera.

Wife Left at Home

In retaliation, Shirley probably made a few eyes at boys in their social set without thinking much about it, but one of the boys she smiled at often was the singer, Johnny Johnston.

Johnston and Agar played golf at the Riviera country club, and became close friends.

Another pal who played golf with them was Joe Kirkwood, Jr.

About this time, Johnston was singing at Cleo's and his wife, Kathryn Grayson, was going to have a baby.

"I didn't feel very good and thought Shirley wasn't very kind to invite Johnny to go with them to Sherry's after Cleo's closed when I was home all alone," Kathryn told me.

"Shirley had a baby and she should have known how I felt. I told her so, too. Johnny went to the Agar house one time when we had a spat."

Shirley Explains It

"Kathryn is pretty silly to take that attitude," Shirley told me.

"Johnny did ask Jack Agar if he could come to our house to stay a few days when he was having trouble with his wife.

"He stayed in the chauffeur's quarters, but Jack was always there in the house as long as he stayed.

"It is terrible to work so hard all your life to maintain a good reputation and then have someone get it all dirtied through a lot of misunderstandings.

"I want to have our divorce on a dignified and high plane for our little daughter's sake. I could fight dirty, too, if I wanted, but I'm not going to."

Listening In on It

Kathryn precipitated quite a little talk when she visited the apartment of Joe Kirkwood, Jr. a short time before his marriage to Cathy Downs about a week ago and eavesdropped on a telephone conversation he was having.

"I had heard he was telling columnists about trouble between me and Johnny," Kathryn said to me yesterday. "I was so angry I went to see him to talk about it.

"When Johnny comes home he'll poke him in the nose and if he doesn't, my brothers will."

-In retreating from the back yard at Kirkwood's place Kathryn fell and hurt her arm.

"I wish she had hurt her neck," Mr. Kirkwood remarked to me yesterday in discussing the visit. "She and Johnny Johnston are welcome to each other.

Innocent Bystander

"I'm amused about this talk of nose poking. Maybe I'll do a little of that myself.

"I was just trying to help everybody out and persuade Kathryn that she was wrong in thinking Shirley was too interested in Johnny.

"That's what you always get for trying to help out. I just got married myself and all I want is to be left alone."

Shirley wasn't so complimentary about Joe as he was about her.

"Just find out all about Joe Kirkwood," she told me. "Then print it. Just find out all about him."

I asked her what she meant, but she refused to elaborate.

All Straightened Out

Kathryn told me that Johnny is doing okay in New York with a spot on Milton Berle's TV show and a chance to sing at the Waldorf Astoria, "but if there's any trouble about Shirley Temple he'll come right away."

"Johnny and I are all straightened out now and there isn't anything going to happen to our marriage."

In New York Johnny told the New York Daily News, "There is a certain fellow in Hollywood who is trying to make trouble for me with my wife and when I get back out there I'm going to punch him in the nose."

He wouldn't tell who he was thinking about.

If all this kid stuff was happening in some little town between a bunch of young people who weren't in the public eye like these beautiful children are, it could more than likely be straightened out in a jiffy by the minister or a close family friend.

New Dolls for Linda

But in the perfumed, tropical winds of the glamour capital of the world it is being blown into a full-sized marital wreck, for one of the couples at least.

And "Butch" will pick up the pieces of her broken dreams and try to find happiness in the honeymoon house where she lived with John.

She will play with her baby, Linda Susan, who is just as lovely a doll as any of the hundreds stored in the basement room below.

They are dolls from all over the world showered on Shirley by those who loved her everywhere.

I once asked Shirley if she will give her dolls to her baby when she is old enough to play with them.

"No, I'll let her have her own dolls. I want her to have a life all her own. I don't want her to be a remake of Shirley Temple.

"I hope she'll always have more time to herself than I ever had."

Thanks to the shrewd management of Shirley's father, George Temple, the gal will never have to worry about paying the rent or getting coffee and doughnut money.

The world owes Shirley a lot of happiness because she gave it so much sunshine and laughter and yarn, glowing memories.

Shirley Temple Seeks Divorce From Agar

Hollywood Rocked by Word of Suit Filing;
Cruelty Charged, but She Asks No Alimony

Shirley Temple, a few short years ago the dimpled, toddling highest-paid juvenile in the history of the screen, filed suit for divorce yesterday in Superior Court.

The news rocked a Hollywood which still recalls as though it were only yesterday the ingratiating little blonde who for four years, from 1935 through 1938, was the leading box office attraction of the movie industry.

But the decision seemed irrevocable for Shirley, now 21 years of age, and for her 28-year-old husband, John Agar. Her complaint charges him with cruelty but Shirley asks for no alimony and for no allowance for the support of their daughter, Linda Susan, born Jan. 30 of last year.

Tears in Her Eyes

"For the last two and a half years," said Shirley yesterday with tears in her eyes, "we have been trying to make this marriage work. We both tried hard—we really did. But it just didn't work."

But Hollywood could recall other and apparently happier days of a year ago.

"We have never exchanged a single harsh word," Shirley said at that time. "Two careers in one family work out wonderfully for us."

Miss Temple's complaint is a masterpiece of brevity. It was prepared by Attys. George Stahlman and Grant B. Cooper. It sets forth that Miss Temple and Agar came to the parting of ways only the day before.

In a single paragraph the lawyers informed the court that Miss Temple and Agar were married Sept. 19, 1945, and that they lived together four years and 23 days.

Much more was written on that wedding day four years ago. The ceremony was performed at the Wilshire Methodist Church. It was attended by some 500 invited guests, including Gov. and Mrs. Warren, and there were some 12,000 movie fans elbowing for a glimpse of the couple outside the church.

Later there was a reception, likewise attended by the Govern-nor and Mrs. Warren, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Temple, on Rockingham Road in Brentwood.

Shirley was then only 17 and her marriage license had required the formal consent of her parents. Agar was 24 and a sergeant in the Army Air Forces. He had been employed in a chemical laboratory in Chicago when he enlisted in 1942. He met his teen-age bride while he was stationed at Riverside's March Field.

But none of that is in the two-page divorce petition. The document demands very little—a decree of divorce, custody of the 20-month-old child and return of Miss Temple's maiden name.

"Since the marriage of the parties defendant has treated plaintiff with extreme cruelty and has wrongfully inflicted upon her grievous mental suffering," is all the petition says on the subject of cruelty.

No Community Property

The complaint specifically states that Miss Temple and Agar own no community property—presumably because they have kept their earnings from mingling. At any rate, Atty. Stahlman expressed the belief that no dispute over financial matters will develop. Agar himself seemed to confirm that belief.

"I have nothing to say other than that the thing can be handled in a dignified manner," Agar said when told that the petition was ready. "I haven't thought it out clearly yet, but I don't think I will contest Shirley's divorce suit."

Agar's marriage to Shirley is leaving him a changed man. With Shirley's help he had become a full-fledged film actor. In his first two films, "Fort Apache" and "Adventure in Baltimore," she had appeared with him "to give him confidence." But she was not in the cast of his most recent picture, "I Married a Communist."

Shirley's announcement Thursday that she was suing her handsome 28-year-old husband, John Agar, for divorce was all the answer that was available.

That and the fact that her attorney reported she was charging extreme cruelty.

The rumormongers had lots of answers and avenge Sunset Strip night-club booths and gilded restaurants bubbled with them.

But they remained rumors.

The blond actress, a star since she was in swaddling clothes, had only this statement to make.

Shirley Temple Divorce Trial Set for Dec. 5

Shirley Temple's suit for divorce against John Agar yesterday was ordered to trial on Dec. 5 in Superior Judge Roy L. Hernáez's court.

The hearing was set at the direction of Presiding Judge Clarence L. Kincaid after he had been informed that Agar had filed no answer within the 10-day limit after being served with Miss Temple's complaint last Oct. 13.

The onetime film juvenile charges cruelty against the former Air Forces sergeant who recently became a film actor himself.

Miss Temple's attorneys, George Stahlman and Grant B. Cooper, said they had reached virtually a complete financial settlement with Agar's lawyer, Clore Warne.

Miss Temple and Agar were married here Sept. 19, 1943. They parted only the day before she filed her suit. Agar is at present in New York. He and Miss Temple have one child, Linda, 21 months old.

SHIRLEY'S PLEA FOR DIVORCE DUE MONDAY

Shirley Temple's suit for divorce against John Agar will be heard Monday at 9:15 a.m. by Superior Court Judge Roy L. Herndon in Department 51. 2-5-4

Her attorney, Grant B. Cooper, yesterday reported that only one paper, relating to a trust agreement, remains to be signed by Agar, now in Buffalo, N.Y.

Cooper said the document was flown to Agar last night and should be returned before the hearing Monday.

The actress and her 28-year-old husband were married here Sept. 19, 1945. They parted the day before she filed her divorce complaint last Oct. 13. They have one child, Linda Susan, 22 months old.

Divorce Granted to Shirley Temple

Actress Tells of Suicide Idea; Says Husband Agar Misbehaved

"I was going to drive the car over the cliff or something. Instead, I went to the doctor."

Shirley Temple, 21, said these lines quietly in her role of plaintiff yesterday, and she was granted a divorce from John Agar, 28, actor.

She told a long story of embarrassments before friends, of a husband who went home drunk with lipstick on his face when she was expecting their baby.

Trouble between her and "Jack" began five months after their Sept. 19, 1945, marriage, she told Superior Judge Roy L. Herndon, who granted the decree. Agar began failing to appear for dinner, she said, and he got home later and later until 4 a.m. was not unusual.

Two months after she began to plan on their child, she said, he got home at 4 in the morning, with lipstick on his face.

"He was very intoxicated," she said in answer to a question by her attorney, George Stahlman.

'He Brought a Girl'

Four months before their baby was born, she said, she thought her husband was playing cards with his men friends. Instead, she said:

"He brought a girl into the bedroom at 1:30 in the morning. He said, 'Come on, let's all go to a party.' I'd been in bed since 10 o'clock. After all—I didn't feel like going out. They went, and he came home at about 4, after I'd given up staying awake."

Before that, though, before they became prospective parents, she said, she consulted a physician regarding her nervousness and their inability to get along.

"One time the doctor talked to both of us and tried to figure what was wrong," she said. "But when we were with people Jack would always say he hadn't done anything wrong."

Then there was the night when he came home to dinner, "drunk and very belligerent."

"After dinner, I jumped into the car. I was going to drive the car over the cliff or something. Instead I went to the doctor."

The chestnut-haired girl with big brown eyes said it so quietly that the small roomful of spectators could scarcely be certain they'd heard aright.

'You Get Embarrassed'

She told more. Prompted by Stahlman, she said she tried to go out with her husband as much as possible, "to movies and things—but you know—you get embarrassed." Two weeks after the baby was born, she said, she dressed up in a new frock to go out for the first time—and "he got home about 2 o'clock."

"You didn't go out at all?" asked Stahlman.

"No."

When she telephoned her husband's golf club, she said, her call "would usually be bounced all around the club." One night, she said, Agar left her at a table with four other persons after whispering, "I've got to go see my girl."

Dancing and Kissing

That night, he had an accident in his car, she said, and got home at 6 a.m. At another party, he stopped dancing with his wife, saying, "Oh, you're too short," she testified, and he spent the rest of the evening dancing and kissing "an unmarried girl," even taking his partner to their home.

"Did that embarrass you?" queried her counsel.

Shirley looked around at the crowded courtroom, at the silent judge, at the newspapermen busily writing.

"Of course, it did. But yet you keep thinking of the baby all the time."

Her husband, she said, told their friends:

"You can't have any fun with Shirley. She won't get drunk."

After that, she said, "he went out and got drunk and fell downstairs, upset a plant and passed out in the driveway."

Her witness, Mrs. Sidney Franklin Jr., who gave her name as Mary Alice Franklin and said she and Miss Temple went to school together, corroborated.

She told of Agar's interest in "another girl" at a party at The Chanticleer, and of a woman guest who told him "go back to your wife and stop making a fool of yourself."

On the Agars' fourth wedding anniversary, she said, there was a party, and at a restaurant when the orchestra honored the pair with an anniversary selection, "Shirley was sitting alone at the table and Jack was over at the bar."

Anniversary Cake

They went to King's restaurant, and the chef made a special anniversary cake for them, Mrs. Franklin said. Instead of cutting it with ceremony, she testified, Agar instructed the management to put the cake in a box so they could take it home.

"Jack said to Shirley, 'You're repulsive. You're horrible. Why don't you let your hair grow long?'" Mrs. Franklin told the court.

Shirley, wearing a navy blue hat with fly-away veil on the back of her shoulder-length chestnut tresses, nodded as her friend said it.

Judge Makes Speech

Besides her witness and Stahman, the young woman was accompanied to court by Atty. Grant Cooper and her father, George Temple, investment counselor.

The Judge, in granting the decree, recognized that though Agar defaulted, the occasion was not usual. He made a formal speech in recognition of the importance of the plaintiff:

"This court believes that a due regard for legitimate public interest in this case not only justifies but requires some comment. This court cannot fail to take notice of the well-known fact that this plaintiff occupies a special place in the hearts and affections of millions of people not only in this State, but throughout the country.

'Vital Public Concern'

"Therefore," Judge Herndon continued, "this appears to be a peculiarly fitting and appropriate occasion upon which to reassert and redeclare the vital public concern with the problem of divorce and the urgent need for giving serious study to the environmental and sociological factors which contribute to it.

"We all know that the integrity of the family lies at the very foundation of the welfare, tranquility and good order of our society. Accordingly, this court is faithful to the declared and established policy of this State, that no divorce shall be granted except upon grounds which our law recognizes as sufficient.

'Fairness to Plaintiff'

"Fairness to this plaintiff, however, requires this court to declare that the evidence which has been offered here, the plaintiff's demeanor and the very evident sincerity with which she testified have convinced the court the grounds . . . are serious and substantial . . . but also that the plaintiff has made every reasonable effort to save her marriage and to avoid necessity for this proceeding."

Custody of Child

The divorce was granted, and Miss Temple was given custody of the child, Linda Susan, 22 months old, together with $100 a month for the child's support. Under an out-of-court property settlement agreement, Agar will invest his half of community property in a trust fund for the child.

Clore Warne, Agar's attorney, sitting as a friend of the court, asked leave to make a statement inasmuch as the Judge had spoken at length.

He stated that his client had made no attempt to justify himself with the public since the separation, and had "conducted himself as a gentleman throughout all the conferences for settlement." Also, he said, Agar had at heart the welfare of his child and his wife.

Agar Says Shirley Fails to Tell 'Real' Trouble

BUFFALO, N.Y., Dec. 5 (U.P.)—John Agar, somber-faced and obviously, heavy-hearted, reluctantly declared tonight that testimony Shirley Temple Agar gave in obtaining a divorce from him "reflects incorrectly our real differences."

"I still don't want to talk about it," the handsome, former Army Air Force sergeant told the United Press in a backstage interview at a local theater where he is making a personal appearance.

'There Are Two Sides'

"As usual, there are two sides to the controversy," Agar said in a low voice.

"There is much I might have said and might say now. However, as I see it, no constructive purpose could be served by re-cremations or airing our respective sides in public."

"This is the course I have followed since our separation and I still want to follow it despite possibly wrongful implications which might result from what she said today."

"I am naturally greatly concerned with the welfare of our child and trust that what has happened will ultimately result for the best to all of us concerned."

Agar begged off when photographers requested him to pose holding a picture of his now former spouse.

"I don't think that would be right," he said.

Stage Appearances

Agar, who made his stage appearances in real trouser fashion despite the unhappy condition of his personal life, was noticeably glum throughout the day. He appears in the stage revue as a singer and in two character roles.

Film Actor Rory Calhoun, who is in the show with Agar, said

"John hasn't spoken 10 words all day offstage."

"This thing has obviously upset him a great deal," Calhoun commented.

Another member of the troupe, Rhonda Fleming, said she felt "sorry for both Shirley and John."

"I know something of what they're going through," she said. "I had marital troubles myself."

Agar said he received a telephone call from Los Angeles today but declined to say who called.

"But it wasn't from Shirley," he said almost inaudibly.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE SILENT ON RECONCILIATION TALK

John Agar has been talking about the possibility of a reconciliation, but Shirley Temple doesn't want to comment on it.

"Maybe if all this furor quiets down, a reconciliation isn't impossible."

That's what Agar was quoted as saying in Chicago when he left there by plane yesterday for Los Angeles. He said it to a Chicago newspaper reporter who was a school chum of his.

Agar Voices Hope

"Look," Agar reportedly told the reporter, "take it easy on your story. This is pretty important to me. I sure hope Shirley and I can get back together again."

"Look," Shirley said here yesterday. "I don't want to comment on this. You understand. I just don't think I should."

"Just say that I plan to be home on Christmas and that he's welcome to come and see the baby." This later remark was in response to the report that when he left Chicago, Agar was carrying two imported French dolls as Christmas presents for the couple's daughter, Linda Susan, 11 months. Shirley was granted an interlocutory divorce decree from Agar in Superior Court here last Dec. 5. They were married Sept. 10, 1945.

Shirley Temple Has New Date; Honolulu Agog

HONOLULU, March 7 (AP) — Shirley Temple has been dating one of the local young bachelors, and Honolulu is agog.

She was quick to deny, however, that there is any romance with Charles Black, scion of a wealthy San Francisco family.

Black, 31, is the son of James B. Black, president of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co.

"She's a good friend and we have a lot of fun together, that's all," Black said. "If you're a bachelor, you know, all you have to do is go out with the same girl a few times and everybody in Honolulu is talking."

Miss Temple and Black have been seen in some of the better eating and dancing establishments here.

She was divorced from John Agar last December and has been here for almost six weeks with her small daughter, Linda Susan.

She said she may be going home "in a few days."

SHIRLEY TEMPLE TROTH UNLIKELY, SAYS MOTHER

A rumor that Shirley Temple will become engaged to Charles Black, young Honolulu pineapple executive, was discounted last night by her mother, Mrs. George Temple.

Mrs. Temple, vacationing with her daughter at Del Monte Lodge, said the actress has been dating Black but added the rumor of an engagement is ridiculous.

Divorce Not Final

She pointed out that her daughter's divorce from Actor John Agar will not become final until next December.

Asked about a reported meeting in San Francisco with Black's parents, Mrs. Temple replied she never had met them.

'Complete Surprise'

And in San Francisco, Black's mother was quoted as saying, "The report of the forthcoming engagement is a complete surprise to me. As far as I know, it was made up out of whole cloth."

Black is the son of James Black, San Francisco utilities executive. He and the former child star met when she was vacationing earlier this year in Honolulu.

Shirley Temple Gets Her Final Decree Today

Shirley Temple, who becomes a free woman today when her divorce from John Agar becomes final, yesterday said: "I have no plans—marital or otherwise."

That, of course, excepts her daughter Susie, 2½, who is anticipating a big Christmas, the 22-year-old film star added.

Miss Temple had no comment to make on rumors that she may marry Charles Black whom she met in Honolulu last year. Black socially prominent, moved to Los Angeles after their meeting and the two are seen together often.

Shirley Temple's Divorce Decree Becomes Final

Shirley Temple, the 22-year-old veteran of nearly 18 years in the screen, yesterday became gaily a young lady without a husband.

At her request a final decree of divorce was entered in Superior Court in her favor against John Agar, 29, the onetime army sergeant who turned film star.

Miss Temple won the interlocutory decree Dec. 5, 1949, when she testified that Agar neglected her and their child, Linda Susan, now 2½, and often drank to excess and embarrassed her in public.

She and Agar were married Sept. 19, 1945.

In recent months Miss Temple has been reported romantically interested in Charles Black, member of a wealthy San Francisco family, whom she met in Honolulu shortly after granting the interlocutory decree.

SHE'S MRS. BLACK, NOW

Shirley Temple Wed to TV Man in North

DEC 17 1950

Shirley Temple, 22, was married yesterday to Charles Black, 30, son of a San Francisco utilities executive, in a simple ceremony at the home of the bridegroom's parents in Del Monte.

The ceremony was performed by Superior Judge Henry G. Jorgensen of Monterey County. It was witnessed only by immediate members of the families.

Mrs. James B. Black, mother of the bridegroom, made the announcement.

She declared that the couple left the home directly after the ceremony.

Gone on Honeymoon

"They have gone on their honeymoon," she said, "and I can't say where."

Miss Temple was attired in a gray suit with matching hat, Black in a blue business suit.

Present for the rites, it was reported, were the bride's mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. G. F.

Temple, her brother Jack and his wife, of Phoenix, the bridegroom's parents and his brother James Jr. and his wife and three children.

The ceremony was in complete contrast to the wedding of Miss Temple to John Agar Jr., Sept. 19, 1945.

That wedding, held at night in the Wilshire Methodist Church, drew throngs and was described at the time as one of the biggest nuptial superproductions ever seen in Hollywood.

Miss Temple received her final divorce decree from Agar last Dec. 7.

The bridegroom, a Stanford graduate, now is a television company executive in Hollywood and San Francisco. It was his first marriage.

Miss Temple met him in Honolulu during a vacation trip to the Hawaiian Islands with her 3-year-old daughter Linda Susan Agar. At that time Black was associated with a Honolulu pineapple firm.

Since then they have been seen together frequently and their marriage has long been rumored, although families of both principals repeatedly denied the reports.

Earlier in the day the young couple escaped injury in an automobile collision here.

As far as they know now, Miss Temple said, they will live in Los Angeles — then she mentioned "the present world situation" uneasily. Her husband is a lieutenant commander in the active Naval Reserve.

Police said the actress and her new husband were involved in a crash shortly after midnight in the Pacific Fleights district with a car driven by an Army private.

Damage to both cars was minor, the officers said, but Black, 31-year-old son of James Black, president of Pacific Gas & Electric Co., was concerned over whether the frame of their 1950 Cadillac convertible was sprung.

Shirley Temple Now Mother of Son, Too

WASHINGTON, April 26 (AP) — Shirley Temple, one-time child movie star, became the mother of a son today.

A 6-pound 12-ounce son was delivered by Caesarian section at Bethesda (Md.) Naval Hospital.

Miss Temple is the wife of Lt. Comdr. Charles Black, a Naval Reserve officer now on active duty in the Navy Department here.

This is their first child. Miss Temple also has a 3-year-old daughter Linda by an earlier marriage to John Agar Jr.

Shirley Temple's New Son Nearly Cost Life

Shirley Temple's new son nearly cost the onetime child actress her life, it was learned here yesterday. Her husband telephoned her family here and her family called Dr. William C. Bradley, who delivered her first baby, Linda, 3, and asked him to fly back to Washington. Dr. Bradley stayed 3 days at the hospital.

The baby was born last April 28 by Caesarean section in Bethesda Naval Hospital, Washington, because her husband, Lt. Comdr. Charles Black, is attached to the Navy Department office in Washington.

At first her condition was believed normal. A week later, however, she was seriously ill and it was discovered an embolism had developed in her blood stream and entered the pulmonary artery.

For a time her condition was regarded as critical.

"I found her in a very bad way because she was pregnant and the doctors were not sure she was going to improve at all. I stayed just to give her assurance."

SKETCH 3780

Issued December 1, 1952

SHIRLEY TEMPLE

Actress

Born April 23, 1928

(By The Associated Press)

It was as a winsome, golden-haired tot that Shirley Temple charmed her way into the hearts of movie-goers everywhere. From 1935 through 1938 she was the nation's top boxoffice attraction. As she grew up, her blonde curls were succeeded by soft chestnut hair and she became a graceful portrayer of mature parts.

This irresistible film moppet was the greatest child star of them all, an idol not only to a screen public all over the world, but to her fellow workers as well. When she retired temporarily from the screen at the age of 12, she reputedly had more than a million dollars of her own and it was said she had brought 20 millions of profits to Twentieth Century-Fox Studios.

Shirley Temple was an actress at 4, a star at 5 and for several years the most famous little girl in the world. She won four straight Academy Awards for the best performance by a juvenile.

Her temporary retirement came as it must to all child stars as they enter the "awkward age." She had then finished her 24th picture for Fox in seven years.

The wonder child's mother welcomed the rest from movie-making, feeling that Shirley was entitled to "those normal, natural benefits that may be derived from mingling and competing with a large number of other children." Her schooling had been carried on under supervision of the Los Angeles Board of Education by a teacher paid by the studio.

Unaffected by Fame

Miss Temple had come out of her movie success relatively normal. She later credited her mother for this.

"My mother saw to it that I led as normal a life as possible," she said. "My studio work was done like play. Mother explained the scenes to me and I learned the lines for fun."

The young actress attended the Westlake School for Girls, from which she was graduated in 1945. She did not go to college.

Producer David Selznick brought her back to movie popularity, though not, of course, to the stature she had as a child star. He presented her as a comely young woman with a flair for comedy.

Events continued to move along speedily for her. She became a wife at 17, a mother at 19, a divorcee at 21. Then at 22 she married again and announced she had definitely retired from films.

"I have signed a new contract—with Charles—the only contract I have," she said. She was referring to Charles Alden Black, son of the president of the Pacific Gas & Electric Company. Her previous husband was John Agar, scion of an Illinois meat packing family.

Her Movie Rise

Shirley Jane Temple was born in Santa Monica, Calif., April 23, 1928, the third child of George F. and Gertrude Temple. The other children were boys. One, Jack, was 14, and the other, George, Jr., was 10 at the time of her birth. Mrs. Temple had always wanted a daughter.

With the boys at ages which did not require constant care, Mrs. Temple devoted much of her time to her daughter. Shirley started dancing almost as soon as she could walk. When the child was 3, her mother enrolled her in a dancing school.

A talent scout saw Shirley when he visited the dancing school. Soon she was appearing in baby comedies. She graduated to bits in feature pictures. Then came a series of two-reelers in which she played the baby sister of an adolescent boy. Those landed her a role in a Fox musical called "Stand Up and Cheer."

Warner Baxter, Madge Evans, John Boles and James Dunn were the stars in that. Shirley was just another cute kid actress. But the little girl with bobbing, yellow curls, big dimples and a broad smile proved in the music recording room that she was more than just another cute kid actress. She lispily sang a song entitled "Baby Take a Bow." Mrs. Temple was asked if she would consider a contract for $150 a week.

Becomes a Star

After "Stand Up and Cheer," Shirley was lent to Paramount for "Little Miss Marker," probably the best-remembered of all her pictures. This was a Damon Runyon story of a poor, broken-down horse player who left his little girl as a marker—or security—for a horse bet on credit with his bookmaker.

There was an avalanche of fan mail for the little star and she soon was given top billing. On her 11th birthday 135,000 persons sent gifts or messages to her. Among her pictures were:

"Baby Take a Bow," "Bright Eyes," "The Little Colonel," "Our Little Girl," "Curly Top," "The Littlest Rebel," "Captain January," "Poor Little Rich Girl," "Dimples," "Stowaway," "Wee Willie Winkie," "Heidi," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Little Miss Broadway," "Just Around the Corner," "The Little Princess," and "Susannah of the Mounties."

The later pictures in which she appeared included: "Since You Went Away," "I'll Be Seeing You," "Kiss and Tell," "That Hagen Girl," "Honeymoon," "The Bachelor and the Bobby-Soxer," "Miss Annie Rooney," "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College," and "Kiss for Corliss."

Besides her income from pictures, the young actress received royalties from the sale of "Shirley Temple dolls" and "Shirley Temple dresses." Her father, a banker, handled the financial end of her affairs.

Her Two Marriages

The 17-year-old Miss Temple and Agar were married in the early autumn of 1945 in the Wilshire Methodist Church in residential Los Angeles. Gov. Earl Warren and his family were among the guests. Agar then was 24 years old and a sergeant in the Air Force. There were 500 invited guests, but a crowd of 5,000 gathered outside the church.

In January of 1948 the former child actress added motherhood to her roles. A daughter was born to her in the Santa Monica hospital and was named Linda Susan. The Agar marriage ended in divorce in the winter of 1949.

Miss Temple's maiden name was restored by the decree and she received custody of the child.

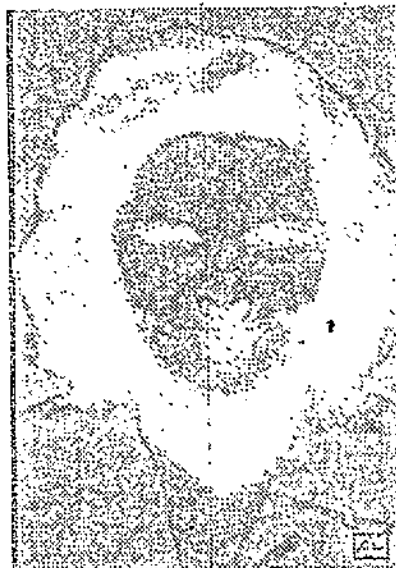

On a trip to Honolulu she met Black. Soon they were going together and in December of 1950 were married in a civil ceremony at Del Monte, Calif., a few days after her divorce became final. She was 22 and Black was 31. It was Black's first marriage.

In the spring of 1952, the former child actress became a mother for the second time. A son was delivered by Caesarian operation at the Bethesda, Md., Naval Hospital. Her husband, a Naval reserve officer, was on active duty in the Navy Department at Washington at the time.

For a time after the operation she was in serious condition from complications. The son was named Charles A. Black, Jr.

Shirley Temple to Host Series of Shows on TV

BY HEDDA HOPPER
Shirley Temple has just confirmed to a long distance telephone that she is coming out of retirement to be hostess-narrator on a series of 21 one-hour dramatic and musical fairy tales on television. / - 5 - 5

She said furthermore that she probably will play the leading role in at least one of the 60-minute shows, perhaps the first one in the series if it is to her liking.

New Wife and Mother

When I received a telegram from New York reporting that Shirley had signed with Henry Jaffe Enterprises for the TV series, I called her at her home in Atherton, Cal.

"I thought you'd retired," I said to this former great child star who now, at 29, is a charmingly youthful wife and mother.

"Oh, I retired a long time ago," she laughed. "But this is something I want to do."

No Date Set

Besides, while the shows will be produced live from New York, arrangements have been made whereby Shirley's role as hostess and narrator can be filmed in Hollywood. This, she figures, would take only one day a month.

No definite starting date

As a happy suburban housewife in Atherton, 25 miles southeast of San Francisco, Shirley is married to Charles Black. They have two children of their own and Shirley has a third whose father was her first husband, Actor John Agar.

It'll be nice to have her back.

"How does your family feel about all this?" was a natural question.

Shirley Temple's Show Has Brilliant TV Debut

BY CECIL SMITH
Times Entertainment Editor
Shirley Temple, the marvelous moppet of another age, returned to show business last night as hostess and narrator of a brilliant new television series called Shirley Temple's Storybook.

Judging by the initial presentation of the ancient French legend, "Beauty and the Beast," Shirley and her show should be around for years to come. Because this was one of the pleasantest hours the little electronic medicine show has given us this season. It will be presented monthly in color during the next 12 months.

The first show brought to the screen a delicate and beautifully conceived tale that made no compromise with this Atomic Age, but told truly and simply a fairy story, woven of the stuff of childhood dreams.

Gentle Realism

With a growling, growling Chariton Heston, wearing a hairy, fanged head that was half lion, half bear, as the Beast, and with the radiant Clare Bloom as Beauty, the play unfolded in a gentle, wide-eyed realism that left no doubts in even the toughest and most literal of viewers that magicians still cast magic spells and that love can transform a monster into a prince.

The old fairy story was told much as we remember it. A merchant (E. G. Marshall) with three daughters, two vicious and selfish (June Lockhart and Barbara Baxley) and the third an angel

(Miss Bloom), wanders in a storm into a strange foreboding castle where there lives a beast that walks as a man.
He steals a rose for his daughter, Beauty, and the Beast's wrath descends upon him. However, the Beast agrees not to kill him if he will send one of his daughters in his place.

The daughter who agrees to come is, naturally, Beauty.
She learns to love the beast for his kindness and his good heart, saying that "in many a man there is the heart of a monster, but there can be in a monster the heart of a man."

After a great deal of hanky-panky in which the beast almost dies (for love), she agrees to marry him and he is transformed into a prince.

Miss Temple as hostess seemed little changed from the tiny beauty who won the hearts of the world on the screen 20 years ago. Wearing a flowing, shimmering gown, she sang the theme song of the series in a small but pleasant voice that reminded many a watcher of her days of singing "The Good Ship Lollypop."

She narrated the tale with a childlike enthusiasm that sounded much as if she were telling it to her own three youngsters.

Joseph Schrank adapted this story from the old French tale and Kirk Browning directed as if he believed every word.

The Best Thing In Life

By SHIRLEY TEMPLE BLACK

FEB 16 1959

It's a long way from child star to child-raising, but this actress learned something on the way

These days juvenile problems demand, and get, a great deal of attention. The voices and pens of all sorts of experts have been telling us about the problems of youth. The finger of guilt points in every direction.

However, almost everyone seems to believe that parental influence can go a long way toward preventing the rebellious tendency of young people today. My husband and I certainly agree with this, as do most other American parents.

We believe firmly in the essential goodness of all children. But theirs is a fragile goodness, easily shattered by the ones who love them most, their parents. Too much supervision may encourage weakness; too little guidance and they become bewildered. Over-indulgence makes them weaklings, and harshness encourages rebellion. Being a successful parent is a tricky business, as we all know. Maybe that is why we all have little signposts to mark our way.

My husband and I have a particular favorite among our own signposts.

It is neither original nor startling; quite the contrary. It is simply: kindness.

We have found that everyday kindness is a practical key to happy and productive living. Now I don't for a moment mean to confuse kindness with softness. For instance we certainly want Charles Jr. to run a football with his knees high and a stiff arm for the tackler. But we'd also like to see him give that same tackler a helping hand after the whistle.

We constantly stress to our three children the spiritual nature of kindness. Understanding, sympathy, compassion and forgiveness all spring from kindness. Anyone who is kind soon finds that kindness is returned to him, providing a double satisfaction.

Kindness, as an everyday habit, leads directly to successful and happy growth in children. In our family this is one of the most important building blocks in the game of living which all parents and their children play.

Shirley, Family and Friends Excited Over Success in New Facet of Career

BY REDDA HOPPER

I waited a week after Shirley Temple made her debut on television in her fairy tale series, then called her at her Atherton (Cal.) home to ask how her family and friends had reacted.

"The family is still acting out the first one," she replied. "Charles Jr. plays Beast, Lori is Beauty and

Illustrated on Page 1, Part IV

Susan, my oldest, does the narration. And they're pretty good, too. My friends have been complimentary. Six of them went to Hollywood to see the show. Naturally I saw little of them there, but we returned home together by plane. We were all so happy, gay and giddy the other passengers must have thought we were crazy.

"My husband Charles was thrilled and amazed at the quality of the production and so was I. I still can't understand how four cameras shooting at the same time can be so quiet and why they don't bump into each other. I'm looking forward to the rest of the programs."

Shirley said she was so excited she didn't eat anything the day of the show except coffee and a soft-boiled egg in the morning. "I got awfully hungry before the show went on and sent out for my favorite, peanut butter sandwich on toast. It arrived an hour later. Thank goodness it did because if I'd eaten it before going on I wouldn't have been able to get out a word.

"I'm trying now to get German measles from my son, who's down with them," Shirley said. "They say they last three days, and I want it over with. I'm looking forward to celebrating many family birthdays next month; we have three --April 9, 23 and 28. My husband will be 39 in March; I'll be 30 in April. I can't believe Susan will soon be 11."

Nor can I. I remember so well visiting Shirley when her husband was in the Navy. They were living in a tiny house in Bethesda, Md., just outside Washington, D.C. She was not only taking care of Susan but doing her own cooking and housework. She even ran a tractor to cut down the deep grass in front of the house.

Close Touch

She told me how amused she was when five people got out of their car, lined up on the fence and watched her working, dressed in blue jeans, sweater and with a scarf over her head. She heard one of them say, "Wouldn't you think Shirley Temple could hire a man to do that hard work instead of a woman?"

Soon after my visit, her second child, Charles Jr., was born at the Navy medical center near her home. It wasn't Shirley's idea to have her baby at government expense. A public relations-minded naval officer thought it would be good for Navy morale to have a famous actress who parlayed a crown of golden curls, a dimpled smile and dancing feet into millions of dollars, give birth to her child in a Navy hospital like any other Navy wife.

I've kept in close touch with Shirley over the years. Her life has been a pattern for all the youngsters who became stars at a tender age. But they haven't all had the wise parents who guided Shirley. Her mother was a wise and loving woman; her father, a banker, took care of her finances. She's one of the richest girls in the industry. Her husband refuses to allow her to spend her money on their home or for living expenses.

A year or so ago I visited the Blacks and took Rory Calhoun along to do commentating on a fashion show at Menlo Circus Club for benefit of Stanford Convalescent Home. While waiting for Shirley, Rory and I were entertained by her daughters.

Susan got out Shirley's scrapbooks and her tiny sister insisted upon giving us the facts of the pictures. Charles Jr. was in bed with a bad cold.

Children Critics

Each child has a bedroom with appropriate signs on each door. Charles has a pair of boxing gloves on his. There were few mementoes of Shirley's past glory. In Susan's room was a beautifully made stage setting and one doll; all the rest of her things had been given away.

Shirley furnished their home herself. It is done in good taste. She told me she was decorating homes for some friends, too. She has a passion for interior decorating.

Since her marriage she has refused all stage and motion picture offers and many from TV, but this TV series is one she liked so much she couldn't turn it down because "these are fairy tales I have read and reread to my children and they have acted out with their friends. And believe me, we'd better do them well or my children will begin criticizing. They never let me off lightly."

Shirley says that none of her children have shown signs of following in her footsteps.

"Susan loves the piano, butterflies and bugs. Lori, the younger sister, isn't at all impressed with my acting ability. But if they wanted to go into show business I wouldn't mind. Show business has been good to me. It's helped give me a happy, balanced home with family and friends, and what more could anyone ask?"

Shirley Temple Tries to Visit Khrushchev

MAR 26 1962

Exclusive to The Times from Reuters

MOSCOW — Shirley Temple tried to visit ex-Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev Thursday but got no farther than the lobby of his Moscow apartment building.

The 36-year-old one-time child movie star, visiting Moscow with her husband, called on Khrushchev because she remembered a "come to Russia" invitation he gave her when he visited Hollywood in 1959.

With a translator's help, she had prepared a card which "said hello and said I had a nice visit," she told reporters.

But as she started up the stairs of the apartment house, she was stopped by a caretaker. Eventually, an English-speaking Russian appeared and promised to deliver the card to Khrushchev.

Miss Temple and her husband, Charles Black, have been here for a week and are scheduled to fly to Amsterdam, the Netherlands, today.

Wednesday she talked with a Russian specialist about modern methods of treating multiple sclerosis. Her older brother suffers from the disease.

Mrs. Black Out of S.F. Film Festival

5-19-1

FRI OCT 7 1966

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Shirley Temple Black, child movie star of the 1930s, has bowed out as a director of the San Francisco Film Festival because of the selection committee's refusal to ban a film she terms "pornographic."

Mrs. Black, 37, now a suburban Woodside housewife, announced her resignation at a press conference Wednesday and described the film as one which "merely utilizes pornography for profit."

The Swedish entry, "Night Games," directed by Mai Zetterling, is the story of a man corrupted by a seductive mother and crippled in his sex relationship with his wife.

Albert Johnson, a member of the selection committee and a recognized authority on film art, disagreed with Mrs. Black, saying "This film must be accepted as a serious film."

The film was presented in a closed showing at the recent Venice Film Festival with only critics and journalists in attendance. But the New York Times stated that "there seems little in 'Night Games' to argue a sound censorship case."

Mrs. Black was chairman of the festival's program division and a member of the board of directors. The festival opens Oct. 20 for a 10-day run.

Festival officials said that Mrs. Black attempted to prevent the film from being shown here and, failing persuasion, presented the festival with an ultimatum: Either the film went or she went.

Several members of the film selection committee, which included Barnaby Conrad, artist, novelist and film maker, and Herbert Gold, novelist and film maker, said they would quit if the film wasn't shown.

The committee voted 5-1 to show the film.

Shirley Temple Plans to Run

BY RICHARD BERGHOLZ

Times Political Writer

1-3-3
Shirley Temple, the curly-haired screen darling of three decades ago, plans to announce next week that she will be a Republican candidate for Congress, it was learned Thursday.

The former child star, now Mrs. Charles Black and a mother of three children, will enter the lists for Congress in a special election Nov. 14 in San Mateo County's 11th District, called to fill the unexpired term of the late Rep. J. Arthur Younger (R-San Mateo).

The 39-year-old resident of Atherton, an affluent community south of San Francisco, will seek to follow Sen. George Murphy and Gov. Reagan as the third show business performer in the state to be elected to high political office on the Republican ticket since 1964.

Mrs. Black is reported to have been taking "issue lessons" from Sen. Murphy, her onetime dancing partner in the movies. He reportedly gave her a cram course on the issues voters want to hear discussed, and what positions she should take on such issues.

Mrs. Black could not be reached for comment Thursday. But her decision to run did not come easily.

On June 2, she said flatly that she would not be a candidate to succeed Younger.

Four weeks later, after four GOP candidates had gotten in the race, she changed signals and said she was giving "most serious consideration" to her candidacy.

Then came a lull when she didn't say "yes" or didn't say "no."

Philip M. Battaglia, 32, resigned as executive secretary to Gov. Reagan but will remain at his post until about Oct. 1 to assist his successor. (See Page 1.)

Former child movie star Shirley Temple may announce her candidacy for a vacant Congress seat at a news conference today in San Mateo. The 39-year-old housewife, now Mrs. Charles Black, refused to give any hint of her plans pending the announcement. Nine others have already announced candidacies in a Nov. 14 election to choose a successor to the late Republican Rep. J. Arthur Younger of San Mateo County. She is a Republican.

Special to The New York Times

SAN MATEO, Calif., Aug. 29 — Shirley Temple learned early in her childhood that the best time to memorize her lines for the next day's film shooting was just before going to sleep. Shirley Temple Black, now 39 years old, followed her mother's teaching last night at her Woodside home. It was the eve of a momentous event—the announcement of her candidacy for Congress—and the former child movie star did not want to have to read her four-page prepared statement at a news conference today.

Thus, when she stood before a microphone-laden table, facing a formidable array of television cameras, she only occasionally glanced at her sheet of papers. She had the words well in mind.

"She is a fast reader and a good retainer," a friend said. "She does her homework on anything she decides to tackle."

A Millionaire at 12

She began tackling movie scripts at the age of 3, and, during the nineteen-thirties, as a blonde-curlied symbol of all the best in childhood, she earned more than $3-million by the time she was 12. She was credited by President Franklin D. Roosevelt with having been an influence in lifting the nation's morale out of the slough of the Great Depression.

The former "Little Miss Marker" and skipper of the "Good Ship Lollipop" of the movie screen, who now pushes a shopping cart as she buys groceries once or twice a week in a Menlo Park supermarket, is following her friends Gov. Ronald Reagan and Senator George Murphy of California, also former film stars, in seeking public office.

Close friends surmise that she has obtained the blessing of both the Governor and her one-time dancing partner, the Senator, before finally deciding to try for the Congressional seat left vacant by the death of Representative J. Arthur Younger.

"But this is not a one-shot thing," one speculated. "Shirley is looking long-range. She is dedicated to public service. She is not saying 'Gee, I'd like to cap my career with a term in Congress.' It could be the Senate some day."

She has applied herself assiduously in the San Mateo County, and also to an extent in San Francisco, to Junior League activities and to the work of such organizations as the Children's Health Council of the Mid-Peninsula, the Woodside-Atherton Auxiliary to the Stanford Children's Convalescent Hospital, the Peninsular Children's Theater Association and the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

In activities such as the Children's Health Council work, a friend reported, "Shirley worked at the health center as a receptionist, secretary and volunteer chairman, and when a rummage sale came along she was there selling articles."

Governor Reagan recently appointed her a member of the Advisory Hospital Council of California. She has won many awards from educational and professional organizations, including one last year from the National Press Club "in recognition of meritorious service to correspondents of press, radio and television in the nation's capital."

The most widely publicized recent incident involving Mrs. Black occurred during the San Francisco Film Festival last October. She resigned as chairman of that festival's program division because of inclusion in the festival of the Swedish film "Night Games" ("Natt Lek"), which she called "pornography for profit."

A storm of controversy followed. She received more than 3,000 letters for her stand, with an asserted 90 per cent backing her.

While Mrs. Black was under attack for being "prissy," a friend related, her son reported home from Manlo School, where he was being chided by fellow students with the remark "Gee, your mom's a square."

"Shirley," the friend said, "gave a little speech to the family on the courage of your convictions, and that was that."

Before she finally ended her movie career in 1949, after appearing in a few films as a late teen-ager, she had appeared in more than 35 movies. Since then she has narrated a television series, "Shirley Temple Story Book," then was hostess and actress on "The Shirley Temple Show" and hostess of "Shirley Temple Presents Young America on Stage," a two-hour live program about high school dropout problems. Her hour-long television shows have numbered about 40.

The newly announced candidate lives with her husband, Charles A. Black, and her three teen-age children in the suburb of Woodside, about 30 miles south of San Francisco.

The Black family is known to friends and neighbors as one with close rapport, one in which the son and two daughters have been encouraged to take part in family discussions as they grew up.

The oldest child, Linda Susan, 19 years old, is a daughter by her first marriage, to John Agar. The Black children are Charles Alden, 15, and Lori Alden, 13.

"The family eats together and there is a lot of communication between parents and the kids," an observer related. "Dinner is a long affair. When there's a party, little Lori and Charlie are at the door taking hats and coats of the guests."

McCloskey Claims Poll Lead Over Mrs. Black

BY DARYL F. LEMBKE

Times Staff Writer

NOV 10 1967

SAN FRANCISCO — Paul N. (Pete) McCloskey produced a poll Thursday indicating that he has forged ahead of Shirley Temple Black in the race for the 11th District congressional seat.

The poll, taken by the San Francisco marketing research firm of Corey, Canapary & Galanis for McCloskey's campaign organization, indicated that McCloskey now has 19.3% of the vote to 15.7% for Mrs. Black.

Others who placed high in the door-to-door sampling of 600 of the 500,000 residents in San Mateo County were:

William Draper, 12.2%; Sheriff Earl Whitmore, 9.8%, and Edward J. Keating, 8.7%.

All but Keating are Republicans.

McCloskey told a news conference here that 25% of the voters were still undecided on the basis of the poll, taken last week.

He said the same firm took a poll for him in September which showed him with only 7.9% of the vote. Ahead of him in that sampling were Mrs. Black, the former child movie star, with 15.7%; Whitmore, 14.7%; Draper, 9.2%, and Keating, 8.7%.

McCloskey, 40, is an attorney and lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps Reserve, who received the Navy Cross, Silver Star and Purple Heart as a rifle platoon leader in Korea. He advocates a gradual withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam.

He accused Mrs. Black of preaching "fear, hate and anger" in warning voters against his Vietnam position. He read from a press release issued by Mrs. Black in which she claimed, "He (McCloskey) would abandon South Vietnam to the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese even though by his own admission it would bring on the butchery of 1.5 million people."

McCloskey said he has no such intention.

"I have repeatedly said that we must provide a sanctuary for those Vietnamese who face reprisals for past cooperation with the United States."

He said this could be accomplished by evacuation to non-Communist countries or to an "international settlement" set up as an enclave at Cam Ranh Bay in South Vietnam and guarded by U.N. forces.

Eleven candidates, seven Democrats and four Republicans, are contending at a special election Tuesday for the 11th District seat vacated by the death last June of Rep. J. Arthur Younger, a Republican.

ELECTION: McCloskey Defeats Mrs. Black

California voters in 1964 elected a movie song-and-dance man as U.S. senator. In 1966 they elected a movie actor governor. But last week voters of the 11th Congressional District (San Mateo County) decisively rejected a former child movie actress, now 39, who wanted to go to Washington as a congresswoman.

Paul N. McCloskey Jr., 40, a liberal Republican and decorated hero of the Korean War who advocates a gradual withdrawal of U.S. troops in Vietnam, defeated Mrs. Shirley Temple Black, 52,878 votes to 34,521 on the Republican ticket.

McCloskey will face Roy A. Archibald in a runoff election Dec. 12. Archibald, 47-year old San Mateo councilman and a defender of President Johnson's policy in Vietnam, received only 15,069 votes to become the Democratic nominee.

Party Lines Crossed

Because there are 117,816 Democrats to 96,000 Republicans registered in the district, it was plain that many Democrats crossed party lines to vote for McCloskey because they feared Mrs. Black might otherwise win. They could vote for a candidate of either party because it was a special election to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Rep. J. Arthur Younger, a Republican.

Shirley Temple Black, strongly hawkish, favored leaving the war up to military leaders. The attitudes on the war of the 10 candidates who sought the seat ranged from Mrs. Black's stand to that of Edward M. Keating, a Democratic candidate who ran second to Archibald and who advocated an immediate withdrawal from Vietnam. Keating is the founder of Ramparts magazine.

McCloskey was cautious about interpreting his heavy backing as indicating most voters in San Mateo County precisely support his position on the war. However, he said:

"I'm sure a lot of people are not yet ready to accept the fact that what we are doing there is wrong, but I think a gradual shift is beginning to take place toward a rejection of the President's policy."

How Will Democrats Vote?

He said he would shape his campaign for the runoff to keep the Democrats who voted for him. Archibald said he was confident he could win them back because many of them voted for McCloskey solely to stop Mrs. Black.

One thing both McCloskey and Archibald agreed upon: The Vietnam War is the No. 1 issue in next month's runoff.

Shirley Temple Black vowed to continue in politics. "I am dedicating my life to public service because the country needs us now more than ever before and I want to help," she said.

RAISING FUNDS AT PASADENA

Shirley Temple Black Takes New Role

FEB 16 1968

BY MARY BARBER
Valley Women's News Editor

PASADENA — Shirley Temple has returned to Southern California to begin a new career.

When she spoke Thursday to East Pasadena-Sierra Madre Republican Women's Club, the one-time child star was introduced as Mrs. Charles Black but was warmly received as a potential "Mrs. Republican."

Her future, she said at the Hurlinton-Sheraton, is in fund-raising.

"I've decided not to run again in the June primaries," she announced, answering an important question after her recent defeat for the GOP nomination in the 11th Congressional District in San Mateo County.

"So I'll be a fund-raiser, at least for awhile," she said.

Showing traditional trooper spirit and some of the same old ability to bring in the cash, she flashed the famous dimples and said, "If Ronald Reagan has raised $2 million, I can raise $2,000!"

"I've received 300 invitations to speak and I worked with the Republican National Committee to figure out which I'd accept.

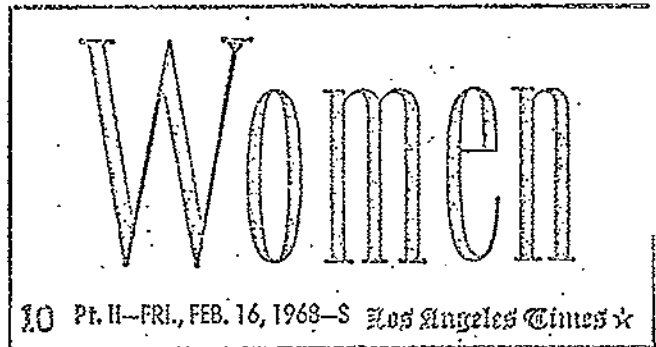

"Many of them will be little groups in little towns. In one midwestern town I'll be addressing the Contractors and Lathers Assn., of all things."

When asked why, the answer was a simple-- "Because they asked me."

The reason she was in Pasadena was similar.

"This was one of the first invitations I received, early last year before the election," she said. "I accepted the ones that said, 'We want you, win or lose,' so here I am."

The speaker, who smilingly and willingly admits she'll be 40 in April, is still easily identifiable as Shirley Temple. Her costume Thursday featured demure ruffles at the neck and wrists of her Navy dress, a skirt that came to her knees but still showed plenty of lacy hosiery, a wide wrist watch and lots of big diamonds on her fingers.

Her audience, which had to be moved to the hotel's largest dining room because of the large turnout, was similar. There were hundreds of beautifully dressed and coiffed women, mostly about the speaker's age.

"I like appearing before women," she said. "Fortunately, I'm a woman, so we understand each other.

"I'm very much a Republican, but I'm a woman and a mother first, and that, I think, is what motivates me."

Though her talk was designed to be a pep talk pleading for Republican unity, Mrs. Black spoke from a feminine viewpoint. She discussed Vietnam, juvenile crime, narcotics and inflation at both the press conference and luncheon talk.

"Women are really very involved in everything, just from the nature of their roles," she said.

While declaring to be pro-female, she nevertheless insisted she will not support any particular women for office or even encourage women to enter politics.

"Women have a difficult time running for office," she explained. "For one thing, you must have a husband who wants you to have a career and who will be supportive. Mine is that kind, thank goodness.

"Then you have to have good children--those who have no more than the usual problems for their ages. I'm fortunate with this, too." The Blacks, who live in Atherton, have children aged 20, 16 and 14.

Implying the need for money, Mrs. Black added, "You have to have a home that will run all right without you, and you also have to be able to get home once in a while when you're on a speaking tour.

"There are lots of problems in running for office, and one of the biggest is that you're running against men. I was running against 12!"

Shirley Temple's Political Failure

Cal-15
THE SINKING OF THE LOLLIPOP: SHIRLEY TEMPLE VS. PETE McCLOSKEY by Rodney G. Minott (Diablo Press: $5.95).

o This is truly a marvelous nation. We entrust our bodies to doctors; our eyes to optometrists; our leaky pipes to plumbers; our machines to engineers; and our teachings to educators.

All of these specialists are trained over a period of years and, hopefully, become sensitized to the complexities of their professions. But such a contradictory people are we that we entrust the weaving of our political framework to men and women who have had little or no training in their chosen field—the profession of politics. Clearly, the vast majority of our politicians learn while they practice on their constituents.

How else can one explain the candidacy of a Shirley Temple Black? In our unrelenting accent on achievement, we blithely state that success in any area of life is adequate training for the world of politics. Prof. Minott's book is, in part, a study of Shirley Temple Black's campaign to become Republican Congresswoman from the 11th Congressional District in a special 1967 election. Little reason existed to question that she could not achieve electoral success. Her two Hollywood friends, Ronald Reagan and George Murphy, had utilized mass media exposure to gain entrance into politics just a few short years before her own announcement. Amazingly, she did not make it.

Or perhaps not so amazing.

The winner, Paul N. (Pete) McCloskey Jr., a young lawyer and former Marine, is described as a moderate, middle-of-the-road Republican who supported negotiations in Vietnam and had an interest in problems such as high taxes, racial conflict and social justice. But his political experience and exposure, like Mrs. Black's, was limited.

The title of the book unfortunately detracts from its major emphasis, which is a graphic study of a local election: the problems of an amateur running for office, his attempts to learn the nature of the issues, the organizing of many young, eager volunteer workers and the woes and afflictions of a person seeking a political office.

Shirley Temple, Mate May Get U.S. Posts

$28,000-a-Year State Department Job
Reported for Her, Similar One for Black

Exclusive to The Times from a Staff Writer

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Shirley Temple Black and her husband, Charles Black, are candidates for posts in the Nixon Administration, informed sources said Friday.

The former child film star is being considered, along with several others, for the $28,000-a-year post of deputy assistant secretary of state for educational and cultural affairs.

Her husband has been proposed for an unspecified post of comparable rank, it was said. A decision on both jobs is expected within a week.

White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler declined comment on the possibility of Mrs. Black's appointment beyond saying, "She's very qualified."

Mrs. Black also had no comment.

According to a story in the Detroit Free Press, Mrs. Black would supervise about 50 persons working with foreign visitors, American specialists traveling abroad, visa matters affecting exchange students and public information and reports.

The story said the office of White House personnel chief Harry Dent reported "several things" were under consideration for Black, a wealthy businessman.

Mrs. Black was an unsuccessful Republican congressional candidate in 1967. She was defeated by Rep. Paul N. McCloskey Jr. (R-Calif.) in a special election for the 11th Congressional District, seat in San Mateo.

America owes Shirley Temple a debt that many Americans still acknowledge, though some have forgotten. More than any other film figure, the little chubby one she used to be cheered folks through the sad era called The Depression.

The little girl whose dancing feet, dimples, bobbing curls and baby voice lightened some of the darkest hours of the century is a big girl now. The baby is gone, and in her place is a lovely young dramatic actress. But in charm of personality, and in dancing, singing and acting ability, she is still the same old Shirley.

During the filming of one of her "adult" pictures, RKO Radio's "Honeymoon," she turned another milestone in her career. On April 23, 1946, Shirley became eighteen. That meant that she passed from the control of state welfare officials, teachers, and in general, the close regimentation of a child film star's life. The picture itself, a gay romantic comedy by Wicki Baum, presented Shirley for the first time as a young but strictly adult lady.

Two years before that, David O. Selznick had signed Shirley Temple, then 15, after she had been off the screen for more than 25 months, the longest idle period in her career. Her three subsequent pictures, "Since You Went Away," "I'll Be Seeing You" and "Kiss and Tell" promptly proved that her fans were willing to follow her from childhood to young womanhood.

Shirley was born April 23, 1928, at Santa Monica Hospital in Santa Monica, a few miles from Hollywood on the Pacific Ocean.

At this time her father, George F. Temple, was an associate of the California Bank, in Los Angeles. Born in Fairview, Pa., he had come to Los Angeles in 1903. Shirley's mother, Gertrude Temple, had been born in Chicago. The couple had three children, Jack being 14 when Shirley was born, and George Jr., was 10. The former served in World War III in the Air Corps, the latter in the Marines.

When Shirley was two, her mother noticed that Shirley had a fine sense of rhythm, and casually decided to have her take dancing lessons in a Los Angeles school where lessons were one dollar apiece. The investment was due to pay big dividends!

After her third lesson a film scout approached her family. He wanted Shirley for a series of baby burlesques of famous pictures. At first the family was inclined to refuse the offer, but finally, "just for the fun of it", accepted. After the two-year-old had appeared in a succession of the baby pictures, stars of the period, such as Zasu Pitts, predicted a brilliant future for her, and she was given bit parts in full length pictures, such as "Red Haired Alibi" and "Out All Night." During this time she made four other two-reelers and "Frolics of Youth" and a Paramount Western, "To The Last Man."

At a preview one night, Jay Gorney, the celebrated musician, urged Mrs. Temple to take Shirley to 20th Century-Fox the following day for a part in "Stand Up and Cheer." Mrs. Temple took his advice. Of 150 children out for the role, Shirley got it, and her tests so impressed studio officials that they offered her a contract starting at $150 per week.

After a very serious debate -- for accepting the offer meant they were committing Shirley to a film career "for keeps" -- the Temples decided to accept the offer. Meanwhile Shirley worked in her small role in the picture and recorded the song -- now famous, -- called "Baby, Take A Bow."

Naturally, the Temples have never regretted their decision.

They believe that Shirley has had a natural, happy childhood, has grown up unspoiled and has never been handicapped in any way by her career, either as a child or now, as a "grown-up."

After "Stand Up and Cheer" her popularity rocketed. Paramount borrowed her for "Little Miss Marker"; then Fox recalled her for "Baby, Take a Bow." Next came "Curly Top," "The Littlest Rebel," and the long succession of pictures that brought Shirley authentic and lasting fame, and along with it, fortune.

In 1936, Shirley won a special Academy Award for cheering up a depression-weary country.

For eight years she reigned as Hollywood's unchallenged juvenile acting and popularity queen. At the age of 12, after completing "Young People," the screen's great little lady paused. She has been entered as a student at Westlake School for Girls in Los Angeles, after making excellent progress in studio school. Her mother announced that for awhile, at least, pictures were out, and Shirley would be given a chance to concentrate on her studies.

It was a rather bold move, considering how quickly movie fans forget their idols. But fortunately, the arrangement lasted only 3 years, and Shirley's fans were not so fickle as many; they didn't forget her in that period. Then came the Selznick contract and "Since You Went Away."

Still another milestone was passed in Shirley's career on September 17, 1945. On that date she married John Agar, then in the U.S. Army, at the Wilshire-Methodist Church in Los Angeles. On Jan. 30, 1948, there was born to the happy couple a child,

With all these changes the even tenor of the little star's life hasn't changed so much, behind the scenes or in front of the camera. She usually rises at 6:30, has a glass of orange juice, and a bit later a hearty breakfast. She attends to pets consisting of three dogs (a Cocker, a Scottie and a Pekingese), a macaw named Red and a canary named Bing. Then she's off for the studio, where she has seldom been known to be late by so much as a minute.

She learns her lines for next day each night in bed; rarely muffs one next day.

Shirley thinks she has had a grand childhood, that movie people are among the best and most interesting in the world, and that she has been a remarkably lucky girl to have grown up among them. She gives her parents a great deal of credit for her success, and hasn't a single regret for the part of her childhood that career took from her. In her opinion it substituted something vastly more interesting and generally beneficial for any time or energy it may have cost her.

"It was like a fairy tale," she summarizes, simply and sincerely.

Another Appointment in Sight for Mrs. Black

Ex-Child Film Star May Be Appointed to U.N. Committee on Pollution Problems

BY EARL W. FOELL
Times Staff Writer

UNITED NATIONS — Shirley Temple Black is coming back—in diplomacy, not films.

Mrs. Black is expected to be named shortly as a U.S. representative to a U.N. committee working on world pollution problems.

She will serve as deputy to Christian Herter Jr., son of the secretary of state in President Eisenhower's cabinet. Herter is to head the U.S. delegation to the U.N. preparatory committee that will meet March 10 to start laying the groundwork for a June, 1972, international parley on environment questions to be held in Stockholm.

Political Contact

It is intended to bring pollution specialists into active contact with world politicians who have the power to tackle supranational environment problems.

Mrs. Black presumably would be in line to represent the United States at that conference.

The former child movie star served last fall as the most-noticed representative on the five-member U.S. delegation to the U.N. General Assembly. Pollution was a major topic of her speeches, alongside youth and human rights matters.

But when the U.N. Assembly ended, so, apparently, did Mrs. Black's diplomatic career.

Not daunted, she wrote personal notes to both President Nixon and Secretary of State William P. Rogers, it has now been learned, asking for a new international assignment. As a result, she was offered the environment conference preparation job. This task should involve her in periodic diplomatic work from now through mid-1972 if she wishes.

Colleagues who got to know Mrs. Black well here last fall say they would not be surprised if she managed still further diplomatic roles. In an interview at the end of her term in December she said she hoped she would be appointed again as a U.N. delegate.

She suggested that it ought to be possible for a nonprofessional American delegate to make use of experience gained, and serve a second time. Representatives from other nations sometimes appear as delegates to more than one General Assembly.

Cuts Across Policy

This idea cuts across standard U.S. policy of using the five slots for delegates and five for alternate delegates to honor political debts on a non-renewable basis.

American U.N. delegations are usually made up of professionals—the ambassador and his deputies; one congressman from each party alternating between House and Senate; and a sprinkling of national civic leaders. In order to honor as many of the latter as possible, Presidents have traditionally named a new selection each year.

Mrs. Black urged that a President appoint prospective delegates to serve as alternates for a first year, gaining experience at the side of the professionals before becoming full delegates the next year.

She's Persuasive

Her argument for appointment of delegates to more than one term is not expected to alter traditional practice. But the still-dimpled Mrs. Black appears to have been persuasive to some extent on her own behalf.

State Department specialists of the United Nations are still enthusiastic about her performance here last fall. Many of them privately say she surprised them.

"She did her homework," one Washington official summed up. "She was the most visible and most understandable symbol to most Americans that the United States is still interested in the United Nations. I scoffed when she arrived last September, with her Nixon purse and big smile. But not now."
